If you were to ask the ordinary person among the nominal churches what the kingdom of Israel has to do with the gospel of the kingdom of God, he would tell you it had no connection with it in the least. Further, he would say that it was fulfilled in Christ, that is, it was done away with. One of their evangelists said a few weeks ago in our city that a person might disobey every one of the ten commandments and not be lost, or keep them all and not be saved. This man was a D. D. This would infer that a man could murder, rob, covet and commit adultery, and be none the worse. Certainly this man did not know that every one of these commandments were rewritten in the New Testament except the fourth. They are just as binding on the followers of Christ today as they were to Israel under the law. There were some things granted the Israelitish people that were given to us in a modified form. Jesus gives a new phase to these in the sermon on the mount. "Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery in his heart" (Matt. 5:28). Again, it was written or said, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, and do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you" (Matt. 5:43,44). Nowhere in this sermon does Christ intimate that the principles of the decalogue are to be disregarded or violated. To Israel these commandments were a moral code, and if obeyed, would bring a reward. They were not to be separated from the other codes in the law, viz., the penal, sacrificial and the hygienic codes. They all constitute the law of God, or the law of Moses. Israel's great failure was in not trusting wholly in Jehovah, and mixing with other nations in their worship of other gods. This was strictly enjoined upon them. They were to be a separate people: they were not to contract marriages with an alien people. The reason given was that it would lead them into idolatry They were forbidden to make alliances with an alien nation, as Jehovah had chosen them from all other nations that they might become a "holy nation" and a "peculiar treasure" unto Jehovah. They were to become a kingdom of priests. The great truth of Israel's failure is lost sight of in Jehovah's punishment when he scattered them among all nations. With this condition of Israel as a nation there could be no gospel preached to them.

However, every prophet that foretold this condition, has also revealed the glad tidings of their restoration to their land as a nation. We read in Ezek. 21:27; "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it (the nation): and it shall be no more, until he comes, whose right it is; and I will give it him." The gospel in this text relates to a kingdom overturned, it is to be restored again and given to him, Christ, whose right it is. Again, we read from this prophet, chapter 20:33-38: "As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you. I will bring you out from the people, and I will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out. I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant." This is a future covenant, and given by Jer. 31:31-35, also quoted by Paul in the Hebrew letter and applied to Israel as the covenant under which they will occupy the land under the rulership of Christ.

The readers of this article may read the 37th chapter of Ezekiel and learn that Judah and Israel are to become one nation in the land promised their fathers. The twelve apostles will rule over the twelve tribes when they shall be given the land promised to Abraham and his seed, Isaiah 65th chapter says: "Behold, I create new heavens and a new earth, and the former (the old arrangement) shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. I will create Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people (Israel) a joy. I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people, and the voice of weeping shall no more be heard in her, nor the voice of crying." When restored Israel will become favored subjects in the kingdom promised Christ and his saints. Those who reject these promises reject the gospel, which Paul declared to be the power of God unto salvation to everyone who believes (Rom. 1:16).

As a closing testimony in this article, we wish to call attention to some things found in Romans 11th chapter: "I say then, Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. For I am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. God hath not cast away his people which he foreknew. For this is my covenant unto them when I shall take away their sins. As concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sakes, but as touching the election, they are beloved (subjects) for the Father's sakes." Their great blessing will be bestowed upon them through the covenant made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. For Paul says, "The gifts and callings of God are without repentance." Abraham believed God, and his faith was counted to him for righteousness. For his trust in Jehovah he was made the father of us all. "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed (children), and heirs according to the promise." When Israel is re stored they will become favored subjects, and will not bring forth to trouble. The law will be written in their hearts before accepted as subjects. This is the gospel of the kingdom of God which Jesus and the apostles preached.

THE PRE-EXISTENCE OF CHRIST

A Fruitful Parent of Many Doctrinal Errors

After carefully studying the criticism in The Restitution on the death of Pastor Russell, and also the letters from Mrs. Wheeler, vindicating his doctrine, the evidence seems to point very clearly to the fact that if your faith is not established on a firm foundation, it is very easy for error to creep in. Remember what our Lord says, "Take need and beware of the leaven of the pharisees and of the sadducees" (Matt. 16:6); and again Paul tells us: "Your glorying is not good. Know ye not that a little leaven, leaveneth the whole lump? Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us" (1 Cor. 5:6,7).

One of the chief errors of Russellism appears to be the doctrine of the pre-extence of Christ. As long as they believe in this theory it is almost impossible to bring them to a knowledge of the truth. There is a certain amount of reason in their argument that if Christ co-existed always with God, it would be degrading him to bring him down to the plane of Abraham in the kingdom; but by allowing that he had this pre-existing divine nature they, without appearing to realize it, deny his death, and thus they are still without hope and without God in the world.

The idea of Christ's pre-existence is prevalent in most denominations, and in fact many members of the orthodox churches will look upon you as an unbelieved and an infidel if you deny this doctrine, and yet they cannot give you proof that will stand the test. The first verse in the Bible tells us, "God created the heaven and the earth." And then error comes along and says Christ created all things, and quotes Col. 1:16 as evidence; but let us examine this evidence and see if it does teach what they claim. Col. 1:15 says: "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature." So we see, to commence with, that Christ is the image of God, not the reality or God himself; and that he is the first born of every creature. So all the other creatures of his creation will naturally be like him. And the 16th verse explains what the things are he creates, viz: thrones, dominions, principalities and powers. And now if we continue the 17th and 18th verses we find: "He is before all things, and by him all things consist. And he is the head of the body, the church, who is the beginning." Now after speaking of all these things Paul tells us as a climax that he is the beginning. The beginning of what? Why, of the new creation, of course, the subject that Paul is trying to impress upon us. And so as the creator of the new creation we believe him to be, but not the creator of the heaven and the earth, in the old creation. But what saith the Scripture? "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord: and there is none else" (Isa. 45:18). "Remember the former things of old; for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure" (Isa. 46:9,10).

Such references as these cannot possibly, even by a stretch of the imagination, harmonize with the pre-existence of Christ. God tells us distinctly that he is the only God, and then tells us that there is none even like him. So here we have clear evidence that error has crept in. But let us turn once more to the word of God and read intelligently: "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them, all that I shall command him" (Deut. 18:18). And now hear what Peter says to corroborate this statement: "For truly Moses said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you". (Acts 3:22). Here is proof that Christ was a prophet like Moses, and we know Moses was a mortal man, therefore Christ was mortal, though of divine origin. If he had not been mortal he could not have died, and we should be strangers from God. If he had been a divine being, and had no fleshly attributes, he could not have sinned in any case, and so there would have been no virtue in his sacrifice for us. "But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law" (Gal. 4:4). This is absolute proof that Christ was a man like unto his brethren, and praised be his holy name, he kept the faith and overcame the world, and has become the first born of the new creation. His early life was similar to other children of his time.

We read that he was circumcised on the eighth day (Luke 2:21), and that when the days of Mary's purification was accomplished "they brought him to Jerusalem to present him to the Lord." "And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth. And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him" (Luke 2:39, 40). And again, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man" (Luke 2:52).

These Scriptures all prove that Christ was a man like his brethren. "Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren" (Heb. 2:17). We never read of him in the Old Testament as a person then existing, but he is continually referred to as the one that God will raise up or create, when his plans call for his existence. When we realize this fully there is no mystery attached to himself or his office; but it makes the gospel of the kingdom clear and intelligible and consequently we are anxiously looking forward to his appearing "the second time without sin unto salvation" (Heb. 9:28). His coming will certainly be visible, for as his disciples saw him ascend into heaven, he "shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11). Therefore if his ascension was literal, and we have another witness to this effect in Luke 24:51, so will his return be. The idea of Russell that he came in 1878, is simply false prophecy. "When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptiously: thou shalt not be afraid of him" (Deut. 18:22). There is absolute proof that Christ has not come yet, for when he comes, "out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (Isa. 2:3). We therefore know that Christ is not yet sitting on David's throne in Jerusalem, for "the coming of our Lord Jesus with all his saints" (1 Thess. 3:13) will be the greatest and most important event the world has ever seen, because it will be the beginning of the consumation of God's plans, when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. 2:14). The idea that anyone can predict the time of his coming is absolutely unscriptural. Christ's own words ought to convince everyone on that point: "But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father. Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is" (Mark 13:32,33).

Here we have authority from Jesus himself, the future king, that even he did not know the time of his second coming; and there is plenty of similar evidence. "Watch therefore: for ye know nor what hour our Lord doth come" (Matt. 24:42). But the references are too numerous to quote, and yet there are numbers of intelligent people who can be beguiled into believing that an event so stupendous as the reorganizing of the world has already taken place, when there is not a shadow of evidence to uphold it. It only proves overwhelmingly how true the Bible is when it predicts the great unbelief that will exist on earth in the last days, how "they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they will turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (2 Tim. 4:3,4).

And now beloved, when we look around us and see all the different creeds and dissensions among a people who profess christianity, let us remember the Lord's parting words to us through his servant John: "Behold. I come quickly: hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown" (Rev. 3:11).

TWO EXTREMES REFUTED

No. 7

Adventists, like Russellites, go to Sodom to prove their position, and quote with assurance what Jesus said about its destruction as one of their arguments against future probation. Jesus said: "And as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it also be in the days of the Son of Man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all. Likewise also it was in the days of Lot: they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all" (Luke 17.26-30).

Let us look at the context: "And when he was demanded of the pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation (narrow watching, Rotherham; see also Liddell and Scott's definition of the Greek word, paratereseos, and Diaglott interliniar): neither shall they say, Lo here! or, Lo there! for behold, the kingdom of God is within you" (margin. "in the midst;" Rotherham, "among you"). And he said unto his disciples, The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of Man, and ye shall not see it. And they shall say to you, See here; or See there: go not after them, nor follow them. For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, and shineth unto the other part under heaven; also shall the Son of Man be in his day. But first he must suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation." Here follow the texts quoted, then we read: "In that day (his day) he which shall be upon the house top, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back. Remember Lot's wife. Whosoever shall seek to save his life shall loose it; and whosoever shall loose his life shall preserve it. I tell you, in that night there shall be two in one bed, the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left."

Now turn to Luke 19:11-27, noting carefully the fact that the servants who were approved were given authority over cities, and that it is "those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them," that are slain. Who, then, are destroyed? "Those mine enemies" (Jesus). What is a city? "A place inhabited by a large permanent, organized community" (Stand. Dic.). Did Jesus contradict himself? If not, then every person who is not a servant in the sense of being a Christian, will not be destroyed at his coming, and there will be cities over which the saints shall rule. Now hear Jesus' answer to his disciples: "Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations. And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father has appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Luke 22:28-30). We have seen that the twelve tribes are to be restored in a mortal condition, and that children will be born unto them, even after the day of perdition and destruction of ungodly men; and here we see that the apostles are to be judges over them.

Shall we then say that mortality shall cease with the advent? How can we say it in the light of the word of God? But recently one who holds to the Adventist theory said, "None but those born of the spirit can enter the kingdom of God," and that would leave out all mortals, he concludes. Let us take another text, and compare: "For by fire and by his sword will the Lord plead with all flesh: and the slain of the Lord shall be many. They that sanctify themselves, and purify themselves in the gardens behind one tree, in the midst, eating swine's flesh, and abomination, and the mouse, shall be consumed together, saith the Lord" (Isa. 66:16,17). Here we have it clearly stated that they who in the judgment have eaten swine's flesh will be consumed, hence will not enter into the kingdom. Then we could affirm that those who eat swine shall not enter into the kingdom, and that would leave out perhaps our writer, with the most of us. How are we to understand this passage? We know that it was written under the Mosaic law when the eating of swine's flesh was positively forbidden, but that law is done away in Christ, hence the text does not apply to us, but, it did apply to all before our dispensation from the time it was given. Now to whom does the law of the new birth apply? To all of this dispensation, our scribe must agree, from the fact that Jesus is to gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and is seated on the throne of his glory in the judgment, has received a kingdom at his advent, and at the sounding of the seventh trumpet we have it declared. "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." Then we are told: "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldest destroy them which corrupt the earth" (Rev. 11:15-18). And Paul assures us, "He shall judge the living and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom" (Matt. 13:36-43; 25:31; Luke 19:15; 2 Tim. 4:1).

After the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ, all are in the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ, and then we will no longer need a law of admission into the kingdom; but a law teaching men how to live so that they will not have to be cast out of it. They will be in the kingdom, and then must become obedient subjects or be cast out of it. "The nation that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted" (Isa.60:12; compare the whole chapter to ascertain the time spoken of). Even Elder Cargile applies the following verses to the kingdom age: "Thy people shall be all righteous: they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands that I may be glorified. A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation: I the Lord will hasten it in his time." Then we are safe in our application of the whole chapter; and if Adventints were to give up all the texts which speak of nations being in the kingdom, they would have only a few texts to quote. The texts, as we can see, that speak of the coming of Christ, the judgment and kingdom together, show that they all come at one and the same time; and the fact that they were so understood by his hearers is evident from the thief's request, "Lord remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom." He knew the time of reward is at the advent, and that men of this age must, if they go in, enter at the time they are rewarded, and Jesus promised him, "This day with me thou shalt be in paradise." "This day," the day you speak of, not now, but when I come in my kingdom. It is remarkable that anyone would try to place the setting up of the kingdom after all sinners are destroyed; when Daniel so forcibly declares, "In the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom." What kings? The ten, or divided state of Rome. Then one would have to pointedly deny God's word to say all sinners are destroyed before the kingdom is set up. And after it is set up Daniel declares, "And all dominions shall serve and obey him," showing that at least some of all dominions will become submissive to him, and that agrees with some more of Isaiah 60: "Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish, first to bring my sons from afar, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord thy God, and to the holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee. And the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee; for in thy wrath I smote thee, but in my favor have I had mercy on thee. Therefore thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night: that men may bring unto thee the forces of the Gentiles, and their kings may be brought." The careful reader will remember the fact that "The law is to go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem," as we have seen.

"SO ALSO IN THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD"

In studying the works of the living God it seems to me that the life history of insects, particularly those species that pass through the complete stages of transformation, namely, egg, caterpillar, chrysalis and "image," such as moths and butterflies, have been given to us by the Father as object lessons to illustrate his marvellous power and show to a certain degree his mode of working, so that we may better understand the how and why, so far at least as human intelligence may peer.

The production of any living thing is indeed sufficiently wonderful. The chick hatching from the egg, the liquid yolk arranging itself into solid form in head, body, wings, legs, and so forth; and we ourselves also have been produced in precisely the same way, that is, so conspicuously illustrated for our considerations in every hen's nest. Yes, that indeed is very wonderful, but in the case of the butterfly referred to, we have not only the marvellous production from the egg, but also what may be considered a continuance of existence through death and resurrection and this death is so complete that it may almost be considered a double death, for the form of the chrysalis has no resemblance to the form of the caterpillar, and the complete image has no resemblance to either; while in the interval between the "winding sheet" of the first, death and the emergence of the perfect creature into the new life, all that can be found within is a "little bag of greenish liquid." In other words, the first form of life is completely disintegrated—the first "house of its tabernacle is dissolved"—reduced to elementary fluid apparently, and the last form of development is worked up from that basis born again into newness of life an entirely different being in every respect. And yet, though different, the old sympathy is kept up—is it memory or what? At any rate, although the perfect insect has no taste for the food it lived on in the early stage of its existence, yet it never fails to lay its eggs on the particular plant that will nourish its young.

This fact is much more wonderful than it looks in print. The trees in the woods round us were infested with tent catepillars last spring, but when you went to scanning the kind of tree, it was either wild cherry or some fruit tree. Fabre says, that the cabbage worm only feeds on plants of the cabbage family, wild or cultivated, and when he finds the spawn anywhere at all he knows that it must be on a plant of that family; and he would take the butterfly's judgment on the matter before any "scientist" at all. But this story belongs rather to the realm of instinct, the untaught knowledge that comes from nature direct, or from God direct, whichever way you care to put it.

What I meant to call attention to in this little article was the strange resemblance between the life history of these little beings and the Bible story of the "new birth" to perfect beings of the human kind, whose life meantime may be hid with Christ in God, who are "laid on sleep," but are "kept by the power of God, ready to be revealed at the last time." A lady friend found a rather remarkable looking caterpillar, one day, and wishing to show it to another friend, put it in a box. When the friend came to look, lo, it had wrapped itself up in a corner in its winding sheet (cocoon). But when the spring came she remembered the little box, and put it in the sunshine and behold, the new born being emerged. Is not this a picture in minature of "the glory that shall follow?" Paul uses the wheat grain as an illustration of the resurrection from the dead. Probably he never knew anything of the history of the butterfly, and if he did, it may be certain that those to whom he wrote knew nothing of it. It is reserved for us of a later day to see further into the marvellous detail of the creation, and to realize the infinite ability of the Creator to produce off hand, so to speak, any sort of creative magic, and there indeed is nothing too hard for him. Therefore, he is able to keep that committed unto him until that "spring" day.

EDITORIAL

Indisposition of the Editor the last few weeks has abbreviated editorials.

We are sorry to learn of the continued illness of Brother D. C. Robison, of Salem, Ohio.

It appears that the United States is about to be drawn into the vortex of the war-fray. This is very dispiriting to the people of God, for they love peace. Brother Alldridge at first planned to write a series of articles on the "Impending Crisis," but war now seems so imminent he has decided, and we think wisely, to omit all preliminaries, and begin at once to take practical steps to obtain military exemption. Keep a close watch on all that appears in The Restitution on the subject. Remember the solemn words of the Son of God, uttered by him for our admonition and guidance: "Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man" (Luke 21:36).

"But there were flivvers before the day of Lochinvar," writes Anon. "The earliest mention I have found of them is in Judges 3:28, where the Israelites took the Fords of Jordan toward Moab."

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL

The last commission from Jesus to his disciples proves that the gospel is for all nationalities and classes of people. Matt. 28:19 says: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations;" Mark 16:15, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature;" Luke 24:47, "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations."

This commission would counteract the belief so prevalent among the Jews, that all of God's messages, promises, favors and love were for the Jews only. Even his closest followers had this belief so thoroughly ingrained in their minds that he made it his last message to them. Even then it took a vision to Peter and an actual pouring out of God's spirit on Gentiles at the house of Cornelius, to convince him that God now includes Gentiles, heathens, in his favor.

This truth of God's favor and grace to all was also the first message with which the angel announced the birth of Jesus: "And the angel said unto them, fear not, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people" (Luke 2:10). Not to Jews only, nor to a few favored Gentiles, but to "all people."

Since the gospel message is for all classes and nationalities, it necessarily follows that it is for all people as to numbers. That is, that every individual who comes into the world, under the curse, has the right, by God's decree, to know of God's loving offer to take him from under the curse, on certain conditions. This obvious fact is further established by 1 Tim. 2:4: "Who will have all men to be saved, and come unto the knowledge of the truth." The Revised Version says, "Who would have." If it is God's will, or if he is even willing, that all men should be saved, he surely would be consistent enough to send the message of his willingness and the specified conditions to every individual who needs salvation. This includes every member of the human family.

Each and every one surely has the God given right to know the gospel, the good news that God is willing, by reason of his love and kindness, to lift the curse of sin and death from those who suffer under it and desire freedom; and that he intends to do it through Jesus as the ruler on David's throne and endowed with the power to resurrect the dead.

Terms of the Commission National

Our Lord's commission proves, as Sister King says, that the gospel is for all nationalities and classes of people, and that is all it does prove. "All nations," "every creature," etc., are terms of national import, and forbid individual application. England, the United States, and other Commonwealths are called "Christian Nations," but many individuals live in them who are not Christians. Again, we must remember that the terms "all nations," "every creature," "all people" and other similar comprehensive phrases in the New Testament, are used in contrast to former limitations of the gospel, limitations divinely imposed, and if they were "thoroughly ingrained in the minds of Christ's closest followers," the ingraining had been done by Christ himself. "These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go ye rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matt. 10:5,6). Peter is to be commended, not reprimanded, for demanding a vision as evidence that this law had been abrogated.

Representative Terms Must not be Individualized

The Bible abounds in representative terms, and they must be recognized and understood to properly interpret many of its statements. "All flesh shall see the salvation of God," is a declaration used by Universalists; "All Israel shall be saved," is another which is often quoted to prove unconditional salvation for Israel by our Jewish friends. But our dear friends are led into this fatal mistake because they confound representative terms with individual. The Bible uses the terms they quote, but instead of using them in the individual sense, as they do, it uses them in a national and representative sense. And here is the proof: "The end of all flesh is come before me; I will destroy them with the earth" (Gen. 6:13). Was "all flesh" destroyed in the individual and universal sense? Was not Noah commanded to take representative parts of "all flesh," both the clean and the unclean, into the ark? Not "all flesh" absolutely and individually, but all flesh left out of the ark, of course, is what is meant. A little common sense is often quite a help in ascertaining the meaning of Bible statements.

When God says he will "pour out his spirit upon all flesh" (Joel 2:28-30), common sense must not be abandoned in trying to grasp the meaning of the prophecy. A text with identical wording is in Gen. 6:17; "I do bring a flood of waters upon the earth to destroy all flesh wherein is the breath of life"—identical words, yes, but "all flesh" is further emphasized by the added clause, "wherein is the breath of life." This surely is emphatic and universal enough to suit the most fastidious, still part of "all flesh" was saved in the ark! And as to pouring out the spirit upon "all flesh." Peter says that was done on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2). Representatives "out of every nation under heaven" (verse 5) were involved in the prediction, and in a national, representative way the prophecy found fulfilment on that day. It was not fulfilled then individually, and it never will be so fulfilled.

"All Israel shall be saved" (Rom. 11:26). "Israel" is a national term, and is often used in a national sense in the word of God. In Ezek. 37:11 "all Israel" is used in a tribal sense. Back in Genesis God says: "After four hundred years I will bring them out." The ones brought out were not the ones which went in. All that were there at that time were brought out. Exo. 15:13 reads: "Thou in thy mercy hast led forth the people which thou hast redeemed; thou hast guided them in thy strength unto the holy habitation." The nation was redeemed; but thousands of individuals perished in the wilderness (Heb. 3:4). "Redeemed," yes, redeemed, and yet those that went down into Egypt were not redeemed—they died there! Read Isa. 8:11,12; Amos 2:9,10; Micah 6:2-4, and notice how the personal, singular pronouns "thy," "thee," etc., are used, and yet the same individuals did not exist at the time those words were applied to the nation. Numerous other texts declare the same thing in relation to "all these," without including the same persons. As samples, use 2 Chron. 11:1-4; Nehe. 7:73. National identity was involved, but not individual identity. Fifteen hundred and twenty years before Israel were invaded and disrupted by the Romans, Moses told them in Deut. 28th chapter, "Swift as an eagle flieth shall a nation come against thee." Not an individual spoken to was present when the prophecy was fulfilled, fifteen hundred years later. National identity is all that is involved. So with "all nations," "all Israel," "the whole house of Israel," "all flesh," etc. Fulfilled prophecy is the key to the understanding of the unfulfilled. From the first we are taught how to interpret the second.

The Gospel not For All People as to Numbers

The gospel, then, we agree, is for all nationalities and classes, in contrast to its previous limitations to Jewish circles. Remember, now, we are talking in national terms; for speaking nationally the gospel has been limited to Israel; but during all ages there have been Rahabs and a believing remnant of Gentiles in the gospel. So when Sister King loses sight of the national significance of the terms and tries to individualize them, she goes astray by saying, "It necessarily follows that it is for all people as to numbers." To make plain her meaning she adds: "Every individual that comes into the world, under the curse, has the right, by God's decree, to know of God's loving offer to take him from under the curse on certain conditions." We fail to see the "necessarily" in this claim of reasoning; we cannot see what "rights" rebels have after forfeiting by sin their lives a thousand times; and not one word is there on the sacred page of any "decree" that God has made that all men must "know of God's loving offer." 1 Tim. 2:4, "Who will have all men to be saved and come into the knowledge of the truth," only states that God is willing that they should (1); but sad to relate, "all men" are not willing, and thousands of them perish as ignorant of the truth as "natural brute beasts" (2 Pet. 2:12). If you change "will" into "must," then you take from men with one hand what you give them with the other, namely, their will, with power of choice. "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved" (John 3:20). "And ye will not come to me that ye might have life" (John 5:40). If "all men" must come to a knowledge of the truth, whether they want to or not, then those who "hate the light," together with those who "will not come to the light," must be forced to embrace what they hate, and to come to what they despise! The shades of Origen! Universalism, sooner or later, is bound to captivate a mind that labors under the delusion that 1 Tim. 2:4 teaches that "all men" must come to a knowledge of the truth. "This includes every member of the human family," writes Sister King. But she admits, in unguarded moments, that the text never has meant so much, and does not mean so much now; and to smooth out this unsightly wrinkle in her interpretation of the passage, she says God "intends to do it through Jesus on the throne of David endowed with the power to resurrect the dead." Not a semblance of proof is offered for so remarkable a statement. But the text on which this purgatorial superstructure is built to accommodate sinners in the next world, is written in the present tense: "God will have all men to come to a knowledge of the truth." This has always been his will, and is his will today as much as it will ever be at the resurrection, or any time thereafter. At the resurrection and after he is not going to change his will! Our God is not a mutable creature, changing his mind every time an adverse wind blows! God's will is now agreeable to, and is gratified by, a sinner coming to a knowledge of the truth, but notwithstanding his will, thousands defy it and contradict it. Then coming to a knowledge of the truth is only half of the text; and God never does things in halves. When we say that coming to a knowledge of the truth is compulsory, we have caught ourselves in a Universalist trap, and are in fact helplessly committed to his premise. 'God will have all men to be saved, and come unto the knowledge of the truth," is the way the text reads. If God's will makes compulsory knowledge for all, equally compulsory is salvation for all. Sister King is heading in the wrong direction; she is playing into the hands of Universalism. If attaining a knowledge of the truth is unconditional, salvation is also unconditional (which is Universalism with the paint scraped off): if salvation is conditional, coming to a knowledge of the truth is likewise conditional (which is conditional immortality, or life only in Christ). In an after thought Sister King seems to see this dilemma for after saying "every individual" must "know of God's loving offer," she puts in "on certain conditions"—"God's loving offer to take him from under the curse on certain conditions." Conditions, yes, conditions; they often play havoc with beautiful theories and sentimental dreams. We are satisfied with homely truth.

(*) Thelo, the Greek word translated "will" in 1 Tim. 2:4, means to desire, wish, and is rendered "desire" thirteen times in the New Testament. Specimen texts, Mark 9:35; 1 Tim. 1:7 It is God's "desire" that all men should know the truth and be saved. But men are moral creatures, and not machines; and therefore while God is "willing" or desiring their salvation, the men themselves are not willing. This leaves their salvation and knowledge of the truth both problematic. "If God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth" (2 Tim. 2:24-26). "If he brings them to repentance" are words substituted by the Diaglott with the word "perhaps." Dr. Young is our human authority for saying thelo means to desire or wish. And Peter is divine authority for the same meaning of the word. "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Pet. 3:9). God is willing that "all" men should repent, but rarely are men willing to repent. As repentance, enlightenment in the truth, and all similar requirements are duties of men, to be discharged by them, if they do not obey, God's willingness cannot change their disobedience into obedience.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Editor:

I will send you a few lines to let you know that we see through the much loved columns of The Restitution, that you have your new linograph machine and it is now doing your work, and is giving satisfaction. We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to you, and to the Board of Directors, and to others that have been instrumental in holding up The Restitution and making it as good a paper as it is. And we thank the Lord that your efforts are being crowned with success. We also wish to extend our thanks to the many writers of The Restitution for the good pieces they send in. Enclosed please find draft of ten dollars to apply on Linotype Fund. We thank the Lord for his blessings that rest upon the household of faith.

From your brother in Christ, John Lehman.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Inclosed you will find another of my Extreme Series. Will have about one more to complete as outlined. Then at the request of some brethren I will send you some MSS on the history of baptism, showing I think positively, that single immersion is older than triune. The Restitution is fine these days, and I can hardly wait after I get it to devour its contents. The reason there has been a break in my serial articles, is that I have been away from home working to keep things going at home. You know we lost our crop by hail last summer. The Nebraska brethren sent us their thanksgiving offering. I am sorry we could not help some on linograph machine, but perhaps we can some other time May God bless you in your labors.

J. J. Heckman.

Dear Brother Huggins:

We are writing this morning to let you know how we appreciate the good old Restitution, and the grand truth it has sounded out for the forty years that we have been taking it. It is a great and good means by which those of the faith may communicate with one another, especially to these that are isolated and scattered abroad in all lands. When we read the many good articles that the brethren write, they seem near to us. We are not strangers to one another, but brethren, and ere long, if we faint not, we shall be gathered into God's everlasting kingdom. The signs point to the soon coming of our dear Lord and Master. Dear loved ones all, let us so live that we may be among the number that will be chosen by God's anointed to be instrumental in ruling and blessing the nations.

Sister Hannah Barber, will you please give The Restitution your address, as we have misplaced the last letter we had from you. I think it would be a good idea for those that are isolated to give their address through the paper. Some might live only a few miles apart and not be aware of it. I live in the Panhandle of Texas, on the star mail route, near Lipscombe in Lipscombe Co. Address, Higgins, Texas.

M. E. Randolph and
E. F. Randolph.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

It is a long time since I have written to The Restitution. The fact is I have been drifting about for the last year so much that I have not seen the paper except when I get among people who take it. Through July, August and September I was with the brethren of the one faith at Wenatchee, and I want to say I found a people with a will and a desire to do and live a godly life as God has given them light according to the gospel, believing all things that are written by the prophets and apostles concerning the name of Jesus the Christ and his kingdom.

At this writing I am at Chico, Cal. I have found a little band of earnest believers here. Some of them are strong in the faith, zealous of good works trying to live up to what the spirit has taught them of the word of life. Brother Knapp just left here a few days before I came. Was sorry for I would have liked very much to have met him. I expect to go further south, stopping at Sacramento, Stockton, Oakland and may go to Los Angeles, but will get mail at Chico for some time yet. Would be glad to meet any of the brethren of the one faith who may live near my route. Hoping to meet you all in the soon coming kingdom.

S. C. Lehman.

To the Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio.

Greeting: I am sure any member of the church of God who has had the privilege of visiting similar bodies in various places, whether in this country or in Europe, has understood somewhat of our Lord's meaning when he said that those that had forsaken earthly ties for his sake should recieve an hundredfold, even in this life, in the shape of added loved ones.

Truly ye who are of "the purchased people" have a fuller meaning of the words "brother" and "sister" than do the churches about us, and we are glad to welcome to fellowship all those of like precious faith. Letters have a wonderful source of comfort and edification to those who have been separated for any cause; but this greeting of the Church in Brooklyn to the Church in Cleveland is to thank you for the "living epistles" which you have sent us in the persons of Sisters Emma and Roberta Lang. The latter has endeared herself to us all by her gentle ways, constant attendance at all gatherings of the church, and desire to show herself "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed", and we are very glad to have her with us.

It was indeed a great pleasure to us all to be favored with a visit from Sister Emma in November last, to see her smiling face, and to hear her cheerful voice, as she told of the good work you are doing in the Church in Cleveland, and to realize that though separated by many miles, the hope of the soon return of our Lord is the uppermost one in our hearts. Truly "perilous times" are now upon the earth, and we would do well to heed the words of the apostle Paul to the Corinthian Church: "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

For the Church of God in Brooklyn, N. Y.,

OBITUARY

Samuel B. Halliday, the eldest son of James W. and Sarah Livingston Halliday, was born in Clinton county, Indiana, June 17, 1833, and departed this life January 26, 1917, aged 83 years, 7 months and 9 days. His parent and nine of his brothers and sisters have preceeded him to the grave, and one sisters have preceded him to the grave, and one still survives him.

He was reared to manhood on the farm, his education being limited to the subscription schools of the early days. His parents were among the early pioneers of the county and helped clear the ground and lay out the town of Frankfort, this being one of his proud achievements. He answered his country's call for volunteers in the Civil War and served till its end.

He was united in marriage to Ann Eliza Avers, November 4, 1860. To them were born one son, Andrew E., who now resides in Kennewick, Washington. This union was broken by the death of his wife, July 7, 1861. On September 19, 1867 he was united in marriage to Isabell Meneely. To them four children were born, Charles of Troy, Idaho, Annie D. Little, Addie R. Davis, Iva P. Wyrick, all living near him. He was bereaved the second time October 8, 1875. On Nov. 14, 1880 he was again married to Mary Cowdry Davis. To them was born one daughter, Abbie Arminta Spurgeon who preceeded him in death. He was again robbed of his companion by death, May 11, 1894. On Nov. 21, 1896 he was again married to Mrs. Sophie Strawn, who survives him.

He became a member of the Church of God in an early day, some sixty years ago, under the preaching of Elder Hornaday. He was an enthusiastic worker in the Hillisburg church, and a close student of the Bible. He could quote much scripture as a reason for the hope he had. He was an industrious citizen, unostentatious in manner, and during his long life in the county he had many friends and won the respect of all that knew him.

He leaves to mourn his death, a widow, three daughters, two sons, twenty-three grandchildren, and two great grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends.—By Mr. Wyrick.

Funeral services were held at the Hillisburg church on Sunday at 10 o'clock, January 28, 1917. The church was filled with his relatives, brethren, friends and neighbors to pay a tribute of love and respect to his memory. Burial was made in St. Paul cemetery where our aged brother rests, awaiting his fondest hope the coming of his Savior and Redeemer.

STEADFAST

"Therefore my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Cor. 15:58).

This is Paul's summing up of what he has stated previously in the 15th chapter of Corinthians as he commands the brethren to be "steadfast, unmoveable, abounding in the works of the Lord." This applies to us as much as it did to the disciples in Paul's day; and if we remain faithful, as Paul and his associates did, we shall be rewarded with them at the last day.

In the first verses of this chapter he states: "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you, first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and rose again the third day according to the Scriptures." Paul declares that he preached the gospel unto them. The hope of the resurrection of the dead is the only means that God has provided by which we may obtain eternal life. Jesus arose from the dead according to the Scriptures. Acts 2:24: "Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it." If we are joint heirs with Jesus, then we shall rise as he did from the tomb; rise with the immortal nature. "Behold, I shew you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed (from mortality, to immortality), in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trump shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. 15:51-54). Jesus has obtained this victory, and if we are truly his, we shall be like him when he comes to claim his own, and to reign over the house of Jacob forever. But, in order to receive the reward, we must be steadfast in the faith not "carried about with every wind of doctrine."

What are the conditions generally? If we take up a paper published by those who profess to believe the Bible, there are all kinds of theories advanced; many of them entirely contrary to the Scriptupres, surely leading the people astray. If we visit where there are a few interested in the truth we find them divided into all kinds of factions; one pulling down what the other is trying to build up. Really no church in existence there. We are warned against such things in Ephesians 4:14,15: that we "henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive."

This appears to describe the situation nicely as it exists in many places, but we are admonished in God's word to shun those who spread discord (v.15); but, "speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head even Christ: from whom the whole body fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every joint supplies, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

Let each and all strive to know the truth as revealed to us in God's holy word, and be "steadfast and unmoveable" to the end.

J. E. Hogarth.

"You-All"

The Editor is a Southerner, and of course, indulges in so-called "provincialisms of the South." es in the so-called "provincialisms of the South." You may be sure that we personally enjoyed the following defense of our much loved "you-all" which appeared in the Plain Dealer as an editorial:

A meticulous writer in a current magazine has some words to say about the "provincial conservatism" of the speech of dwellers in the southern states. "They cling to some of their barbarisms—notably, 'you-all' with a sort of stubborn pride; and even the most higmly educated of them will be guilty of gross errors in grammar simply because those particular errors are distinctively southern."

It is safe to leave the answer to this sweeping statement to the southerners themselves. But with the reference to the locution "you-all" the student of language and dialect may pay profitable attention. For the expression supplies a long felt want, and after all there is nothing barbarous about it. It results from the need of a plural for the second personal pronoun.

"You" was originally a plural. In the days when people addressed each other familiarly as "thou', there was no such gap in the language. The plural pronoun was used as a singular only when a superior was being addressed; later this employment was extended to the uses of ordinary courtesy, and finally it supplanted the ancient thee and thou altogether.

The distinction between the singular and plural pronoun is sometimes badly needed. If a southerner says to a northerner, "You shouldn't have come down here and corrupter our colored populatpion," the answer is likely to be, "I had nothing to do with it." But the southerner doesn't say that. He avoids personalities by putting it, "You-all shouldn't have, etc." The argument can then proceed on general lines.

Let it be remembered, too, in regard to other southern expressions, that they are likely to be closer to what was good English in the early eighteenth century—that classic period—than ours may be. For the south has kept unchanged many of the forms of speech brought over by the pioneers, while we have discarded them.

Liars Editorially Estimated

The liar whom the editor hates worst of all is the man who when dunned for a year's subscription, says he only received two or three copies of the paper during the year, and refuses to pay.—Clarksville Graphic.

Next to, if not above this one, the editor hates a liar who takes the paper seven or eight years, and when finally cornered for settlement says he never ordered the paper at all.—Pike County Post.

But the worst liar of the whole outfit is the man who takes the paper several years, then moves away without paying or saying anything about it, and yet says he's an honest man.—Ellsbury Advance.

Brethren, you all fall short of the truth.

A BRIGHT PAGE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Tidbits of Pleasant and Useful Information Gathered from Everywhere

Don't make excuses, make good.

So long as we love we serve; so long as we are loved by others I would almost say that we are indispensable; and no one is useless while they have a friend.

The presence of a hand, a kiss, the caress of a child, will do more to save, sometimes, than the wisest argument, even rightly understood. Love alone is wisdom, love alone is power; and, where love seems to fail, it is where self has stepped between and dulled the potency of its rays.

An English military aviator reports that while up in the air some time ago he observed a swallow flying high in front of his machine and set out after it in full speed. He followed the bird, gradually gaining on it foot by foot, until at length one of the wires in the machine struck it and it fell to the earth. This incident shows that the flight of the swallow is not nearly as swift as has been thought heretofore.

Facilities are soon to be offered for conducting funeral services by means of phonograph records containing a funeral sermon, a song by a quartet and a prayer. Characteristic sermons in any denomination will be furnished, with strong eulogies if desired. James Scott, of Lake City, Minn., is the originator of the scheme to reduce the high cost of dying. He says the cost of the entire program will not exceed $1.

Confidential employees of John D. Rockefeller estimate the oil king's wealth to be at least $1,000,000,000. This means that the interest which he draws annually is around $60,000,000. If the total wealth were in one dollar bills it would require 16,300 men to lift it, each man lifting 200 pounds. It would require 31,250 tons of silver to coin it into silver dollars which, if put edge to edge, would reach from New York to Salt Lake City.

If, with the kingdoms of Europe tottering about their sovereign's heads, with the change of capitols, with the uncertainty of boundaries, we would be sure of one king, of one kingdom, of one capitol, of one boundary, we are invited to a study of God's kingdom that is founded upon the Creator himself. But we don't look for pearls in the desert sands, and we won't find the news of the kingdom in any Sunday Supplement or in any popular novel, try as we may.—Sister Frances Russell.

Choosing Darkness.—A gentleman in one of the Southern States discovered a white owl's nest, which was in a hole of a leaning dead palm, overhanging the river. He watched the growth of the birds until he considered them old enough to move. He then transferred them from the nest to a box, and they became great pets. They were always timid, however, and desired to hide during the day. All the day long they would sit quietly in the darkest place they could find, making no sound except when approached, when a sharp snapping of their beaks announced that they wished no intruders. To turn them out of their box in daytime meant a quick return to it. At night, however, they were in their element. When turned loose they walked around, flapped their wings, came up and took food from the hand, drank water from a spoon, and seemed to be in the greatest spirits. Men with evil thoughts and purposes are like these owls in that they choose the darkness rather than the light, desiring to cover up their evil ways. It is a great thing to so live, even in the nesting-place of one's own imagination, that the sunshine is the natural and welcome atmosphere of the soul.

Homely Girls

What is the use of being homely, girls, when you can all be beautiful just as well as not? If you have the white light of the soul within, it will shine through the muddiest complexions and the thickest swarms of freckles. It can re-shape snub-noses and wry mouths; it can burnish red hair until it shines like gold; it can transform any one into an angel of delight. In other words, the lovliness of a pure spirit imparts its charm to everything connected with it.

As a rule, the prettiest girls lack ambition, for they depend largely upon their good looks to carry them along. We all have heard such remarks as: "She would be a very pretty girl if she only knew something," and "She is really a beautiful girl to look at, but when she opens her mouth—my!" On the other hand, happily, we often hear persons say of a middle aged woman: "She looks so much better than she did when a girl." That is because she has been cultivating the intelligent part of herself all these years.

Ask the teachers in the schools who are the best scholars, and they will point out the plain ones, who, knowing they could not count upon personal attractions, sought their charms at a higher source. It is believed that Michael Angelo's broken nose did much to stimulate his genius. The eminent women of our day are not noted for beauty, and the newspaper reporter makes much of it when he finds one having an ordinary share of good looks.

The world is laughing yet at Pompey's soldiers, who fled in terror when Caesar's rough fellows struck at their handsome faces. Do we not miss nobler victories every day on the battle-ground of the heart because we have the same sins of vanity?

But we love perfection of any kind, beauty not excepted. The Savior of mankind was "fairer than the sons of men," and his admiration of the beautiful is written on the page of night in starry letters, and on the page of day in colors that we connot imitate. The person who, like him, is both fair and good, is the ideal of us all, but ideals are exceedingly scarce. Evil thoughts and evil lives have distorted millions, but God has never made one homely face.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 30 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. FEBRUARY 20, 1917 NUMBER 7

GOOD THINGS TO COME

Soon the wars will cease,
Then there will for ever be peace.

Soon the day will come
When the victory will be won.

Soon the righteous will be raised
To forever sing songs of praise.

Soon that bright day will dawn,
Then we will meet the happy throng.

Soon we shall see his smiling face.
And meet him at his appointed place.

There for ever to be Clothed in immortality.

Mrs. W. H. Eidemiller.

THE IMPENDING CRISIS

George B. Alldridge

"For there will be great distress on the land, and anger to this people. And they will fall by mouth of a sword, and will be led away captive into all the nations: and Jerusalem will be down-trodden by Gentiles, until Gentile seasons be fulfilled. And there will be signs in sun, moon and stars: and, on the earth, anguish of nations in embarrassment; sea and surge resounding: men fainting from fear and expectation of the things overtaking the inhabitants (earth): for the powers of the heavens will be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of Man, coming in a cloud, with great power and glory. And, when these things are beginning to come to pass, unbend and lift up your heads: because that your redemption (deliverance) is drawing near" (Luke 21:23-28, Rotherham translation).

"And I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen (Heb. nations) (Hag. 2:22).

In a recent issue of "The World's Work," the writer has culled the following, written under the caption "The Fallacy of Non-Resistance:"

"A few philanthrophists believe that the world would get on better if there were no armies and navies and no use of force to resist wrong doers; but non- resistance seems to almost everybody an impracticable international policy at mankind's actual state of progress. The nations have not yet come into Emerson's 'region of holiness' where passion passes from them. On the contrary, never before was outrageous violence so rife in the world, and resistance to it by force so indispensable. The policy of non-resistance is nowhere applied to burglars, murderers, or maniacs. No more can it be applied to Europe in full view of invasions of Belguim and Serbia, Armenian massacres, and the sudden sinking of passenger steamers, merchantmen and fishermen. Non-resistance is an admirable moral goal: but reaching it seems at the present day as far off as when Buddha taught, twenty-five hundred years ago, that the use of force was never justifiable or even expedient."

The writer of the above argues that force must still control. Since peaceful international relations will need for decades the firm support of a trustworthy protective international force, the United States ought to be in a position to supply part of that force. It is America's clear duty to her inheritance of liberty and to civillization itself to take an effective part in the maintenance of peace and of the freedom of the seas when the present war is over. For the discharge of this duty, and for her own security, America needs a strong navy and a strong potential army, both kept always ready. She can secure neither without adopting the principle of universal service. Such are the lessons of Germany's outbreak in 1914, and of the fifty years long Prussian preparation for that outbreak in such secrecy and with such protestations of innocency, that the other European nations were taken by surprise when the German armies rushed over Belguim, bound for Paris.

After peace has been maintained by force for some years, and the world sees that the alliance of a few strong nations to prevent war is effective, and can be trusted, it will be possible to take steps toward a general reduction of armaments, and so to lift a cruhsing burden from the productive workers of the world. The formation of such an alliance within the next few months would contribute effectively to the arrest of the present horrible destruction, and to the arrangements, and so to lift a crushing burden from the tory terms for a durable peace. Should not the United States of America be a member of that beneficent alliance? Its past history, its present needs, and its future hopes answer, yes! The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, representing as they do all the business enterprises throughout our land, have endorsed unanimously the following questions submitted by ballot to them:

"Recognizing the military obligation equally with the civic obligation as a fundamental duty of democratic citizenship in a republic, and to establish a system which will affect every man alike, it is recommended that universal military training be adopted as a fundamental democratic principle of our military policy and be enforced by law to furnish adequate land, sea, and industrial forces in peace and war."

Dear Brethren, notice how quickly after feeling the pulse of the business interests of the country responding favorably to this question, the machinery of the government begins to work. Yesterray (Saturday, Feb. 10) the Senate Committee on military affairs, reported favorably (which really means adoption) the Chamberlain bill, that requires every young man in America, upon his nineteenth birthday, being enrolled into the regular army, to serve at least six months, for the purpose of being trained and educated in matters purely military. The only exemptions that are made, are those on account of physical unfitness, and in cases where others are entirely dependant upon the earnings of the youth.

Members of religious sects who do not believe in war are to be exempt from training in arms, but they are to be prepared for military sevices as non-combatants.

Notice that there is to be no purchasing of exemption from training. Anyone who evades training is not to be eligible to public office, and every person and corporation is forbidden to employ anyone who has not undergone training or has no certificate of exemption. The refusal to obey the government means ostracism and imprisonment.

Two Scriptures come very forcibly to my mind, and I wonder if they are again to be fulfilled as they were in the type. "Thus hath said the Lord of hosts, Let your hands be strong, ye that hear in these days these words out of the mouth of the prophets, who (spoke) on the day that the foundation of the house of the Lord of hosts was laid, when the temple was to be built. For before those days there was no reward for man, nor any reward for beast: and for him that went out or came in there was no peace, because of the oppressor: and I let loose all men, every one against his neighbor" (Zech. 8:9,10. Leseer's translation). The other is in Acts 14:22: "Establishing the souls of the disciples, beseeching them to abide in the faith, and saying, through many tribulations must we enter into the kingdom of God." Rotherham's "tribulation," in this connection, according to the Greek text, means affliction, anguish, burdened, persecution trouble. Brethren, let us be honest with our own hearts and experience. For the truth's sake how much tribulation has been our experience? Paul says that, "Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shal try every man's work of what sort it is" 1 Cor. 3:13).

A few months ago the writer was instructed to request the Christadelphian Ecclesia at Brooklyn, to embody in their petition to congress, praying exemption from military service, the petition of the various ecclesias of the church of God. They deemed it wise to refuse our request; hence brethren we must in some way take care of this matter ourselves. Therefore the following petition is suggested for your thought and consideration. If approved, please sign and forward to R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, O. The matter will then be taken up with the proper authority for final action. (For the petition, see page 11.—Editor.)

SOME THOUGHTS ON CURRENT EVENTS

I suppose that most of us have read the speech of President Wilson to the Senate in regard to forming a vast national coalition, which has been received by all nations thoughtfully and courteously, and in our own country with general approval. Elihu Root, formerly Secretary of State, says in speaking of the matter, "If the peace presently to be made is to endure, it must be a peace made secure by the organized peace of mankind."

This, in my opinion, is the first step toward the building of the "Great Image" seen by Nebuchadnezzar. It is the conception of the last "Great Beast, terrible and exceeding strong," foreshadowed by both Daniel and John in the Revelations. What seems most remarkable to me in this covement (which I have expected for many years) lies in the fact that it should be inauguarated by our President—a man who is a Bible student, God fearing and God loving. It shows that we, some of us at least, will have to modify our conception of some things. For instance, antagonism to the purpose of God does not necessarily consist in viciousness or ungodliness in the ordinarily understood sense; wrong ideas are enough to put a man on a wrong course. Reasoning from popular conceptions the logic of this last human monstrosity, which we are about to see constructed, is just the proper and in fact the only thing to do, and so we all about to "join the military," "every man's sword upon his thigh."

Another thought in this connection is that as a man can be set so far astray by a wrong idea, it, only take the right idea to set him right. The evil in the world consists principally in wrong conceptions and confusion of thought. Wickedness is really abnormal, but sin in the sense of error is our natural birthright or birthwrong as the case is. In this fact lies the hope of an early and we might say, trying to look at it from the divine standpoint, an easy regeneration of the human race when the vail is taken away that causes the confusion. For instance, as has been illustrated so often in the United States, the same nationalities that are so hideously combative on the other side of the Atlantic, live together here peaceably enough on the same street and the children dance together on the sidewalk to the same street piano. It is not necessary to exterminate the human family to set them right, not now at least; seeing that the Good Father has gone to such pains in the matter of our careful education through the personality of his Christ, by which there has been a universal spread of the knowledge of Christian ethics and the whole spirit of the age changed. This fact has been strikingly brought out in the hue and cry raised at the German conduct of the war during the first few months, and even this return to barbarism and ferocity has had an important lesson, and the natives begin to see things in another light—dimly to be sure, but becoming visible. Even this straining after peace, this attempt to unify the nations in some sort of amity, is a sign of the times. The desire is all right, but they do not at present see that the mere construction of one big military machine, instead of a lot of lesser ones, only gives some fool or knave still greater power, should he get hold of the throttle. This of course is what will happen.

To the readers of The Restitutien it may not be necessary to add that the destruction of nationalities does not mean the extermination of the race but the salvation of the race as such. It has been said that "Patriotism is the last refuge of the scoundrel," and this last war has also revealed this fact as never before. So rejoice we that, when the deliverer comes to Zion, he will bring salvation and publish peace. There will be furious antagonism, "vested interests" and the military castes will have to be swept out of the way. It will be like the crack of thunder at midnight, but in the morning the mists will evaporate as the "day star" arises.

J. F. Gelletly.

"HE THAT HATH EARS TO HEAR LET HIM HEAR"

"And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men" (Rev. 13:13).

The nature of the wonders done by this two-horned symbol is generally misunderstood, by confounding them with the lying wonders of the man of sin (2 Thess. 2:9). The scientific act of B. Franklin in bottling the lightning, bringing it down from the atmospheric "heaven" to the earth. had no element of deceit in it.

"But," says one, "did not the wonders done deceive the dwellers on the earth?" Yes, but in a democracy, the scientist and the people are one; and in this case they are self-deceived by their power to do scientific wonders. It is evident to the close student of this prophecy, that the deceiving is in connection with the power to perform wonderful things. It is only a few centuries since this country was a wilderness from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans; and from the great lakes to the Gulph of Mexico. And in wealth this nation exceeds any nation on earth. Her railroads in mileage equals nearly all Europe. This is more than human nature can bear without being somewhat exalted.

And under such conditions, coupled with its humanitarian ideas, it is likely to imbibe the idea that it is destined in the hands of providence to enlighten the whole world. As said Woodrow Wilson: "The mission of America in the world is essentially a mission of peace and goodwill among men." This brings to our mind a statement made some years ago by Senator Doolittle, of Wisconsin: "The United States is the little stone destined to smite the metalic image on its feet."

The development of nations comes according to natural law; there can be no effect without a cause. Therefore the fulfillment of prophecy is not perceived. Pernicious ideas produce tyranny. The pope is God's vicegerant; therefore the pope should be obeyed. I refer again to the nature of the acts performed by the two-horned symbol: "He doeth great wonders;" no make believe— "no lying wonder." "He had power to give life unto the image," etc. As said before, the deceiving is self-imposed, on account of the power, or ability of the party to do wonderful things Deut. 11:16: "Take heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and serve other gods." And Jer. 37:9: "Thus saith the Lord; deceive not yourselves." Again, "The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee" (Oba. 3). "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves" (James 1:22).

There is danger according to these testimonies of being self-deceived; and especially of a people that has departed from the doctrine of the Bible, and are teaching fables instead of God's word. There are some things that the average man views with horror, "the mark of the beast," is one of them. But if we say "the mark of the empire," it loses its horrid meaning. "The beast" is but a symbol; the empire is the real thing. It is said "the beast" is the Papacy. "The beast" is always the Roman Empire: but not always the Papacy. "The beast" was not the Papacy when Daniel saw him come from the sea; nor until the little horn came up on the head of the beast, after and among the ten.

When he was pagan as seen in Rev. 12, "a great red dragon," it was not the Papacy. When John had a view of him as a leopard (ch. 13:1), he was not the Papacy. But after he received the blasphemous mouth of verse 5 he was the Papacy, and is today.

As the Roman Empire incorporated Greece into its dominion, making itself like the leopard it had swallowed; so the Papacy, taking Rome in its weakness after receiving the deadly wound by a sword, the Papacy managed to control the empire, merging what was left into the patrimony of St Peter (Gibbon). The Papacy controlled the whole of the empire: The same fact is seen in Daniel after the rise of the papal horn after and among the ten. After this the horn has control, and on account of his great words, the judgment sat and took away his (the horn's) dominion, showing plainly that the horn controlled the empire.

Now it happened that the leopard beast received the wound by a sword, before the Papacy got control of the empire. And the mark is the mark of the beast that received the wound by a sword. Therefore the mark originally is not the mark of the Papacy: but is of the leopard beast, the symbol of the empire; so lifting the symbol we have the empire. In fact the "mark" is the mark of the empire; and all that is to be done to complete the image is to enact into the law of the state the faith of the orthodox churches.

Among the false doctrines that was held by the church in the fourth century, to which the present church makes an image, is the immortality of the human soul, going to heaven at death; and that there are three persons Father, Son and Holy Ghost, in the Godhead. The doctrine of the trinity is the mark of the empire.

These three orthodox doctrines are held by all Roman Catholics, the Greek or Russian churches, and by all orthodox Protestant churches. And if a man was to exert all his mental powers, he could not find in all the realm of Christian faith three doctrines that more emphatically contradict the word of God. In fact, the faith in a triune Deity amounts to idolatry. "Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God is one Lord" (Mark 12:29). If the Holy Spirit is God, how ignorant was Paul not to even mention him in all his salutations to all the churches to which he wrote epistles, which run thus: "Grace to you and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ." This is a sample of Paul's salutations in all of his epistles. And John in Revelations 1:4 places the spirit in sevenfold manifestation before the throne—not on the throne. Again: "These things saith he hath the seven spirits of God, and the seven stars" (Rev. 3:1). Here, according to the doctrine of the trinity, one God has another God. "Mystery, Babylon."

Geo. Francis.

CHRIST'S TEMPTATION

In considering the subject of Christ's temptation we must remember that the account of it was written in oriental language to oriental people, who well understood that mode of thought, but when a western people read that kind of literature and make it all literal, they often make a sad mess of things. We have some plain positive statements in the Scriptures to guide us in understanding this event. Heb. 4:15: "For we have not an high priest who cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." James 1:13-15: "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."

The word translated "lust" in the above passages should have been translated "desire," for the word is used in two or more senses in the Scriptures. Christ had all the natural desires belonging to the human body, hunger, thirst, etc. These desires in many cases are perfectly legitimate and to gratify them under right conditions is all right. Mankind are all tempted just according to their brain conditions: what is a temptation to one may be no temptation to another person. For instance, some persons can hardly pass a saloon without going in and getting drunk; to another person the very smell of liquor disgusts them, and this entirely depends upon brain conditions, or brain development. The ancients knew nothing about the brain and its functions, consequently they used other words to express their ideas concerning the mind of man. They use "heart," "bowels," "flesh," etc., when in reality these portions of the body are not the seat of thought of either evil or well doing. Christ had a brain as we have, but a brain much more highly developed than any other human being has ever had. He was begotten by the power of the holy spirit, and his body and brain, thus developed were of the very highest order, and consequently he was able to keep the laws of Moses in every particular. It said, "Do this and thou shalt live," which meant a great deal more than this natural life. Those who talk about Christ having sin in the flesh do not understand what they are talking about. To quote Psa. 51:5, "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity and in sin did my mother conceive me," and apply it to Christ, looks a good deal like blaspheming the holy spirit. If anyone will take the trouble to study that psalm carefully he will see that it is an orientalist lamenting his sin with Bath-Sheba, and this psalm has no application to Christ or, for that matter, to any married woman committing sin in conceiving a child. God commanded at the beginning to be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth, and again he repeated this command after the flood. Surely there is no sin to a married woman in obeying this command, but a great deal of sin is often committed in disobeying it.

Those who believe that Christ was the son of Joseph can very little comprehend the wonderful character that Christ had. God had been preparing through the ages an ancestry on his mother's side to raise him to the highest plane and she, no doubt, was one of the finest women of Adam's race. We get a glimpse of Christ's wonderful brain power when he was twelve years of age. That brain, when matured, was no doubt superior to the brain of the greatest poet, general, statesman or prophet that ever lived, and he knew his power. He could command the raging storm to be still after he had received the power of the holy spirit. He knew all the Scriptures and the promises concerning himself. He was the only one apparently who knew that he was to suffer, and die before he could enter into his glory. He was taken into the wilderness by the spirit of God to be tried before he entered into his ministry. That he fasted forty days is nothing miraculous. Moses did and so did Elijah, and others have done so in our day. Then he was naturally extremely hungry, he was in a desert where there was no food to be had. He knew his power and what more natural than that the thought should flash across his mind "make these stones bread," but he instantly replies, "man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that preceedeth out of the mouth of God." There was his source of strength, knowing the word of God thoroughly. The thirty years of his life had been used in making it his own.

He is then taken to the holy city and set on a "pinnacle of the temple," as our version reads, but the word "pinnacle" is most misleading. The Emhpatic Diaglott renders this word "battlement," which is the right idea. On the top of the temple were battlements where people could walk, and one of these battlements overlooked a great ravine with a clear fall of seven hundred feet. God had promised to give his angels charge of him and this quotation comes to his mind with the suggestion, "Why not put it to the proof," but he at once repels the thought and quotes: "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

Again he was taken to an exceeding high mountain and shown all the kingdoms of the world and offered them if he would serve satan or sin. He knew he was born to be king of the world, but he also knew before he got that dominion he had to go through great agony and a cruel death. Knowing the tremendous power he had, and also that the Jews were looking for a great deliverer, the thought flashed across his mind to take that power now and not go through the suffering, but he at once repels the thought with, "Get thee hence satan, for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

They who tell us that it was a supernatural being who thus tempted him do not understand that such a being could not have tempted Christ, if such a being existed, for Christ would have known as soon as he saw him that he had no power to give a kingdom or indeed anything else. Also they who think that it was an embassy from Tiberius the then Roman Emperor,little understand the character of Tiberius. He was one of the most cruel and morose of characters, and if he had heard of Christ and his claims about what he would have done, would have been to have commanded him to be killed, besides, for a thing to have tempted Christ, or indeed anyone else, it must be something reasonably within one's reach. It is only babies that cry for the moon. Christ knew that Tiberius had no power to give him the kingdoms of the world, for the kingdoms of this world are gained and held by force, and although he had the power to do that, his time was not yet.

A thought flashing through the mind to do wrong is not sin if it is repelled at once as Christ did, but if the thought is cherished and plans made to accomplish it, although the act is never done, then it is sin. Christ says, "He that looks on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery already in his heart." Christ was tempted in all points as we are, yet without sin. He was sinless in every respect. He was the pure Lamb of God who freely gave his life for us and was raised again for our justification, and is now at God's right hand acting as our great high priest and intercessor. But we must repel sin and sinful thoughts, as he did, with all our power, and to enable us to do so we must study the Scriptures and use them as he has shown us in example.

THE PRINCELY PRIESTHOOD

By S. A. Chaplin in Old Restitution

"But ye are an elected race, a kingly priesthood, an holy nation, a purchased people, that ye should declare the perfection of him who hath called you from darkness into his marvellous light." (1 Peter 11:9, Macknight's Translation).

Election as to honor and rulership, fitness for salvation will be the sole and at the same time, the absolute prerequisite to kingly crown or priestly coronal, in the coming ages. Contrary to commonly received ideas, the saints are now training for future dominion. To be called out of the world into the church in this world, is one thing; but to be chosen out of the church to the royalties of the world to come, is altogether quite a different thing.

How few realize what the saintships to which the royalties and priesthoods of God's everlasting kingdom are to be awarded. To merely be saved is one thing, but to be glorifies with Christ, and to sit with him in his throne is a very distinct matter. It is one thing to sing about crowns, and another thing altogether to win them. The prize of royalty in ages yet to be, was the object of Paul's ambition, and the crown awaits him when the Lord comes. We are in the race, and the fadeless diadem is the stake.

Walking With God

It takes the iron of long persistent and masterful training to enable a man to keep step with God, unmoved, though the crowd jostle and strike at him as they hurry past, going the other way. The face must be "set as a flint" for the right, always for the right; contracts must be kept, promises be held sacred, business pledges be fulfilled, work done that will last, no matter how strong the pleadings, nor how great the bribes of men holding to laxer principles, and cheaper, easier, less honest ways of doing things.

Always and ever the answer must come, "I must keep truth; I must stand firm; my work must be honestly done; the plans I have been ememployed to carry out, must be followed." Friendship, future prospects, money, threats of certain ruin, must not weigh a straw with the man who is engeged in such a fight. He must not fail, he must not fall, his backbone must be stiffened to the absolutely unbreakable point by love for and confidence in God, and by hope of what will be his if the fight is fought out "to a finish." It must be "Death rather than the mass!"

Such a man may not walk with aristocracy of earth, but having walked with God, even through martyr fires, to keep the faith, he will walk with Christ in white, for he will be worthy.

The secret of success is constancy of purpose.

When you set out to do anything, never let anything disturb you from doing that thing. This power of putting the thought on one particular thing and keeping it there for hours at a time, takes practice; and it takes a long time to get into the habit.

Be thou the rainbow in the storms of life.

If a minister of the truth lives near Chinook Cove, B. C., will he please communicate with Sister Howard? We understand her daughter, Ethel May, desires to be baptized as soon as she has a proper understanding of the gospel. The nearest minister may be in Washington or Oregon, a considerable distance, but this matter is of such moment as to merit immediate attention.

We understand there have been some rather severe criticism of Sister Wince's article entitled "Don't Find Fault with our Paper," published some weeks since. Many criticisms get their point by assuming an unreasonable meaning, whereas charitable judgment would seek to impute only reasonable sentiments to the writer. When we read Auntie Wince's article we "thought no evil." We assumed, and are sure she meant, nagging, continuous fault finding, unfriendly criticism, which is very enervating to an editor, and wears him down to a mere shadow. We have read Sister Wince's article a second time, and we are fully convinced that she did not mean that The Restitution was to be wholly exempt from kindly and helpful criticism, but only from the petty fault-finding that kills.

COMMUNICATIONS

Bro. Huggins:

I notice in The Restitution an item in regard to securing exemption from military duty. That brought to mind the reason why the name Christadelphian was first used; perhaps you may not be aware of it. When the Civil War was seen to be approaching some of the brethren in Kentucky, (if I remember correctly), were desirous of being exempted from military duty, and they used the name Christadelphian in describing who they were. Whether they were successful I do not know, but that was the first use of the name. A few months ago our daily paper had an article copied from an English paper in regard to exemption from military duty, and among others it mentioned Christadelphians as being exempt.

I heard indirectly recently that the Christadelphians were agitating the matter of exemption now, although I am not posted as to just what they have done about it.

Fraternally yours,

C. H. Morse.

THE TWO-HORNED WILD BEAST

In Rev. 13:11 we read: "And I (John) saw another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like unto a lamb, and he spake as a dragon. And he exerciseth all the authority of the first beast (of Rev. 13:1-10) in his sight" (Rev. 13: 11-12. Rev. Version).

1. Whence comes he? "Out of the earth" (vs. 11). The ten-horned beast, with a diadem on each horn, came "out of the sea" (vs. 1). The "sea" suggests unrest, turbulence and war (Dan. 7:1-3). The four great world-empires of Daniel's vision came out of the 'sea"—came into existence by war and conquest. The two-horned beast arose quietly without war. It came stealthily. Could this be said of the United States?

2. This beast is descriptionless. The reason John does not describe him is probably because he cannot be described only in part—the horns. Do you not remember that when Daniel saw the fourth beast (7:7) it was, like this one, descriptionless. Is it a mere co-incidence that the beast the prophet saw and the two-horned beast John saw are both not described? May they not both be Roman? Hasn't Rome always been a sort of enigma?

3. This two-horned beast has "horns like unto a lamb," but its teaching is strictly dragonic. The horns are not the dragonic horns; they are not the horns of the ten-horned wild beast either. They are simply two undeveloped horns. A horn in prophecy is a horn wherever seen. These two horns mean what any of the other horns mean. This beast is a wild beast, and not a domestic animal, as is proved by the use of the same Greek word for "beast" as applied to it that is used as applied to the ten-horned wild beast. The nature is wild. The rise is stealthy. The horns are very small as the horns of a lamb. They aren't ecclesiastical horns unless the ten horns on the beast before it are. They are civil horns.

4. This beast is a teacher. While to the ten-horned beast a "mouth" is "given" (Rev. 13:5), this beast needs no mouth "given" it, for it has inherent powers of speech He speaks. But whose teaching does he echo? The dragon's (vs.11). From what seat of power spoke the dragon from time immemorial? From the Roman seat. This beast speaks from the same place. He is pre-eminently a teacher.

5. He works "in the sight" of the ten-horned beast (5.12). Then that is proof positive that he existed contemporaneously with the ten-horned beast and not successively after him. What he does the ten-horned beast sees. The position making the two-horned beast a country or nation or Republic (if you please) coming up when the ten-horned beast is dead and gone, is ridiculous and false, for this two-horned beast exerciseth "all the authority" of the ten-horned beast. Where did he get that authority if not from the ten-horned wild beast? He is endorsed by the ten-horned beast.

This point, beloved, is a very important one. The two-horned wild beast is a legerdemainist. But he doesn't perform his sleight of hand tricks in the presence of empty seats! He does it in the presence of the ten-horned wild beast that endorses him. But how could John work tricks in the presence of James if the latter were dead? If the ten-horned beast died when the United States was born, and the United States is the two-horned beast, as S. D. Adventists claim, then the United States worked miracles in the presence of a dead beast! In a book, "The Marvel of Nations," written by Uriah Smith (S. D. Adventist), edition 1886, we read on page 146 that "a beast in prohpecy, ceases to exist, when his dominion is taken away." Now when was the dominion of the ten-horned beast taken away? Let the same author tell us: "To this beast also was power given for forty-two months, or 1260 years. Rev. 13:5. . . . At the end of that specified period, the dominion of the little horn was to be taken away (Dan. 7:26) (Note this please). At the end of the same period, the leopard beast was himself to be 'led into captivity' (Rev. 13:10). From Daniel and Revelation by Uriah Smith, pages 524-525 (Edition 1901). Mr. Smith says that the "little horn" of Dan. 7 and the ten-horned beast of Rev. 13 are identical. On page 526 he puts the date when that beast ceased "to exist" as "1798." Very well. About this time the United States came up. Now then: CAN the United States be the two-horned beast, even according to Mr. Uriah Smith? No! The leopard beast ceased "to exist" in 1798, as he says, and since that time he asserts the United States has worked miracles. But surely the two-horned one did not this in the presence of the DEAD and ceased "to exist" leopard beast! And yet John says he must do that very thing.

6. The two horned beast commands the people to make "an image" to the leopard (ten-horned) beast (5.14). But that beast died in 1798, says Mr. Smith. Has the United States been guilty of making an image to a dead beast? It may be objected that after 1798 the ten-horned beast was revived, and that the United States made an image to the resurrected beast. But proof is lacking that the death-wound was given as late as 1798. The rather, it was much earlier. It is positively stated by the Revelator that after the death-wound of the ten-honored beast was healed, he had authority conferred on him to continue 1260 years (Rev. 13:1-8). It was after the death-wound was healed says John that the beast made war on the saints—not before it. And that war lasted 1260 years.

7. He (the two-horned one) gives "life" to the image made to the ten-horned alive beast. And then the image made alive, this beast begins a period of slaughter. In verse 7 the "saints" are overcome (killed), by the ten-horned beast who does it by authority the dragon gave him (vs. 2), but he does it also by inspiration from the two-horned beast (vs. 15). The dragon yields his authority to the leopard beast who uses it to kill the saints. But the two-horned beast acts only as the legerdemain worker in the presence of the ten-horned beast, and inspires that beast to kill all such as refuse the "mark" of that system.

If all this is future and the United States is to inspire a world-following and follow it by a world-killing, then the coming of Jesus is a long way off. But thank God, we do not need to believe that. The two-horned and ten-horned wild beast did their deadly work, and it was ended by the French Revolution. The two-horned beast is the false prophet of Rev. 19:20, and can never be the United States, either as to work, time, or geography. —J. J. Schaumburg, Editor of "Messiah's Advocate."

FORGIVENESS

One said to me, "Oh how can I forgive him; and yet I must." This person was speaking of one who had spoken all manner of evil falsely. Pondering deeply and endeavouring to find the light of God's word on this vital question it seems to me the Scriptures teach (and, likewise from the nature of the case) that there can be no forgiveness extended to a sinner unless he repents and asks forgiveness. Note the words of our Lord's prayer: "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." We see from this that just as we forgive God forgives us; and as God forgives us do we forgive those who sin against us.

First then, how will God forgive us or under what conditions does he do so? Listen to the following Scriptures: "If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive our sins" (1 John 1:

9). "Whoso confesseth his sins and forsaketh them shall have mercy" (Prov. 28:13). "I confessed my transgression unto the Lord and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin" (Psa. 32:5). "Come unto me and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28). "If the wicked turn from his sin he shall surely live" (Ezek. 33:14,15). "Let the wicked forsake his way and return unto the Lord our God and he will abundantly pardon" (Isa. 55:7). What do we learn from these Scriptures? That God pardons us, forgives us our sin, remembers no more our trespasses against him. When? Only when we confess our iniquity and ask forgiveness. Nowhere in the word of God can I find any forgiveness only on the condition that we repent, confess our sins, and turn away from them. On what is our Lord's promise to the sinsick soul based? Only on condition that we come to him. We must do the coming, otherwise the "rest" will not come to us. I have heard some say that the restoration of Israel is unconditional. Listen to the words of God himself: Ezekiel 34 from verse 11 to the end of the chapter. Notice verses 16,17,20,22; Deut. 30:1, 2,3,4; Zech. 12:10-14; Zech. 13:1; Hosea 5:15; 2 Cor. 3:16; Jer. 24:7; Isa. 29:24; Ezek. 20:38; Zech. 10:9. These are a very few out out of many Scriptures which show the truth of our Lord's words in Matt. 23:39, "Your house is left unto you desolate. until ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." When Israel says this they repent and mourn greatly for their sins (Zech. 12: 10). And when they confess their sins a fountain is opened to them for cleansing (Zech.13:1). Repentance, seeking forgiveness, brings pardon and cleansing. This is the way God forgives those who trespass against him.

How is it when we trespass against one another? Let us go to the word again. "Forgive us our trespasses as (or in the same manner as) we forgive those who trespass against us." Then we forgive one another who sin against us under the same conditions that God forgives us. We have found these conditions to be repentance, confession of sin, and asking for forgiveness. Is this slriptural? See Luke 17:3,4: "If thy brother trespass against thee . . . if he repent forgive him . . . If he turn to thee saying, I repent, forgive him." "Forgive one another as God has forgiven you" (Eph. 4:32). God can only forgive us when we repent and confess our sins. But does this mean that he has hard and vengeful thoughts towards us? Oh no, see Isa. 1:18; "Come now and let us reason together." "All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people" (Rom. 10:21). God commendeth his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us" (Rom. g:8). Our Father in heaven is ever waiting in love toward us, and with forgiveness if we will come to him confessing our sins, and he wants us to come, to turn from evil that we may live (Ezek. 18:32).

This should be our mind towards those who sin against us. This is what our Lord means when he says, "Be ye therefore perfect, as your Father in heaven is perfect." He sends rain on the just and on the unjust and causes his sun to shine on the good and the evil. Have this same mind of God in yourselves. No one can be forgiven in the strict sense of the word until he desires and asks forgiveness. Are we then to cherish hard and revengeful thoughts toward him? What is the command? "Love your enemies." How? In the sense that you would not return him the evil he has done you. Rather do good to him as you have opportunity. "Pray for them who despitefully use you." Can we do this? We not only can but will if our hearts are filled with the love of God. Think of the worst enemy you have. It is impossible that you desire suffering or torture to come to him. What was the mind of Jesus? O Jerusalem, how often would I have gathered you together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wing." "Father, forgive them." "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Stephen had this mind even in the agony of a cruel death. Paul manifested it when he said of these false brethren, "The Lord reward them." He did not seek to revenge himself.

When we think of all the terribleness, the awfulness of losing the kingdom, of being banished from the presence of the Lord, do we not cry out in anguish of spirit, "Lord, show them where they stand. Give them repentance to the acknowledging of their sins. Grant that they may fall upon the rock Christ Jesus, and be broken and filled with love and meekness and gentleness in him!" Yes, we can so have our minds in harmony with the mind of Christ that we cannot help but pray for those who despitefully use us and persecute us, and rejoice if they repent; and forgive from our hearts if they ask forgiveness. May God cause us to abound more and more in his love as our redemption draweth nigh.

OBITUARIES

S. V. Plummer

Please publish the death of Mr. Salathiel V. Plummer in The Restitution. He died October 26, 1916. He was a member of the church of oGd known locally as the Soul Sleeper Church. He had been a member for 40 years, and was always strong in the faith, a great reader of the Bible, and also The Restitution. He lived at Windfall, Indiana.

Fannie Barnhill Cleveland

Fannie Barnhill Cleveland was born at Indianapolis, Indiana, February 26, 1844. She came west in 1871 and taught school in Healdsburg, California, for two years.

Returning east in 1873 she married John Williard Cleveland in October, 1875. Her husband passed away in 1900. Mrs. Cleveland then came to California again, where she has made her home until her death, January 28, 1917.

About three months ago she came to Los Angeles to take care of an afflicted sister that had been an invalid for a number of years. A few days after her arrival she was stricken with a light paralytic stroke but was only able to survive the shock about seven weeks when death's icy hand laid her low.

Sister Cleveland has been a faithful member of the Church of God at Argos, Indiana for many years. After a short service at the Pierce Undertaking parlors. conducted by the writer, arrangements were made to take the body back to the old home, being accompanied by her niece, a daughter of Brother Hugh Barnhill. Thus one by one we go down the valley of the shadow of death, but we sorrow not as others that have no hope. Words of comfort were spoken from Rev. 14:13.

O. J. Allard.

Mrs. Sophia W. Burkey

Mrs. Sophia Wheeler Burkey was born in Randolph county, Indiana. April 3, 1843. She was married to the late James Burkey in 1862, and came to Marshall county from Goshen the same year. They had lived on a farm near Plymouth for over forty years. They were the parents of seven children, of whom three survive, namely: Mrs. Charles Manual, Orlando, and Lert A., all living in and near Plymouth. Sister Burkey and her husband were both members of the church of God at Plymouth, and up to the time of failing health they were faithful in church attendance. and all times their hospitable home was open to receive all those of like precious faith. They were also always ready and willing to aid financially all worthy causes. Sister Burkey had been an invalid for many years, and at the time of her husband's death, three years ago, it was thought she could not long survive him. Late last autumn she came to live with her son, Lert, in Plymouth. Here she passed away, January 31, 1917, after two weeks of great suffering. Kindly hands administered to her wants, and tried in every way to make her last days comfortable. Her last thoughts were of her Heavenly Father, and on Sunday, previous to her death, she had partaken of the communion, thus signifying her faith to the last.

Besides the children mentioned she leaves two sisters. Mrs. Eli Sawyer, and Mrs. Calvin Baugher, of Leesburg, and one brother, Henry Wheeler, of Arkansas. There are also nine grand-children and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services were held at the Jacoby church, near her old home, Friday, at 11 o'clock, Feb. 2, 1917, and Sister Burkey was laid to rest, under a canopy of flowers, beside her husband and children to await the morning's dawn.

Frank Bryan

Frank Bryan was born November 14, 1889, near Plymouth, Indiana. He was the youngest son of Charles and Mary Moore-Bryan. His life was spent mostly in this community with his father in the faithful discharge of his duties. His mother died June 29, 1891, leaving him a maternal orphan at the age of two years. He was married to Pearl Colbert, January 29, 1916. They went to housekeeping in South Bend where he had employment with the Studebaker Corporation. He was taken sick January 20th. Hopes were entertained for his recovery up to Monday forenoon when a turn for the worse took place, resulting in his death at 4:30 a. m., Tuesday February 6, 1917. He had reached the age of 27 years, 2 months, and 22 days.

Frankie Bryan was a young man that made friends, wherever he went, by his quiet, unassuming disposition and his uniform courtesy and good will. He was faithful in every trust committed to his care, and careful in the discharge of every duty that devolved upon him.

He leaves his wife, his bride of just a year, Mrs. Pearl Bryan, with the broken bonds of love that had bound their kindred spirits into union. His father, Charles Bryan, his brother, Elmer, and his sister, Ethel, lament over the broken ties of family love because of his death. Many other relatives weep because he has gone from among us.

He had given his heart to God. His last days and hours were full of humble petitions to the Heavenly Father in the name of Jesus his Lord and Savior. He asked for our prayers, and expressed his desire and determination to enter into full covenant relationship with his God by a consecration of his life and obedience by baptism at the first opportunity. Funeral services were held at the Church of God, in Argos, Feuruary 3, 1917 conducted by D. E. VanVactor. The church was filled with his friends and neighbors, and we spoke from Romans 14:9. Burial was made in Maple Grove cemetery. D. E. VanVactor

"SUDDEN DESTRUCTION"

By W. R. Young

What is the "sudden destruction" predicted in 1 Thess. 5:3? It is to occur "when they are saying, Peace and safety", and must therefore have some relation to that kind of talk. Is it the actual coming of the Lord? I think not. because that has no relation to any "peace and safety" talk that I ever heard of. The world at large is not afraid of the coming of Christ, because it has no expectation of or faith in any such an event. The advent of the great Judge is about the last thing peace and safety talkers have any thought of. But the "sudden destruction" predicted is something which those talkers imagine they have become well insured against. What fear was it a few years ago that caused the inauguration of schemes for "peace and safety"? And what was it allayed the fears of the talkers? They were afraid that so much military and naval preparation would result in devasting war. And so they held peace conventions and built a great peace palace and wrote books proving that great wars had become an impossibility. And "then"—what? On the eve of another great peace convention at Vienna came "sudden destruction"—the instant collapse of human civilization, the breaking out of the greatest war in the world history.

I do not see how the prophecy can be more completely fulfilled than it has already been. Of course, the coming of the Lord will mean sudden destruction to many people and to all human government, but that destruction, though it will take multitudes unawares, has no antithetical relation to any peace and safety talk concerning the end of all human strife, such as men are still keeping up. Nor does the prophecy state that the "sudden destruction" when it comes will instantly silence all peace and safety talk, for the "sudden destruction" does not mean instant annihilation of the peace talkers, though it does involve suffering and sorrows as "travail upon a woman with child" from which "they shall not escape."

There is only one thing that seems to sustain the idea that the sudden destruction means the actual appearing of the Lord, and that is the statement in he context (verse 2) that "the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." But the expression, "the day of the Lord" in this place may not mean the advent itself, but simply the commencement of the final series of events which lead up to the culminating event. All these may be included in "the day of the Lord", from the prelude to the climax. The comparison in the prophecy to the preliminary birth-pangs instead of to the birth itself seems to indicate that the "sudden destruction" refers more particularly to the climax of "the day of the Lord."—Messiah's Advocate.

IDOLATRY

How did idolatry start? We can none of us tell accurately. perhaps, but in the Apocryphal writings we find something that gives us an idea, and, although they are not considered inspired, they may be correct in this instance, at least, for we read in 1 Kings 4:32, that Solomon spake three thousand proverbs: and his songs were one thousand and five. If his sayings were all inspired, and this Apocryphal book, "The Wisdom of Solomon" is his, the account in chapter 14:12-16 may be the true story of the beginning of idol worship. Lest everyone should not have access to this book I will quote the verses referred to.

"For the devising of idols was the beginning of spiritual fornication, and the invention of them the corruption of life. For neither were they from the beginning, neither shall they be forever. For by the vainglory of men they entered into the world, and therefore shall they come shortly to an end. For a father afflicted with untimely mourning, when he hath made an image of his child soon taken away, now honored him as a god, which was then a dead man, and delivered to those that were under him ceremonies and sacrifices. Thus in process of time an ungodly custom grown strong was kept as a law, and graven images were worshipped by the commandments of kings." The margin says "tyrants," and that many kings in olden times were tyrants history proves. Verse 15 says this father honored his dead son as a god: a plain statement to my mind that he believed in the immortality of the soul, for did not the serpent tell Eve "ye shall be as gods, ye shall not surely die"? In modern times we hear the echo of these words in the following lines:

"There is no death,
What seems so
Is transition."

But God says "dust thou art," and our future hope when we die is by a resurrection from the dead through Jesus Christ our Lord.

A BRIGHT PAGE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Tidbits of Pleasant and Useful Information Gathered from Everywhere

The current coin of life is plain, sound sense.

It is less pain to learn in youth than to be ignorant in age.

Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings: he shall not stand before mean men.

Money and time are the heaviest burdens of life; and the unhappiest of all mortals are those who have more of either than they know how to use.

"Sir," said an old Scotch woman to her minister, "I dinna ken a part of your sermon yesterday." "Indeed, what was it?" "You said the Apostle used the figure of circumlocution, and I dinna ken what it means." "Is that all? It's very plain. The figure of circumlocution is merely a periphrastic mode of diction."

A high school girl said to her father the other night: "Papa, I've got a sentence here I'd like to have you punctuate. You know something about punctuation, don't you?"

"A little," said her cautious parent, as he took the slip of paper she handed him. This is what he read: "A five dollar bill blew round the corner."

He studied it carefully. "Well," he finally said, "I'd simply put a period after it."

"I would'nt" said the high school girl; "I'd make a dash after it."

The world generally gives its admiration, not to the man who does what nobody else ever attempts to do, but to the man who does best what multitudes do well.

Nothing can be had for nothing; whatever a man achieves, he must pay for; and no favor of fortune can absolve him from his duty.

What is defeat? Nothing but the first step to something better.

"Do you think your boy Josh's schooling is an advantage to him?"

"Yes," replied Farmer Corntossel. "It gives him a big advantage over me. It enables him to say a lot o' things that I don't feel sure of my ground in calling him down for."—Washington Star.

Some time ago the stork visited the home of a happy young couple and wishing to notify her girl chum, the mother sent the following telegram: "For unto us a child is born' (Isaiah 9:6)."

"Oh, John," exclaimed the girl chum to her husband on receiving the despatch, "I have just got a telegram from Gladys, and what do you think?"

"You have got me chucked out at first in the conundrum game," indulgently smiled John. "What's the answer?"

"Gladys has a baby boy!" enthusiastically responded little wifey. "His name is Isaiah and he weighs nine pounds six ounces!"

One day when an old time Southern editor who was both mayor and justice of the peace in his town, as well as real estate agent, was busily engaged with an editorial on some weighty subject, a young couple came into his office to be married. The editor never slacked up in his writing, didn't even glance at his visitors, but said: "Time's money; want her?"

"Yes," the young man answered.

"Want him?" asked the editor, nodding toward the girl and still scratching away with his pen.

"Yes," the girl replied.

"Man and wife," declared the busy editor, his pen gliding over the paper at lightning speed. "One dollar. Bring in a load of wood for it: one-third pine; balance oak."

Purely Ministerial

Fanny, the little daughter of a clergyman, pranced into her father's study one evening while the reverend gentleman was preparing a lengthy sermon for the following Sunday. She looked curiously at the manuscript for a moment, and then turned to her father.

"Papa," she began, seriously, "does God tell you what to write?"

"Certainly, dearie," replied the clergyman.

"Then why do you scratch so much of it out?" asked Fanny.

The Fourteen Mistakes of Life

An English paper gives what it terms "the fourteen mistakes of life." While there are undoubtedly other mistakes than those mentioned, the list is fairly a comprehensive one: It is a great mistake to set up our own standard of right and wrong, and judge people accordingly; to measure the enjoyments of others by our own; to expect uniformity of opinion in this world, to look for judgment and experience in youth; to endeavour to mold all dispositions alike; to look for perfections in our own actions; to worry ourselves and others with what can not be remedied; not to yield in immaterial matters; not to alleviate all that needs alleviation as far as lies in our power; not to make allowances for the infirmities of others; to consider everything impossible that we cannot perform: to believe only what our finite minds can grasp; to expect to be able to understand everything. And the greatest mistake of all is to live for time alone, when any moment may launch us into eternity.

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. [illegible] pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. FEBRUARY 27, 1917 NUMBER 8

A PRAYER

O Lord of heaven and earth and sea,
In praise and prayer we come to thee;
We come to thee in humble prayer,
For well we know thou art everywhere.

When we behold the heavens above
And then think of thy wondrous love,
That through thy great redeeming grace
In Jesus Christ we have a place;

A place to stand in that great day,
When pain and death will flee away;
The present kings and thrones will fall,
And Jesus Christ be Lord o'er all.

We'll rule with him through endless years,
O then for us there'll be no tears;
For then we're with the King of kings,
Eternal life to us he brings.

So we will walk the narrow way
That leads up to eternal day,
And work for him both night and day,
For he has gone before that way.

THE LIVING WORD

No. 1

By S. Roxana Wince

"The word of God is living and powerful, and sharper than any two edged sword" (R. V.).

Why is the word of God said to be a living thing? It does not live as the beasts, the birds, the fishes of the sea, or even as human beings live. These are all corruptible and perishable. With them all

"'Tis the twink of an eye,
'Tis the draught of a breath
From the blossom of health
To the paleness of death."

And on all the works of man, the dreadful words are written. "They shall perish." Men build cities and time buries them cubits deep beneath the drifting sand; they write books, and their books fade away; they rear empires and their empires are overturned, and become "as nothing, and as a thing of naught." But here is a book that "lives" as Philip Mauro says, "with a spiritual, an inexhaustible, and inextinguishable—in a word, a divine life."

God has had prophets "since the world began" (Luke 1:69,70; Acts 3:21); and for "Kissaeus an Arabian writer, gives it as among the teachings of his people, that Abraham had in his possession certain sacred writings of Adam, Seth, and Enoch, in which were "laws and promises, threatenings from God and predictions of many events." These writings were the beginning of the Living Book. Passed on by Abraham, they fell at last into the hands of Moses, who arranged the records given us, by those primeval prophets, as we now have them, adding thereto the story of the years intervening between Enoch, and the bondage in Egypt, the trials and the miracles attendant upon the escape of Israel, their desert wanderings, their stay at Mount Sinai, and their final march to the River Jordan, where, after viewing the land of promise from the heights of Pisgah, the great leader and lawgiver of his people died and was buried in an unknown grave in one of the valleys of Moab.

S. Roxana Wince, Familiarly Known as "Auntie Wince"

But the Book did not die. It crossed the river with Israel. It went through the war of the conquest, and when the chosen people were brought under the sceptre of their enemies in the troubled period of the Judges, no alien hand was suffered to touch it. It saw the first king of Israel crowned, took note of the enthroning of David and Solomon, of Solomon's apostasy, of the secession from Judah and from God of Ten-tribed Israel, of Elijah's brave stand against the wicked Jezebel, and her eight hundred and fifty prophets of Baal and of the grove, of the rebellion of Judah, of the capture of Samaria, and of Jerusalem, till, enriched by the story of Job—that takes us far back of the days of Moses—by the pastoral of Ruth, by history, psalm, proverb, song, narrative, and by scroll of prophecy, it gradually grew under the pens of inspired men, with every letter numbered and every sentence measured in numeric rythm until the Old Testament was completed in the thrilling words of Malachi.

But as I have failed to note many things about this living word that are of interest and importance, it will be necessary to make a somewhat hasty review of the subject. Anciently the first five books of the Bible formed but one book, as they still do in Hebrew manuscripts, and this book, in the later Scriptures was called "the law," or "the book of the law."

Moses, it seems from Deuteronomy 31:9-13, made two copies of the law, as was the custom in both public and private contracts. One of these copies was put into the hands of the priests and elders, and was to be "read every seven years in the solemnity of the year of release in the feast of tabernacles, when the people were all gathered together, men, women, children and strangers, that they might hear and learn and fear the Lord their God. The other copy was "put in the side of the ark of the covenant" that it might be there for a witness against them should they fail to keep it (Deut. 31:26-30). This copy was God's and was concealed beneath the mercy-seat, because it was there that he met with his people. The Book was his, because he was one of the parties to the agreement. The other Book belonged to the people, because they as a nation, were the other party.

The custom of Israel in such matters, is illustrated by the purchase of a field in Anathoth of his cousin, Hanameel, by Jeremiah. The evidences of the purchase were signed both by Jeremiah and by witnesses "according to the law and custom;" and one was sealed and the other left open, but in this case, instead of one of the evidences being placed in the national archieves, while the other was held by the purchaser of the property, as God held the Book that evidenced his purchase of Israel, both were put in an earthen vessel, and were buried byBaruch, the son of Neriah, and this was done by command of the Lord as a surety that he would gather them out of all countries whither they had been driven: to be brought again to their own land,be caused to dwell safely,God being their God and they his people under the everlasting covenant of the Book, that God will not turn away from them, nor they depart from him, and that fields shall again be bought in the land (Jer. 32: 6-16,26-49).

Will not that earthen vessel be found when the "many days" have fully expired? It would seem so from the wording of the language. These documents were to be recovered by "the heirs" of Israel in later generations, and bear witness to their rights as to the land, and also as to the perpetuity of David's throne and to their own perpetuity as a nation.

SOME THOUGHTS ON CURRENT EVENTS WITH QUOTATIONS

That was an interesting article selected by Brother Adams from the Omaha World Herald, "The Giants in Death Grapple." So much more did it interest me in its conclusions in regard to Russia, "Russia that will stand like a collosus over all continental Europe."

When this war broke out every one was amazed at the immense power manifested by the German Empire and its allies, and to most casual readers of the newspaper, this great military plunge for victory was all in favor of Germany, and they could see nothing else. With the ebb and flow of the bloody tide, however, things are coming out in a different way, and the vast Empire that occupies the sides of the North is beginning to be seen. To most students of prophecy the great power that is to lead in the "latter day" is the King of the North, and Russia seems to furnish the answer to the question, Who is he? Even now all the nations of the so called alliance are playing into Russia's hand. It is pathetic to see refined, republican France and democratic Brittain in conjunction with the most barbaric and autocratic government on earth. At this writing the United States is not yet entangled in the meshes of the war net, but all the sympathies, as well as moral and financial support of the country, is with the Russian side as against the base and brutal conduct of Germany, "who thought to change times and laws" and rush civilization, even such as it is, off the face of the earth.

But what I want to call attention to in connection with this great power—Russia—is that it has so much to say and do in the Holy Land. I am reading a book at present by A. Goodrich Treer, a lady who has spent some years in Jerusalem studying the land and the people, and here are some extracts from the chapter on Russia:

First she speaks of the Russian Tower built on the Mount of Olives "over against Jerusalem:" "The Russian Tower is what is commonly known as a Belvedere. It is six stories high, is ascended by 214 steps, and it presents the finest panorama in the country. Northward over Mount Scopus one can follow the new high road, which has already reached Bethel, and is ultimately to open the way to Nazareth. Eastward, nearly 4000 feet below, lies the Dead Sea and the valley of the Jordan is clearly visible, although seven hours ride distant. Westward, we look toward the Mediterranean, and south in the direction of Bethlehem and Hebron. It is obvious then that the Russian Tower is a quite important incident to have taken place upon the Mount of Olives and that visible from the Mediterranean on the west and the boundry of Syria on the east, it is a valuable strategic position, worthy even of the country by wheih it was devised."

"It should however be mentioned that the Russian Tower is merely a feature in a group of buildings strictly religious in their purpose—a church, a hospice and the residence of the Archimandrite. A few miles west of Jerusalem lies the beautiful village of Ain Karim, and there on a hilltop, commanding a view of both the Mount of Olives and the Mediterranean, the Russians built a similar tower . . . . Here also the tower is again merely a feature of an adjacent group of buildings, a chapel, a hospice and an establishment for nuns."

"Bearing in mind then the occasional union of religious and secular objects, it may be interesting to glance at the position occupied by Russia in connection with the Holy City." She then goes on to state the curious complications in regard to the different sects in the matter of the different "sites," especially the Holy Sepulchre and the church of Bethlehem—too mixed up even to be interesting except to those with a special education for that sort of thing; and then proceeds with some facts concerning Russia and how it is working itself into power or at least importance. Among the principal means to this effect is the "Imperial Orthodox Society of Palestine."

"The society was founded in 1847 for the encouragement of pilgrimage . . . . under the auspices of the Society an entire colony has by degrees been erected on the northwest side of Jerusalem in an excellent and open situation. It consists of hospices for single men and women and for families respectively, and includes a handsome cathedral, a large hospital, shops selling provisions for the convenience of pilgrims, the offices of the Society and large well kept gardens."

We are told also of the care that is taken of these pilgrims by this well organized and well managed system that "personally conducts" them like the Cook tourists all over the holy places. The pilgrim deposits thirty-six roubles at Odessa, where he takes ship, and is provided with a book of tickets to take him through "Between Christmas and Easter." At least 8000 pilgrims, men and women, arrive in Jerusalem . . . . Such an immigration cannot be without important consequences both to Jerusalem and the home surroundings of the people themselves . . . . Their church is the largest national church in the world, and their passion is for pilgrimage . . . . The half religious half political movement which presses Russia ever southward to the holy places is one of the forces that will mould history in the future . . . . Arrived at Joppa every pilgrim devoutly and repeatedly crosses himself on setting foot in the Holy Land; many a bearded man stoops to kiss the sacred soil, while tears of emotion are falling from the eyes of men and women alike . . . You will meet them toiling painfully homeward from the Dead Sea bathing at every sacred pool, drinking at every historic fountain, approaching on hands and knees to every spot of religious association . . When the warm days of May bring in the scirrico they die off like flies, and the sweet singing in the streets is that of the mourners as the funeral, often two or three at a time, are hurried to the Russian burying ground on Mount Sion."

It has been said that where the Russian Bear plants its foot it never lifts it; so here we have sufficient causus belli, when the time is ripe and the big question will arise, "art thou come to take a spoil in this land of unwalled cities?" God hasten his kingdom which bringeth deliverance from this crude mess of superstition and violence.

MEN AND TREES

S. H. Thomas

Dear Reader:

Have you ever noticed the remarkable resemblance of men to trees? For instance, the bark of a tree is identical with the skin of a human body and performs for the tree the same office. Puncture or wound the bark of a tree and the sap, which is the blood of the tree, runs out and nature at once begins to heal the wound. Remove a large portion of the skin from the human body and the person dies. Remove the skin or bark from a tree and the tree dies. The blood of mankind flows to all parts of the body and is the life thereof. And so also the sap, which is the blood of the tree, flows to the uttermost leaf and twig and is the life thereof.

If the heart of a tree becomes diseased or decayed the tree dies. And likewise the man. Some trees are big and strong with powerful roots and wide spreading branches that resist the strongest tempest; and they live long ages. Others are weak and puny with few roots and a feeble hold on the soil, and the first strong wind topples them over and they die. Is it not the same with men?

Many diseases afflict the tree. Insects prey upon its leaves; worms bore to its very heart; gophers and earth animals gnaw at its roots It sickens and dies and returns to dust as it was. Even so does man.

An occasional tree towers many feet above other trees, a conspicuous object among its fellows. Other trees of its generation die one by one until it stands alone, sturdy and strong: a rugged old giant in a forest of younger trees. But a hurricane breaks off a large limb, then a thunderbolt blasts one side, and another tree in falling breaks several limbs from the poor old tree; and a weak puny, animal called man hews with an ax deep into the trunk of the old tree; until, wounded and sore, stripped of all its beauty, it stands sad, cheerless and friendless, for a time, and then topples over to rise no more.

Just so it is with man. Occasionally one reaches a position among his fellows which commands the applause and admiration of all men. But sooner or later the thunderbolts of adversity blast and wound his trunk, while tempests and winds of circumstances beyond his control and the burdens and cares of this life bore deep into his heart and gnaw at his roots, undermining his health, destroying his vitality, and marring his beauty until he stands weak and useless among a younger and more vigorous generation, ready to topple over and return again to dust.

A cyclone sweeps over a forest and every tree bows to the earth before it. But when the tempest passes some of those trees leap back again to their former position while hundreds lie broken and prostrate on the ground. It is only the strong and tough that survive. Just so when the winds of temptation or adversity sweep over men all must needs bow before it. But, when the tempest is past, the strong leap back to their former position while the weak lag prostrate or broken in health or character, never more perhaps to stand upright among men.

Some trees bear bitter or poisonous fruit unfit for food and dangerous to handle, while the fruit of other trees is grateful and nourishing. The conversation, occupation, influence and example of some men poisons the mind and threatens the character of any pure young person that comes in contact with them; while the conversation and example of others nourishes and builds up the high and noble qualities of all with whom they come in contact. Therefore "By their fruits ye shall know them," may be said alike of men and trees.

A tree standing in a thick forest or sheltered spot where strong winds seldom blow, grows weak and sickly and with but small roots and feeble hold on the soil, but another standing alone in an open field where winds and tempests blow, grows sturdy and strong. Each time the storm rages and the hold of the tree on the ground is strained or loosened a little, nature puts out new rootlets to reinforce the old, and so the lone tree, buffeted by winds and storms, extends its root system and grows wide spreading branches. Just so it is with man. Rear him in the lap of luxury, shield and protect him from all hardships and privations, and he will become a weakling unable to endure trials or temptations or stand alone in times of danger or trouble. But the youth who has been taught self denial from a child, and who meets and overcomes obstacles and dangers early in life, and is strengthened by winds of adversity from day to day, like the lone tree, grows to be strong and resourceful; and in time of trouble or danger weaker men seek shelter and protection under his strong and wide spreading branches.

One more likeness and we will close. Men take a large number of trees chosen from among the trees of the forest because of their superior quality of timber or size and summetry of form, and after hewing, carving, cutting and polishing, they fit them together into a magnificent temple, the pride and admiration of future generations. In the same way God is selecting individuals from his forests of human trees, chosen because of their fitness for his purpose, and is now shaping, polishing and forming them to fit his plan. Here on this one is an unsightly knot: it may be the love of tobacco or liquor. It must be hewed off and the scar dressed down and neatly polished. Oh yes, it hurts and the candidate for future honor and glory writhes and groans under the chastening of God. But that ugly knot must come off. There is no place for it in the beautiful temple that God is building. There are also other blemishes, such as whisperings, slanders, back-biting, tale bearing selfishness, stirring up strife among brethren, revellings, worldly pleasures, etc., etc., all of which must be removed before the trees are fit. Oh how it hurts as the sharp ax of his word lops off first one cherished worldly pleasure, weakness, or indulgence, and then another! But the pain must be resolutely endured, for there must be no blemishes in that beautiful temple of God. Dear reader, may you and I be given strength and courage to endure the chastening of the Lord and thus prove our fitness for a place in that glorious temple which God is building.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE COVENANT WITH DAVID

The readers of these articles will observe that they have been headed with the phrase, "the gospel of the kingdom of God." We use this with the statement made by Mark in his history of the life of Christ: "Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." We have previously stated that this message had reference to a kingdom that at one time existed as a literal kingdom. It was known as the kingdom of God, the kingdom of Israel, the kingdom of David. It has also been said that the word "gospel" means good news, glad tidings concerning this kingdom. Jesus announced himself as the anointed One and preached the gospel spoken of above. When Ezekiel announced that the kingdom of Israel would be overturned, he as plainly announced that it would again be restored to the rightful owner (Ezek. 21:27). It shall be overturned until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it him. The reader should observe that the one who overturned this kingdom was Jehovah. This same Jehovah will give it to his Son, Jesus the Christ. He is the rightful heir to David's throne and kingdom. The angel, when he announced to Mary that she had been chosen by Jehovah as the one who would bring forth a son, and his name should be called Jesus, and that he shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever: and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

The glad tidings in these texts are that Jesus is the Son of God and the heir to the throne and kingdom of David. The kingdom herein referred to was ruled over by Saul, David, Solomon and a number of others until the reign of that wicked prince Zedekiah, when is was overturned, not destroyed, as many persons teach. In Acts 29:23 Luke announces that Paul when addressing the chief men among the Jews at Rome, expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening. Note carefully this statement. First, Paul expounded the kingdom of God. This means that he made a general statement from his individual knowledge concerning this kingdom. He then testified, which means that he gave them the Scriptural testimony regarding the same. It is also stated that he persuaded them concerning Jesus. In this part of his discourse he certainly used all the power of his logical mind. He certainly persuaded them that without Jesus there could be no kingdom, that Israel had failed. In his persudiang them concerning Jesus he went to the proper place, "both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets." It is stated that the testimony of or concerning Jesus is the spirit or life of prophecy. It is evident from this statement that every prophecy is spiritualized by the testimony of Jesus. No prophecy is of any importance as testimony except it has the message that Jesus is to be king over all the earth.

Many can only see Jesus as the Savior of the race. Modern day evangelists seem to preach a gospel concerning Jesus which requires that men and women abandon their evil and sinful habits and become morally good, whereas the Scriptures teach that through a belief in the message of the gospel and an obedience to its commands, his creatures are counted righteous. This infers that we are the sons and daughters of Adam, and have no inherent righteousness. Since this righteousness has been counted on account of our faith, it is required that we walk in the new life, also to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we have been called.

With these thoughts before us, let us examine some statements made in the prophetic word concerning Jesus as the heir to his father David's throne. In Isa. 9:6,7, we have this very plain statement: "Unto us (Israel) a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulders. Of the increase of his government there shall be no end upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Are we presuming too much when we affirm that Paul in his testimony must have used this very text when addressing the chief men in Rome as recorded in Acts 28:23? The prime truth in this text is that Jesus will occupy David's throne and kingdom to judge righteously and to fill the earth with righteousness by the means of which a righteous race will fill the earth and peace reign universal. If we ignore this grand truth, as do modern day evangelists, we are preaching another gospel, which will bring a curse upon those who preach and believe it.

We wish to call our reader's attention to one more Scriptural testimony, and the necessity of believing it just as it is written. In Jer. 23:5,6 we have this testimony: "Behold, the days come saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In that day Judah shall be saved and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, The Lord Our Righteousness." The two prophets gleaned from, utter the same grand truth that Jesus will not only save his people, but will restore the earth to its condition previous to the time when the curse was pronounced. Dear brothers and sisters, what a gospel and hope we have! May we ever remain steadfast and immovable in the hope of Israel, is our prayer.

D. C. Robison.

A PARABLE

George B. Alldridge

A certain man had eye trouble and by reason of it he could not see clearly. Yet he did not know that he had eye trouble. He did not even guess that it was the way he looked at people which made them appear so ugly. But he became aware that a melancholy and bitterness afflicted him, and hearing of a physician who bore a great reputation, he resolved to consult the famous practicioner.

"I will visit this great physician for I am sure I have a secret malady of some strange sort," he thought.

When the interview occurred the physician said gently, "Yes, you have a serious trouble, a trouble which you share with half the world. By reason of a cast in your eye you see things in a false distorted fashion. I have a mirror which reveal to you your fault and its effect."

So the physician turned the mirror and in it the patient beheld himself and his vision as it really was. And he also saw how a man could not fail to look to those eyes, cross, ugly, twisted, stooped, hump shouldered, crooked limbed.

"Look through the spectacles I will now give you," said the physician, again most gently, for healing comes most often by gentle means, and with a cool soft touch he slipped the glasses in place.

"Let me hold the mirror again," he said almost tenderly.

And when the patient looked into the mirror behold, the glasses had remedied his defect!

His bitterness was gone, and as he looked abroad he saw all things as God had made them, in beauty and goodness. For him the waters ran and danced, the trees waved and spread their leaves, the flowers opened and shed fragrance, and every creeping thing in the perfection of its being told of the wonder of its creation. Above all in a man he saw his brother, him whom he had always longed for, made in the image of God and standing upright before his maker.

"Oh," cried the patient with rapturous breath "Oh, sir, tell me your name that I may never forget who has worked for me this great transformation."

"I am love," answered the great physician with a smile.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Sunday School Leaf has been dropped temporarily, for lack of interest in the work. If at any time in the future our brethren desire to have these lessons resumed, and will order enough for weekly use to pay expenses of publication, we shall be glad to give again ample room in the paper for the lessons.

To those who take umbrage at the tardiness of the publication of their articles, if there be any such, we wish to explain that all MSS are filed away in the order in which they are received, and are then published in turn. During the winter brethren and sisters write much more than in summer, and the inevitable consequence is a large accumulation of MSS. Some brethren write an article and send it in one week and expect it to appear in the next issue. They do not stop to think how unjust this would be to others who already have articles waiting, and articles that have been held for several weeks perhaps Because God is a spirit it has been taught by different religious cults that whatever he does must necessarily be spiritual. They reason that man is a spiritual being because God created him. But God also created the earth with all its tenants of birds, beasts, and fishes. Are all these spiritual too? The record of man's formation reads: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). "The breath of life" here is the genitive of opposition, and the "of" is equivalent to "that is to say." The breath of life, that is to say, life. Becoming a living soul means he became a living person. Adam was no more a spiritual being by virtue of his creation then the animal creation who derive their life from God.

There is just one way by which this message of salvation may reach the mind of each and every one who needs to know it, and that is by each and every one hearing it. Rom. 10, beginning with the thirteenth verse: "For whosoever (whether Jew or Greek, verse 12) shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" We may reasonably conclude that during Paul's time, at least, a preacher was necessary to make strangers to God acquainted with him. But the same necessity exists today. In spite of the millions of copies of Bibles distributed yearly, the people are as ignorant of the true God as they were then. The Bible is a closed book to anyone who has been taught to believe that man is immortal, and the twin doctrine, that God is an immaterial nothing. Since the necessity is the same, Rom. 10:13 applies as much today as then.

Mere possession of a Bible, or the means to get one, cannot condemn one for not knowing and believing God's message of love. Almost without exception, each individual who has known and believed the true gospel, has received his knowledge through some human agency.. In some way, not always by men whom we commonly think of as preachers, his eyes have been opened to a true understanding of the Scriptures. We who know the truth cannot condemn others for not knowing it. If it has not been carried to them by word of mouth since invariably those who do know it have gained the knowledge by word of mouth.

Editor's Reply

The Condition of Hearing

Quoting part of the tenth chapter of Romans, Sister King admits that hearing was a condition "during Paul's time, at least." And then she reasons logically and concludes reasonably that as a preacher was necessary then, so he is necessary still. Splendid. God was willing that all should be saved "during Paul's time," but they were not; and from century to century his invitations and entreaties have been published among men, but as a rule the preachers have had to ask, "Who hath believed our report?" (Isa. 53:1.) And God himself says: "I have called and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand (like a frantic mother with outstretched arms seeking her lost child), and no man regarded" (Prov. 1:24). In a sentence we are here told how God has treated men, and how men have treated God. God has been calling and stretching out his hand; man has been refusing and disregarding his "loving offers." These are the facts in the case, uttered by divine authority, and they clarify the murky atmosphere of Universalism considerably, and they also help to place the blame rightly. God is to be blamed and man pitied, according to the insinuations of those who plead for the "God-given rights" of miserable sinners. "Rights"! Culprits under sentence of death, adjudged by the God of heaven as unfit to live, have no rights. If any of them are ever saved, at any time, upon any conditions, it will be "by grace," not by rights!

God's Part and Man's Part in Hearing

"But each and every one must at least hear the gospel." The proof, please. The thought is preposterous, contradicted by all the centuries of this world's history. "Faith comes by hearing the word of God" (Rom. 10:17). It is God's part to give the word, and he has given it (Psa. 68:11); it is man's part to hear--a "condition" on his part which but few have obeyed. Hear God's appeal: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye! . . . . Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live' ' (Isa. 55:1-3). God says, "Come," and they refuse (John 5:40); God says, "Incline your ears," and they "turn away their ears from the truth, and turn to fables" (2 Tim. 4:4); God says "Hear," "but they refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear. Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant stone, lest they should hear the law, and the words which the Lord of hosts hath sent in his spirit," etc (Zech. 7:11,12). Christ urged the people to "hear Moses and the prophets" (Luke 16:29), but they would not. Their plea then for not hearing is their plea today: "if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent." They will all hear, believe, and repent after the resurrection! Mark our Lord's reply: "If they hear not Moses and the prophets" (now)--and it is admitted modern religionists do not hear Moses and the prophets, but for this we are told they are not to blame!—"neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead" (Luke 16:31). Admittedly moderns believe in an immaterial God, the immortality of the soul, etc.; they are not only ignorant of Moses and the prophets, but they supplant the saving truths of the gospel with pagan and papistical falsehoods; but when the dead are raised, God will "persuade" them then, say defenders of the Larger Hope, in defiance of the words of our Lord and Master. He says they will not be "persuaded" then: they say they will be persuaded then. The issue is thus sharply drawn, and the reader must decide for himself on which side and and with whom he stands. They will all hear at the resurrection, they say, and for the reason that they must hear! "Rights," about which they are so assertive usually, are sacrificed then; they are left without even the "right" not to hear! These zealous advocates have forgotten the Scripture which says, "Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand (ignorant still); and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive (blind still): for the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing." "Heart waxed gross." Do you say, "Poor people; they have heart disease, and are without blame?" "Ears are dull." Deaf—is a man to be blamed for being deaf? Let us read on and see where the responsibility lies: "Their eyes have they closed"—then they are to blame for being blind. "Lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them" (Acts 28: 26,27). They close their eyes, stop their ears, pull away their shoulders, make stiff their necks and make their hearts hard as "an adamant stone"; they say to God, "Depart from us; for we desire not a knowledge of thy ways" (Job 21:14). "They will not hear." In defiance of their rights, wills, ears, hearts, necks and desires, Larger Hope advocates preach they must, "each and every one, hear"! God is going to make them open their eyes and unstop their ears! Hearing perforce!

God's People, Even "in the Day of his Power," Are Volunteers

Discussing how God's word is communicated, is beside the question. If God has elected to publish his word among men by "word of mouth," it behooves those addressed to "incline their ears," and thus obey the divine mandate, "Hear" (Matt. 13:18). When they "turn away from him that speaks from heaven" (Heb. 12:25), no matter what media he may use to address them (Matt. 10:30), they do what they are charged not to do in the solemn words, "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh" (Heb. 12:25). A tallismanic millennium cannot change facts. "Let favor be showed to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness: in the land of uprightness ("that is the coming age," think you? Very well) will he deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the Lord" (Isa. 26:10). The "law" that is published from Mount Zion in the coming age, is disseminated among "many people" by "word of mouth" (Isa. 2). Yes, even in that epoch of the world the law goes forth from Jerusalem "by word of mouth." And even then, when both the spirit and the bride say "Come," they appeal to "him that is athirst" and "whosoever will" (Rev. 22:17). Only "the willing and obedient" eat the fruit of the land in the coming age (Isa. 1:19). And although Christ rules in the midst of his enemies by the rod of his strength "in the day of his power," his people even then are the "willing" ones (Hebrew, volunteers) (Psa. 110:23). The sons of God, in all ages, must be those who are "led by the spirit of God" (Rom. 8:14). "Led:" not drawn by any process of cable rope, not hauled, not driven, but led. And willingly, obediently and gladly led. It is not the sulky horse behind the dray, pulling and being pulled, but of one following along with dangling halter. "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" "Here I am, Lord; send me." Such and only such are "willing (the volunteers) in the day of his power."

A Few Sensible Words From Adam Clark on the Volunteers of Jehovah

We conclude this article by quoting the appropriate and sensible words of Adam Clark on Psa. 110:3: "Ratiocination is essential to intellect; and from these volition is inseparable. God uniformly treats man as a free agent; and on this principle the whole of divine revelation is constructed, as is also the doctrine of future rewards and punishments. If man be forced to believe, he believes not at all: it is the forcing power that believes, not the machine forced. If he be forced to obey, it is the forcing power that obeys; and he, as a machine, shows only the effect of this irresistable force. If man be incapable of willing good and willing evil, he is incapable of being saved as a rational being; and if he acts only under an overwhelming compulsion, he is as incapable of being damned. In short, this doctrine reduces him either to a punctum stans, which by the vis inertiae is incapable of being moved but as acted upon by foreign influence; or, as an intellectual being, to nonentity."

COMMUNICATION

Why is it the brethren do not write articles on prophecy, wars and signs? Some of the readers of The Restitution never see different papers and magazines and it should be the duty of our paper to help especially the isolated brethren to know and understand the signs and to obey the command, "What I say unto you„ I say unto all, Watch." Wish we might have a page devoted to war news. My love to all of the household of faith.

From your sister in Christ,

Jessie Kauffman.

Dear Brother Huggins:

We were so glad that Sister Russell suggested Sister Wince's picture for the paper, it is such a pleasure to see the faces of those in the good old faith we love so well. Now let us have Brother Almus Adams next. He is one of our most able men, and has labored among us for about 31 years, and I have never seen his picture in our paper. Next Sister Russell, and also Sister Wood, both of Chico, Cal. I am very thankful for those that have sent us their pictures, for we love to look at them, and when we get enough I intend to paste them on a heavy card board nad have them framed; then we can look often into the faces of those that are nearer to us than even mortal flesh and blood. I often think of the time when we will be made immortal and sit with Jesus in his most glorious throne. What an honored position! The bride of the Second Adam, of which Mother Eve was a type, but unless we are worthy we will not be there. If we miss the prize of our high calling we will miss the greatest prize offered. Immortality, the penny in the parable, is a wonderful gift, but it is for earnest, faithful work. Oh, my God help us to always be true and honest in all we do and say for Jesus' sake and our own future happiness!

Your sister hoping for that better life.

Mrs. Ellen R. McClelland.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed please find an order for $5.00 Linograph Fund. I pledged $10.00, I sent $5.00 some time ago. I am pleased I can now send the other $5.00. My income is small. I am too old to work. I love the paper so much I feel I could not do without it. The postmaster tells me I am the only one in this place that takes it. I have tried to get subscribers for it. I give my paper away. I am never asked for more. I expect to renew my paper as soon as I can, then I will send something to the Helping Fund. Dear Brother Huggins, will you please put a line in the paper thanking the kind brothers and sisters for writing to me. I received a good many letters from them, and as my right hand is somewhat crippled, it is hard for me to write, and hard to get any one to write for me. The letters cheer me so much. I am lonely! I would go miles to hear one of our teachers, or to see a brother or sister of the true faith. I am sorry to take so much of your time with this. Will be brief next time. May God bless you in your good work is my prayer.

Your sister in the faith,

Mrs. C Seely.

TWO EXTREMES REFUTED

No. 8

We must not get it into our heads that the day of Christ mentioned in our No. Seven is only twenty four hours long, but it is the day mentioned by the prophets as the day of the Lord, and will include the whole of the thousand years of Revelations twenty, in which time much will be included after the saints have been rewarded and the willful disobedient have been destroyed. The proof is positive that the wicked of this and past dispensations will be destroyed at the second advent instead of a thousand years after that time as some have supposed; and the destruction that occurs at the end of the thousand years is a destruction of the hosts of them that rebel during the little season in which the dragon is loosed. John sees "heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was faithful and true, and in righteousness doth he judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew but himself. And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called the word of God. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that he with it should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of God. And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of Kings and Lord of Lords.. And I saw an angel standing in the sun; and he cried with aloud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God; that ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great. And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army. And the beast was taken and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image, these both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone. And the remnant(of this army) were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh" (Rev. 19:11-21).

Here we have the second advent– Christ crowned and bearing the title King of kings and Lord of lords, executing judgment upon the ungodly of the nations. The Revelator continues: "And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the devil, and satan, and bound him a thousand years. And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season" (Rev. 20:1-3). Here we see the binding of the dragon and are told why he is bound, "that he should deceive the nations no more" etc.. Then there are still people left after the beast and false prophet are cast into the lake of fire called the nations; and that is positive proof that every individual of the nations will not be destroyed at the second coming of Jesus. It also leaves room for us to believe that they will have an opportunity to obtain salvation, and that God desires that they should or he would not care how badly they were deceived. John continues: "And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus,and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead did not live till the thousand years were ended. This is the first (chief) resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years" (Rev. 20:4-7). We have omitted the supplied words in this part of holy writ when we thought they spoiled the sense of the book and have adhered as strictly to the original as we could, and that is why all does not coincide with the authorized version.

We see here that it is those who are saints in this age that will in the next live and reign with Christ, and that they are priests in that age. The office of a priest is to make offerings for those who are under his ministry, and that proves that there will be offerings made for the nations over which the saints shall reign. Adventists have tried to prove that the thousand years were during the days of darkness and the time the saints were being beheaded. but the fact that John sees them reigning kills that theory. They could not reign till they are given the kingdom and Daniel tells us when that is: "And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given unto the people of the saints of the Most High" (ch. 7:27). Then they will not possess it before that time, hence will not reign with Christ before the end of this dispensation. If any of God's people reign in this dispensation all of them do and that would allow the apostles a part in the reign with Christ of the gospel age; but did Paul claim to be reigning? In admonishing the Corinthians for being puffed up he says, "Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us: and I would to God ye did reign, that I also might reign with you" (1 Cor. 4:8; comp. verses 6,7.).

This forever settles the fact that the thousand years are not a part of the gospel age. John follows the loosing of the dragon and tells us of the work he does in the four corners of the earth, and the great number of his followers, and of their going up against the camp of the saints about the beloved city, and how they are devoured by fire from heaven (Rev. 20:7-9). Here is the end of all sin, here the dragon goes as the last deceiver into the lake of fire where the beast and false prophet had been cast a thousand years before, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever. Just how long that will be I am unable to say, but that it is not to all eternity is clear from the fact that diabolos is to be destroyed Heb. 2:14).

THE PARABLE OF THE TEN VIRGINS

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom" (Matt. 25:1). Here we see them as one body, or company, ten virgins, with ten lamps, all going forth for the same purpose, to meet the bridegroom. We are not sure who the ten virgins in the parable represent, but we can be sure of the time that is represented in the parable--the future coming of the heavenly bridegroom. But when the dividing time comes, we see the two classes, the ones that are ready, and the ones that are not ready to meet the Lord when he comes. Verse 2 says, "And five of them were wise, and five of them were foolish." Those virgins "All slumbered and slept." Verse 5 says, "While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept." What was the cry that startled all these sleeping virgins? Verse 6 says, "And at midnight, there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him'.' We see the whole ten arose, all full of faith, all had lamps, and all trimmed their lamps. Verse 7 says, "Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps." But with five of them, there was something lacking yet. See their trouble in verse 3. We are told "They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them." They had plenty of faith, but not works. James 2:14 17,26, says: "What doth it profit my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him? Even so faith if it hath not works, is dead being alone. For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also."

Going back to Matt. 25:8,9 it says, "And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out." Notice the selfishness, or covetousness in their demand. We wonder what they expected to do with their money that they had to beg their oil. "But the wise answered saying, Not so lest there be not enough for us and you, but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves." Still full of (dead) faith (grudgingly) they go to buy oil. And verse 10 says, "And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came, and they that were ready, went in with him to the marriage; and the door was shut." Even the closed door does not seem to take away their faith, for we hear their demand, "Afterward came also the other virgins saying, Lord, Lord, open to us, But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not."

This parable shows us that we may have the lamp (faith), but without the oil(works) it will profit us nothing. Every lamp will either give light, or cast a shadow. If our lamp is gone out, we too will hear the sentence, "Verily, I say unto you, I know you not." "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill, the one shall be taken, and the other left." We must keep the light burning. Remember "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid, neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candle stick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." But we must not be surprised, or overcome, by the persecution that will be sure to come if we let our light shine. for Paul says: "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution." Having the faith does not always bring the persecution. Devils believe and tremble but the godly living is the thing that stirs up envy and hatred of evil men and seducers. But Paul says "Continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them." "Let your loins be girded about and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord when he will return from the wedding. And when he cometh and knocketh, they may open to him immediately." "Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is." "When ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the doors." "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

Your sister in hope. Laura Skeels.

WHAT SHOULD CHRISTIANS BELIEVE ?

Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper "(1 Chron.20:20). If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established"(Isa 7:9). "Believe me, and understand that I am he; before me there was no God formed (nothing formed of God. margin) neither shall there be after me. I, even I, am the Lord; and beside me there is no savior.

Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, saying, Repent ye, and believe the gospel" (Mark 1:14,15; Matt. 3:2; 4:17). Believe on his name and ye shall have power to become the sons of God. How? Believing gives one the power to obey, obedience leads to baptism, and so one becomes the son of God (John1:12). Believe that Christ is the Savior of the world (John 4:42). Believe and know surely that Christ is the Son of the living God (John 6:69). "Believe that the Father is in me, and I in him" (John10:38).Believe in the light—why? "That ye may be the children of the light" (John12:36). "Believe in God, believe also in me" (John 14:1). Believe the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ in order to be a candidate for baptism (Acts 8:12). "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31.)

Did the believing save them? No! But being baptized after believing, did. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (Rom1:16). "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness" (Rom4:3). Why did Abraham believe?, Because he had faith in God and believed in God's promise, that "in thee and thy seed shall all families be blessed" (Gen.12:3). How far did Abraham's faith extend? He trusted in God to the extent that God was able to raise Isaac from the dead if need be, to fulfill his promise (Heb. 11:19).

Being saved in the age to come is the great desire of the christian, and the only way to be saved is by believing something and being baptized into Christ. Then we become a son of God by adoption and an heir on equal footing with Christ, and we share equally with Christ the promises that God made to Abraham and his seed. We find from the Scripture the things we must believe in order to be saved, and it will not do for man to add anything to the truth as recorded or he will lose the reward promised.

Yours willing to believe the recorded truth,
E. W. Knapp.

A BRIGHT PAGE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Tidbits of Pleasant and Useful Information Gathered from Everywhere

Pastor (revisiting flock)—I can't help noticing many absent faces with which I used to shake hands.

It is said that faith can move mountains, and if it depends upon faith, after reading the "we cannot fail" speeches made by Emperor William and King George, the war is going to end in a draw.

He had been calling for some time and she thought she would give him a gentle hint.

"It is not good for man to live alone," she said.

"That's why we have clubs," he responded calmly.

Seek Always the Best

You can always see and hear that for which you are looking and listening. If it is bad you want to hear, you will hear it. The rule works the other way just as well. Look and listen for the best.

"Johnny," said the Sunday school teacher one morning recently, "what is the meaning of the word 'Selah?' "

"I asked my big brother," replied Johnny, "and he says it means 'do you get muh?' "

Sunday School Teacher—Did you ever forgive an enemy?

Tommy Tuffnut—Oncest.

Sunday School Teacher—And what noble sentiment prompted you to do it?

Tommy Tuffnut—He was bigger dan me.—Life.

Willie—I met our new minister this morning mamma, and he asked me if I ever played marbles on Sunday.

Mamma—What did you say?

Willie—I said, "Get thee behind me satan." and came home.

Mr. Phan—I enjoyed your sermon very much this morning.

The Preacher—Thank you.

Mr. Phan—The text, "How are the mighty fallen." was very timely after Pete Mulligan fanning yesterday afternoon with the bags choked and one run needed to tie the score.

A policeman in England once saw a boy in a canal whom he supposed was bathing. The policeman called out, "Hello! Why are you bathing there?" "Please, sir, I am not," replied the boy, "I am drowning." and he promptly sunk. The policeman dived and rescued him.

Many persons who are supposed to be having a good time in the world are really losing their lives. They may be rescued, and it is the duty and privilege of Christ's followers to do so.

Roman Catholic and Greek Catholic

What is the difference between the Roman Catholic religion of Italy and the Greek Catholic religion of Russia?

It would take a big book to explain all the differences between these two churches, which were for eight centuries united as one, and then divided. The split was due to differences of opinion as to theological doctrines and church government. In a general way the doctrines are the same. Both accept trinity, divinity of Christ, atonement, etc. Greek church clergy are enjoined to marry, while Catholic priests are forbidden to do so. Greek church does not accept doctrine of purgatory. Greek or eastern church contends that Holy Ghost proceeded from the Father only, while Roman or western church holds that it came from both Father and Son. Even Greek church is not completely united. Russian orthodox branch acknowledges czar as head of church. Other branch looks to patriarch of Constantinople as head, but people of Greece in practice have their own church government.

Unlike most little boys who have never attended school, little Arthur was firm in his determination not to go. Finally his favorite Aunt Emma was called in to use her persuasive powers in breaking his will.

"Why, surely, Arthur," said his aunt, "you are going to school with your big sister in the summer."

"No, I'm not going to school at all," steadfastly declared the little chap. "I can't read, nor I can't write, nor I can't sing; so I'd like to know what good I'd be at school!"

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O, MARCH 6, 1917 NUMBER 9

JESUS IS COMING

Jesus is coming! sing the glad word!
Coming for those he redeemed by his blood,
Coming to reign as the glorified Lord!
Jesus is coming again!

Jesus is coming! the dead shall arise,
Loved ones shall meet in a joyful surprise:
Caught up together to him in the air:
Jesus is coming again!

Jesus is coming! his saints to release;
Coming to give to the warring earth peace:
Sinning and sighing and sorrow shall cease,
Jesus is coming again!

Jesus is coming! the promise is true:
Who are the chosen, the faithful, the few,
Waiting and watching prepared for review?
Jesus is coming again!

Chorus

Jesus is coming, is coming again!
Jesus is coming again!
Shout the glad tidings o'er mountain and plain!
Jesus is coming again!

AGAINST MILITARY EXEMPTION

An Open Letter to the Household of Faith

Dear Brethren:

We are living in a time called by all the world, as well as the church, "A Crisis." The world recognizes this just as well as we who are students of prophecy. They are confronted with the problem of fighting for their country, and we are confronted with the problem of not fighting. They call it "our country," but in fact is not ours. "We seek a country." We are sojourners in a strange land. We severed our relationship to this country when we swore allegiance to King Jesus, "whom Jason hath received: and these do all contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying there is another king, one Jesus" (Acts 17:7). "And they began to accuse him saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation and forbidding to pay tribute to Caesar, saying that he himself is Christ (anointed) a king" (Luke 23:2). "But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, We have no King but Caesar" (John 19:15).

These Scriptures prove that we cannot serve two kings; we have taken out our naturalization papers, as it were, and are no longer allied to the kings of this world. We have no king but Jesus, and will fight for no other; and our weapons of warfare are not carnal. About this I think we are all agreed. We expect to all take part in destroying the kingdoms of this world finally. In other words, we expect to see them broken up and become the "kingdom of our Lord and his Christ." "If I build again the things which I destroy, I make myself a transgressor" (Gal. 2:18).

Seeing the above is all true, what shall we do in this crisis? This is a question we must study carefully and prayerfully. Let us be careful that we do nothing wrong. I have thought of this question almost from the time the first gun was fired in the great war that sounded the beginning of the end of this age, and now I wish to give you the results of my study. I love the truth; I love the brotherhood. I know Brother Alldridge, and I love him as an able and sincere brother, and I believe he will study with us all; and if we trust in God he will settle this question for us all alike. Let us hope and pray against division. Sometimes we arrive at a wrong conclusion by being in a hurry, and by overlooking some particular points. Now shall we appeal to the United States for military exemption? I answer, No. And now let us study the reason why.

In the first place, we are living by faith in a kingdom that is not here now. We are not citizens of this country. Like the faithful of old, we confess we are pilgrims and strangers. We are sojourners, wandering about looking for a country. Yes, we are seeking a country (Heb. 11:13). We could go back to the country we left if we desired, but like them, we do not wish to return. Then if we are strangers in this government can we look to it for protection? No: We expect the king to whom we have joined and sworn allegiance to protect us—not the one from whom we have severed our relations. The moment we appeal to the government to protect us, we dishonor our King. We plainly declare our lack of faith in our Ruler. "Save Lord: let the King hear us when we call" (Psa. 20:9). Let us show our faith in our King by fully trusting him." The Lord hear thee in the day of trouble; the name of the God of Jacob defend thee. Send thee help from the sanctuary, and strengthen thee out of Zion" (Psa. 20:1,2). Yes, brethren, I can see God's deliverance if we trust him, and can see disaster and trouble coming if we take it out of his hands. "Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the Lord our God" (Psa. 20:7). "Our fathers trusted in thee: they trusted and thou didst deliver them. They cried unto thee and were delivered; they trusted in thee and were not confounded" (Psa. 22:4,5). So whatever crisis we face let not our faith wane: trust in God.

The children of Israel were commanded not to make any league or covenant with the nations. Now if we ask the government to exempt us from military service, we have made a league with them. The children of Israel were completely separate from all other nations, and the stranger that sojourned among them enjoyed the blessings of the land. But God was ruler over all. So we are strangers, and while under this government we enjoy the blessings of the land. We have food and raiment, for these come from the earth and belong to God and we have a right to our portion. But if we go through a process of law to exempt us from fighting for the country and flag, we must look to them for food and clothes; and the time will come when they will fail us. But we will never want for bread if we trust in God.

Again: we are not in war yet, and if we get in finally, it will take some time. Then they will call for volunteers first, and no one is compelled to volunteer. Thus the only danger is being drafted, which is resorted to only when emergency demands it, which all can see is some distance off, if ever.

Lastly, brethren, I believe with all my heart that before that emergency arises we will have to meet the bridegroom: we will be far beyond the reach of human governments. They are brought down and destroyed, but we are risen and stand upright (Psa. 20:8). The stars and stripes is not our flag; it is the flag of the nation we do not belong to. "We will rejoice in thy salvation and in the name of our God we will set up our banners: the Lord fulfill all thy petitions." So we carry a different banner from the world, and the Lord is our Captain; we follow him. "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth" (Psa. 60:4).

Yes, brethren, you have all been upholding that banner, don't let us lower it now and show our fear of what man can do against us. We can refuse to fight, which is our privilege; so our petition to the government would do no good in that line. Then the only thing it would do for us would be to free us from the penalty of refusing; so it is reduced to this: we would be seeking to save our lives. "He that will seek to save his life shall lose it" (Jesus). Let us still uphold the banners of truth. "Withhold not thy tender mercies from me, O Lord: let thy lovingkindness and thy truth continually preserve me" (Psa. 40:11). Do we believe this passage? O let us prove how strongly we believe in the preserving power of God's truth. "He brought me to the banqueting house, and his banner over me was love." Can any harm overtake us with such a banner floating over us?

The world is not only in a crisis, but the church of the living God as well. Do we trust in God or man? Jesus said: "If my kingdom were of this world (order), then would my servants fight." No; we will not fight, and if it is God's will that they put us to death, as they did Jesus and his servants of old, we will gladly suffer it. They may offer us deliverance, but we will not accept. Listen: "Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverence, that they might obtain a better resurrection." So we will not accept the deliverence they may offer us. We must put our whole trust in God, and if the Lord wills that we shall be tortured, we will have the "better resurrection."

My sentence then is, that to please God and show our faith, we drop at once any effort toward military exemption. I have not the first misgiving or fear as to what they can or may do to us. Let all our efforts be put forth to spread the truth before the book closes, and be ready to answer the call of the trumpet—not the trumpet calling us to war, but to go and meet our Captain whom we have followed and fought with all our life. Yes, we have been in battle and have fought, we trust, a good fight; and now our warfare is about over. So we shall not have to fight the battles of the world. The Lord help us to be faithful without wavering, is the prayer of your brother who loves you all.

Almus Adams.

TWO EXTREMES REFUTED

No. 9

Isaiah agrees with John in teaching that when a king reigns in righteousness, "princes rule in judgment" (chap. 31:1). And he is not the only one of the prophets that so teaches: but all agree to this same truth, and that the prince-saints will be priests, is positively shown, as we have seen in preceeding articles of this series; but here is one more proof: "Saviors shall come upon mount Zion to judge the mount of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the Lord's" (Obad. 21). Here when the kingdom is the Lord's saviors come upon mount Zion. Who are to be with the Lord on on Mt. Zion? "I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on mount Zion and with him a hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name writien in their foreheads" (Rev. 14:1). These are explained to be "redeemed from the earth," "redeemed from among men," "first fruits unto God and the Lamb," 'without fault before the throne of God," "and follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth" (Rev 14:2-5). These can be no other than the redeemed family of God, or at least a part of it, and when they stand upon mount Zion and before the throne and Lamb they have been glorified, and they follow in white and clean garments as the army which helps rule with the iron rod (Rev. 19:14,15). Then they are the overcomers of the church, for "he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron," etc. Not before he overcomes, but afterwards. The ruling, reigning and judging is a part of the reward that is given the saints, and will not come till they are glorified.

At the time saviors come upon mount Zion deliverance shall be, "anr there shall be holiness; and the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions; and the house of Jacob shall be for a fire, and the house of Joseph for a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle in them, and devour them; and there shall not be any remaining of the house of Esau; for the Lord hath spoken it" (Obad. 17,18). This gives the theory of Mr. Russell the death blow by showing that Edom will not have an opportunity in the kingdom to obtain salvation, and shows that the interpretation of the promise to Abraham is not correct; for he taught that all the nations that ever existed would be blessed by Abraham and his seed. But let us read further: "And they of the south shall possess the mount of Esau; and they of the plains the Philistines: and they shall possess the fields of Ephraim, and the fields of Samaria: and Benjamin shall possess Gilead. And the captivity of the host of the children of Israel shall possess that of the Canaanites, even unto Zarephath; and the captivity of Jerusalem, which is in Sepharad, shall possess the cities of the south" (vss. 19,20). These verses also show the destruction of several different peoples that Israel may possess the promised land, and they positively declare that she shall possess Samaria, the country which Mr. Russell so much depended upon as an example of his theory of restitution. Then Russellism must fall, for her props are gone; and the Bible declares that both Sodom and Samaria are to be given to Israel. Will you agree to stand by the Bible, Mr. Russellite? Can you let Scripture explain Scripture? If so, then come and go with us; we take the whole Bible and show its harmony. But some one may ask, "Does not the Bible say, 'In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed' ?" Yes, but Mr. Russell did not understand the promise, and made the blessing so broad that it not only included the nations that would be in Abraham and Christ, but those not in any way connected with them. There is quite a difference between in Abraham and in Christ, and out of them; and it will be the nations who get into them that will be blessed, and those who do not, will not. "I will bless them that bless thee; and curse them that curseth thee," saith Jehovah; and let us believe

But John sees in Revelations fourteen "an angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters" (vss. 6,7). That this is after the advent is evident from the fact that the hour of his (God's) judgment is come, not will come at a future time. If the advent message as Miller held forth, was fulfillment of this prophecy, then it was a deception: for the hour of God's judgment did not come at the time Mr. Miller predicted it would, and the message was of short duration, for it was only a little while that he said the hour of his judgment is at hand. The most of his preaching was the hour of his judgment will come at a certain date in the forties, and after that date it was spoken of as being near, and so by modern Adventists. The fact that it follows the presence of the Lamb on mount Zion is also a proof that it is after he has come to the earth, and the fact that Babylon falls shows too that it is the time of the advent.

The punishment of beast worshippers too proves that there is a change of dispensations; for then the iron rule is in vogue, and beast worshippers are punished in the presence of the Lamb. The Greek word here translated "presence" is always used in the sense of being personally present, and proves that the Lamb is here in person. Then we have another positive proof that there is an opportunity for some to be saved after Jesus comes. Here is both the plowing and reaping; judgment for one class and glad tidings for another. Zephaniah tells us of this same time: "In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear thou not; and to Zion, Let not thy hands be slack. The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing. I will gather them that are sorrowful for the solemn assembly, who are of thee, to whom the reproach of it was a burden. Behold, at that time I will undo all that afflict thee, and I will save her that halteth, and gather her that was driven out; and I will get them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame. At that time I will bring you again, even in the time that I gather you: for I will make you a name and a praise among all people of the earth, when I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith the Lord" (Zeph. 3:16-20).

These verses show that when the Lord is in the midst of Jerusalem and gathers Israel that he gets them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame, or among all the people of the earth; proving beyond a doubt that all people will not be destroyed at the coming of Jesus, and that there will not only be mortal Israel on earth in the kingdom age, but some of all the nations among which Israel have been put to shame; and verse fifteen declares, "The Lord hath taken away thy judgments, he hath cast out thine enemy, the king of Israel, even the Lord is in the midst of thee: thou shalt not see evil any more."

Then there can be no excuse for any one trying to place the fulfillment of this prophecy in any age but that of the kingdom and when Jesus is personally present. Zechariah after noticing the first advent says: "And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, and the battle bow shall be cut off: and he shall speak peace unto the heathen: and his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth" (ch. 9:10). No doubt the prophet here sees the time that the everlasting gospel is being proclaimed to the remnant of the nations and the effect it has upon them, as did Isaiah: "Until the spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest. Then judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and righteousness remain in the fruitful field. And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness quiteness and assurance for ever" (ch. 32:14-17). It seems that God could not have made it plainer, and all he asks of us is to believe the things concerning the kingdom of God, turn from your sins, and be baptized that we may inherit eternal life in the glorious age.

J. J. Heckman.

What strange sights we would see if the human heart were visible to the eye of man!

THE VINE

John 15:1-8

The vine was cultivated in the Holy Land from the earliest times. Way back we read that Noah planted a vineyard, and we learn from history that the vine was much cultivated and grew very luxuriant in Palestine; so that when Jesus gave this figure it was something they well understood. He said to them in the fifth chapter of John, "And ye will not come unto me that ye may have life," and in the sixth chapter, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood, ye have no life in yourselves" (R. Version)

Now we know that our life naturally is dependent on the circulation of the blood. In Leviticus, when God gave Israel their laws he said, "The life of the flesh is the blood." So we see from Scripture and from nature that life of the creature is dependent on the production of that blood. Jesus says in John 17:3: "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

These verses give us several ideas. They show us that our immortality comes by Jesus Christ. He is the life. When we look on any creature there are signs and indications by which we can tell whether it is dead or alive. It also follows that perfect life if it is in us, will be shown by conduct, works or fruits, as Paul says: "The fruit of the spirit is love, joy peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." "Being filled with the fruits of righteousness which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God." If we are inoculated with, assimilating it, in perfect correspondence with life the effects will be sure to be seen. In the 12th chapter of Hebrews the apostle says, verse 11: "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievious, nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." It follows also that if we get away from this life or degenerate, or cease the relationship, the fruit bearing will also cease. "Except," Jesus says, and unless we are drawing the vitality, strength will give way to weakness, and weakness will give way to death.

We see by this teaching that it is this conduct this fruit of the spirit, that makes the bearers separate and different from all other creatures of the natural order of things. It shows a new relationship, it shows that our energy is not derived from a natural, but from a spiritual source, and it also shows a change from the kingdom of death to the kingdom of life through our connection with that source. If there be no fruit then it is plainly to be seen there is a break in the connection Jesus takes this beautiful figure to illustrate the need of abiding in living union with him, "the life." "I am the way, the truth and the life." He is the true vine.

We read in the 80th Psalm of a vine which God brought out of Egypt and planted in a goodly land, and it seemed to flourish for a while, but the Psalmist says, "Her hedges were broken down, the wild beast devoured it, it is burned with fire; it is cut down." Again in Isa. 5 the prophet speaks of a vineyard in which was planted the "choicest vine, and he gathered out the stones, and fenced it, and he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes." In verse 7 we read, "The vineyard of the Lord is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant, and he looked for judgment, but behold oppression, for righteousness, but behold a cry." Jeremiah, speaking of this same vine, says: "There shall be no grapes on the vine and the leaf shall fade and the things that I have given them shall pass away." We read that the wild vine of Palestine grows a small black fruit only fit for vinegar. So in distinction to all others Jesus says, "I am the true vine." "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit." Here is a condition for us to consider and examine ourselves upon. There are some branches that are joined to the tree but are not bearing fruit. "They have a name to live and are dead." There is a form of godliness without the power. May be a beautiful growth of leaves, but no fruit. This is quite a serious condition, for the barren branch yields no return for cultivation and Jesus says "The ax is laid at the root of the tree." "Therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down." "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." The fruit shows close connection, the presence of the true life principle. If the fruit be poor and few, then it shows the union is not perfect; and if this is not repaired the bearing capacity is destroyed. Jesus say, "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me." Furthermore: "Every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit." James has something of this thought in mind when he wrote his epistle: "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations, knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience." And Paul says patience is a fruit of the spirit. Also Peter when enumerating the virtues which we should add to our faith, says: "For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful.'

The vine is a unity consisting of many and varied parts. The life or existence is dependent on the stock, the root which contains the true life. "No more can ye, except ye abide in me." What a great lesson is taught us in this figure! Our life is dependent on an unbroken union with the true vine. The lifegiving and sustaining sap must flow continually from the root to the stem, and through all the members. In proportion to the closeness and strength of the joining, the fruit will be abundant. This is the idea that Jesus intends to give, so he commands "Abide in me." This implies that the union has been made and that there is also a possibility that, although made, it may be broken again. We read in John, "Hereby we know that we are in him: he that saith he abideth in him ought himself also to walk even as he walked." If the fruit is not seen then the conclusion is drawn that the branch is not abiding true to the stem. When Paul was speaking of the difference between flesh and spirit he said: 'Ye are in the spirit, if so be that the spirit of God dwelleth in you." No spirit, no life is in the tree; no sap, then no life. "The branch cannot bear fruit of itself. James says: 'What is your life? it is but a vapor." What can we do, what hope have we outside of Jesus? The wild branch must be grafted into the tree. The natural, old habits and propensities must fade and be overcome with the new nature, new life, until the old is not recognized. A complete change of results until, like Paul, we can say, "It is not I that live, but Christ that liveth in me." Jesus says, "Severed from me ye can do nothing." In the natural order of things we must eat and drink and we must assimilate the food we eat. We must have air to breathe and food. If we had plenty of food and did not eat, what good should we receive from it? So it is in the lesson Jesus is giving to his disciples. "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." The food must be eaten and assimulated for the effects to be seen. A new nature must be developed. Thus we see it is absolutely necessary for the supply of sap to be continually running through the branches to maintain the life.

"If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch and is withered, and they are burned." What a lesson is here! It seems hardly possible that there should be some that, as the apostle says, "Have been enlightened and have tasted the heavenly gift," and then fall away. We do not want to be among those that are withered, that wilfully neglect the daily supply of life giving sustenance, and be cast into the fire. "But that which beareth thorns and briers is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burned." Let us remember that it is the fruit that counts, not the wood or leaves. Let us strive to abide in Christ in this oneness that Jesus teaches in the vine. Remember how he prayed to his Father, "That they all may be one, as thou, Father art in me and I in thee, that they also may be one in us." Remember also, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. The more we study this figure of the vine the more beautiful the lesson appears, and like Paul, the more we are persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

THOU SHALT NOT STEAL

This law has the approval of God and man. But many heed it not. It is too old-fashioned to suit most of those who are in a hurry to get rich.

There are so many refined ways of stealing that many become hardened to the deed. Many a man is a partner in the steal; therefore, he does not squeal on the other fellow.

The farmer may steal from the hog buyer by filling his hogs with slop just before taking them to town. It is sometimes customary to put the small berries in the bottom of the box; the large apples in the top of the box. Tricks are often perpetrated by the milk dealer.

The hired man may steal from the farmer by "soldiering" when on duty. The stock buyer may steal from the farmer by false weights, and the grain dealer by false grades and weights. The fruit and vegetable commission men too often steal from the producers by false reports as to condition on arrival. Butter commission men steal from the consumers by false naming of brands. The manufacturer of foodstuffs for man and beast steals from the consumer by adulteration. There are numerous ways to give short measures of every conceivable article on trade.

What a world this would be if nobody stole from the other! It would work a marvelous change in business, politics and the church. If we could absolutely trust every other person we could put up with all the other evils of society.

Every man would have enough and to spare if others would quit stealing from him in little but constant dribs. It is shrewd "business" stealing that makes the rich richer and the poor poorer.

Inspectors and officers of the peace do not cure stealing. They make it more secretive. You can legislate into honesty if the officers are sufficient and honest enough themselves. But a better way is to get back to old fashioned honesty—moral, not civil, honesty.

SEE THE BEST

One of the surest evidences of a cultured mind is the ability to see the best that is in others.

This is not a fancy, but a fact, and if we would only put it into practical use in our daily lives we should find it would add to our happiness.

So many people see first the unattractive, disagreeable traits in every character they meet. They magnify and condemn every little fault and never seem to realize that constant fault-finding has a very bad effect on the grumbler.

Cultivate the power and habit of telling the pleasant things commending the good in others, it will make your society sought after; a cross, critical person is never popular.

It is the one who carries a spirit of helpfulness, an influence of sunshine, whose own life is sweeter for searching for the best in others.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

MEETING AT ROLL, INDIANA

Through Brother Cantwell Drabenstott the church at Roll, Ind. has asked us to hold a week's meeting there in March. If the Lord will the meeting will begin Monday evening, March 26th, and close Sunday evening, April 1st. This meeting will be devoted almost entirely to the interests of the brethren and sisters. The hospitality of the Roll brethren and sisters is abundant, and visitors at this meeting will be made welcome.

"BE YE ALWAYS READY"

I know a lady who rises in the morning and dons a simple but neat and clean gown, combs and arranges her hair quickly and deftly in becoming fashion while water is heating and coffee is brewing for breakfast. Everything about her kitchen is clean and in its proper place. There is no hurry, nor confusion. The breakfast almost seems to get itself, and is always on time, and when over the dishes are promptly washed, and house put to rights. Not much sweeping or cleaning is required, as this little lady has learned how to perform her daily tasks, without leaving a trail of dirt and confusion behind her. If company comes unexpectedly, whether morning, noon or night, neat and clean she welcomes them without embarrasment, and ushers them into rooms in perfect order wherein is a place for everything, and everything in its place. At night, just before retiring, she sets the chairs and other furniture in place, picks up evening papers or books, sweeps up any light litter from the floor, and all is neat and in order for the morning.

I know a Christian who goes about his daily tasks and duties calmly and pleasantly. Should accidents happen, or vexing problems arise he drops no filthy or profane words along his way, nor allows his tongue to befoul or [illegible] his mouth. With glasses of truth, borrowed from the word, he detects the dirt and rubbish of fleshly lusts and unholy desires and temptations, and with his broom of faith he sweeps them clean, and by prayer and thanksgiving each day he puts his house in order, and as my lady friend above, is "always ready" for company: so also is this brother "always ready for the Lord."

I know a lady, who steps out of bed each morning into a confusion of dirt and rubbish on the floor, and furniture out of place. She slips on a slouchy wrapper, and twists her hair into an unsightly knot, and with latest novel in hand, sits in dirt and disorder while the water heats, and the coffee brews for breakfast. After the meal is over the dirty dishes are piled up in a dirty pan, and the fire burns low while she weeps over the misfortunes of an imaginary heroine. Forgotten are the children, unwashed, uncombed and half dressed. Forgotten the filth and dirt of yesterday, still on the floor. Forgotten the buttons to be sewn on little garments, and holes to be darned and mended. I went to call on this lady recently, and as I approached the house, I heard the poor woman making frantic efforts to straighten things around a little. She answered my knock flushed and embarrassed, hoped I would excuse her appearance, seized a broom and swept out a small place before the stove, and after dustnig a chair with her apron, placed it for me, called my attention to the dirt and general disorder, and informed me that she is suffering from a terrible headache, etc. But why proceed? We have all met this unfortunate woman. Her husband is generally found at the club or the corner saloon, and her children on the street, while she sits alone with her novels, fit emblems of dirt and confusion.

Just so the brother who spends all his time in pursuit of the riches and pleasures of this life. Whose Bible remains unopened and unread from year to year. Who has no interest in, and gives no thought to, the wonderful things that are now happening on the earth. Whose mind and heart rebel against prayer and worship, and is always glad of an excuse to escape the hour of prayer, and when present takes no part in the worship. Says he can't sing, and don't know how to pray. Who criticises those who are conducting the exercises, and remembers shortcomings in the past lives of each of those who lead. Who never gives thanks and in whose house the voice of prayer is never heard. Who thanklessly receives daily blessings and mercies from the bountiful hand of God, and attributes it to luck. Who sees much to fear and dread, and nothing to love and ardently desire in God, and his merciful plan of salvation as revealed in his word. Who is perfectly satisfied with this world as it is, and has no desire for any change. Who looks upon the prospects of the soon coming of the Lord with fear and trembling, and the wish that it may not be soon. Even as the dirty woman is never ready for company, and is always pitifully embarrassed when it comes, just so this morally dirty brother is not ready for the Lord, and will surely be overwhelmed with fear and embarrassment when he comes.

OBITUARIES

Edna Ellen Ashute

Died suddenly, Edna Ellen Ashute, daughter of Brother and Sister Anthony Ashute, Feb. 12th, 1917, age 5 years and 2 months old.

Brother Decker spoke to the edification of all present, and with a prayer to God we laid her away. She leaves her father, mother, two sisters and two brothers to mourn for her. May the victor over death soon come.

Brother Ashute.

Elder James Francis Wagoner

Elder James Francis Wagoner was born January 30th, 1834, in Miami county, Ohio. He was the son of William and Mary Wagoner and one of a family of nine children. When a small boy, his parents came to Fulton county, Indiana. Here he received his education and came to his majority. He was united in marriage to Rebecca Sample in November, 1856. They became the parents of two children, William Franklin, and Amanda Corrinne: the latter died February 9, 1902; and the former survives him.

They removed to Florida in 1881 and engaged in farming and fruit growing. But after a stay of seven years they returned to Rochester and purchased a farm just north of the city, where they resided until Mrs. Wagoner's death two years ago. He then broke up housekeeping and came to live with his sister, Mrs. Mark R. Richter. Here he died of pneumonia at 3:45 a. m., Monday, February 19, 1917. He was always frail in body and often preached sitting. Yet his tenacity to life carried him up to the ripe old age of 83 years and 20 days.

Elder Wagoner has been engaged in the ministry of the gospel in the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith since the early sixties. He organized the church at Argos, Jan. 1, 1869, and was its pastor for many years. His ministry extended to most of the churches of this state at different times in his active career. He also attended conferences in other states and was a delegate to the National conference at Philadelphia in 1888. He was a Bible student believing it the only source of information as to the revelation of God to man. Soon after his marriage he and his wife rejected the erroneous theological teachings of so called orthodoxy of "The natural immortality of the soul," "the doctrine of the Trinity," "endless torment," and "reward at death." Instead of these he boldly proclaimed "conditional immortality," "the unity of God and the Divine Sonship of Jesus Christ," "the judgment of the world at the second coming of Christ," and "the establishment of his kingdom upon the earth with the Lord Jesus as King of kings and Lord of lords." As a speaker he was logical and forceful. In his prime he spoke with an easy flowing diction, embellished with profuse description and apt illustration, that held his audience in unabated interest. He was a courageous man. He stood by his convictions and spoke his best thought without fear or favor of friend or foe, and was willing to abide by the consequences of the course pursued without complaint. He was as independant as he was courageous. And he lived and worked in a day when the world needed independant thinkers. If it were not for the independant man who breaks the chains of tradition, scales the walls of dogmatic error, and meets the many headed mob like some great cliff that meets and breaks the innumerable billows of the sea, the dust of the ages would lie unswept and mountainous falsehood be piled too high for truth to overpeer. He went a long way in the liberation of his mind and conscience in the discovery of the religious truths of God's revelation. And his great ambition was to give the liberty he had discovered to others. To help do this he had written quite extensively for religious papers and was the author of several tracts. Among the more important of these are, "What Does the Bible Teach?" and "The Last Message."

Besides his only son, he leaves four sisters, namely, Mary A. Russell, Emma Moore, Elizabeth Richter, and Lucinda Cook, and one brother, Samuel, all living in the vicinity of Rochester.

Funeral services were held at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Mark H. Richter, in Rochester, at 2 o'clock p.m., February 21, 1917. He had requested before his death that no flowers be contributed at his funeral. The sickness of his sister forbade any singing. This made the services sad to those who knew him best, for he was a lover of both music and flowers. The house was filled with his friensd and relatives to whom we rehearsed some of the more prominent Bible truths that he had so faithfully defended. Burial was made in the Rochester Cemetery where he awaits his great anticipation, the second coming of Christ, and his resurrection.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ :

I feel like proclaiming the glad tidings "Jesus is coming again." Can't you see brothers and sisters, that the prophesies are all being fulfilled. I was reading Isaiah 60:8 the other day: "Who are these that fly as a cloud and as a dove to their windows?" It seems to me that this verse must mean the airships and other flying machines used in this great war. When I see all these things coming to pass I feel as if I wanted to live nearer to Christ and be more kind and thoughtful toward others.

Brother Huggins, could you tell me the name of the oldest history of the old world and where I could get it, and also the price, as I would have to send the money with the order. Now dear brothers and sisters, I feel that the time is short and that we should all pray for each other and work harder to bring others to Christ.

Your Sister in Christ,
Susan A. Howard.

(If some brother or sister can answer Sister Howard's inquiry, they may address her at Chinook Cove, B. C.--- Editor.)

Baptized One
Conducted one funeral.

Remarks

The serious sickness of our son has still kept us from getting out into active campaign work, but we have not been idle. Several are now ready to be baptized as soon as conditions change to permit On the 18th at Kennard we planted Miss Ruby Appleby into the all-saving name to rise and walk a new life. Nearly a year ago I looked over a Bible lesson Ruby arranged, and it would do credit to many older in the faith. Out of eight in this family I have baptized six—a pretty good record for the family. We are liable to chafe and fret when we can't get out and work as usual, and all are more or less inclined to get nervous over inactivity. But I have discovered this is wrong. God can make even the wrath of man to praise him, so anything that occurs that we cannot help is by God's permission, and he can turn it to good in ways we cannot see until it is accomplished. It is work left undone by positive neglect that God will chastise us for.

The year 1917 has already developed some of the most wonderful things in history, and others are to follow that will make the year an epoch maker. Among them will be a Jewish Congress in Washington to prepare themselves for what even may be offered them at the close of the war, as they call it. A peace conference of the nations is not far off. It may be this year, tentative peace will be reached, which will create a lull in the war and offer the way and means for the return of the Jews.

In a peace conference the first step will be a demand that the Jews be given their own land, and what can Turkey do but grant it? That will drive her out of Asia first, then divide her European possessions, giving Russia the lion's share, which is already in the shape of a promise. This will drive her out of Europe and no country and nothing left to fight for but her religion, which they will not be slow to do. Brethren, watch; the gospel message is about closed. Then the bride must get dressed and await the knock announcing the arrival of the bridegroom. When the Bible is closed, the gospel message ended and we are in the little space of time waiting for the Master, we can say not only it is near but at the door. Peter says the prophecies last only "until the day dawn"—not till the day has come Like the bride waiting for the bridegroom, she must have time to dress and be in waiting. So the church: her work must close, her trousseau is completed, but she must have time to don it Then they will run to and fro trying to buy the word, but it is closed and not for sale. Then we will have nothing to guide us like the early church, so the spirit will return, and O what might it reveal to us all! "What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch."

STEADFASTNESS

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Cor. 15:58).

When Jacob or Israel was old, and the time drew near for him to die, he gathered his twelve sons together to bless them. In a lofty and prophetic strain he told them what should befall them, or rather their posterity, in the last days. Speaking to Reuben his first born he said, "Unstable as water, thou shalt not excell." By this he meant that he should not have the blessing of primogeniture according to custom. Because of the weaknes of his character, this blessing was passed over his head, and bestowed upon Joseph, the first born son of Rachael, Jacob's chosen wife. Joseph, with his pure and noble character, was well worthy of it, as he was in many ways the type of our blessed Redeemer. History does not record the fact that the tribe of Reuben ever achieved greatness. Steadfastness is one of the first essentials to success in life, especially so to a Christian. But in order to be steadfast, one must have a worthy purpose.

The Bible says, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good" (1 Thess. 5:21). There are two forces at work today, as there has always been, good and evil, and there is no middle ground that is safe, for the person who has set his face Zionward. So the first thing to do is to find out God's plan and purpose for us, and to obey with all the heart his revealed will as shown by the sacred writers. In Dan. 6:26 we read that "God is the living God and steadfast forever." How terrible it would be if God were changeable: loving and merciful for a season, then cruel and unreasonable for a time! We should be consumed with terror and uncertainty. James 1:17 says: "Every good and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights,, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." This passage seems to have a deeper meaning than is at first apparent. The word from which "variableness" is translated, means to change alternately, to pass from one change to another, and no doubt refers to parallax as used in astronomy. The term "parallax" may be briefly explained as follows: If a celestial body could be seen from the centre of the earth, and also from its surface, the body as seen from the surface, would seem to be at a different place from the same object as seen from the centre, which latter would be the true place of the object. The difference from the apparent and the real place is the parallax. The parallax is greatest when the object is near the horizon, and decreases as the altitude of the object increases, so that when it is at the zenith or directly over the head, there is no parallax. As the heavenly bodies are ever changing but always within certain limits, so this passage of Scripture would teach us that the changes we see in all of Nature's works have no counterpart in the changeless God: he has no parallax. He is everywhere present, "in the wide waste as in the city full," and so never seems to be where he is not.

The phrase "shadow of turning," would seem to refer to the darkness that envelops one hemisphere of the earth, caused by that side being turned away from the sun, in its diurnal revolution. Mal. 3:6 says: "I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." Why were they not consumed? Because we have a changeless and covenant keeping God, and he had promised Abraham that in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed. So although the children of Israel provoked him to wrath, he kept them and sent "David also his servant and took him from the speepfolds to feed Jacob his people and Israel his inheritance." David says of these people: "They were a generation that set not their hearts aright and whose spirit was not steadfast with God (Psa. 78). And in the 34th verse of the same psalm he says: "When he slew them then they sought him: and they returned and enquired early after God. And they remembered that God was their rock, and the high God their Redeemer. Nevertheless they did flatter him with their mouth, and they lied unto him with their tongues. For their heart was not right with him, neither were they steadfast in his covenant."

What a picture of inconstancy! But listen to God's goodness, as recorded in the same psalm: "But he, being full of compassion, forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not: yea, many a time turned he his anger away, and did not stir up all his wrath. For he remembered that they were but flesh; a wind that passeth away and cometh not again." Sorely chastened they have been but not consumed. Paul in speaking of this same people, and of the punishment they recieved says: "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." Are we going to profit by their example, or must we go on sinning against this good and gracious God, until we call down his wrath upon us? Let us rather say with David," My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed." "We are made partakers with Christ, if we hold fast the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end" (Heb. 3:14). Therefore "watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong" (1 Cor. 16:13).

Alice B. Curtis.

THE COMING KING

Long ages have rolled away since Israel were looking forward to the coming of their Messiah, who should be a great king and destroy those who oppressed them. And while they waited, they were sometimes loyal to him, and sometimes they drifted into idolatry and forgot him: and the years rolled on, and by and by he came, but they knew him not. They could not see in the babe, the boy, the humble preacher of righteousness, the king to be, and so they rejected him and crucified him, and brought upon themselves the terrible punishment, they have endured through the centuries. "He came to his own, but his own received him not;" and he went away to the Father, to wait until "his foes should be made his footstool." The times proclaim in clarion tones that time is near: that he is about to "return and rebuild the tabernacle of David that is fallen down," and speak peace to the nations, so they will learn war no more. He will again come to his own, and this time they will receive him.

A BRIGHT PAGE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Tidbits of Pleasant and Useful Information Gathered from Everywhere

A Good Example

By Auntie Wince

A beloved niece of my deceased husband lives in Blackwell, Oklahoma. She works hard and would not be contented if she did not. Yet she often wishes for a little time for recreation, but never has it. "This," she says, "is such a busy world these days, every one is in a hurry. I never have time to call on my friends any more, and they too are busy. But despite this little time I have for doing anything outside the store where I am employed, I have become very much interested in a Belgian boy who is going to school here. He is a fine boy, and is trying hard to get an education, and I am helping him all I can, and he is very appreciative.

"He came to this country just before the war broke out. He was a sailor, but was sick in a hospital at Galveston when the war started, and has never heard from any of his people since. He had a mother and two sisters, and he is the youngest, just like myself. My sister and my brother and I are trying to treat him like I would want my own brother treated were he alive and alone in a strange land.

"He was raised a Catholic, of course, but has given it up, and I am trying to teach him the truth. He is so bright and studies deeply into everything, so I have great hopes of him. He spends most of his spare time at the store where I work, and although I don't often have a chance, or time to talk Bible to him, I don't let him forget it. He works in a restaurant from 6.30 o'clock in the evening until one o'clock. After it gets late he finds time to study, but it is hard on him."

Then she goes on to say: "The man for whom I work, tried a few times to get me to act a lie, and I certainly told him just where I stood; that he could fire me but he could not make me lie. He acted fine for a while after I told him what I thought."

She next says: "It seems like The Restitution is getting better and better all the time. I am going to send it to several as soon as I can. I was glad to see the brethren give so freely to the Linograph Fund. Sometimes I thought they were a little slow, but I am sure they gave as they could. I have only been tithing a year, and am sorry I did not begin years ago, for I have had more real pleasure in placing that money than any money I ever spent, and I know that I have been blessed a hundred-fold."

I hope my dear niece will not scold me for taking such liberty with her letter, but there is too much light in it to hide under a bushel, lessons that will, I hope, make a lasting impression on the hearts of all our young people, and on the hearts of their elders as well. If this dear girl can find time, when tied down as closely as she is to her work, to teach the truth to a lonely foreign lad, are there not many others with far more spare time than she has who can follow her example? It is a noble example that she has set; and O how I pray that her work may result in great things for God.

And the grim determination of this Belgian boy to secure an education, and to seek the truth, while working hard half the night, is another example "to sit up and take notice of." And the iron of truthfulness in my dear niece, that nothing can bend or break, is another thing to pattern after, for all liars will be shut out of the beautiful city of God.

Follow this dear girl as she follows Christ. Follow her in scattering the seeds of truth by sending The Restitution to others. Follow her in tithing, and share in her hundred fold of blessing.

Relic of an Ancient Babylonian King

Some time ago a clay cylinder inscribed for King Nebuchadnezzar, who reigned over Babylonia from 605 to 561 B. C., was unearthed in territory that was once a part of his kingdom. The inscription on this cylinder recites the ancient rulers numerous titles and goes on to relate the various glorious deeds performed by him, including the restoration and enlargement of the walls about the city of Babylon and the construction of the tower of Etemenanki, as well as numerous temples about the city.

The inscription mentions the tower of Babel which is described in the Bible book of Genesis. The latter part of the inscription which deals with the building of the temple of Marad is deciphered as follows: "At that time for Lugal-Marada my deity, his temple is Marad, which from distant days its old foundation stone no previous king had seen, I sought for its old foundation stone, I beheld, and upon the foundation stone of Narim-Sin, king, my ancient ancestor, I laid its foundation. An inscription with my name I made and placed in the midst of it."

A number of ancient tablets have been found, bearing inscription referring to this foundation stone of Narim-Sin. One such was found by Arabs near where the clay cylinder of Nebuchadnezzar was unearthed. On this stone which is estimated to be between 5000 and 6000 years old the story of the building of the temple of Lugal-Marada in Marad by King Narim-Nin, the ancestor of Nebuchadnezzar who lived some 3000 years before him, is given.

Abraham's Faith

"Abraham believed God" (Rom. 3:3). What did Abraham believe? He believed what God said. What was the true nature of his faith? He was fully persuaded that what God had promised he was able to perform (Rom. 4:21). What did Abraham do to demonstrate his faith? He "obeyed" God (Heb. 11:8). Reader, are you walking in the steps of the faith of Abraham (Rom. 4:12)? Did Abraham believe he would be transported to heaven? No testimony having been given to this effect, he did not contemplate heaven as his home. The promise to Abraham was, "Lift up now thine eyes from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward, for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever" (Gen. 15). The words, "and to thy seed," are the words cited by the apostle Paul (Gal. 3:16). The "seed" is Christ and those who are Christ's (Gal. 3:27-29). The promise is not heaven, but the land shown to Abraham.

A Change of Administration Needed

What will remove the evils with which the world is afflicted? Temperance, socialism and other "reforms" are proposed, while others propose a "change of administration." Undoubtedly the latter is the great need. But let it be the administration of the world's affairs by the Man of whom David said, "Give the King thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the King's Son" (Psa. 72:1). All the remedial measures mentioned above are human measures, to be applied by human nature. They are efforts at self-help. Those who propose them forget the fact that, whatever party is in power, it has still the same perverse human nature behind it. The correction and removal of the world's evils requires a nature which combines good intentions with wisdom and power. These qualities are found in Jesus, to whom "all power in heaven and earth" has been given; and his brethren are likewise to be clothed with power over cities and nations. Then when the judgments of God are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness" (Isa. 26:9).

A person's influence over others is largely measured by his ability to keep sweet when he is being opposed.

Love is active, sincere, affectionate, pleasant and amiable, courageous, patient, faithful, prudent, long-suffering, manly and never seeking itself. For in whatever instance a person seeketh himself here he faileth from love.

Human happiness and misery are largely an affair of what people are saying to each other. When we remember we can make heaven or hell by words, it is amazing we are not more careful of them.

Do today's duty; fight today's temptations. Do not weaken and distract yourself looking forward to things you cannot see and could not understand if you saw.

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O, MARCH 13, 1917 NUMBER 10

OUR BROTHER

Friends, our brother now is sleeping,
  Waiting for the trump of God;
While we gather round him weeping,
  As we lay him 'neath the sod;
While he lived 'twas his endeavour,
  To be ready when death came;
Here he'll lay till Jesus calls him,
  To arise and live again.

Yes, dear brother, we shall miss thee,
  There will be one vacant chair;
When we gather round the altar,
  To commune with God in prayer
We will cherish and remember,
  All the lessons that you gave;
And we hope in the near future,
  That we'll meet beyond the grave.

May your children come to Jesus,
  And be faithful to our God;
And may we who now are living,
  Tread the path that Jesus trod;
Now "our brother in departing,
  Left behind him "noble deeds,"
And he lived the true religion,
  'Tis the life the Christian needs.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD: WHERE IS IT?

Very much has already been written on the above subject, and much controversy has frequently been the result, so that it may seem somewhat superfluous to write more. Yet it seems to me it might be helpful to some to give what has resulted from my meditation and study. Of late years I have grown in the belief that the Bible is a book, not for clergy only, but for everybody, rich and poor, high and lowly; and that in the main, its language is plain, straightforward and not difficult to understand. I am also of the opinion that a knowledge of Greek and Hebrew is not necessary to the proper understanding of God's Word, as so many assert, and so discourage its real study by many who would otherwise do so. Many a young man is told to leave certain questions of Bible truths to those who understand these dead languages, and he is thus debarred from much interesting and profitable study. Surely there are few students of these languages who would claim superior knowledge to those who accomplished the great task of translation of the Old and New Testaments. Therefore I maintain that any Bible subject may be studied in either the Authorized Version or the Revised Version with perfect confidence and with the best authority (1). I would strongly emphasize the fact that under no conditions of any sort can a passage of Scripture be made to bear, in any sense, a meaning opposite to the dictionary meaning of the words it contains. Get this fact clearly impressed upon the mind, and it will then be seen how very unfairly the Bible is treated often times in comparison to the treatment given to other books. No other book could have stood what the Bible has stood in this way, and still have maintained its position. This may seem to be a digression from the subject, but I have deemed these prefatory remarks necessary, and I trust the reader will ultimately concur.

"The Kingdom of God" is a term frequently used in the Bible, and the allusions to it are numerous, and, for the most part, plain. This much cannot be said of many things given out as "Bible truth." When a subject cannot be expressed in Bible language, it can scarcely be called a Bible subject. That surely is evident. We are not, however, in that difficulty here. Our difficulty is rather that of limiting our topic to a few texts, and within the scope of a short paper. There are two or three verses that have dwelt much on my mind recently, which seem to indicate as clearly as possible the locality of the Kingdom of God. The first is to be found in Matt. 6, in the very beautiful prayer our Lord taught us to pray. It is, indeed, a most wonderful prayer. Simply worded, yet every word seems to be loaded with truth, and seems to carry within its centre one or more of the cardinal truths of Christianity. One would fain take up this prayer (rightly called the Lord's prayer, for none but he could have framed a prayer so fraught with meaning and teaching in every sentence) and seek to expound it word by word, but time and space forbid. The sentences to which I would draw particular attention are—"Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name; thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

Our Lord was on earth, and he prayed to his Father which is in heaven—two distinct places, and two separate personalities. "Thy kingdom come." Three short words, but they express much. It is reasonable to suppose, our Lord's thoughts were at least reminded of the promise given in Daniel, that "the God of heaven would set up a kingdom," and he longed and taught his disciples to pray that his Father's kingdom should come. All other kingdoms failed, and in time died away, but not so the kingdom of God. He left no doubt as to the locality of the kingdom for being on the earth, he prayed that it might come; and as if to avoid any further question as to its locality and nature, he immediately adds, "Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven." So then in these few concise, wonderfully expressed words, we have volumes of truth contained; we get the glorious news that this sin-stained earth is yet to be full of the knowledge of the Lord, aye so full, that God's will shall yet be done here, as it is now done in heaven. No pen can describe that wonderful transformation; so we must leave it and consider our next proof text.

(1) I do not mean that, where opportunity allows, various well known translations and authorities should not be consulted. I myself use a Variorum Bible and find it helpful.

Let us turn then to Matt. 13:41--"They shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them that do iniquity." This surely shows plainly the locality of the kingdom. As regards man and his sphere, the Bible only shows two places---heaven and earth. Heaven is God's dwelling-place, and there we have it on Christ's own authority—God's will is done. There can then be only one place where it is possible to "take out all things that offend and them which do iniquity," and that is the earth, which is here designated as "his kingdom." The earth is beautiful now—exquisitely beautiful in many places; but when "all things that offend"—thorns and thistles, and them that do iniquity, are taken out of way, it will be the kingdom of God, over which the Son of God will delight to reign. We can now enter somewhat into the request, aye and the feeling too, of the dying thief when he prayed—"Lord, remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom," for he had read the inscription, "This is Jesus, the King of the Jews," and that very day the Lord gave him the promise that he should be with him then. The prophets are full of this glorious theme. Christ and his apostles re-echo it. Peter tells us of the time of the third heaven and earth wherein dwelleth righteousness, and Paul refers to the same theme when he tells of "visions and revelations of the Lord."

Friends, we have a grand Book; full of grand themes, and most of all, from the beginning to end, the Book rings with the glad message of a grand Savior. Let us not then be ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation.

THE LIVING WORD

By S. Roxana Wince

No. 2

But were there not other copies of this living book beside the two that I have mentioned? There must have been, for else how could "the people be instructed in the law every Sabbath and daily in their own homes," as Jamieson, Fausett and Brown think they were! how else could they commit the words of the Lord to memory, teach them to their children, make them constant topics of conversation, and write them in every conspicuous place?

It would be impossible. There were doubtless, many other copies besides the one that represented the people as one of the parties to the covenant.

The books that made up what we call the Pentateuch, were divided into fifty four portions, these portions making up the weekly lessons of their year. The divisions of the other books of the Bible were not so regular.

When the time came for Israel to set up a king over themselves, he was to write a copy of the law in a book out of that which was before the priests, the Levites, that he might "learn to fear the Lord his God to keep all these words of the law and these statutes to do them." He was to "keep it by him, and read it all the days of his life," that he might be a good king and guide his people aright. If we run over the list of the kings of Israel after Israel seceded from Judah, we will not find a good king among them. Do the children know why? It was because they did not have the living book and read and mind it.

Jereboam, their first king, was afraid if he minded the book and went up with his people to worship the Lord at Jerusalem, they would get tired of having him for their king and would go back to the sons of Solomon, so he made two calves for the ten tribes to worship and set one up in Dan and one in Beer-Sheba. People who worship idols do dreadful things. They kill others to get their property just as Jezebel did, and even put their own children and grandchildren to death, as the terrible Athalia did when she wanted to be queen. We find good kings in the line that reigned over Judah, but more bad ones than good, for when king Jereboam went wrong he made all Israel to sin, and the kings of Judah, by taking the daughters of the kings of Israel for their wives, were made just as bad as they and their little children were taught by the mothers not to trust in the great Creator who gave us the living word, but in the ugly idols that men had made from pieces of wood and blocks of stone, and they too grew up to be cruel, revengeful men.

Books in those ancient days were not printed as they are now; they all had to be printed with pen and ink. Men called scribes did this work. And when making copies of God's word, they dared not make a single mistake, if they did the work had to be done all over again on a new skin or new piece of parchment. And the book was not all like ours. It was written not on leaves, but on a long narrow strip. This was fastened at each end to rollers, so that it could be unrolled from one and rolled up on the other as the reader read.

It took a long time to write a book, but Ezra and Zadok did such work (Neh. 13:13), and Mr. Ingraham, who wrote "The Prince of the House of David," thinks Lazarus made his living by writing beautiful copies of the Bible.

But, bad as the kings of Israel and Judah were, there must still have been many Bibles among the people even down to the time of Ahab and Jezebel, when Elijah thought there was no one left to believe in God but himself. How surprised he must have been when he was told that there were 7000 other Israelites who were just as steadfast in their faith as he. They could not have been if they had not had the living word either in their chests, or in their memories.

But a time came when the precious book was almost entirely suppressed. This was during the reign of Manasseh, the thirteenth king of Judah. I could not imagine how he came to be an idolator and the worst of all the kings of the southern kingdom. His father was the good Hezekiah and his mother Hephzi-bah, "the delightful," said by tradition, to have been the daughter of Isaiah. He must have been well taught up to the time of his father's death, which occurred when he was only twelve years old. But Mr. Stanley, who wrote "The History of the Jewish Church," thinks he was led into paganism by the Jewish nobles, who took charge of his education after he came to the throne. Manasseh established idol-worship as the religion of his people, proscribed the old faith, put God's prophets and their followers to death, his own uncle Isaiah, now about ninety years old, among the rest.

Freedom from Falsehood or Error

Now if we can find out what the Bible teaches we can be sure we have the Scripture truth; for the Bible does not teach error. We will admit that man is imperfect and liable to err; and we are aware that man wrote the words in the Bible. But we read that "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is prófitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16). Who was the man of God? "Moses, the man of God, blessed the children of Israel before his death" (Deut. 33:1). Psa. 90 records the prayer of Moses as the man of God. Elijah was called the man of God (2 Kings 1:9,11,13). David the man of God (2 Chron. 8:14). Paul in writing to Timothy taught him to withdraw from the ones that concent not to wholesome words. But godliness with contentment is great gain. Be content with food and raiment. The rich fall into a snare. The love of money is the root of all evil "But thou, O man of God, flee these things: and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life" (1 Tim. 6:3-12).

So to become a man of God we must obey God. We cannot be like Moses, Elijah or David for we are not placed in such positions as they were. But we can become a "man of God" by obedience, and doing his will; by leaving the world with all its errors and sinful ways, and putting our trust in the Lord, and calling unto him, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do" (Acts 9:6)? Do as Paul did. He had persecuted the church of God. The world does the same today. Paul became blind; the world is blind. Paul received his sight, came into the truth (which is the light of the world, Matt. 5:14; Phil. 2:15), arose and was baptized, and straightway he preached Christ, that he is the Son of God (Acts 9:18-20). Then became a "man of God" and taught the people Scriptural truths from the word of God, which word is recorded in the book we call the Bible. Then the process that made Paul a "man of God" will make anyone a man of God.

It is a Scriptural truth that the world is in darkness, or wickedness. "The whole world lieth in wickèdness" (1 John 5:19). "He hat walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth. Whoever does not believe in Christ abides in darkness" (John 12:35,46). There is another Scriptural truth: There is light in the world. Jesus said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. As long as I am in the world I am the light of the world" (John 8:12; 9:5). "I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth" (Acts 13:47). This was a command from he Lord to Paul, and when the Gentiles heard, they were glad and glorified the word of the Lord (verse 48), and many believed. What did they believe? Believed the Scriptural truths that Paul taught. What did Paul teach? The first thing he taught was that Christ is the "Son of God." He further taught that there is no respect of persons with God (Acts 10:34; Rom. 2:11; Gal. 2:6; Eph. 6:9; Col. 3:25; 1 Pet. 1:17). "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house" Acts 16:31; John 3:16,36; 6:47; 1 John 5:10-12). He spake boldly for three months concerning the kingdom of God (Acts 19:8; 28:23). "And he dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him" (Acts 28:31).

Why did Paul speak with such "confidence?" Because he was chosen of God to bear his name before the Gentiles, and kings and the children of Israel (Acts 9:15). What was to be Paul's reward? "I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake," And Paul said bonds and afflictions await for me (Acts 9:16; 20:23; 21:11). How did he suffer? He was brought into bondage; received stripes above measure; in prisons more frequent; in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one; thrice was I beaten with rods; a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often; in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own countrymen, in perils of the sea, in perils among false brethren; and the daily care of all the churches (2 Cor. 11:23-29). Thus did Paul suffer for the truth of the Bible. Why? Because he was the chosen of the Lord, and after his conversion lived a godly life; and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake" (2 Tim. 3:12; Matt. 4:11). Then beloved, we may rest assured that if we suffer persecution in this life for our righteousness it is because that we believe "Bible truths;" and if we suffer we will be rewarded with Paul.

FORGIVENESS BY PRAYER

It is strange what ideas take possession of the multitude and how difficult it is to eradicate them, even though they be ever so contrary to ordinary common sense, or ever so contradictary, so they be sanctified by the approval of the multitude—that's sufficient to earn for them the multitude's continued approval.

An instance of this sort familiar to the readers of The Restitution is the doctrine of eternal torture in conjunction with the doctrine of the love of God. Here we find many good people strenuously endeavouring to reconcile these two antithetical ideas when there is no necessity to stultify their minds in the matter. We have a similar instance, one that we often meet in our survey of the spiritual world in the doctrine that the judicial murder of God Christ was the crisis of the world's redemption, and that somehow because he died a cruel and unjust death therefore the Father of all was "satisfied" and forgives and exonerates all the rest of mankind. When you read Christ's parable of the lord that sent his servants to collect the rent of the vineyard, and whom the husbandmen maltreated and how, last of all he sent his Son "whom they slew"—we don't read that the lord was satisfied with the way matters stood, and the question "what shall the lord of the vineyard do?" almost answers itself: "He will destroy those husbandmen, and give the vineyard to others." And when the Savior looked upon the people who were, as signified in the parable, waiting for the opportunity to destroy him, he exclaimed: "Fill ye up the measure of your fathers" that their deep damnation may be doubly assured. So much then for this punishment and exoneration by proxy—nothing to it. It is written that the heavenly Father "pardons iniquity, transgression and sin, but will in no wise clear (exonerate) the guilty."

To illustrate what this means, let us suppose that Johnnie in his studies upsets the ink bottle on the table cloth; but Johnnie being a good boy and knowing how tidy mama is and how it will vex her, runs in alarm to papa and says: "Just look papa what I have done: what will mama say when she sees it?"

Papa looks at the results and—grins. "That is a mess," he says, "but we won't let mama know yet—call sister and the washwoman, and all hands come here and help, so we can have this thing cleaned up before mama comes home." That is what a reasonable and generous man would say in such circumstances who was framed somewhat in the image of his maker.

But take it another way: Suppose Johnnie is a sneak and "doesn't let on," and when mama comes home she wants to know who did it, and papa wants to know too, but no one speaks up: what does the father of that family do? According to the Calvinistic idea of redemption, he picks out the littlest and best and says: "I know you are innocent but I'll spank you good and hard so that I can forgive the rest." Can anything be more hideously absurd, more subversive of human reason?

The basis of redemption is the mercy of God toward the "broken and contrite spirit," "the heart of flesh." Doing justice, loving mercy and walking humbly before him is what appealed to the Father in heaven, so the prophet says. the "pure in heart," the "poor in spirit" are the kind Christ tells us he came to collect and to save by the power of that Father has given him, whereby he is able to raise them up at the last day. Those before him, those after him; those who came, those who come, those who will come—all that "the Father gives" him: that's the range; that's the limit. Christ never claimed to stay the Father's wrath or satisfy the Father's justice. He came to embody the Father's love to such as will receive him. Christ changed nothing in the character of God or in God's design. The Old Testament and the New are the same in tone: mercy to the humble, wrath to the proud.

It sounds large and generous to some folks these days to extend the bounds of redemption far and wide on the ground of ignorance, but outside one particular phrase you would hardly notice the ignorance; and if you watch close you might notice that "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light"—and when it comes to efficiency—O my! And they are proud of their knowledge too—"science" they call it, and they are proud of their efficiency; they are proud of what they have and, to a large extent, of what they have not. But God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble.

J. F. Gelletly.

THE BOYS

We suppose that every parent, whether on the farm or in the city, is interested in the mental and moral welfare of their boys. But we believe that too many parents give too little thought and care to the subject. They do not talk with the boys enough. You must win their confidence and then manage to keep it. Make home attractive for them; supply them with what they need for amusement and recreation as well as the necessities of life.

If your boy shows an inclination to read, provide him with the best periodicals you can procure, even though he has to wear patched trousers to make up for it. He will be sure to get reading somewhere, and if you do not provide it for him he will borrow from some other boy and the chances are that the reading matter may not have been carefully selected and will arouse a taste for trashy literature that will require years to overcome.

You certainly do not want your son to grow up with his head full of admiration for stage robbers, pirates and bandits. It is an easy matter for young folks to acquire a taste for poor reading, and that is something the parent should carefully avoid. It pays to keep good books and a few high class periodicals in the house.

Encourage your boys to bring their young friends home with them, and help them to have pleasant social gatherings. It may be a little bother, but isn't your boy worth it? And you want to know who your boy's associates are, for they have influence for good or bad on your boy's character and you must know them to know how to guard against the bad and encourage the good.

Enter into the boy's interests and pursuits; make him realize that you are interested in the same things that he is, and he will feel that home is the pleasantest spot on earth.

If the boy shows special talent in any direction, aid him to improve it—nurse it, cherish it as you would the choicest plant. Keep him interested and talking about his plans in life.

Make the home and its surroundings just as pleasant and beautiful as your means will permit. Don't fix up your girl's room daintily and prettily and think any old thing is good enough for the boy's room—that he doesn't care about such things. He will, if you give him half a chance. Let him help you to make the place beautiful and he will take great interest in it.

Beauty is an important factor in every child's life, and it goes a long way toward strengthening home ties.

Give the boys an interest in the proceeds of the farm. Let them lay up something for themselves. Then, when they come of age they will be practical, independent farmers and they will not be liable to want to change their business. I have known instances where fathers have given to their boys a calf, a lamb or a young pig. The boy cared for it, considered it his own, but when the animal was ready for market it became father's again and father took care of the money. Don't make such a mistake.

You want your boy to grow up with a keen sense of right and justice; such lessons as that make a boy doubt his father's fairness, and father is always a son's pattern. The money is not worth the loss of prestige in your boy's eyes.

Thrift is a great virtue, but thrift and economy are apt to become such strong habits that we overlook some of the other virtues. A bank account is a good thing, but if it is gained at the expense of the home it loses much of its value.

Make home attractive and thus store up treasures for your old age. Give the boys as good an education as you can possibly afford. They will bless you for it in years to come. Have books and music in your home. Give the boys a pleasant trip now and then; it will broaden their minds. Money expended in such ways will bring you greater returns than if stored in a bank or invested in land to bequeath to your children when you are gone.

HELP NEEDED: A PREACHER IN SIGHT

By Auntie Wince

We want preachers. So many of our churches are pastorless and are calling for leaders, three such calls having come to Brother Huggins in one short month.

And when isolated brethren and sisters endeavour to teach the truth to those around them, they are met by the remonstrance, "Where are your preachers? You never bring your preachers here," and the questioned ones are silent, knowing that we have no preachers within our reach to bring.

But such a state of things need not be, must not be. We have men in sight who have already given up all that they may devote their lives to the service of Christ. One of these is a Mr. George Wilson, of Pleasanton, Kansas, a man well recommended by those of the faith who have long been associated with him in a business way. He and his devoted wife are to move to Cleveland soon, where he will be instructed by our good Brother Huggins, until such time as he is able to wield the sword of the spirit in all places where he may be called.

The car fare for himself and wife from pleasanton, Kansas, to Cleveland via Chicago and Penn. lines will be $21.32 each, and the freight rate on household goods $1.30. This expense, it is right that we of the household of faith should meet, and meet at once; for it is in God's plan that his ministers should be supported by the other worshippers at his tabernacle.

We cannot build and support a college at present, but we can help these dear earnest ones to fit themselves for gospel work. The dear Lord has provided us with a linotype; he is now going to provide us with workers, blessed be his holy name! Put your shoulders to the wheel brethren! Just a little lift from each, and we shall have Brother Wilson snugly ensconced in his two little rooms in Cleveland, ready to begin a course of training for gospel work. Do not dally; the Lord is coming.

Editor's Note

Sister Wince sends $6.00 to help defray Brother Wilson's removal expenses. These expenses are all the money we need in the case, as Brother and Sister Wilson are going to make their own living while he is under tutorage. Perhaps $50.00 will be all the money needed, and acknowledgements of remittances will be given in The Restitution. Another golden opportunity presents itself for willing workers. Who will take advantage of it?

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

All true love is one. The first commandment is very great, but the second is not little. They are upper and nether pools, and the same fountain fills them. He who is the richest in the love of God has the greatest advantage for loving his neighbor.

EDITORIAL

We have now received more money for the Linograph Fund than our Manager asked for. More than enough! This sounds good for the people of God.

Brother John O. Eranson, of New Palestine, Ind., writes: "I want to buy a copy of 'The Gospel of the Kingdom,' by Wiley Jones. State condition of book and price."

The military petition on last page is to be signed, cut out and mailed to The Restitution Publishing Co. If a sufficient number of readers sign it, we aim to present the petition to Congress.

We all realize how few workers there are in the vineyard of the Lord. The harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few. Paucity of ministers is partly due to the ministers themselves, and to candidates of the ministry. When a likely man for the ministry is approached, he replies that he is now engaged in a business that nets him so many thousands per year. "Can I make this much preaching?" he asks. When he is told "No," he immediately decides to stick to his business and let preaching go. He forgets he worked at his profitable business for years for nothing, that he had to learn it before he made money. Inconsistently enough, he expects to make as much preaching, soon as he begins, as he makes at his business after years of hard labor! In plainer words still, he expects to be paid for learning how to preach, to be paid for preaching before he can preach. If he only felt like Paul, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel," he would learn to preach, money or no money; and he would find that when he knows how, the money would be sufficient. See a very interesting article from Sister Wince in this issue concerning Brother Wilson and the ministry.

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL

No. 3

Non-belief and non-acceptance of the gospel carries with it certain condemnation. Mark 16:15,16 says: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." But this condemnation is for hearers only. By no process of reasoning can the believers, who receive salvation, or the non-believers, who receive damnation, be made to come from any class but hearers. We have no right to read the thought in that non-hearers are likewise damned because of unbelief.

The condemnation of the law, that is, the condemnation of disobedience to law, hangs over every member of the human family, whether they know the law or not. Babies are as much subject to its condemnation, Adamic death, as the most learned professor of law. Romans 2:6-12 says that God makes no difference between a Jew and Gentile, or heathen. The Gentile to whom God had never given laws is nevertheless subject to its condemnation, death; and the Jew to whom God had given laws is judged by that law, worthy of the same condemnation. Verses 13,14,15 explain how this can be true, and God still be just to children and Gentiles ignorant of his law. It is because they have in their natures things forbidden by law, and it is sinful flesh God condemns; therefore all are condemned alike since all have the sinful flesh alike.

The condemnation of non-belief and non-acceptance of God and his gospel hangs over all those who have heard and understood his gospel, which reveals the true character of God and his loving offer of salvation, and choose to remain under the condemnation of the law by refusing to accept his offer. This necessarily results in eternal death.

One man under the curse has as much need of God's salvation as another, therefore, one man under the curse has as much right as another to know of his offer; for God is no respecter of persons, and shows equity to all. Since each has the right to know it, he must hear it. It can not be denied that thousands have died without having in the least understood that they were under the curse, which curse God can and will lift through Christ as the king of the earth. Since God would have all men to we saved, all must at least hear and understand his offer. Consequently, if any do not hear it before they suffer the limit of the curse, death, they must be raised to life and brought under this teaching in the future. If it takes only wicked works to send one into eternal death without refusing to accept God's offer of salvation from wickedness and the nature that prompts it, then good works without an acceptance of such an offer, gives one the right to life.

"Resurrection of Damnation" Limited to Enlightened Rejectors

We congratulate Sister King for her splendid and Scriptural remarks on Mark 16:16. She shows by both reason and the word of God that the damnation of that verse belongs solely to those who hear the gospel and reject it, as conversely the salvation of the text is only affirmable of those who hear the gospel, believe and obey it. Clearly then the "resurrection of damnation" of John 5:29 is a damnation which those who have "done evil" suffer after the resurrection. "This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world" (John 3:19). Literally the Greek here reads: "This is the ground of condemnation, that light is come into the world." "Damnation," "Condemnation," etc., depend upon "light." Christ, in harmony with this principle of equity, charged accountable sin to his contemporaries when they heard his words and saw his works (John 15:22-24). Light, knowledge, understanding in every instance, is the "ground" upon which penal retribution rests. "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin" (Jas. 4:17).

Adamic Condemnation is Universal

While recognizing clearly that resurrectional damnation is penal, and is inflicted upon the rejectors of the gospel for their disobedience to the gospel, and with a perfect understanding that they, and thy only, are appointed to die the second death, still we cannot close our eyes to the fact of Scripture and observation that all are "appointed once to die" (Heb. 9:27). The Son of God was not sent to condemn but to save the world. The reason is plain: The world was lost and perishing, "condemned already" (John 3:16-18). "In Adam all die" (1 Cor. 15:22). "Judgment has come upon all men to condemnation" (Rom. 5:18). Sister King speaks of this as "the curse," and admits that babies and all are under the judgment of divine law. Growing out of this admission a number of questions spring up: Since all are under the curse and condemnation of divine law, who, what judge passed the sentence upon them? God? Agreed. Now since all, babies as well as Nero, are under the curse of God, are they under it justly or unjustly? If justly, where are the "rights" some boast of? "O man, who art thou that repliest against God" (Rom. 9:20)? "The judgment of God is according to truth" (Rom. 2:2), notwithstanding the implied criticism of Restorationists. "Righteous art thou, O Lord" (Jer. 12:1). If, then, his judgments are righteous, as we are "sure" they are (Rom. 2:2), let not guilty man whine and complain at the judge; let him not boast of his "rights," and let him not claim that there must be a "lifting of the curse through Christ." So long as the curse rests upon us in righteousness and equity, its unconditional cancellation is a dubious proposition. If, on the other hand, all are under condemnation unjustly, the justice of God's character is impeached, and all hope of God becoming just in the next age, and giving all a universal opportunity for life, becomes a figment of the imagination, as impossible as it is improbable that an unjust God would do right. Dangerous cataract; stand from under!

False Doctrine Leads to Stultification of Reason and Logic

The merest tyro knows that in logic conclusions must agree with premises. Sister King, although she has a cultured and disciplined mind, yet, under the pressure of a false doctrine is blinded by error to the extent that she stultifies admitted and fundamental rules of reasoning and logic. Take a few instances:

Needs One Thing; Their Gratification Another

1. "One man under the curse has as much need of God's salvation as another; therefore one man under the curse has as much right as another to know of his offer." Can any mind, however acute, see any connection between this premise and conclusion? Because a man "needs" a thing, does it "therefore" follow that he is sure to get that thing? Because one man needs a thing as badly "as another," does this equality of need argue conclusively that both shall have their need supplied? Besides, the "right to know" is not the primary thing needed; according to the premise the fundamental need is "God's salvation." But forgetful of this, in a conclusion reached by a "therefore," the need of salvation is entirely ignored! Instead of saying, in conformity to the laws of logic, "Therefore one man under the curse has as much right to be saved as another," salvation, the thing of "need" in the premise, is dropped out of the conclusion, and "the right to know" substituted! Our writer could not make premise and conclusion agree in logic without falling into Universalism; rather than do this she preferred to commit a solecism.

Fair Chance Nil Without Utilization

2. "Since each has the right to know it, he must hear it." This statement shows the writer has mistaken the sun-dog for Sol. The utterance conveniently assumes that man has the "right" to know the gospel, but this is a brazen assumption for which not a shred of proof is given. "He must hear it." "Must"—do you mean it? Has he no choice in the matter? Are not "rights" one thing, and their exercise another? Certainly; thousands of rights are procured and possessed which are never exercised. Allowing that man has the right to know the gospel, which is all the statement claims, still his knowledge of the gospel would be dependent upon himself. A "fair chance" to know the truth would do no one any good unless it was utilized. All boys and girls in this country have a "fair chance" to get an education, but many of them do not exercise their "rights," do not use the facilities at hand to procure it; and all this notwithstanding the fairness of the chance. Our writer follows in the wake of all other Larger Hope advocates, and they step precisely in the footprints of Universalists by invariably representing God as active and man as passive in the work of salvation. When they talk about a "fair chance," they think of God giving and man receiving it; when they argue that man has a "right" to know the gospel, they mean that God is the giver and man is the receiver—it never occurs to them that man has any part in the obtainment of knowledge! The slogan of the world, "Let George do it," they have revised and adopted, "Let God do it." If they would turn about; if they would quit talking and clamouring about God giving man a "fair chance," and urge the people to give God half a chance at them. they would utter reasonable speech. But no: they see that if man is a responsible being and has a hand in the matter, he might not act wisely; he might not take advantage of a "fair chance" when it comes; he might hear the gospel and be none the wiser for it; therefore to obviate all contingencies, hitches and frustrations, they graciously relieve man of all accountability, and fasten all responsibility upon God! As long as man is left anything to do, there is the grim possibility that it may not be done. To make sure, then, that all shall hear the gospel and know it, that "every human being" shall have a knowledge of the truth without default, everything is taken out of the hands of man and put into the hands of God. Do not be deceived by this specious reasoning, dear reader (Gal. 6:7).

Universalism with Intrigues and Poisoned Sweets Beckons, Beware!

3. "Since God would have all men to be saved, all must at least hear and understand his offer." A logician would have made his premise and conclusion agree thus: "Since God would have all men to be saved, all of them must be saved." The Sister's shyness of Universalism has spoiled her logic again. She is standing on the brink of a precipice, the truth on one side, and Universalism on the other. Already she is looking on the wrong side of the dividing line. Universalism with its poisoned sweets and voluptuous life, in a dazzling costume of latitudinarianism, beckons her to take the easier but wrong side. We pray that none may be deceived by the "good words and fair speeches" uttered by men who teach a "fair chance" to "deceive the hearts of the simple" (Rom. 16:18)

Purgatory After The Resurrection a Doctrine Built on Salt Land

4. "Consequently if any do not hear it before they die, they must be raised to life and brought under this teaching in the future." Momentuous conclusion with its roots running clear out into the "future," with no ground in which to grow but the salt land of "cons-quently"! No Scripture is quoted to sustain this post-resurrectional purgatory affirmation, and for a very good reason: there is none to quote.

Right to Life Based on "Good Works" An Anti-Scriptural Doctrine

5. "Goodworks, without an acceptance of such offers, give one the right to life." Think of it, reader, people who do not know, believe or obey the gospel can, by "good works," and without accepting the gospel of Jesus Christ actually earn "the right to life"! This, too, in the face of Bible declarations like these, "Not by works of righteousness which we have done" (Titus 3:5). "By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves: not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2:8,9). The immortal soulist, neither believing God's truth, nor accepting his offers of mercy now, by "works of righteousness," "good works," etc., can actually become so good that he puts God under obligations. He can believe the serpent's lie, "Ye shall not surely die," and make God a liar (1 John 5: 10), and yet he can "boast" that by virtue of merit he has "the right to life." May God forgive those who may be guilty of such a foolish, truth-nullifying utterance, for we have reason to think they understand not what they say.

Temptation, Trial or Test

In 1 Cor. 10:13, we are told no trial has assailed you except what belongs to man (or is common to man), and God is faithful who will not permit you to be tried beyond your ability; but with the trial, will also direct the issue, that you may be able to bear it." As we forgive, or like we forgive so we are forgiven. We are taught in the prayer the Lord taught his disciples (Matt. 6:12): "And forgive us our debts (or trespasses), as we have forgiven our debtors, and abandon us not to trial, but preserve us from evil" (Diag.). Happy the man who endures trial, because having become an approved person, he will receive the crown of life, which the Lord promised to those that love him. The Lord knows how to rescue the godly out of temptation (2 Pet. 2:9)).

Having therefore a great high priest that has passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession. For we have not an high priest that cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities—or is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses—but was in all points tempted as we are (Heb 4:14).

Let us, dear Bereans, in the temptations that continually assail us on every side, come boldly—or with confidence—unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need" (Heb. 4:16).

"Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God, be glory and majesty and dominion and power, both now and forever Amen."

H. E. Russell.

Christ's Second Coming

One of the most important events of prophecy yet unfulfilled is that of Christ's second advent. The prophets foretold not only his birth, but also his second coming to earth as in Daniel 7: "I saw in the night visions, and behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven and came to the Ancient of Days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom that all people, nations and languages should serve him." This reference and others show that this was the hope of the ages even before Christ's birth.

While Jesus was on earth he talked of his return, of the signs of his coming, and of the establishment of the kingdom. This is dwelt on all through the Scriptures of the New Testament. The disciples said to him: "Tell us when shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming?" And he told them of the signs that would precede his appearance, of the great tribulation of those days, such as was not since the beginning of the world. The words of the prophets, the teaching ofJesus, and the writings of the disciples are all in harmony concerning the condition that is to prevail at the coming of Christ. War and preparation for war although the nations in a general way are prosperous (Dan. 8:25). Political unrest, increase of sin, etc. Note Joel 3: 9-11; Matt. 24; 2 Tim. 3. He warns them to be not deceived by the false prophets that shall appear. He tells of the manner of his coming, and gives them the parable of the fig tree.

Surely it is made plain that the same Jesus who went away would return in like manner. This was impressed again in the transfiguration, a vision of his return. As he appeared in the transfiguration visible, material, so shall he appear when he comes to establish a visible, material kingdom. And as Moses and Elijah appeared with him then; Moses a law-giver and leader, Elijah a priest and teacher; so at his appearing he will have with him, those that are called to reflect his glory, to serve as teachers and rulers, to show law, forgiveness and righteousness to the subjects represented in the vision by Peter, James and John.

He shall come with a shout with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God (2 Thess. 4:16). The dead shall hear has voice (John 5:28). Some of them come forth to life. Then these who are raised and those who are changed will be caught up to meet him in the clouds. He will come to earth again, and his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives. Paul says: "When the Lord shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel." "In flaming fire" would seem a symbol for power and great glory, as it is expressed in Matt. 24:30.

He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth (Job 19:25). His saints shall come with him (1 Thess. 3:13). Every eye shall see him (Rom. 1:7). He shall sit in his throne (Matt. 25:31). His throne shall be in Jerusalem (Isa. 33:20). He shall build up Zion (Psa 106:16). He shall destroy antichrist (2 Thess. 2:8). He will judge the nations (Matt. 25:32).

It is impossible to study the second coming without associating with it the resurrection of the dead and the setting up of the kingdom. These events naturally group themselves together as we study to rightly understand the word. He shall have a kingdom (Dan. 7:13,14), and rule over it with his saints (Rev. 5:10). Those who have by faithful search for the truth come to understand something of God's great plan, realize that this is a great and wonderful hope and have the fact ever before them that the time draws near: but to those who do not study God's word, or to those just beginning to see the light and the harmony of the Scriptures, the fact of our Lord's coming back to earth is often obscure. "Spiritual" it is sometimes called. To many it is not real and tangible as it should be.

May we as Bereans understand these truths so clearly that w can explain them to others as we have occasion, and may at all times be ready and worthy, and find comfort in the precions promise spoken to the disciples, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself."

Mabel Kendrick.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Restitution:

On next to the last page of The Restitution for Feb. 20, a petition for military exemption which I heartily endorse and sign, both for myself and family eleven in all, consisting of six baptized believers, and five younger children, from four to twelve years old. We read for our instruction in God's book and pray twice each day (Psa. 92:12). We also take "our passover" supper each Sunday evening. Please see 1 Cor. 5:1-8.

The Restitution is good and Feb. 13th issue was so good, and your strictures on "The Gospel For All" in same paper were as we see it. Amen. Please see how God is not a respecter of persons and gives all a fair chance in Acts 10:34,35. In other words he honors those who honor him (1 Sam. 2:27-30: Psa. 91:14,15). The great controversy in the evil world is between God and man (Gen. 3:22-24; Jer. 25:31). Dear Brother Huggins please bear with my scribbling once more (1 Thess. 1:2-4).

R. A. Humphreys and Family.

Dear Brethren:

I have been requested to give my address through the paper, as some of the brethren do not know where I am.

I think it is a good idea for all who write to the paper to give their address. Quite often we may pass through a town where some of the brethren live, and we could stop off and have a good visit. We who are isolated would enjoy seeing any who might stop and make us a visit. I am the only one here who believes in the gospel of the kingdom of God. There is a Catholic church here, an Episcopal church and a Congregational. The latter is a union church. One lady invited me to work with them. I told her I could not work with them, and explained why. I have not heard from her since. I was also invited to a card party given for benefit of Catholic church. I told the lady I did not believe in such things, and have not heard from them since. They all seem to be too ignorant to understand. They are not walking in the spirit is the reason they are blinded.

I am at Maniton Springs, Colo. If any of the brethren passing through here will notify me, I will be glad to meet them at Colorado Springs, which is six miles from here, by street car. Yours looking for the King.

Hanna M. Barber.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I want to tell you I have had the pleasure of meeting Brother and Sister Hogarth, not only in my own home, but I also visited them in their apartments. How encouraging to meet those who are indeed and in truth looking and waiting for the Master and rejoice in soon seeing the king in his beauty! This is a momentous event—the coming of the King in the clouds of heaven to gather his saints together, those that have a covenant with him by sacrifice. We have grown weary of the strife and turmoil of this life, and we cry, "Come, Lord; bring immortality." Dear brothers and sisters, it is too late in the day to make shipwreck of our faith, and the only safe way is to abide in Christ. All heaven is pledged to defend us in this fight, and nothing can separate us from the love of Christ, who gave himself a ransom for us. But there is a glad surprise soon coming to the weary watcher. "The Lord is at hand," says Paul. "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh," responds James; and the writer to the Hebrews exclaims, "Yet a little while and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." And the banished prophet on the lone isle of Patmos read in brightest visions the story of coming ages; the great panorama flashes before his eyes the grandest scene ever witnessed by mortals. The Apocalypse is a vision of angels to the seven angels that sound out the clarion notes of judgment, while the earth trembles with its echo. And he again exclaims, "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be. I am alpha and omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last. Blessed are they who do his commandments that they may have a right to the tree of life; and may enter in through the gates in to the city. He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so come Lord Jesus." Amen.

I am looking and waiting for the King in his beauty,

Sister Cassie.

Dear Readers:

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptations." Why? The answer is very plain: "For when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him" (James 1:12). "That the trial if your faith being much more precious than the gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor at his appearing."

All things point to his appearing when we will all be tried (1 Pet. 1:7). The Psalmist speaks of being tried as silver is tried: "For thou, O God, hath proved us; thou hast tried us as silver is tried (Psa. 66:10). When in trial or trouble we are almost sure to make vows. Of these he speaks: "I will go into thy house with burnt offerings; I will pay thee my vows, which my lips have uttered, and my mouth hath spoken, when I was in trouble" (Psa. 66:13,14). God knows that we will make vows when we are in trouble, and that it is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting (Eccl. 7:2). We have been allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel. What does it mean to be put in trust of anything? We are to sustain it in every way in our power; support it with our means let our light shine in every way possible. Even so we speak not as pleasing men but God, which trieth our hearts (1 Thess. 2:4). The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation (2 Pet. 2:9). There is no temptation taken you but such is common to man, but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted (or tried) above that ye are able, but will with the temptations also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it (1 Cor. 10:13). Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth. Behold, I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast that no man take thy crown (Rev. 3:10,11). They on the rock are they which, when they hear, receive the word with joy, and have no root, which for a while believe and in time of temptation fall away (Luke 8:13). O brother. O sister, don't let that be you. What a sad fate!

"Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hath the words of eternal life" (John 6:68) O dear ones, there is no other place to go. We may get great wealth, but that will not save nor help in the day of God's great wrath. "But he knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me I shall come forth as gold. My foot has his steps; his way have I kept and not declined. Neither have I gone back from the commandments of his lips; I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food "(Job 23:10-12). "I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich, and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear, and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see. As many as I love I rebuke and chasten, be zealous therefore and repent. Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:18-21).

Hoping to be among the ones who will be ready at the marriage of the Lamb, with the oil of good works, I remain,

Your Sister waiting for his soon coming,

Ollie Bradley.

ANCIENT DESCRIPTION OF JESUS

The document, of which the following is an exact copy, is said to have been found among the ancient manuscripts sent by Publius Lentulus, President of Judea, to the Roman Senate.

"There lives at this time in Judea, a man of singular character, whose name is Jesus Christ. The barbarians esteem him as a prophet, but his followers adore him as the immediate offspring of God. He is endowed with such unparalleled virtues as to be able to call back the dead from their graves and to heal every sort of disease with a word or touch. His person is tall and elegantly shaped, his aspect amiable and reverend.

"His hair falls in those beautiful shades which no united colors can match, dropping in graceful curls below the ears, agreeably touching the shoulders and parting on the crown like the head-dress of a sect called the Nazarites.

"His forehead is smooth and his cheeks without a spot. His nose and mouth are formed with exquisite symmetry. His beard is thick, and suited to the hair of his head, reaching to a little below the chin, where it parts in a fork. His eyes are bright, clear and serene. He rebukes with majesty and counsels with persuasive language: his whole address, whether in word or deed, being grave and strictly characteristic of so exalted a being. No man has ever seen him laugh, but all Judea have frequently beheld him weep.

"When he pleads, his tears are so persuasive that multitudes are unable to restrain theirs from mingling with his. He is very modest, temperate and wise. Whatever this phenomenon may be in the end, he now seems to be a man of strange beauty and divine perfection, in every way surpassing the children of men."—Jewish Evangelist. Selected by Bro. Adams.

A BRIGHT PAGE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Tidbits of Pleasant and Useful Information Gathered from Everywhere

Love is the queen of the graces; it outshines all the others, as the sun the lesser planets.

To love as Christ loves, is to let our love be a practical and not a merely sentimental thing.

"See the spider spinning his web."
"Yes, and see the summer girl hanging out her hammock."

If any man says he has no fitting form of words for prayer, let him observe in what way the little child asks for food when hungry, and then make the earnestness and simplicity of that petition his own when asking his heavenly Father for the bread of life.

The men who have revolutionized society by their heroic deeds in the cause of God have been mighty through the inspiration of prayer. Paul and the noble army of martyrs, became bold to dare and strong to do because they were men of prayer.

Daimonion, Daimonizomai

These words mean "the possession." The daimonion was the person who was supposed to be occupied by the demon, whether that person was a mere image or a human being. Further, the daimoinon was the residence of the departed human "spirit;" for these daimones had the power of taking possession of other human beings, and they could be expelled from these beings so possessed.

When men suffered from disease or mental derangement they were said to be possessed of demons. This phraseology of the Pagans was introduced among the Jews, and was current among them at the time of Christ,, which is evident from the fact that when persons were dumb, or blind, or lunatic, or epileptic they were said to be possesed of demons—that is, wicked demons; and when these persons were restored to their normal state, they were said to be healed, and the insane were "clothed" and in their "right mind." All so afflicted or "oppressed of the devil" were "healed' in the true sense of word (Acts 10:38). If the one possessed received no help and died, the demon was supposed to have killed him, but if he was healed the demon had been expelled and left him.

These possessions, these abodes, these residents for departed spirits were indicated by certain signs—insane fury or excitement in people possessed, or bodily contortions, such as epileptics, etc. Matt. 4:23,24: "He healed them all." No casting out of personal devils here, for he "took our infirmaties and he bare our sicknesses." To the disciples of John Christ tells what he had performed to prove that he is the one they have been looking for, but he says nothing about casting out devils. He simply cured those afflicted with bodily and mental diseases and made them whole.—Sister Frances Russell.

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O, MARCH 20, 1917 NUMBER 11

COMING

He will come perhaps at morning,
When to simply live is sweet;
When the arm is strong, unwearied
By the noonday toil and heat;
When the undimmed eye looks tearless
Up the shining heights of life,
And the eager soul is [illegible]
Yearning for some [illegible] strife.

He will come perhaps at noontide,
When the pulse of life throbs high;
When the fruits of toil are ripening,
And the harvest time is nigh;
Then, through all the full orbed splendor
Of the sun's meridian blaze,
There may shine the [illegible] beauty
Of the Lord's transfigured face.

Or it may be in the evening,
Gray and sombre is the sky,
Clouds around the sunset gather,
Far and dark the shadows lie,
When we long for rest and slumber
And some tender thoughts of home
Fill the heart with [illegible] yearning
For perhaps the Lord will come.

If he only find us ready
In the morning's happy light,
In the strong and fiery noontide,
Or the coming of the night,
If he only finds us waiting,
Listening for his sudden call,
Then his coming when we think not
Is the sweetest hope of all.

TWO EXTREMES REFUTED

No. 7

John is shown by the angel a great white throne, and him that sat on it, "from whose face the earth and heaven fled away; and there was no place for them" (Rev. 20:11). Peter also sees the same vision: "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up" (2 Pet. 3:10). These two quotations are so much alike that we conclude they refer to the same thing and time, and if we can find the time of the fulfillment of one of them it will also show the time of the fulfillment of the other. Peter again states: "But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men" (ver. 7). The day of perdition is the day of destruction. The ungodly will be destroyed at the advent: "To you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengence on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints" (2 Thess. 1:7-10). Then it is at the advent when the heaven and earth pass away and not at the end of the thousand years, as some teach; and in our present lesson John is showing the other things that will occur at the beginning of the millennium and onward as far as his prophecy carries us.

We read: "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hades delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."

At the beginning of this chapter John shows us the destiny of the resurrected righteous; in these verses he speaks more of the destiny of the raised wicked. He not only alludes to the righteous as having their names written in the book of life but shows us that all whose names were not in the book of life were cast into the lake of fire, and explains, "This is the second death." The first stated, "The rest of the dead lived not till the thousand years were ended." This tells us why they were "cast into the lake of fire; which is the second death." Daniel tells us of a time of trouble and says: "And at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book (of life). And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, these to everlasting life, and these to shame and everlasting contempt" (Dan. 12:1,2. Heb. text). John says, "They that have done good, and they that have done evil." Here he puts it, "The first (chief) resurrection, and the rest of the dead "and those whose names were in the book of life" and those not there. It seems to me that all of these passages teach the same thing, that is, the destruction of the wicked when Jesus comes, and that only two classes are to be resurrected.

But Mr. Russell taught that the rest of the dead would begin to live during the thousand years and would be completely alive, restored to endless life at the close of that period, and so they lived not the endless life till that time. Dr. John Thomas taught that the rest of the dead were those that would die during the thousand years, but it seems that the fact "they lived not till the thousand years were ended" would show that they did not live throughout that age. There is no "again" in the Greek, and then why call "dead" those who were to live afterwards? They were not dead; for many of them had never lived at the resurrection of the just. The commonly received theory is that the righteous will be resurrected at Christ's coming, and the rest of the dead at the close of the thousand years. This theory would be plausible if it were not for the fact that the Bible everywhere else teaches that the righteous and wicked are raised at the coming of Christ, that some wicked who have died will see him coming, as per Caiaphas: "Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven" (Matt. 26:64). How could this man see Jesus coming if he had not been resurrected before Jesus comes on earth? And he is one of the rest of the dead, not one of the saints. Russell's theory of the gradual resurrection of the wicked and depraved during the thousand years has not one scripture to support it; and is refuted by the fact that those resurrected at its beginning go into the second death. Then we conclude that the rest of the dead are the remainder of the resurrected dead and will not live longer than it takes the lake of fire to consume them and satisfy God's justice in their punishment, which will be long before the thousand years end, and we can see the beauty and harmony of John's words, "The rest of the dead did not live till the thousand years were ended."

John teaches then that two classes live, but one of them is destroyed, and that kills the theory of a future probation for the dead. But John like Peter and Isaiah sees "a new heaven and a new earth" after the passing away of the first; and our Adventist friends think there will be no probation then, but let us see. He sees the new Jerusalem, the holy city, and explains it to be the bride, the Lamb's wife. We learn that the bride is the church, or saints, and the marriage takes place at the beginning of the reign of Christ, for "the Lord God omnipotent reigneth" at that time (Rev. 19:6-8). We understand that the marriage of the bride takes place at her glorification. Then she is glorified when John sees her in the new heaven and new earth. But listen, "And the nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor unto it."

Here the holy city is seen to be the bride, the glorified church, and that proves that the nations of them that are saved are something else; for they walk in the light of the church. The kings also bring their glory and honor unto it, and they too are not it. Those nations were saved from the great slaughter spoken of in chapter 19, also the lake of fire into which the wicked dead were cast. But let us continue: "And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal proceeding out of the throne of God." Why water of life flowing from the throne if it is of no benefit to any one? "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side or the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." Then the nations need healing after the church is glorified, and that is another positive proof that mortals will be in the kingdom of God.

The tree and water of life are the means provided by which they can be healed if they will. Perhaps what is meant by the tree and water is explained by the everlasting gospel. But our friends who are so afraid of any probation in the age to come contend that mortality must have ceased before this time; for we read: "And there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: nor cryformer things have passed away." With the glorified church death, pain, sorrow and tears have ceased; but the fact that the saved nations need healing proves that it is not so of them; and if I am to believe one passage of this wonderful prophecy, I must believe them all; and the conclusion is that after the nations have been healed they will not die, and those who choose not to be healed will go down in the fire that falls from heaven during the little season when the dragon is running at large; and that will close the ages of mortality. Adventists have made many efforts to show that the leaves of the tree were for the service of the nations, instead of their healing; but of what service could they be if they have no healing power? The Greek word is therapeia, and is found in Luke 9:11 in the statement that Jesus healed them that had need of healing, not them that had need of service; and that of itself refutes the Adventist assertion. Ezekiel says of this same tree, "And the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof for medicine" (ch. 47:12). And that should settle the question for ever with those who believe the word of God.

In conclusion, let me say, that I have not explained many of the symbols that occur in passages quoted, but have tried to find out the true meaning of the parts that were directly to the point on the question at stake; how well I have done it is for the reader to decide. I have written with malice to none, and charity for all. Our motto has been, Speak as the Bible speaks. It seems to me if we act on this motto both extremes must fall; for the Bible never says probation shall cease with the second coming of Jesus; nor does it say that any of the dead will be placed on probation after their resurrection; and they who have made these assertions know this fact. Then let us come to what it does say, believe and promulgate the same, and keep away from extremes.

Balloons when they want to go higher, throw out some sand ballast. Why so many people are earthly minded and have so little of the spirit of heaven, is that they have too much ballast in the shape of love for earthly joys and gains; and what you want is to throw out some of the sand, and you will rise higher.

"SIN UNTO DEATH"

"If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it. All unrighteousness is sin: and there is a sin unto death."

It seems high time that we were trying to find out what this sin is. Notice, it does not say "the sin," but "a sin unto death." For there is a time coming, and it seems to be near at hand, when it will be said, "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still. And behold, I come quickly: and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." If our works are the works of iniquity, it will be no use to knock at the closed door. "Many will say in that day, Lord, Lord, open to us," who will hear the sentence, "Depart ye workers of iniquity." Therefore let us find what these death-dooming sins are before it is too late.

1 Cor.6:8 9,10 gives a list of sins, which debars one from the kingdom of God: "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolators, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." Paul repeats the warning to the Galations. Gal. 5:19,20,21: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." This is a long list, but we should not pass it by carelessly, as we would run over the letters of the alphabet, scarcely giving them a thought, yet thinking all the while of the glories of the coming kingdom. But dear ones in hope, read it again knowing it is the sacred word of God, which will stand when the heavens be no more: "They which do such things, shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

If we see a man swallowed up in any one of these sins so that he will not heed admonitions, shall we pray for him? This is too serious a question for man to answer. Let us go again to the word, which we are told will judge us in the last day: "Be not deceived: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption." Paul also warned the Ephesians, Eph. 5:5,6: "For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of God." "Let no man decieve you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience." Now to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 6:15 to 20, he said: "Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ,? Shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid. What! know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? two, saith he, shall be one flesh. But he that is joined to the Lord is one spirit. Flee fornicaion. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body: but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body. What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?' In 1 Cor.3:16,17, Paul makes clear the penalty for the defiling of that temple: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the spirit (Holy Spirit 1 Cor. 6:19) of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy: for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."

Brethren, if these admonitions fail to arouse us to a cleansing fear of the Lord, listen to Jude who shows the results of disobedience by example, saying: "Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities." Is the world today far behind Sodom in abominable sins? Brethren, if the church is to be found without spot or wrinkle, it is time for those who are watching to be up and doing. It need not all be left to the preachers; every faithful Christian, who has not allowed his lamp to become smirched, has an influence over some one. "You who are spiritual restore such a one." There is a class who do not like to retain God in their thoughts: nevertheless the church as a body must be ready to meet the bridegroom. If the cleansing cannot be done by exhorting or admonishing, it must be done by separation, according to Paul's admonition in 1 Cor. 5: "I wrote unto you an epistle not to company with fornicators. But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother, be a fornicator, or coveteous, or an idolator, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner: with such an one do not eat. Them that are without God judgeth. Therefore put away from among yourselves that wicked person. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? Purge out therefore (not pray out) the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us." Pater tells us in 1 Peter 4: "For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in laciviousness, lust, excess of wine, revelings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries: wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you: who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead." "Wherefore seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beste us, and run with patience the race that is set before us." "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh for if they escape not, who refuse him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven." Dear ones in hope, let us strive to enter in: the inheritance is worth the effort.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD IN GENERAL OUTLINE

By Request this Paper was Read at a Baptist Meeting in Ainsworth, Iowa.

By Mrs. Rena Eadsley

We find that God first established his kingdom with the Jews, or Israel as he afterwards called them.

The foundation of God's kingdom is the promises made to the fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. God promised Abraham all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and made the same promise to Isaac, Abraham's son, and repeated the same promise to Isaac's son Jacob, whom God afterwards named Israel. He had twelve sons, from whom came the twelve tribes of Israel. We understand Abraham was in the land of Canaan when the Lord said: "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." Paul says: "To Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. And this I say, that the covenant which was confirmed before of God in Christ the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul or make the promise of no effect." All nations of the earth are to blessed through Abraham and his seed.

According to Stephen, Abraham has not as yet received possession of the land promised, for he says he gave him none inheritance in it; no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him. Now Paul adds his testimony saying: "These all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they (the Jews) without us (Gentiles) should not be made perfect." "Then Paul stood up and beckoning with his hand, said, Men of Israel, and ye that fear God give audience: The God of this people of Israel chose our fathers and exalted the people when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, and with a high arm he brought them out of it. And about the time of forty years suffered he their manners in the wilderness, and when he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Canaan, he divided their land to them by lot. And after that he gave unto them Judges about the space of four hundred and fifty years, until Samuel the prophet. And it came to pass when Samuel was old, that he made his sons judges over Israel. But they said unto Samuel, Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now make us a king to judge us like all the nations. But the thing displeased Samuel when they said, give us a king to judge us like all the nations. But this displeased Samuel and he prayed unto the Lord. And the Lord said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them. Then God gave them Saul for their king and he reigned forty years. And when God had removed Saul he raised up unto them David to be their king; to whom also he gave testimony and said, I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, who shall fulfill all my will. Of this man's seed hath God, according to his promise, raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus."

David's reign as king was successful and pleased God, but after the first year of Solomon's reign he failed to please God. And we find through the succeeding line of kings that they drifted back to their idolatrous customs until they displeased God so long, that he took their king from them and overthrew the kingdom saying. "The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king." "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge I will reject thee." "Thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end. Thus saith the Lord, Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: and it shall be no more, until he comes whose right it is; and I will give it him." "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulders: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." "And I saw in the night vision, and, behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of Days and they brought him near before him, and there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."

"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem saying, Where is he that was born king of the Jews?" "He shall be called great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

SOME THOUGHTS ON CHANCE

In considering some of the partly reformed theologies of the present day, I sometimes feel like sympathising with conservative folks that still sit warming themselves by the "ingle-side" of old hell-fire, fearing to let anything slip in the varying and insecure footings presented by some recent "Bible students" and so-called investigators, who announce their dogmas with the assertion and insistance of the mediaeval investigator with the same threat of doom attached.

One of the most successful efforts of modern times, is really a revamping of old Calvinism, which perhaps is one of the reasons for its success, and is based on the idea that the Christ had to be cruelly murdered before tse human family could hope to have a chance of salvation, and even then in order to have a fair chance, one must also be cruelly murdered before the human family theory on which said "students" hold the patent and the brand.

Chance? Fair Chance?! There is not such a thing in nature as Chance: everything that is or exists, is the result of cause and effect. The nebular theorist and the evolutionist are "chance" people To them the universe tumbled together somehow, and the animal races are but variant sprouts that happened hap-hazard, and we ourselves also are the results of blind chance. This is "science falsely so-called." We have a very different story from that in the revelation made to us in the Bible. It starts off, "In the beginning God;" and it keeps on the same theme till the end.

"This God is not only the maker of worlds and the juggler of planets round their sun," but the meticious worker in the infinitesimal as well as the infinite. Did you ever notice that Pharoah's magicians could manage to imitate all the plagues of Egypt until it came to insects. That was beyond their skill to handle they could not and would not "palm" a louse. But the infinitesimal creatures are far beyond and below the louse, and Butler's rhyme that is literally true and the microscope has not yet reached the limit of the minute any more than the telescope has reached the limit of the vast; still even the lowest of these creatures are perfect in construction and in adaptation to their surroundings, as well as filling some place in the general constitution of things. No chance about it! The very hairs of your head are numbered says Christ. Not only so, but the microscope reveals that they are arranged systematically, and each one's hair is different in texture as in color, and we are not only unable "to make one white or black" (that is "fast" black), but we cannot make one grow where we would like it to grow, for the system that governs bald heads is as immutable as the "system" of the "planets that circle other suns" no chance.

"Fleas have other fleas to bite 'em

So also in the system that the Creator has inaugurated for the redemption and perfection of the human family: There is no chance therein If there was chance there might be failure and his power does not admit of failure. His system is intelligent selection—"choosing"—among creatures of his own creation with which he is familiar, even to "the inmost thoughts of the heart;" and we are told that certain were "chosen before the foundation of the world."

This system is a process of development like the process of the seasons of the year—a matter of course, like the growth of a tree. When he chose Abraham he knew what manner of man he was, then put him under instruction. He knew all the people of Sodom, but chose Lot and his family. He knew all the lepers in Israel, but chose only Naaman the Syrian. He chose David, and so on all the way down, not because they knew such and such, but because he perceived them capable of receiving and retaining instruction at his hand and who were of proper material to mould and model into righteousness of character. That the aim and object of divine tuition, if I understand my book—not the belief or crediting of certain facts and prophecies concerning Israel, Palestine, the resurrection of the dead, and so forth, all of which were believed and credited by the scribes and pharisees at the time of the first advent of our Lord; but a living and strenuous attempt to walk blameless before the all seeing eye of the righteous God. "Agrippa, believest thou the prophets?" exclaims Paul; "I know that thou believest." But what did his believing amount to in that case? Reader, if you have the idea that certain "beliefs" will save you, give it up. Worship God not "the faith," and prepare yourself with his assistance for his redemption beneath his scrutinizing but kindly gaze.

Now as the extent of the redemption that God has planned for his creatures, we can only surmise that there are certain facts revealed to us. No "unrighteous" are chosen that are wilfully wicked or perverse. We are all "sinners" in one sense because of our ignorance. Another point revealed is that redemption is not a matter of information or even belief on our part, but a matter of action and purity of mind and heart ready "to receive the implanted word." The limits of God's selection he sets himself, or rather, has delegated the Son so to do as his and our mutual representative "because he is the Son of Man.' What we have to do is to see that we walk according to our light. If we have the light and keep it shining, he can bring any and all he wants even to our glimmer, or he can give them a better light some other way. God does not need to wait till people die, then raise them to life again, before he can instruct them. How did the ancients get their light? How Job, or the visitors to the Savior's cradle or the eunuch that Philip visited? The world of the present time is set and working to God's aims and purposes as much as the world of the future ever will, and just as perfectly in its way. This world is no blunder: it is a process.

The best way to have our wants excited is to look into our Bibles and see what we should want, and see what is there provided for us.

When you send up your prayers, be sure to direct them to the care of the Redeemer, and then they will never miscarry.

EDITORIAL

Received from Sister Bulah Watt $5.00 toward Brother Wilson's removal expenses. Total to date, $11.00

As fire goeth out if it be not maintained with wood, so, likewise, love groweth cold which is not mixed with good works.

Brother VanVactor has sent us several short MSS containing the "last thoughts" of our deceased and lamented Brother J. F. Wagoner. One appears in this issue; others are to follow.

No one loves God but he who loves good. To love God, is to love what God is. God is true, pure, just, and he who loves these things out of God, may love them in God.

Brother Adams has sent a valuable MS on the Rich Man and Lazarus. It will appear in two parts in The Restitution. Brother Adams is willing to publish this article in booklet form, and we suggest that since we have no leaflet dealing specifically with this particular Scripture, and such a work is needed, that as many readers as will cooperate in its publication send Brother Adams a postal pledging the amount they will help. Do not neglect this duty.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Editor:

I would like to compliment our beloved and able Brother A. Adams upon his article written to the household of faith of March 6th, 1917. I believe Brother Adams' sentiments are clean and have been wisely chosen, although they require much faith in God, who has promised to send his angels to have charge over us and keep us in all our ways (Psa. 91:11). As sons of his we should have complete faith in whatsoever he has promised. What he has promised he is able to perform (Rom. 4:21).

If we as a church (or the bride of Christ) should ask military exemption in time of war, it would surely separate us from the love of God, as in Rom. 8:37-39. I for one am satisfied to take God at his word and trust him in all things pertaining either to this life or the life to come. He is able to keep that which is committed to his charge (Gen. 28:15). David says in Psa. 20:3, "It is an honor for man to cease from strife." Also in 2 Tim. 5:22, God commands through Paul to lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partakers of other men's (or nations) sins.

We as the household of faith should not do anything that would bring reproach upon God or his ability to protect us and keep us through any crisis that may arise. And should we be commanded by the government to take up arms against our brother, we can simply refuse and say, like Peter of old, in Acts 5:29, "We ought to obey God rather than man." Whatever consequence migh arise from such refusal, God would take care of them. So let us keep ourselves unspotted from the world that we may be able to say as Paul has said in 2 Tim. 4:7: "I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

Let us all take heed how we think and act, lest our deeds be weighed in the scales of justice, and we are found lacking. May God speed the day when justice will reign universal under Christ our King, is the prayer of one who loves the whole truth.

ITEMS OF INTEREST TO THOSE LOOKING FOR CHRIST

Some of Brothers J. F. Wagoner's Last Thoughts

Earth filled with violence.

Crime rapidly increasing.

Men's hearts failing for fear.

Perplexity—what does it mean?

Why are not people shocked at it?

Because it came on so gradual!

Look at reports in the daily papers: "Five Hundred Bad Women Mob a Church;" Great Robberies in Open Daylight."

All these things growing worse. The fearful crimes of Sodom and Gomorrah repeated daily. Jesus says, "When ye see all these things then know it is nigh at hand."

He (Jesus) is at the door. What next?

CURRENT EVENTS

The first two able articles in The Restitution of Feb. 20, 1917, are well calculated to stir up investigation of current events. And to arrive at a knowledge of the significance of said events, I know of no better way than to follow the opening of the seven seals up to the present time. The seven churches give the events of their history, the seals reveal in symbol briefly, touching only on important world events.

First Seal. White horse. The happy period of the Roman Empire from the accession of Nerva, A. D. 98, to that of Commodus, 180 A. D.

Second Seal. When they killed each other by assassination, ending with the great sword of the northern invaders that gave the Empire a deadly wound, ending in A. D. 476, by Odoacer becoming king of Italy. The events of the second seal end with the rise of the papacy as a world power.

Third Seal. A black horse, symbolizing the papacy during the time from its rise to and during the dark ages. The black horse an apt symbol of that dark system, and its "dark ages."

Fourth Seal. A pale horse, symbolic of the time of the Crusaders when death rode the pale horse, and Europe was bled pale of men and money. This fourth seal ends with the opening of the fifth seal at the time of the Protestant Reformation in Europe in the fore part of the 16th century.

Fifth Seal. When the veil of ignorance was lifted by the reformers, the dead souls (bodies) of the martyrs killed by papal and pagan persecution, was seen to be the saints of God. And their blood like that of Abel "cried" with a loud voice. "How long, O Lord, how long dost thou not avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?"

Sixth Seal. Opening, the first event the great war now going on in Europe, symbolized by a great eartsquake. The war is called "a great war," answering to the symbol. Belguim's sun is black as sackcloth, its moon as blood, and its star has fallen to the earth. The same is true of Servia, Montenegro and Roumania. There is a cloud over England's sun: the same is true of France and Russia. Germany the instrument of their scouring, is suffering fearfully; her dream of universal empire is fading. Four and no more is the lesson of the image and of the four beasts (Dan. 2 and 7 chapters). This great war will come to an end for a time, and will be renewed again after a few years of rest. In the next strife England and Russia will be opposed to each other. See Ezekiel 38 and 39 chapters. In Rev. 7 additional to the sixth seal, four angels hold the winds while the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads. This is sure according to God's covenant with the sealed ones. Already the messengers are in motion preparing for the holding of the winds after the great war ceases. Then they will by force internationally prevent, as they think, any more war. Then we shall hear the peace and safety cry. And our good president stands at the head of the peace movement. And here I will say that our leaders in the peace movement, that ends in the peace and safety cry, will constitute this our beloved country a false prophet (Rev. 19:20).

NO DUAL INDIVIDUALITY

This Doctrine Leads into a Wilderness of Error

Dear Restitution:

The discussion on the fate of Pastor Russell has awakened some thoughts in my mind on the importance to the church of God of a right Scriptural understanding of man's nature. I rather like the tone of Mrs. Wheeler's reply to the Editorial remarks on the subject. I am convinced she is sincere and believes that she is right and, as she invites criticisms, I propose to offer a few thoughts on this subject.

It will be admitted that Pastor Russell was one of Adam's race as he himself taught and was a mortal creature subject to decay and death. This was the physical body known as Pastor Russell; in fact, it was the only Pastor Russell in existence. Mrs. Wheeler seems to suggest that by following certain Bible directions another Pastor Russell was developed. This second Pastor she calls his ego or individuality. Thus we have two individuals: the one, the physical body descended from Adam, which is now located in the grave with the evidence for this very strong; the other, that which she calls the ego, with no better evidence for its existence that the vain speculations of pagan philosophy. Right here much error and false teaching comes in. Man at no time in his history has had two individualities; in other words, one man has never been two. Pastor Russell was one man and he is now sleeping in the grave. There is no second Pastor Russell who is now floating around in the air. Yet this is the key-stone of Mrs. Wheeler's reasoning. Take this dual personality away and her whole case fails as an arch without a key.

I am not writing with the hope of convincing Russellites of the folly of their position, but rather to warn the brethren of the church of God against this foundation error. It is a very insidious form of error to teach that when a man is begotten of the truth he then becomes a dual personality, and can be sleeping in the grave and with Christ in the air at one and the same time.

To illustrate: suppose a man very sick of a fever calls in a good physician and by the use of proper remedies is restored to health. At no time in the process of his recovery is he two individuals, a sick one and a healthy one. No, his health is restored but his individuality has not been affected.

So when a sinner suffering from the feverish delirium of sin, applies to the Great Physician he is begotten by the gospel and gradually puts off the old man with his deeds and puts on the new man, which is created anew in Christ Jesus unto good works. This plainly applies to a change of his character and not to a change of nature. He is still subject to decay and death even though he has been transformed by the renewing of his mind through the gospel.

It is commonly taught that when a man is converted he immediately gets eternal life, and there are Scriptures that at first glance seem to teach this. A more careful study of the subject will show it is in the age to come that eternal life is given. Now we have it in promise and representatively in the person of Christ the head of the body. At present we are mortal, and at no time now or in the future will we be more than one individual. Any attempt to teach dual individuality is a departure from the simplicity of the gospel and leads into a wilderness of error.

In conclusion, should this letter be seen by Mrs. Wheeler I hope that she will understand that it is written with kind intentions and with the prayer that our kind heavenly Father may open her eyes to see the truth.

John Parker.

THE HOPE OF ETERNAL LIFE AND OUR DUTIES

2 Peter 1:1: "Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and of our Savior Jesus Christ. According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue, whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."

By the foregoing we are informed that "we may be partakers of the divine nature." God's nature is unchangeable: 2 Tim. 6:16: "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honor and power everlasting. Amen."

We find by the Scripture quoted that "God, only hath immortality;" the divine nature, endless life; unchangeable existence. We all know that mankind have a horror of death. "The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything." In one of the verses quoted we are informed that "we may be partakers of the divine nature:" This of course is on condition that we "have obtained like precious faith." This faith is obtained by hearing and obeying the gospel, "which is the power of God unto salvation," through Jesus Christ our Lord. Then we must "remain steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

In the first chapter of Second Peter, commencing at the fifth verse, he points out what is required of believers, in order that they may prove faithful, and obtain eternal life in the age to come. "And besides this giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins."

By the last verse, we see that we are supposed to be "purged from our old sins." This is an important question to decide. If we are purged then we are to practice the Christian graces enumerated in the previous verses quoted. Peter here takes it for granted that he is one of those who have been purged by the blood of Jesus Christ from their former sins, and are walking in newness of life; verse 10: "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fail: for so an entrance shall be administered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." This is what we all require; the greatest blessing that can be bestowed on fallen mankind. All who have heard the gospel and have believed it are in duty bound to be ever faithful, to hold fast firm unto the end, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh. Jesus will soon come; then all will be decided one way or the other. Paul says in 1 Cor. 15:51: "Behold, I shew you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trump shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." May we all double our diligence, and make our calling and election sure.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS FOR "THE RESTITUTION"

By Auntie Wince

Can we get them? Of course we can! God gave us the linotype because we worked faithfully for it, trusting in him. He will do the same thing for us in the new campaign.

If we go to work at once, every one of us, we can soon secure hundreds of names and that will mean—what? "A 16 page paper instead of 12 pages." And O so much more than this: it will mean souls converted to the truth, an enlarged church, an ever widening, increasing influence. I have secured one subscriber, and will try for more. Who will help me? Will you Edwin? Ethel? May? Minnie? Lusette? Pearl? Ettie? See what you can do, first asking for the blessing and guidance of God, sure that he will bless you and crown your efforts with victory, as he always does work that is persistently held fast, to for his sake.

A hint is enough. Do not forget that the eye of God is on us, and that we must "redeem the time, knowing that the days are evil."

PROSPERITY AND THE CHURCHES

In commenting on the fact that church membership growth in the United States is slower than before the war, Rev. Sharles Stelzle says:

"Another reason is the terrific strain—industrially and commercially—to which our people have been subjected because of unprecedent prosperity. Men haven't had time to think about the church and religious obligations."

Oh, yes, that's the way with a lot of us! When profit is twenty-five to ninety per cent, whether in skinning our neighbors on potatoes or in slaughtering our fellows with war munitions, we surely overlook the Lord. Our thinking time is all taken by the next day's possibilities of skinning, and it's often real hardship even to think thanks for our unprecedented prosperity; religious obligations don't get into day book, journal or ledger.

But, you just wait until it's the other way, Mr. Stelzle—until unprecedented adversity strikes us. Then we go to church, then we go to begging of the Lord, and asking him to make our little insignificant personal affairs his chief concern, and expecting miracles to help us out. During the great San Francisco earthquake and fire, there were thousands of people down on their knees who never before knew they had knees, and it is so in all great calamities. A whole lot of people do most of their thinking about church and the Lord when they want something badly, being otherwise engaged when prosperons.

However the strength of a church doesn't depend upon the size of its membership, but upon what its members get out of and put into it. Where even but two or three are genuinely gathered together in his name, there is he also with them. The genuine church member is one who worships the Lord even when reaping prosperity or paying his taxes.—The Press.

THE MYSTERY

Romans 16:25,26

Though made known by the specific statement, "In thee and in thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed," the Jews, Abraham's seed through Isaac and Jacob, God's chosen inheritance, Jacob's royal people, a holy nation, a kingdom of priests in prospect, could not understand how Jehovah would accomplish this; hence to them it was a mystery. Jesus gave to the apostles the commission, "Go ye into all the nations and preach the gospel to every creature.' When by their ministry, the Gentiles became obedient to the faith, then the mystery became manifest. The middle wall of partition was broken down and Jew and Gentile share alike the great salvation.

A SUNDAY MORNING EXHORTATION

1 John 3:1

"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God, therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not."

Beloved, what a privilege to be called the sons of God! How do we attain that high calling? In John 1:11,12 we read that "he came unto his own, and his own received him not; but as many as received him, to them gave he power (or right or privilege) to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." So we see in order to become sons and daughters of God, we must understand and believe the grand truths which he has caused to be written in his holy word. Paul in Gal. 3:26,27 says: "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." In the 8th chapter of Romans Paul says: "For as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear, but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba Father—the spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God. And if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." We cannot be sons and daughters of God without suffering, for Paul says, "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and hast been assured of knowing of whom thou hast learned them; and that from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus."

John 3:16: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Beloved, what more could he do than he has done for our salvation? He has offered his great plan of salvation to us in his holy word, through Moses and the prophets, and through Jesus and his apostles; and all he asks of us is to believe it, and obey his commandments, which are not grievous. Think of the reward he has offered us—eternal life in his glorious kingdom! Beloved, let us ever strive to walk worthy of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, that we may be able to say as Paul did: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." May that day soon come, is my earnest prayer.

Whosoever and Whatsoever

Whosoever and whatsoever are two precious words often found upon the lips of Christ. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely," "Whatsoever ye ask in my name, that will I do." "Whosoever" is on the outside of the gate to let in all who choose. "Whatsoever" in on the inside, and gives those who enter the free range of all the region and treasury of grace. "Whosoever" makes salvation free; "whatsoever" makes it full.

Mother Shipton's Prophecies

Four hundred and thirty years ago, several years before the discovery of America, there was published in England a verse of prophecies. So strange and utterly impossible did these prophecies seem that their author Mother Shipton, was looked upon as a witch and believed by all to be crazy. The prophecies attracted a great deal of attention from their very extravagance.

Yet, ridiculous as the prophecies seemed to the people of those days, every discovery and invention mentioned therein has come to pass, with the single exception of the last, relating to the end of the world. Following are Mother Shipton's prophecies:

Carriages without horses shall go,
  And accidents fill the world with woe.
Around the world thoughts shall fly,
  In the twinkling of an eye.
Waters shall yet more wonders see.
  And gold be found at root of tree.
Through the hills man shall ride,
  And no horse or ass be at his side.
Under water men shall walk,
  Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk.
In the air men shall be seen,
  In white, in black, in green.
Iron in the waters shall float,
  As easy as a wooden boat.
Gold shall be found midstone,
  In a land that's now unknown.
Fire and water shall wonders do,
  England shall at last admit a Jew.
And this world to an end shall come,
  In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

The Blessing of St. Blase

A Catholic Remedy for Sore Throat

Next Saturday will be the feast of St. Blase, bishop and martyr. The Catholic churches as usual will be crowded in the morning and in the evening of that day by those who seek the blessing, that through it they may be preserved from diseases of the throat. Our people have confidence in its efficacy, because of the recommendation of the church and from the knowledge gained by observing its potential protection. Not a few non-Catholics avail themselves of the blessing, mingling with the Catholics as they approach the railing.—The Catholic Universe, Jan. 26. 1917.

Cleaning up Physically and Morally Profitable Business

A Seattle man—E. H. Hale—visiting Washington says that prohibition and other reforms have killed the boom at Seattle and made it a dead town and he advises people to stay away from the place He condemns social reforms as "a farce and detriment to the city." He is all wrong, however. Seattle, or any other town, had better be "dead" in this sense than to be dancing the dance of death which goes with dissipation and immorality. Paris is likewise now "dead" in this sense, but everybody says that the great French city has been wonderfully improved by the sobering effects of the war. If Seattle's prosperity depends on the drink business and vice, then she had better let it go and settle down to a quiet and steady going existence. She will gain immensely in the end by this reformation, and so will any community. When Russia, at the beginning of the war, prohibited the drink traffic throughout the land, complaints were made that this hurt business; but the prohibition policy has been in effect long enough now to prove that this was wholly false. Instead of hurting business it has vastly bettered it, for the people have money to spend on legitimate objects, their brains are clear for intelligent action, they are alert and active, and an entirely new era has dawned for Russia in consequence. The Russians as a people were crazed and stupefied with drink before the war, and they were believed by the world to be spiritless and incapable. The war has shown that that size-up was way off, and that the trouble was not with the Russians but with their habits. The discipline of the war has forced them to clean up, physically and morally, and all observers agree that there was never before such wonderful transformation of any people in such a short time. No community and no nation can really thrive so long as it keeps pouring its savings down a rat-hole. The devil prompts wicked people to assert that vice helps business, but common sense and practical experience belie this satanic argument.

Believe in Your Work

Believe in what you undertake. Whether your work is that of a teacher of men or a hod-carrier, a follower of the professions or a blacksmith, have faith in your calling and show the world you are in earnest. The world never did have any use for half-hearted workmanship, and in this age of universal competition this is truer than ever before. The men and women who secure the prizes are those who throw all the energies of their being into the work before them. To do this, there must be faith in self and faith in the labor to be performed.

"Only so far as man believes strongly, mightily," said Frederick Robertson, "can he act cheerfully, or do anything that is worth the doing."

If we do not believe in ourselves or our work, how can we hope to gain the belief of others? The world wants sincerity above all else, and to be sincere men must know they are right. He who half-doubts is pretty sure to leave something lacking in his work. Give men thorough work, work they know to be genuine, and they will accept it. To depend on inaccurate, shoddy workmanship, is to depend on a fiction that will soon be discovered. Believe, first, in yourself; second, in your labor. You will not only find this a means of strength, but will discover, finally, that it is a pretty certain way of gaining the good faith and support of others.—S. Roxana Wince.

Retranslating The Bible

We have for years felt a peculiar sensation creeping over us when we heard others say, "The passage as critically rendered reads so and so." And this is sometimes said by men or do not know a single word or root of Hebrew or Greek, and who are inefficient enough in the plain King's English to reach high-water mark, to say nothing of the other languages. If we do not know how to parse sentences, decline nouns or conjugate verbs in English, what impression could we make on others meddling with a language, the intricacies of which are most past finding out by the best of linguists?

It puts us in mind of the student who rendered Christ's words in Matt. 26:41 as follows, "The ghost is wilful but the carcase is not very strong." And another case comes to us. Three Frenchmen were in school and were translating the first lines of Hamlet (in Shakespeare), "To be or not to be." The first one translated it, "To was or not to am." The second one rendered it, "To were, or is to not." The third brought this version, "To should, or not to will."

Our advice—if we give it—is this: young and old preachers alike, beware of fads that are reared on supposed "mistranslations" of the King James' or Revised Versions. Leave them seriously alone! Don't follow every one who has a new notion introduced by a "correct translation" of the holy Bible. All these are fakes without exception. Stick by the Book!

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost: Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

GOD'S GARDEN

Beyond at a little distance,
  Just near enough to see,
I am nearing a beautiful garden,
  In the shade of a wonderful tree.

I travel on in my blindness,
  Wondering what it can be;
Then I see off in the distance
  A little sign which says, "Free."

I look around in amazement,
  I hesitate, then I go on.
Ah, it is the garden of glory
  That lies just a little beyond.

The Father is leading me to it,
  And he is the wonderful tree;
He has taught me to know of his kindness
  That is offered to you and to me.

Now I take on his name in baptism,
  And he says now that if I am true
I may enter into this garden
  And live as the others do.

The flowers that bloom in this garden
  Are fragrant and very rare;
They are flowers for eternal glory
  That the Father has promised to share

This garden is filled with beauty,
  'Tis the beauty of God's chosen race;
And those who walk within it
  Could seek for no better place.

I am now living on in this garden,
  Waiting for Christ to come,
And gather up his jewels,
  And take them to their home.

The home which will be in Zion,
  Where there'll be no more curse nor dirth;
And we will live in immortal splendour
  With Christ the great King on the earth.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS

An Exposition of Luke 16:19-31 by Almus Adams, Evangelist for the Church of God in the State of Nebraska

This is the Gibralter text with the orthodox people to prove the conscious existence of man between death and the resurrection. Before giving an exegesis of the text we wish to examine critically their position and see if we can find any flaws. I am sure we will be able to show that the generally received views of this favored text will not stand the test of the searchlight of truth.

The Story is Not a Literal Narrative

First, then, they tell us it is to be taken as a literal narrative. That they cannot read four verses before being compelled to abandon that position, will be easy to prove. Let us start in now and stick close to the text and see how far we get with the literal idea: "There was a certain rich man." Now Jesus had his mind on "a certain" rich man, did he? Yes. Well, this rich man died. Was this the same rich man? Certainly. "And was buried." Was this the same rich man that was buried? Surely. "And in hell he lifted up his eyes." Was this the same rich man that lived, died and was buried that lifted up his eyes in hell? Well, no; it was his spirit. You must be careful now, for you are drifting from the main issue. The word "spirit" is not in the entire narrative. By what law of grammar can you prove it was any other that lifted up his eyes than the one who died? The rich man died and was buried, and in hell he—the very same one. There is no escape from this conclusion.

How about the beggar? Was there a literal beggar? Yes, of course. He died also? Yes, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. Was the same one that died the one that was carried? Well, no; it was his spirit! But Jesus said it was the same one. "The beggar died and was carried." How can we get away from the fact that the same one that died was carried? You will notice the rich man still had his eyes and tongue, and the beggar still had his fingers, at least he had one left. I want you, my friends, to imagine an immaterial ghost dipping the tip of an immaterial finger in water, and putting it literally on an immaterial tongue. This is too great a stretch of the imagination, is it not?

Many Reasons Forbid Its Literal Interpretation

There are several other reasons why we cannot receive the general views of this text:

First.—It necessitates a consciousness of man between death and resurrection. The Bible says: "For in death there is no rememberance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" (Psa. 6:5). "Wilt thou show wonders to the dead? shall the dead arise and praise thee? shall thy lovingkindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness in destruction? shall thy wonders be known in the dark, and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?" (Psa. 88:10-12). Here we find the dead in the land of forgetfulness. But the rich man and Lazarus seemed to remember, also Abraham. Here we find the Scriptures contradicting themselves, or else the text is interpreted wrong, which we will now prove is the case: "While I live I will praise the Lord (when he was dead he could not): I will sing praises unto my God while I have my being (the time would come when he would cease to be). Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth. in that very day his thoughts perish" (Psa 146:2-4). But the thoughts of the rich man and the beggar had not perished if we are to receive the views of the people in general. "This is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all, Yea, also the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live, and after that, they go to the dead." But according to the views we are reviewing they never ceased to live, and instead of going "to the dead" they go to where they are very much alive. "For to him that is joined to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion." How could this be if they go to a place of happiness? "For the living know that they shall die (but most people don't even know that much), but the dead know not anything" How about the rich man and beggar? Did they know anything? "Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now perished" (Eccl. 9: 3,6). Even if people were conscious after death, what good would they be without love? "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might: for there is no work, nor device, nor wisdom, nor knowledge in the grave, whither thou goest." Now if after death they cannot work, have no device, no knowledge, no wisdom, they must be about unconscious. If not entirely unconscious they might as well be (Eccl. 9:10). "Doubtless thou art our father, though Abraham be ignorant of us" (Isa. 63:16). Is it not strange if Abraham's thoughts had been intensified by slipping out of this cumberous clay, that he should so soon forget his children?

Second It would necessitate two judgments. It is plain that the Bibde teaches but one judgment. "God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained" (Acts 17:30). "He hath appointed a day"- not days. All believe in a final judgment day But if people are sent at death to heaven or hell, they must have been judged already. Then why the judgment in the future? To see if some were by some accident or oversight in the evidence, put in the wrong place? It might give these poor souls a chance to cool off while being judged. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after that the judgment" (Heb. 9:27). "After that the judgment," not judgments.

Third. It would necessitate a conscious state of misery between death and the resurrection. The word "hell" occurs in the Old Testament sixty-five times, and is rendered "hell" thirty-one times, "grave" thirty-one times, and "pit" three times. People having been taught that "hell" means a place where the wicked go and burn for ever, how natural for them to read that idea into the word. But my friends, can you believe in a God, or rather a monster, that would confine human beings to a place of that kind for all eternity, for a few brief years of disobedience? Would you do that with your enemies? Has not God taught you to be kind to your enemies, and to be forgiving? Did God teach us one thing and practice another himself? Let us see if we are not reading something into the text that is not there.

The translators, in looking for a corresponding word for sheol and hades, the words rendered "hell," fell upon the old Anglo-Saxon word helan. This word means to cover up or hide In England they call the thatching of roofs heling; the binding of books they call heling, meaning to cover. That is just what they do when they bury people. When you go to the nursery and buy trees they will tell you to heal them in—The same word and meaning the same thing. If asked about your finker that you cut, you say it is "healing," meaning the wound is covering over with skin. We see that a wrong idea has been read into the word.

But what says the Bible about the wicked? God told Adam if he ate of the forbidden tree he should surely die (Gen. 2:17). Did not God do Adam a great injustice by not telling him if he sinned he should burn forever? He just told him he should die, and we challenge the world to show where God ever changed that penalty. When he had subsequently eaten, and God pronounced the penalty he said: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground: for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen.3:19). When has God ever changed that penalty? It had not been changed in the days of Paul, for he said the wages of sin is death (Rom. 6:23). Moses was in perfect harmony with Paul, for he said, "I set before you this day life and death" (Dent. 30:15). The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord (Prov. 20:22). What becomes of this spirit or candle? "How oft is the candle of the wicked put out" (Job 21:17). "Yea, the light of the wicked shall be put out, and the spark of his fire shall not shine. The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and his candle shall be put out with him" (Job 18:5,6). Here the spirit of man is compared to a lighted candle; then the wicked are compared to the blowing out of a candle—not a spark left to shine!

According to the above Scriptures the rich man was not in the kind of a place people have imagined. "For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be: yea, thou shall diligently consider his place, and it shall not be" (Psa. 37:10). Although the rich man was wicked they are telling us he still is, and they know of his whereabouts—got him located! "But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away." Instead of perishing and consuming away, they want us to believe the rich man endures on and on! You see the literal interpretation of the narrative contradicts the Scriptures at every turn. The trouble is people read this Scripture and interpret it to suit themselves, instead of going to the word of God to see if there might not be a solution found there that would make the Bible a harmonious book, instead of a book of contradictions.

The Character of the Rich Man

If Jesus had been intending to teach going to heaven or hell at death, he most certainly would have presented us with the two kinds of characters that go to one place or the other. If not, then the lesson fails and teaches nothing. Those who believe in going to heaven and hell at death fly to this text the first thing as a strong proof of their position. So they must accept the fact then that Jesus gave them the very kind of characters that go there and by this shows them how to avoid the one place and get to the other.

Now let us examine these characters. It says of the one who was rich and wore purple and fine linen and fared sumptuously every day, and a beggar was laid at his gate full of sores, desiring to eat of the crumbs that fell from his table. That is all that is said about both of them. Then if you are rich and wear good clothes and have plenty to eat, you can see and know beforehand where you are going. What do you think of the prospects of the majority? Prosperous times must be one of the devices of the evil one who has worked so hard to send them there.

The Character of Lazarus

What about the other man? Jesus said he was a beggar and full of sores, laid at the gate of the rich man, and the dogs came and licked his sores. Now we can see what we have to become in order to get to heaven. Now Mr. Literal Interpreter, what do you think of your own interpretation?

But, again: it says this rich man died. But surely you flew to this text with all confidence to prove he did not die. Which are we to believe: you or Jesus? But you say his body died. So you introduce another rich man that Jesus knew nothing about and said nothing about. Do you feel safe in adding to his words like that? Jesus said, "The rich man died, and in hell he (who? why, the same rich man) lifted up his eyes." So the rich man still had his eyes, and he saw afar off Abraham and Lazarus. Now if it does not affect their eyesight to get into that awful place, heated as hot as they tell us it is, then the suffering must not be much after all.

Now let your imagination get into good working order and try it again. The rich man wanted Lazarus to dip the tip of his finger in water and cool his tongue. Do you have your imagination worked up to the highest degree of efficiency? Well, then imagine an immaterial finger, and just "the tip" at that dipped in water! We are not told whether this was spiritual water or the genuine article. If a literal "drop of water" was put on an immaterial tongue, do not you think that infinitisimal quantity of water would have lost its cooling properties before Lazarus could possibly have gotten it on the rich man's tongue? Besides, it would have been pretty warm for Lazarus while performing this deed of kindness!

Again: we find heaven and hell within hailing distance, and the occupants on speaking terms. You would look upon a scene like that here with horror, so you will have to become indifferent to suffering and more hard hearted than you are here to enjoy it, will you not? But you have been telling us all the time heaven was above and hell below, and now you have them in the same locality! You will have to do a little revising here.

What about Lazarus? It is said he died also. But again you want us to believe he did not die. But it was the same one that died that was carried to Abraham's bosom. If Jesus gave us this story to teach us what you claim, do you not think Abraham will have his arms full holding all the good people? So the whole story is ludicrous and fit only to be viewed as a mystical tale. Now are you not ready to abandon your ludicrous position and come with us while we search for the real solution?

The Parabolic Nature of the Narrative Established

We start by saying it is a parable. And here we are under obligations to prove it, not merely state it.

Jesus said he came to his own, and his own received him not. How did he speak to his own? Matt. 13:10,11: "And his disciples came and said unto him, why speakest thou unto them in parables, because they seeing see not, and hearing hear not, neither do they understand" (vs 34). He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given" (vs 13). "Theretore speak I unto them in parables? He answered and said unto them, Be- "And all these things spake Jesus unto the multitudes in parables, and without a parable he spake not unto them." So it is settled he spoke unto them only in parables, and therefore this narrative is a parable.

The Rich Man Represents Israel

Then if a parable, what did it represent? We answer the rich man represented the Jew. Let us proceed to prove this. He said he came to his own. Again in Matt. 15:24 he says, "I am not sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." His mission was then to them only just as he tells this woman.

Again this rich man wore purple and fine linen, the garb of royalty. The Jews who listened to Jesus would recognize this man by his garb, just as we would recognize one described as the boys in blue or the boys in grey. See Esther 8:15: "And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in royal apparel of blue and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple." This is the exact garb of the rich man, and proves that Jesus was speaking of the Jews as a royal nation of kings and priests: "Now therefore if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people; for all the earth is mine. And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation" (Ex.19: 5,6). They, like this rich man, had been a rich nation. See Jer. 5:27: "As a cage is full of birds, so is their houses full of deceit, therefore they are become great and waxen rich."

But above all, they were rich above all in God's favor. Ex. 3:21: "And I will give the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians and it shall come to pass that when ye go ye shall not go empty." "For they got not the land in possession by their own sword, neither did their own arm save them: but thy right hand and thine arm and the light of thy countenance, because thou hadst a favor unto them. Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of fire, as thou hast heard and live"? (Deut. 4:33).

Again, God fed them and like the rich man, they were fed sumptuously. "How shall I pardon thee for this? Thy children have forsaken me and sworn by them that are no gods when I had fed them to the full" (Jer. 5:7). "And when they did mete it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating" (Ex. 16:18).

Here is a nation rich in goods, rich in God's favor, who fared sumptuously every day: yet they sinned. "Wherefore a lion out of the forest shall slay them, and a wolf of the evening shall spoil them, a leopard shall watch over their cities; every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces: because their transgressions are many and their backslidings are increased" (Jer. 5:6). "Thou hast forsaken me, saith the Lord; thou hast gone backward: therefore will I stretch out my hand against thee, and destroy thee. I am weary with repenting" (Jer. 15:6). So this rich man and favored nation died. "And I will cast thee out and thy mother that bare thee into another country where ye were not born, and there shall ye die" (Jer. 25:26). "And thou profane and wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end. Thus sait the Lord God: Remove the diadem, take off the crown, this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more, until he comes whose right it is and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:25-27). Here we find that nation died and was buried as a nation, and they have been buried ever since.

How Israel Have Been in "Torment" in Hell

Now let us see if they were to be tormented. Turn to Deut. 32:20-25: "And he said, I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be, for they are a very froward generation, children in whom is no faith. They have moved me to jealousy with that which is not God: they have provoked me to anger with their vanities: and I will move them to jealousy with those that are not a people: and I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation. For a fire is kindled in mine anger, and it shall burn unto the lowest hell and shall consume the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains I will heap mischiefs upon them;I will spend mine arrows upon them. They shall be burnt with hunger and devoured with burning heat and with bitter destruction: I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them with the poison of the serpents of the dust. The sword without and terror within shall destroy both the young man and the virgin; the suckling also with the man of grey hairs." Of course Jesus knew of that Scripture, and knew what God had threatened to do to them for their sin; and they have gone through just that kind of punishment.

In this national grave (rendered "hell") the rich man lifted up his eyes and saw Abraham afar off. Jesus said to them, "If Abraham were your father, ye would do the works of Abraham." He called Abraham "father," and no one at that time had a right to do that but a Jew; and Abraham said "son." Abraham could call no one "son" but a Jew. He said "they have Moses and the prophets;" and no one at that time had Moses and the prophets but the Jews. But here we leave the rich man for a time to see who Lazarus represented. As we have found the rich man represented the Jews as a nation, the poor man represented the Gentiles as a nation.

TWO EXTREMES REFUTED

No. 11

Objections Answered

In beginning this series of articles our intention was not so much to tear down as to build up the truth by the side of error, and show the unscriptural character of error when compared with the truth; but some, while admitting the fact that the Bible does not affirm in so many words that the ignorant dead will have a resurrection and opportunity to gain eternal life, think it is implied therein. To satisfy such we add this number. It is said, "Jesus was the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world" (John 1:9). From this it is affirmed that every heathen, idiot and unenlightened professor of Christianity in its false forms must be enlightened after they have been resurrected. Let us keep in mind that the Bible only mentions two classes as being resurrected, "the just and unjust;" and those who have "done good" and those who have "done evil." "And they were judged every man according to their works." Then if the ignorant heathen and others ignorant of the true interpretation of God's word are to be resurrected, they will be judged according to their works; and if they have done evil they will receive condemnation, be cast into the lake of fire, and go into the second death. All who come forth from death are included in the two classes, "the small' and "the great." The just and unjust are the "all" who come forth from the mnemeos (memorial graves) as mentioned by Jesus (John 5:28). To say that anyone is to be raised for an opportunity to gain salvation in the age to come is to add to God's word because it does not say so. If any who are members of the church of God say this, they are going back on our motto when we assert that some are to be raised to a future probation. Our fathers had this for their motto, "A Bible faith should be stated in Bible language," and I for one will stand by it. Will those who object do the same? If so, we will agree that the notion that some are resurrected for an opportunity to get salvation in the age to come is not biblical.

But what will we do with our text? Let us look at the use of the word "every" in the Bible, and see if it always means the whole of that to which it refers.

(1). "The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it" (Luke 16.16). Did every dead heathen that had lived press into the kingdom in Jesus' day? Did the living Gentiles even hear Jesus' and John's preaching in their day? No, except in a very few cases did they hear Jesus. Then we must conclude that "every man" here was less than the aggregate of the human family.

(2). "And then shall every man have praise of God" (1 Cor. 4:5). Does this text teach that the dead Judas will have praise of God when Jesus comes? Shall I say that every wicked being that has ever lived will have praise of God at the second advent? For what will God praise the wicked? Paul states that it is the person who is circumcised in heart that has praise of God (Rom. 2:29). Then the "every man" of this text must refer only to that class.

(3). "The head of every man is Christ." Is Christ the head of the infidel? The head guides the body, but Christ does not guide the infidel. Nor is he a guide to the dead who lived before his day; but he, by his laws, guides those who submit to his holy will, and that proves them to be the only people to whom he is "head," and makes them the "every man" of whom Paul was speaking.

(4). The gospel "which was preached to every creature" (Col. 1:23). Was it preached to the ignorant dead? If so, it will not be necessary to preach it to them again and if not, then they are not included in the "every creature" mentioned here; and that shows that the word "every' is used in a limited sense. Other texts could be quoted, but we believe this array is sufficient to prove our point.

Now will every person that ever lived be lightened, as the objector puts it? David says, "Man that is in honor, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish" (Psa. 49:20). Peter puts it thus: "But these as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption" (2Pet. 2:13). We quote Paul again in a text that was given at the beginning of this series, "For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law" (Rom. 2:12). Here are three inspired writers declaring that those that are unenlightened are "like the beasts that perish, shall utterly perish and perish without law," or light; shall we believe them? If yes, then we must believe that the unenlightened heathen will never be enlightened, and this is positive proof that the "every man" mentioned by John is not the aggregate of the human family. Some would not come to the light in the days of Jesus: "For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved" (John 3:20). "Men loved darkness rather than light." "I am come as a light into the world, that whosoever believeth in me should not abide in darkness" (John 12:46). How can God enlighten those who refuse the light? He will not enlighten those who love darkness rather than light; because he sends such "a strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness" (2 Thess. 2:10-12). All agree that the truth is the light and it is those who refuse to receive the love of the truth to whom God sends the strong delusion. "But those who believe in me (Jesus) should not abide in darkness." Believers then are those whom Jesus enlightens, and hence the "every man" referred to by John. Then it seems that one must be hard pressed for argument that will use this text of John to overthrow many plain ones that would contradict their conclusions derived therefrom.

But we are told, "The Bible says, 'and they shall all be taught of God' " (John 6:45). Yes, it certainly says as much; and from this shall we conclude that every one who died in ignorance will be resurrected and taught? This is the conclusion of the objector. But to us the conclusion seems to have been reached too hastily, for the remainder of the verse will teach too much for the objector, "Every one therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." Do all who hear and learn of the Father come unto Christ today? Did all in the apostolic age? We know that many were taught, who refused to heed. Then if those who refused to heed get an opportunity, and accept in the next age, they not only have one chance but two, and we must teach the second chance theory. Then we should read this text thus, "Every man therefore that hath taken heed, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." Who are the "all" here mentioned? Is it the aggregate of the human family? Jesus says it is written in the prophets, "They shall all be taught of God." Isaiah is here quoted, and he says: "O thou afflicted, tossed with tempest, and not comforted, behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colors, and lay thy foundation with sapphires. And I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones. And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children" (chap. 54:11-14). "Thy children," that is Israel's children, are not the heathen, and hence this text affords no proof that those ignorant of the gospel will be taught in the age to come. But the context shows that it is restored Israel after the rebels have been purged out from among them. They will take heed to the teaching of Jesus in that day, and "be willing to submit to his rulership, and priestly offerings for them, and all shall know him from the least of them to the greatest" (Psa. 110; Jer. 31:34). It is the remnant of his people Israel who are recovered, and not all of them as some would contend (Isa. 11:11).

THE OUIJA BOARD AND RUSSELLITE SUPERSTITION

Under the caption "One of the Snares of The Fowler," the following communication appeared in "The Watch Tower" of March 15th, 1917. Superstition finds fertile soil in Russellism, and is growing rapidly in the minds of all who are under its delusions. It is amusing and profitable to see how the Ouija Board is denounced in this article as an instrument of the Devil, and yet after being closely questioned by a Russellite, on several subjects of moment, it answered correctly every time! Mrs. Ingerman, like Mrs. Wheeler, a little befogged as to where Pastor Russell is, asked the devil and he answered promptly, "In heaven." So the devil agrees with the Russellites. You would think this would make them think lots of him; but they are waging war on him still. He answered correctly every question Mrs. Ingerman asked him—told the truth every time—and yet she abuses him! The article follows:

"Dear Brethren:

My little girl likes games, and a few days ago she sent to a New York firm for a game which was advertised in a catalogue. Another firm explains this game to be a game of Mystery. I had seen such games before she sent for this one, but really believed that the people working it pulled it around to make it spell things they had in their minds. I had no fear of it at that time.

"But since my little girl got this one and I have seen it work, I am afraid of it, and I will tell you why. One day my neighbors told me it would work itself, without pulling or pushing it in the least, and would work with one person as well as with two. I told them that I rather thought not, as I firmly believed it to be a game of fun. But they assured me it would move itself and spell out the answers to any question asked. I then decided to try it alone to make sure that no one pulled it to make it spell certain things. I did so; I put my hands on as directed, and in a minute or two the small table walked around on the board fairly pulling my fingers. It would answer most all the questions by stopping on the letters to spell the words.

"I asked my age, which it spelled correctly. I asked it for a certain Scripture, and it spelled it out correctly. I asked it what worked that board, and it said, 'Lucifer.' I asked it if it knew Pastor Russell, and it spelled 'Yes.' I asked it where he was, and it said 'In heaven.' I asked it if it liked Pastor Russell, and it spelled 'No.' I asked why, and it spelled, 'Because he taught against me.' I said to myself, with my hands still on the board, "Truly this is the work of the Devil!' and it went up to 'Yes.'

"Now, to make sure, I did not move it in the least; I looked out of the window, and did not look at the board only as it would stop on a letter. Then I became nervous about it and afraid, and said, 'I should not have it in the house if I found out that it was the work of the Devil.' Then it quickly told me to 'Go to H—;' spelling the words very fast.

I may be wrong, but I cannot help but think it is the work of the Devil. But my little girl wants to keep it. I shall not have it in the house should you think there is any unseen power working it. My neighbors tell me it is electricity in the hands that moves it, and to let the child have it. But something tells me different. I am afraid of it, and grow more and more afraid. Does this not go to show that it is not right to have it around? Surely no good can ever come from it! My neighbors laugh at me; but those things are not to be laughed at. I know that it spells those things out in answer to your questions. That is the truth, and there are hundreds of them all over, and some truth people working them, too.

"Can it be possible that the Devil is trying to deceive some of us by that so-called game? Tell us, for the good of all. Enclosed you will find pictures of it, taken from catalogues, marked with pencil.

Yours in the One Faith, Mrs. Wm Ingerman.-Pa.

"(The Watch Tower has several times referred to the Ouija Board and to the Planchette as being devices of the Adversary. The experience above related is another confirmation of our belief.)"

COMMUNICATIONS

I think that the church of God would make a grave mistake to ask for military exemption. When Nebuchadnezzar made his golden image and commanded the people to fall down and worship it, when they heard the sound of music, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego did not ask to be exempt, but flatly refused to do as commanded. As a result, they were cast into the fiery furnace, but they had faith that their God was able to save them out of the king's hands; and so he did (Dan. 3).

Again: in the case of Daniel: when king Darius made a decree that whosoever made a petition to any god or man for thirty days, he should be cast into the lion's den. Daniel did not petition Darius to be exempt from the decree. He petitioned his God and gave thanks to him three times a day—the windows being opened. As a resnlt, he was cast into the lion's den. He had faith that God would deliver him; and so he did (Dan. 6). Now brethren, Pres. Wilson asks us to fall down and worship the war-god: are we going to ask him to exempt us? My answer is, No. Rather, let us petition our own High Priest, even Christ Jesus, and have faith that he is able to deliver us, even from the grave, if necessary. If we should ask for military exemption, I imagine Jesus saying, "Ye of little faith: Did I not tell you through my servant John, 'Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth'? (Rev. 3:10.)"

Brethren is not this assurance enough? But he says more: "For whosoever shall save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it" (Luke 9:24). So all we have to do, is to refuse to fall down and worship the war-god. If they persecute us, "rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer for his name" (Acts 5:41). There are two banners floating: the one of this country, "Stand up for the Stars and Stripes," whether right or wrong; the other, the coming kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, to recompence to no man evil for evil, to love thine enemies, do good to those who despitefully us you and persecute you, and do good in the sight of all men.

Brethren, let us wave the banner of our king Jesus whatever the cost. "I say to you my friends, Be not afraid of those that kill the body, and after that can do no more. I will show you whom you should fear: Fear him who, after having killed, has authority to cast into Gehenna. Yes, I tell you, fear him" (Luke 12:45, Diaglott).

Let us pray that our Lord will come soon to deliver us from this present evil age.

Grover Gordon.

THE CERTAINTY OF CHRIST'S COMING

Some of Brother J. F. Wagoner's Last Thoughts

No fact ever affirmed, human or divine, has been more thoroughly proven than the eternal purpose of God which he purposed in Christ Jesus, his only begotten Son, to bring him back to execute his will. And the magnitude of this eternal purpose is so great that only the mind of the God of all the earth could have conceived it. Let us rejoice that God has so thoroughly proven this grand truth upon which is based the fulfillment of every promise of God to his people. Think, dear reader, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established; but here is a grand truth in which millions are deeply interested and countless ages involved. Is it any wonder, then, that God piled up proof mountain high, repeating it three hundred and eighteen times? Enoch, the seventh from Adam, is the first witness. Then follows Holy Angels, Holy Prophets, Holy Men, Holy Women, Jesus Christ, and Holy Apostles, all telling the same sweet, truthful story. O, tell me, dying men and women, why will you not believe it? Is it not beautiful? O, come quickly, Lord Jesus! Come and fill the earth with joy. Come and reign.

THE LIVING WORD

No. 3

By S. Roxana Wince

Have I told you that whenever a king came to sit upon the throne of his kingdom, he was to write a copy of the law in a book, out of that which was before the priests the Levites? But whether I have or not, does not matter. Repetition of things helps us to remember.

It was the people's copy he was to write his copy from, the priests and elders being representatives of the people. God's copy was not to be disturbed save when needed as a witness. When made, the king was to keep his copy of the living word constantly by him, and was to "read therein all the days of his life that he might learn to fear the Lord his God, to keep all the words of his law and his statutes to do them, that his heart might not be lifted up above his brethren and that he turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand or to the left, to the end that he might prolong his days in his kingdom, he and his children in the midst of Israel" (Deut. 17:18-20). It was not an extensive law-book, but it was all that was required to guide the ship of state. The Law-giver was an infallible one; there could be no appeal of cases to a higher court. Every question was settled, every point covered. All the king had to do was to keep the law himself, and see that it was enforced among his subjects.

> "No doubtful questions of right or wrong,
> Or weary lawyers with endless tongues"

to bother him; no thousand-volumed library to consult—only that one, small, all comprehensive book, that wonderful law that has been incorporated in the law-books of all Anglo-Saxon nations, in so far as the statutes relating to social life are concerned.

But did any of the kings of Israel or Judah make these prescribed copies of the lay for themselves? There is no recorded instance of their doing so. We could not expect it of the northern kingdom of Israel, for their kings, after the division that came about in the days of Rehoboam, were all apostates from the word and the worship of God. We have no evidence save what we gather from their writings that either David or Solomon made these copies for daily use. Yet they must have done so. Not else can we account for their many allusions to the law, the testimonies, the statutes and the commandments of the Lord, nor for their accurate knowledge of Israelitish history.

But we need not look for the precious volume in the library of Rehoboam, for his mother was Naamah an Ammonitess, and his best beloved wife was the idolatrous Maaoha, the grand-daughter of Absalom. Rehoboam bequeathed the crown and kingdom to Maacha's son Abijam, though they were not his by right of birth. And Abijam did rely upon the Lord in the battle with Jeroboam a the mountain of Zemaraim, and was given the victory for that very reason, yet it is said that "he walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David his father."

He had some knowledge of the Lord, and respect for his worship, but whether from the sacred Scriptures transcribed by himself, or from the teaching of the devout Levites who had been driven out of the northern kingdom by Jeroboam, we cannot tell. There is much more reason to think that Abijam's son Asa had the living word in his possession, for he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord. He "took away the altars of the strange gods and the high places, and brake down the images and cut down the groves, and commanded Judah to seek the Lord God of their fathers, and to do the law and the commandments." This language proves conclusively that Asa had the Statute Book of his country, and had studied its pages with considerable diligence, for not even Maacha the queen mother (who was named for, and took the title Princess of Geshur, from her great grandmother, Maacha, daughter of Talmai the son of Ammihud king of Geshur, whom David had named) was suffered to stand in the way of the law "leader," though she was inheriting the beauty and fascinating influence of Absalom. Asa put her out of her place, cut down a very obscure figure that she had made in a grove—the grove resembling the red-light districts of our great cities—"stamped it and burnt it at the brook Kidron." For Azariah the prophet, the son of Obed, had said to Asa and to Judah and Benjamin: "The Lord is with you while ye be with him; and if ye seek him he will be found if you. but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you." Azariah's preference to Israel, as having been for a long time without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without the law, referring to the ten tribes of the nothern kingdom, the period of their seeking the Lord and being found of them, seeming to be in "the latter days" according to Hosea 3:6. And this same Hosea, their last recorded prophet, contemporaneous in part with Joel, Zechariah, Isaiah, Micah and Nahum—prophets of Judah—makes these ten-tribed people say: "Come let us return unto the Lord, for he hath torn and he will heal us; he hath smitten and he will bind us up. After two days (thought to be thousand year days) will he revive us; in the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight. Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord: his going forth is prepared as the morning, and he shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain upon the earth." The ten tribes did not return unto the Lord until long after they had been taken captive by the Assyrians and placed in Hatch and Habor and in the cities of the Medes. Then they made up their minds to emigrate to some distant country and there serve God as they had not served him in their own land. So says Esdras. The influence of the book was with them still.

"AS IT WAS IN THE DAYS OF NOAH"

"And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of Man, they did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the Ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all" (Luke 17:26,27).

If these words were but the mere opinions of men, we might disregard them, but since they are the words of the Son of God, they must, and will be, fulfilled to the very letter. Let us then carefully enquire, how it was in the days of Noe.

"God saw that the wickedness of man was great on the earth, and that every imagination of the thought of his heart was only evil continually" (Gen. 6:5). Yes, God "saw." It does not tell us what man thought, but what God saw. There is no deceiving God. God sees all that takes place under the sun. Just think of God seeing the imagination of the thought of the heart. Could my reader bear to be in the presence of a fellow man, if he knew every thought you ever had in your heart? and what was the wickedness of man then, compared to the wickedness of man now? Has not man murdered the Son of God, and for 1800 years rejected him? and Jesus foretells that this wicked rejection of himself will go on up to the very day that Christ is revealed.

I dare say that man thought the days of Noah were days of wonderful progress. But "the earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence." What is it now? let it speak for itself. The world's newspapers say, we have no sooner recorded one deed of violence, but we are called to report another. But what is it before God? and what will it be very shortly when the true church of God shall be taken to meet Christ? Peace shall then be taken from the earth. And men shall kill one another, in that day of tribulation, tribulation such as never was, and never will be again. It will be as literally true, as it was in the days of Noah, when the earth was filled with violence; yes, far more literally true than men expect.

God revealed his purpose to Noah that he would destroy man from the face of the earth. "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness, which is by faith" (Heb. 11).

And still the world went on; its buildings, its commerce, its pleasures, and its sins—men would not believe God. The ark grew larger every day, a witness of the coming judgment; certainly there was no appearance of the coming flood. Indeed, human reason would have said it was impossible—what? God destroy this beautiful world, only just in its infancy? Many of the wise men of this age would have said, "No, Noah; you are mistaken; it is only your opinion; besides, a great many prophecies have to be fulfilled yet—all the world has to be blessed, and filled with righteousness, so that you must be mistaken, Noah; you had better give over working at that great ship, and give up preaching such peculiar views, as you hold; come and enjoy yourself, man, and don't be such a narrow minded bigot; do you think everybody is wrong but you?" But the flood came and destroyed them all. "And they went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh;" "and the Lord shut him in." Every soul that was not shut in with Noah was shut out. There was then no hope; it was too late. Yes, and it shall be so in the day of the Son of Man. We read in the parable of the Ten Virgins, "They that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut; afterwards came also the other virgins, saying, Lord! Lord! open to us!" But it was too late.

A Jew, as he listened to the discourse of Jesus, in Luke 21, foretelling the certain destruction of Jerusalem, and the scattering of the Jews, among all nations, might have said, "Ah, that must be a mistake; why, this city is to be the centre of the whole earth, and blessing shall flow out through it, to all nations; we scattered among all nations! Nay, all nations shall come up, and worship in Jerusalem." But the day of fierce destruction came; and the city is trampled under foot; and they are scattered among all nations.

In like manner, men may say now, "Be as it was in the days of Noah, the earth filled with violence, and wickedness, when the Son of Man cometh, up to the very day? Oh, that is only your opinion—why, man, the world is to be converted! 'Apostate Christianity destroyed?' Why, Christendom has to extend, until all the world are Christians; aye, every man, woman and child!"

Thus man rejects the word of God, just as blindly and as fatally as in the days of Noah; or when Jesus foretold Judah's awful doom. Yes, in like manner shall they say, "Peace and safety," up to the very day of Christ. It is quite true the world shall be filled with blessing; but this did not hinder the flood, did it? It is quite certain that Jerusalem shall be in the metropolis of the whole earth (Isa. 2). But will this hinder its awful destruction? It is quite certain that the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the face of the earth. But will this hinder the words of Jesus being fulfilled? "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be when the Son of Man cometh." How can the future reign of Christ, in blessing over this earth, which shall take place after he comes, hinder the fearful judgments, which will surely take place, at his coming? No, the world will go on increasing in wickedness, until he comes.

His words will surely come to pass. It will be exactly as it was; the world will be taken with as great surprise as it was in the days of Noah. My reader, are you ready to meet the coming Lord? Do you, like Noah, believe God? or with the world, are you rejecting him? Are you shut in with Christ as Noah was shut in the ark? or are you shut out? God saw, and God sees your every thought, the gospel still sounds; God grant that you may hear, believe, and live. I beg of you to seach the Scriptures, and see if these things be so. Jesus says, "Behold, I come quickly" (Rev. 22).

Remarks

During February we can report some very interesting meetings. In these eventful times it behoves us to meet as often as possible and study to know just what our duties are. We have been preaching some special sermons to the brethren entitled "A Message to the Church." They have aroused quite a bit of enthusiasm and watchfulness. Events are multiplying in rapid succession, so we must shake off any feeling of drowsiness and get fully aroused to the needs of the hour. The heads of the nations are certainly waking up and watching every movement of the nations, and are alive to their own needs. Why not the church be just as much awake to her needs? Paul warned the church against stupor. If we feel it coming on we must shake off the spell. The day of the Lord is near and hasteth greatly (Zeph. 1:14).

MARRIAGE

Ernest R. Drabenstott and Laura E. Ott were married at high noon, March 14th, 1917. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Ott, of Union Township, Huntington county, in the presence of the near relatives and friends. The house was nicely decorated for the occasion. Mrs. Chase Farrar, sister of the bride, played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, while the contracting parties came to the marriage altar. The ring ceremony was used in consummating the nuptial ties. After congratulations, a bountiful two course dinner was served. The happy couple immediately left Huntington for an extended honeymoon in Ohio. They will be at home to their friends with the bride's parents after the first of April.

The groom has been one of Blackford county's successful school teachers for some five years. He is the son of Frederick and Sarah Drabenstott, members of the Roll church of God, where he has been active in church work. He is a Christian gentleman of high ideals and possesses those sterling virtues of manhood that insure success in the newly founded home.

The bride is an accomplished young lady, charming in her modest way. She is a graduate of the Union Centre High School, and possesses those finer qualifications of true womanhood that equip her to preside over the destiny of this household to the honor of her husband, and the good of society. The heartfelt congratulations and good wishes of their many friends go with them for a long and useful life.

A BRIGHT PAGE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Tidbits of Pleasant and Useful Information Gathered from Everywhere

He Went Forth

So reads the record of redeeming grace
  Of him the hero of a suffering race;
There is no romance of the world like this
  Of him who was betrayed by traitor's kiss.

There is no story of the ages told
  Of one so faithful, so defenceless, bold;
Who loving, loved his own unto the end,
  And called this Judas by the name of Friend.

So he went forth, the lowly One;
  So he went forth, the holy One.
Upon his heart was laid the pall
  Of the world's woe and the iniquity of all.

He suffered, yet in silence bore alone,
  The cross of shame that he might thus atone
For sin in his own body on the tree,
  Bound unto death that we might be made free.

"Johnny," said the minister to the bright little fellow of six, "do you know the commandments?"

"Not very well," replied the youngster. "I just know 'em by sight."

Egoism and Egotism

What is the difference between "egoist" and "egotist?" An egoist is one who persists in regarding self as the centre of everything, who adheres to the doctrine that everything is uncertain but the fact of one's own existence. "Egotist" is sometimes used as a synonym of egoist, but strictly it is applied to persons given to self-exultation in thought, speech or writing, who are vain and have an exaggerated notion of their own importance.

Godly Advice For The Young

Young people, be sober. Read your Bible. Go to church and think on things that are good. Avoid foolish and light readings. Read that only which tends to elevate.

When the Bible tells us to live godly in this world, it means the young as well as the older ones. I know a child six years old who often asks her aunt to read from the Bible, and she understands it. Her aunt asks her to tell what she has read, and she tells almost as well as anyone. Sometimes she says to her aunt, "We would not go to to the theatre or lodge, would we, because if Jesus came and found us there, he would not want us in the Holy City, would he?" Watch and be ready, for the Lord is at hand.—Hanna Barber.

Intercession should be definite and detailed. Paul besought the Romans to pray for him, and then told them exactly what he wanted, four different petitions (Rom. 15:30-32). General prayers for "blessing" are apt to become formal.

The A B C's of Life

By Auntie Wince

The little folks who love to hear their mothers read The Restitution have found out that we cannot read without learning those curious things called A B C's. Formed into words they talk to the eyes, and tell us what other people say to us with their pens.

They are wonderful things these A B C's, and Mr. Philippe Spievague, Superintendent of the Brooklyn Christian Mission to the Jews, Brooklyn, New York, has found how he can make them A B C's of life to the little Jewish boys and girls who come to his mission to be taught. He has them learn a Scripture verse for every letter. One of his pupils did this in 1902. The other day Mr. S. met her on a New York trolley. She was grown up, had married and had two children with her. She told him who she was, and that a Mrs. Gesswein of the mission had taught her to sew, "and now," she said, "here is a living demonstration of encouragement for you and dear Mrs. Gesswein. The A B C verses of the Scriptures which we girls were taught in the mission did not only become the A B C of my life, but I am teaching them to my children and hope they will make them the A B C's of their lives. Just ask them for what the letters of the alphabet stand for in their lives and you will hear what they will say."

So Mr. S. asked the girl "what does the letter A mean to your dear little heart?" and she replied, "As the Father hath loved me so have I loved you."

Then he asked the boy, "Do you know what the letter Z in the alphabet stands for in your life?" The boy stood up in his seat and bowing said, "Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness."

The mother then said, "Stand up both of you and tell Mr. S. what J. stands for," and they both said in concert "J stands for Jesus, who said, 'Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.' "

Mr. S then asked "what does the letter Y in the alphabet stand for in your sweet young lives?" and again both replied, 'Ye shall find me when ye search for me with all your hearts.'

Then Mr. S gave the mother a new text, and bade her goodbye.

I thought it was a beautiful way. We have memory texts, and golden texts, but do we really make them the letters that spell the great gospel truths that are to bring us into obedience to God and mould our characters for eternity? Do we study to know what they mean to us? If we do not, we have not learned them; we have heard, but do not, and are like men who build their houses on the sand. We must make them spell great words like Patience, Faith, Virtue, Temperance, Meekness, Godliness, Brotherly Kindness; and watch that we live them every day, praying God to help us to grow in grace and in knowledge, that we may at last find the C's of the alphabet in Conquerors Crowned by Christ.

Mrs. Orpha Anderson Sanford, tells The Restitution for Dec. 19th page 9, how to put the A B C's of the Bible into the glad words that spell the gospel message, and how to make that message a living force in our lives. Will she give the children some alphabet verses to learn?

Even in the distance one can tell to what nobleman a servant belongs by the coat upon his back. Christ says that in the same way shall all men know you, that is, by the mutual love you retain for him and his gospel.

It was not persecution and prisons, but worldliness and wantonness that poisoned the Church: neither was it the earthly glory of its professors, but the blood of its martyrs that was the seed of the Church.

"Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them; while the sun, or the light of the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain."—Solomon.

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

EASTER

Come, list ye to the glad refrain
That floats on zephyr's wings;
Come, list ye to the Prophet's tale,
And hear the angels sing;
On that first glad Easter morn
There shone a light divine;
Christ rose, the first born from the dead,
As King in David's line.

The angel came and rolled the stone
From Joseph's sacred tomb,
The risen Lord appeared to man,
To banish earthly gloom;
He to the women then appeared,
As Savior, Lord and King;
Oh view afar the vision bright,
And hear the angels sing!

"Ye seek the Lord?" The answer came,
"Come view the empty tomb;
He's risen, your triumphant head;"
Soon may his kingdom come.
He rose, the first fruit of our race,
God's Son supremely blest;
He rose the noblest of mankind,
A pattern for the rest.

Go, speed the message o'er the earth,
'Tis balm for human woe;
Go, preach the gospel to our race
With heart of love aglow;
Eye hath not seen nor hath ear heard
The blessings held in store
For those who love and serve the Lord;
'Tis life forever more.

Full soon he'll come with power divine
And call his chosen home;
The sheep all gathered to his fold,
The lambs no longer roam;
The wandering Jew once more shall come
To Caanan's peaceful shore;
No exile then of Abraham's race
Shall wander from his door.

O! come dear Lord! In clouds descend
And make an end of sin;
Thy will be done! Oh day of joy,
Soon may it usher in;
Then haste the day, ye people all,
Give thanks to God and sing
And welcome Christ your risen Lord
As your eternal king!

J. E. Hogarth.

Act happy and you will become so.

"LET HIM THAT READETH UNDERSTAND"

Part 1

Chas. A. Goss

"And he said unto me, unto two thousand and three hundred days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed" (Dan. 8:14).

Some have claimed upon the authority of various ancient manuscripts that the Common Version of this passage as above is not correct, and that the period of time named should read "two thousand and four hundred days."

They have accordingly sought for beginnings and endings upon that basis, and dates which would harmonize with that number. But dates thus arrived at have proven nothing, and can indicate nothing to shed light upon the fulfillment of the words of this prophecy of the duration of the restored and desolated sanctuary and daily sacrifice.

The question of which version is worthy of the most credence may never be settled satisfactorily if we are obliged to come to our conclusions entirely upon such evidence as is obtainable from ancient manuscripts, or from arguments of scholars based upon such data. Yet if we are in "the time of the end" (Dan. 12:9), it is time that we were knowing these things, not simply holding opinions about them.

Attempts to answer questions concerning the dates indicated and the historic events symbolized in the visions of Daniel and of John are often of little real value, for the reason that due regard has not been paid to national and ecclesiastical history, the phenomena of natural science and astronomy.

The Celestial Messenger who spoke to Daniel declared the words must be sealed till "the time of the end," and that then "the wise shall understand;" in other words, Daniel was not writing for his contemporaries, but for the present time; that is, at a time when the events symbolized in the vision had become historical facts and the periods of the prophecy proved them to be the fulfillment.

The confirmation of each great event would be acceptable proof in these last days that God's purpose to re-gather Israel into their own land was not forgotten by him, nor defeated by their enemies. "He, watching over Israel, slumbers not nor sleeps."

Yet, regardless of the evident purpose of the vision as a confirmation and proof for the end of the age, many will yet study the commentators and sages of past centuries to learn what interpretation and views they had of these symbols and periods, and accept the same with almost reverential respect. These were necessarily erroneous from the "sealed" nature of the revelation, and could not possibly be correctly interpreted unless the one so interpreting was divinely inspired to write history in advance. On the contrary, the fact is self-evident that the nearer we get to the end of the time indicated by the Revelator the greater the array of historic facts and data which can be brought forward to confirm the word spoken of old. Thus is the faith of each generation of God's people kept alive, and they, full of hope and faith are "looking for the promise." But enough on that line.

It is not supposed that any of our intelligent readers have an idea that a period of literally 2300 days is meant for the time for the "cleansing of the sanctuary." Such an idea would do violence to the symbolic character of the vision, for a literal time is never assigned to events foretold under symbolic figures, and there would be no need for concealing the length of time if the events were to transpire within so short a time as 2300 literal days---six or seven years. Not one passage can be found in the Bible in which a period exceeding a year is stated in days, and only two in which a period exceeding two months is so mentioned, excepting, of course, those in which symbolic dates occur. The angel said: "Shut up the vision, for it shall be for many days." As six or seven years could hardly be called "many days" in this connection, it is evident that a longer period is intended.

If we interpret this period on the "year day" principle, it reaches from the times of Daniel to the still future restoration of Israel, and answers the question which it purports to answer both clearly and satisfactorily.

The next five centuries of restored Jewish sacrifices and the eighteen centuries following the destruction of the temple and city by the Romans (A. D. 70) are covered by this prophetic period, but in this symbolic form the truth was mercifully veiled to them.

Some study of the origin and rise of the power which should "defile" the sanctuary "and tread down the holy city" will clearly show the exactness of the divine measures of the duration of the prophetic times and seasons.

From H. Gratton Guinness, the English author, I quote: "In the year 553 B. C., the third year of the reign of Belshazzar, which was about fifteen years before his subjugation by Darius, Daniel received his third great symbolic vision, that of the Ram and the He-goat, giving another view and added details of the second and third of the four great empires."

These symbols graphically portrayed the successive rise of the two horns of the Ram, foretelling the history of the two dynasties, which afterward merged into the Medo-Persian monarchy; the He-goat of the West---the Macedonian Empire of Alexander the Great, as well as its four-fold division subsequent to his death. In twelve brief years he subdued all the fairest provinces of Asia, and died at the zenith of his power, leaving his empire to be divided among four kings, his former generals, namely Ptolemy, Seleucus, Lysimachus and Cassander. The prophecy tells that from one of these four kingdoms "a little horn" would arise and wax exceeding great. This "little horn is evidently a fellow of the "little horn" of the previous vision, only it does not arise among the ten kingdoms of the Roman earth, but from one of the four branches of the Grecian Empire. These four were Syrian, founded by Seleucus; the Macedonian, founded by Cassander; the Egyptian, founded by Ptolemy; and that of Thrace, Bithynia and other parts of Asia, by Lysimachus. It was from the kingdom of Ptolemy that the little horn arose---that is Egypt. The direction of the early conquests of this singular power are "toward the South, toward the East, and toward the Pleasant Land." The strongest characteristics are self-exaltation against the Prince of princes, persecutions of the saints, taking away the daily sacrifice and defiling the sanctuary, and casting down the truth to the ground.

While beholding the vision Daniel heard the question asked of the "Wonderful Numberer" who made the revelation: "How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the making desolate, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot?" And it is in the answer to this question that the period we are considering is named. The answer is thus given: "Unto two thousand and three hundred days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

Now, as the question was asked and answered before the close of the captivity, and when the daily sacrifice and the sanctuary were not in existence, it is clear that it referred to a second destruction, and necessarily a prior restoration.

This predicted period of 2300 years begins, therefore, at some point in the time of the restored national existence and ritual worship of the Jews, and includes the entire period of their subsequent dispersion, and the desolation of the sanctuary. Its earliest possible starting point is with the decree of Artexerxes to restore and rebuild Jerusalem; and, reckoned thus, includes in its earlier portion the "seventy weeks" (i. e., 490 years), and in the second portion the whole period of 1810 years which follow, ending in A. D. 1844, a common terminus of many prophetic times. An interesting fact in connection with this whole desolation period of 1810 years is that the gain of the solar year on the lunar year is just 666 months, a divine seal of the cynical character of the periods, timed and measured off by the heavenly bodies which were given "for signs and for seasons and for days and years" (Gen. 1:14).

It is not the ship being in the water which will sink it, but the water getting into the ship—so the Christian is not ruined by living in the world, but the world living in him.

You are all right if you just keep right on doing your duty, whether anyone else does or not.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS

An Exposition of Luke 16:19-31 by Almus Adams, Evangelist for the Church of God in the State of Nebraska

Lazarus Represents the Gentiles

Referring to the past condition of the Gentiles Paul says: "Wherefore remember that ye being in times past Gentiles, in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world" (Eph. 2:11,12). They were without Christ because he is connected with no other commonwealth than that of Israel, and that included all that belonged to Israel as a people. They were without Christ because he is in no other promise; and without God, because he had no other commonwealth and had made no other promise embracing a future inheritance.

The Sores of Lazarus

Now we ask, What sorer condition could any people be in than these poor Gentiles "at that time," who had no hope, without Christ and God in the world? And all they knew of God was what they picked up from the Jews who alone had his revelation. They picked up a crumb here and there. Now while the conditions were such the Jews were receiving their good things, and the Gentiles evil things. But finally the Jewish nation died because of disobedience, and was buried, and are now passing through the punishment God threatened and described in Deut. 32:16-26. "They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations provoked they him to anger. They sacrificed unto devils, not to God: to gods whom they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not. Of the rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgoten God that formed thee. And when the Lord saw it he abhored them because of the provoking of his sons and daughters, and he said, I will hide my face from them; I will see what their end shall be: for they are a very froward generation, children in whom there is no faith. They have moved me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked me to anger with their vanities: and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation (Gentiles). For a fire is kindled in mine anger and shall burn into the lowest hell, and shall consume the earth with her increase (consume, not burn for ever), and set on fire the foundations of the mountains (if this is a literal hell and a literal fire the flames must get to leaping pretty high, finally); I will heap mischiefs upon them; I will spend mine arrows upon them.. They shall be burnt with hunger (this is the flame the rich man was in, and the Jews are in it yet), and be devoured with burning heat and with bitter destruction: I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them with the poison of the serpents of the dust. The sword without and terror within shall destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling with the man of gray hairs. I said, I will scatter them into corners, I would cause the remembrance of them to cease from among men." This surely makes them both dead and buried as a nation, and punished for their evil doings. Jesus knew what God had threatened to do, and based the parable on that. "Therefore, thus saith the Lord God, Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered in that your transgressions are discovered so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand, and thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end. Thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem, and take off the crown; this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more, until he comes, whose right it is, and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:24-27).

Here we find the Jews dead and buried as a nation; the crown removed; the king deposed; the kingdom overturned. What need we more to say? A nation is dead and buried—their punishment, their torment, is history and a present existing fact; and while in that state the Gentiles are being comforted by having the right to hear the gospel and through Jesus become the seed of Abraham. The word "angel" means messenger, hence those who carry the gospel are messengers proclaiming the right of the Gentiles to become the children of Abraham, so "carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom."

Abraham's Bosom

In olden times at feasts only those related to the host by family ties or religion were invited to be present; and the custom was to sit on couches around the table, and the most honored guest sat at the right of the host, with the lower part of the body lying at full length on the couch with his head upon the breast of the host, and so on around the table. This represented the tie between them. So John the beloved disciple leaned upon Jesus' breast at the last supper. This proves what we have said of the custom. So the Gentiles have the right to recline with Abraham.

A Great Gulf Fixed

Abraham told the both men there was a great gulf between them. I wonder if there is a literal gulf existing between these two places? Jesus is the great impassible gulf between Jew and Gentile: the Jews as a nation reject him as the Messiah; the Gentiles accept him (as a nation) as the Messiah. If the Jews as a nation should accept him as their Messiah during this age it would spoil the whole plan, and destroy the prophets; just so if the Gentiles should reject him. But Jesus broke down that middle wall that parted the two, and when the time comes the two nations will go together; but not in this age.

The rich man wanted Lazarus sent to his fine brethren. The house of Levi, where the high priests came from, was meant here, for they were responsible for most of the Jewish trespassing. When Jesus healed the lepers he told them to go and show themselves to the priests. They were the men that should have known the voice of the prophets, but did not. "And they were instant with loud voices requiring that he might be crucified, and the voices of them and the chief priests prevailed" (Luke 23:23). The man that fell among thieves was shunned by both classes of priests. But the Samaritan, who was reckoned no better than the dogs, helped him.

A Key to the Parable Divinely Given

We come now to the key that Jesus gave us to this parable in Matt. 15:21-28: "Then Jesus went thence and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, and behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts and cried unto him saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David! my daughter is grieviously vext with a devil. But he answered her not a word, and his disciples came and besought him saying, Send her away; for she cryeth after us. But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then came she and worshipped him saying, Lord, help me. But he answered and said, It is not meet to take the children's bread and to cast it to dogs. And she said, Truth, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs that fall from the master's table." Here is a woman begging at the gate of the Jewish nation for a crumb of mercy, and Jesus who said, "I am the door," cast her the desired crumb. So there is no doubt that the parable refers to the Jew and Gentile nations, and fits perfectly to every condition of both nations. Then let us heed the true lesson it teaches. When we see how perfectly the two nations fit this description it confirms our faith in the word of God. That this may lead at least some away from error and into the truth is our most earnest prayer.

Almus Adams.

THE A B C OF GOSPEL TRUTH

A is for Adam the first man (1 Cor. 15:45). God made him out of dust, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul (creature) (Gen. 2:7). Adam sinned and brought death into the world (Gen. 3:19; Rom. 5:12). In Adam all die (1 Cor. 15:22).

B is for Bethlehem, where Jesus was born. Angels announced his birth unto Shepherds on the plains of Bethlehem as "Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:11). Wise men came from the east to worship him who was born King of the Jews (Matt. 2:1,2).

C is for Christ, which is Greek, and means "Messiah" in Hebrew, and "Anointed" in English. Jesus is Christ the Son of the living God (John 6:69). Christ is the seed promised in Eden (Gen. 3:15); to Abraham (Gen. 12:7; Gal. 3:16); to David (2 Sam. 7:12-16; Acts 2:30).

D is for David who reigned upon the throne of the Lord as King over Israel (1 Kings 2:11). God promised that Christ shall reign on David's throne forever when the kingdom of God is set up on earth again (Luke 1:32; Acts 2:30).

E is for Eternal. The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord (Rom. 6:23). All who seek for glory, honor and immortality will receive eternal life (Rom. 2:7); and all such shall inherit the earth for all eternity (Psa. 37:11,18, 22,29).

F is for Faith. Without faith it is impossible to please God (Heb. 11:16). Faith is the substance of things hoped for (Heb. 11:1). Faith without works is dead (James 2:17,20). There is but One Faith and one baptism founded an God's promises (Eph. 4:15). The faith overcometh the world (1 John 5:4).

G is for God who made all things (Gen. 1:11). There is only one God—the Father of the Lord Jesus Christ (1Tim. 2:5). God only hath immortality (1 Tim. 6:16). He is from everlasting to everlasting God (Psa. 90:2). It is eternal life to know the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom he has sent (John 17:3).

H is for Heaven. God is in heaven (Matt. 6:9). Angels are there also (Matt. 18:10). Jesus ascended into heaven (Heb. 1:3); and will "descend from heaven" to raise the dead and establish God's Kingdom on earth (1 Thess. 4:16). No man has ascended into heaven but Jesus (John 3:13).

I is for Israel, which means prince of God (Gen. 32:28). Jacob was called Israel, and the descendants of his twelve sons are the twelve tribes of Israel, known as Israelites, and also called Jews. The true "Israel of God" are they who obey God, whether Israelites by birth or by adoption (Gal. 6:16).

J is for Jerusalem where David reigned as king over Israel (1 Kings 2:11). Christ called Jerusalem "the city of the great King" (Matt. 5:35). Christ will reign there as King over all the earth (Jer. 3:17). All nations will worship at Jerusalem in the ages to come (Zech 8:21,22).

K is for King and Kingdom. God is King or ruler of the world, and allows men to rule now in the kingdoms on earth (Dan. 4:32). When Christ returns, the kingdoms of this world will become the Kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ (Rev. 11:15); and he will reign as King over all the earth (Zech. 14:9).

L is for Lord, which means ruler or master. God has made Jesus both Lord and Christ (Acts 2: 36). When he rules over all the earth, "In that day there shall be one Lord and his name One" (Zech. 14:9). For Christ will be "King of kings and Lord of lords" (Rev. 19:16).

M is for Man who is Mortal (Job 4:17). Man dies and is no more until raised from the dead. Christ was Son of Man as well as Son of God. When he died, God raised him from the dead and made him alive forevermore (Rev. 1:18). Even so at the resurrection of the righteous, the great change from mortal to immortal will take place (1 Cor. 15:51-57).

N is for Noah, a preacher of righteousness, who built the ark in which those who heard God's word were saved from the flood (Gen. 7:23). The rainbow is a token of God's promise that he was well pleased with Noah's work and faith (Gen. 8:21,22; 9:11-17).

O is for Obedience. God loves all those who obey him (Jer. 7:23); and will give eternal salvation unto all such (Rev. 22:14). All the ends of the earth shall obey Christ when he rules as King over all the earth (Psa. 72:11). Those who will not obey shall perish (2 Thess. 1:8; 1 Pet. 4:17).

P is for Promise. God promised to destroy sin and death (Gen. 3:15; 1 Cor. 15:56). God promised Abraham shall inherit the promised land forever (Gen. 17:8); as heir of the world (Rom. 4:13). God promised David that Christ should reign on his throne and establish his kingdom forever (Acts 2:30).

Q is for Quicken, that is, to make alive. God made Jesus a quickening spirit (1 Cor.15:45). Jesus will judge the quick (living) and dead at his appearing and kingdom (2 Tim. 4:1), and will quicken (make alive) all who love and obey him (John 5:25-29).

R is for Resurrection. Jesus is "the resurrection and the life" (John 11:25). He has promised that every one who believeth on him may have everlasting life, and he will raise him up at the last day (John 6:40). "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection" (Rev. 20:6).

S is for Sin and Satan. By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin (Rom. 5:12). Satan and devil often mean persons who sin. Peter was a satan (Luke 4:8), Judas a devil (John 6:70). Sin and death—The devil and satan and his works will be destroyed (1 Cor. 16:26; Rev. 20:10-14).

T is for Truth. Christ is the truth, the life and the way (John 14:6). The truth is founded on God's word (John 17:17). God cannot lie (Titus 1:2). He is God of truth (Deut. 32:4); and "the lip of truth shall endure forever" (Prov. 12:19).

U is for Understand. The wise shall understand God's word (Dan. 12:10). Man that is in honor and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish (Psa. 49:20). The gospel is preached that men may understand God's purpose (Rom. 1:16,17). In the age to come all shall know his will, for the knowledge of God shall cover the earth (Hab. 2: 14).

V is for Victory. Christ obtained the victory over death (Rom. 6:9). He led captivity captive, and triumphed over the grave. He will bestow immortality at the resurrection, unto all who are Christ's at his coming. They shall rejoice and say, "O death, where is thy sting; O grave, where is thy victory" (1 Cor. 15:55)?

W is for Word. By God's word all things were made (John 1:1-4). By it we know his will. The Scriptures are the word of God (2 Tim. 3:15-17). They testify of Christ who was the word made flesh (John 1:14). He is now the word of God glorified and powerful (Rev. 19:13).

X is for Xerxes, also called Ahasuerus—the king who made Esther his Queen and rewarded Mordecai the Jew, for saving the king's life and caused Haman, his enemy, to be hanged on a gallows (Esther 7,8,9,10th chapters).

Y is for Yahweh, which is the name of God (Exod. 6:3). The Jews called it "Jehovah." the Psalmist calls it "Jah" (Psa. 69:4). God has promised to bestow his name upon all who believe and obey him. Yahweh means "I will be." When God's will is done on earth, he will be "All in All" (1 Cor. 15:28).

Z is for Zion, the city of God, the holy mountain in Jerusalem where Christ will reign as King (Psa. 2:6; Psa. 48:1,2). The redeemed of the Lord will come with singing unto Zion (Isa. 51: 11), and stand with the Lord there singing the song of the redeemed (Rev. 14:1,2). —G. F. Aue.

EDITORIAL

Through an oversight, Brother Tavernier's baptism of March 4th has not been previously reported.

Edward T. Robson, son of Sister Jane Robson of Cleveland, died at his home, Wednesday March 21st.

Two of the Cleveland young people, Brother Lester Greif and Sister Lucille Hamly were married at the home of the bride's parents the twenty-fourth of March.

The amount to date for Brother Wilson's removal expenses is $47.00. Among the contributors are: Brothers B. F. Smith, N. S. Westfall, J. E. Hatch, E. F. Randolph, W. B. Townsend, E. C. Watkins, A. E. Shaw and O. Pottorf; Sisters Sarah Smith and Emma Fugate.

Again we wish to call attention to the article by Brother Adams entitled "The Rich Man and Lazarus." Such a MS would be very desirable in booklet form, and the author is willing to publish it as such. All wishing to help Brother Adams in this publication will please send a pledge to him addressing it to 3944 Hartman Ave., Omaha, Neb.

Brother A. Wallace Mason spent the week end of March 19th in Cleveland where, on Sunday evening, he gave a lecture of present interest. His subject "The War and Its Bearing on Bible History" was listened to by a large and appreciative audience.

During the week of March 18th the Cleveland brethren had an enjoyable visit from Ernest R. Drabenstatt and Wife, of Roll, Indiana. This newly married couple were desirous of taking upon them the precious name of Christ Jesus and, preparatory to their immersion on Sunday morning, March 25th, they spent the week at our home in Bible study. Although known only this short while they have become endeared to us and the brothers and sisters because of their earnest good will and love for the truth we all hold dear. We hope the beauties of the faith, which have already brightened their young lives, will continue to do so all along the way of righteousness. Your brothers and sisters will rejoice to share in the things of your life, Brother and Sister Drabenstatt, and the promise has been given to the faithful: "He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

COMMUNICATIONS

Christian Greetings:

We desire to take this way to thank the brothers and sisters of Los Angeles, Santa Ana, San Diego, Louisiana etc., for their kindness and hospitality to us whilst in their midst; and our prayer is, if we never meet again in this age, may we all meet in the kingdom of God's dear Son.

Brother and Sister Hogarth.

Kindness Pays

Kindness pays.

It pays because the world needs it as constantly as it needs the sunlight and the dew, and men could no more do without it than without food and raiment. It always pays to give the world what it really needs.

GOODNESS IN RESERVE

Easter Thoughts Recalled from a Sermon

"Oh how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men" (Psa. 31:19).

There is a golden harvest waiting to be appropriated in the year of the Lord. How much we enjoy now today; but God never gives all that he has to give. Look about you and see the lavishness of God's hand and yet, with all generosity, he is holding back, reserving things for our future enjoyment. God, looking down the future to his kingdom and Jesus Christ and his people and the joys of the millennium, chased away the darkness and the chaos in those first days of creation and pronounced all things good.

At this awakening time of the year we think at what a cost our privileges have been bought. Christ, sweating blood and enduring excruiating pain, was sacrificed for our future blessings. "How great is thy goodness!" Only by the way of the cross could Christ become glorified and obtain power and authority. How could we appreciate the sunlight unless we had passed through the tunnel?

One has said, "The Bible is as a book written in lemon juice, for it takes the fiery trials to bring out the invisible ink and show the glories, wondrous in meaning."

It is so written that we obtain help and comfort when experience brings us to the place where we are in need. But some time there will be an Easter morning that shall not have been marked by the makers of our Almanacs, and all the patient and well doing of God's people will rise to fulness of life only because God thought of you and loved you as he "walked among the ferns in the Creation of the world."

JOY

"Joy is the passion or emotion excited by the acquisition or expectation of good" (Dictionary). Consider the joys of this life so called. What is the best we can get out of it? What is it? In what can mortal man rejoice? If we have all that the world can give, how long will it last? There is always the poisonous sting just a little way ahead. "The flower of the grass" is a true simile. Is it wealth? Jesus shows up the worm in Luke 12:19-20 in which the rich man built "larger barns" and so on, but "in a night" his soul was required. We may be robust, have the best of health and yet in an hour we may be cut down. We may command the respect of our neighbors and friends, even of nations, yet the cancer can get in its work and we cannot be sure of life. The old enemy is always dogging our steps. Of what can we boast? Wherein is joy? How can we really rejoice? What are our expectations naturally? Evil; even "if by reason of strength we go beyond three score years and ten" there is only death at the end. Then naturally we have no expectation of good.

Solomon has something to say along this line in Eccles. 1:16: "I communed with mine own heart saying Lo I am come to great estate, and have gotten more wisdom than all they that have been before me, yea my heart had great experience of wisdom and knowledge." "I made me great works, I builded me houses, I planted me vineyards . . . . Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labor that my hands had labored to do and behold all was vanity and vexation of spirit and there was no profit under the sun, because I should leave it to the man that should be after me....For all his days are sorrows, and his travail grief, his heart taketh not rest in the night. This is also vanity" (Eccles. 2:4,11,18,23). Also Job's friends had a pretty true measure of mortal man lined up to Job's argument. "He shall lean upon his house, but it shall not stand; he shall hold it fast, but it shall not endure. He is green before the sun and his branch shooteth forth in his garden. His roots are wrapped about the heap and seeth the place of stones. If he destroy him from his place then it shall deny him saying, I have not seen him. Behold this is the joy of his way, and out of the earth shall others grow"(Job 8:15-19). This then is joy of mortals according to the wisest man and the friends of the most patient man who ever lived.

But we find another definition of "joy." It reads:"Pleasurable feelings, or emotion caused by success, good fortune and the like. Gladness, exhileration of spirit, delight. A rational prospect of possessing what we love or desire." Locke says: "Joy is a delight of the mind from the consideration of the present or assured approaching possession of a good." We do not seem to find it in these natural things. It does not seem to be in this mortal life. We may find pleasures which endure for a season, but is this what we love or desire? Are we satisfied with possession just for a season only? What is the extent of our desire? We who have learned humility find how small we are. How true the words in the hymn:

> "My days are shorter than a span,
> A little point my life appears,
> How frail at best is dying man,
> How vain are all his hopes and fears.
> Vain his ambition, noise and show,
> Vain are the cares which rack his mind:
> He heaps up treasures mixed with woe,
> He dies and leaves them all behind."

Is not the thing we most dislike death, and life our one greatest desire? Instead of the short-lived pleasures and goods of this world, things that are pasing away, do we not want life for evermore, unending days, something substantial, something lasting, everlasting? Is not this our desire, our delight? Is not this the loveliest, the most delightful thing to be able to expect?

Where then can we get this real joy, this assurance of possession of what we love and desire? We can look back among that great "cloud of witnesses" which the apostle to the Hebrews enumerates and holds up for our example and admonition, and see what was their rejoicing, their joy. Even poor old weeping Jeremiah found it. "Thy words were found and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart; for I am called by thy name O Lord God of hosts" (Jer. 15:16). Then take the Psalms and see what was David's joy. "But let all that put their trust in thee rejoice, let them ever shout for joy because thou defendest them, let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee" (Psa. 5:11). "Thou wilt show me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy, at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore" (Psa 16:11). "Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart" (Psa. 37:4). Come along to Isaiah, "We will be glad and rejoice in his salvation" (Isa. 25:9). Joel in chapter 2: "Be glad and rejoice in the Lord" that "whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered." Habakuk: "Yet will I rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation" (Hab. 3:18). Zechariah says, "Their heart shall rejoice in the Lord."

See what was the joy of these old worthies. Nowhere do we find them looking to themselves or to anything they could do apart from the Lord. Even Abraham had his joy, Jesus tells us, "Abraham rejoiced to see my day." These all as the apostle says "died in faith having seen the promises afar off, and were persuaded of them;" like Moses "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Peter in his first epistle tells us what that joy was: "Of which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched diligently." Salvation was the full expression of their joy, the "end of their faith." Redemption "from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of God," from "the creation which groaneth and travaileth in pain together." Now we can see the full force of the angel's message: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior which is Christ the Lord." No wonder David, after God promised him a son that should sit on his throne for ever, said: "This is all my salvation and all my desire;" and Haggai calls him "the desire of all nations." By the apostle to the Hebrews he is called "The Captain of our salvation." We can understand how Paul in the Phillipian epistle, after enumerating the things he could have boasted in if he had any confidence in the flesh, could count all the best in this life as loss that he might "win Christ, and be found in him," that he might "know him and the power of his resurrection."

We also with Peter "bless the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. To an inheritance, incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. Wherein ye greatly rejoice. Whom having not seen, ye love: in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable. Recieving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls." Let us then in these last times "gird up the loins of our mind" as obedient children and give diligence to make our calling and election sure, for if we do these things we shall never fail. For so an entrance shall be ministered unto us abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. When "the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isa. 35:10).

THE LIVING WORD

By S. Roxana Wince

No. 4

How easy it is to make mistakes. I said in my last that the language of the prophet Azariah seemed to refer to a period in the future pointed out by the prophet Hosea. It refers, instead, to the time when Elijah gathered, or had Ahab gather the eight hundred and fifty prophets of Baal to the grove at Carmel, where, by the answer of fire he proved "unto all the people" that the Lord is God, and that Baal does not hear, neither has he voice to answer; proved it so convincingly that the people fell on their faces and said in awed acknowledgement, "The Lord, he is the God; the Lord, he is the God." Then after the prophets of Baal had been slain by Elijah at the brook Kishon, the long drought was broken by a great and blessed rain, and assurance was given to Elijah that there were seven thousand men in Israel who had not bowed the knee to Baal.

When Benhadad, the king of Syria and his host in company with thirty-two other kings with horses and chariots besieged Samaria, Ahab said, trusting, for the time being in the Lord, "Tell him, let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off." "And behold there came a prophet unto Ahab, king of Israel, saying, Thus saith the Lord, Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it under thine hand this day, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord." And smitten the Syrians were, "with a great slaughter;" the instrument of their destruction, being the two hundred and fifty young men of the princes of the provinces, led by Ahab at the head of seven thousand soldiers.

The return of the year brought the Syrians against Israel the second time. They were again defeated, though Israel when pitched before them, was like two little flocks of kids, while the Syrians filled the country. One hundred thousand foot-men were slain in one day, and the wall of the town of Aphek fell on and crushed twenty-seven thousand more who had fled there for safety. This would not have been the end of deliverances if Ahab had not let Benhadad go even though the Lord appointed him to utter destruction. Because he did not keep up the fight to the finish it was told him by one of the prophets that his life should go for the life of Benhadad, and the life of his people for the life of the people of Benhadad; these words being fulfilled three years later, at the battle of Ramoth-Gilead, where Ahab was wounded by a Syrian bow-man and died, and was taken back to Samaria for burial.

But even making Azariah's language refer to this, the only recorded instance of Israel's turning to the Lord and consequent deliverance, while existing as a separate kingdom in the Holy Land, necessitates our throwing his verbs into the future tense, just as we are obliged to if we make them apply to a period prophesied of by Hosea. Who can solve the riddle? I cannot, unless as Jamieson, Fausett and Brown suggest "the prophet had his eye upon many periods in the national history, when the people were in the state described." This would be the more natural view, so here we will leave the matter, happy to have learned a little more, and to have had our faith still further strengthened by seeing how faithfully God blesses and delivers those who rely upon him in time of trouble.

But we must go back to Asa. We have wandered a long way from him and from the subject of our lessons. You remember that Asa commanded Judah "to seek the Lord God of their fathers and to do the law and the commandments" (2 Chron. 14:4). Turn now to Joshua 22:5, and you will see that he uses the same identical words when speaking to the Reubenites, the Gadites and the half tribe of Manasseh, that is used here by Asa. "Take diligent heed," Joshua says, "to do the commandment and the law, which Moses the servant of the Lord charged you."

So the book in both cases is the same; and, made strong by faith therein, Asa could cry when the Ethiopians came against him, "O, Lord, thou art our God, let not man prevail against thee." He was confident that the Lord would give him the victory "whether by many or by few." And so it turned out, "for the Lord smote the Ethiopians before Asa and before Judah, and they fled," and "were overthrown and could not recover themselves for they were destroyed before the Lord and before his host." And Asa, still farther strengthened by this victory and by Azariah's assurance that God would be with him and reward him in his work of enforcing obedience to the law-book of the Lord, "put away the abominable idols out of Judah and Benjamin and out of the cities he had taken from Ephraim and renewed the altar of the Lord that was before the porch of the Lord: gathered all Judah and Benjamin and the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh and out of Simeon: for they fell to him in abundance when they saw that the Lord his God was with him."

This gathering was in the third month of the fifteenth year of his reign, and was for the purpose of presenting their offerings to the Lord as the law required, and also for the still further purpose of entering into a covenant to seek the Lord God of their fathers with all their heart and with all their soul." And the story says, "They sought him with all their heart and he was found of them." How did they seek him, do you suppose? In utter ignorance of that living word that is the only guide for poor fallen man? We cannot think so, we cannot keep laws that we know nothing about. What rejoicing and sounding of trumpets and music of cornets there was!

And well there might be, for now the Lord gave them rest round about, for not until the five and thirtieth year of Asa's reign did they have another war. This time Asa acted the coward. He was afraid of Baasha the king of Israel, and, not relying upon the Lord, hired the Syrians to help him and had wars thereafter to the end of his days.

NO APOSTLES IN THE CHURCH NOW

We are explicitly told by the writers of the synoptic gospels that Christ, after a night of prayer, chose from among his disciples twelve persons whom also he named apostles (Luke 6:12 13; Matt. 10:1,2; Mark 3:13,14). These special disciples are named, and were given special powers by our Lord, as we learn in the context of the passages already given. The object of their choice was that they should be constantly "with him," and thus learn fully the truths he taught, and be qualified to witness infallibly to them in their after life and ministry (Acts 1:8; 5:32). For this purpose they were promised an infallible teacher in all truths needed in their ministry, and a miraculous memory upon all things that he had said to them (John 14:26). However, one of these apostles was chosen with the knowledge that he was at heart evil and insincere, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled, and one of his chosen followers might betray his Lord (John 6: 70). This apostle was therefore an interloper and not a true apostle, and his place in the apostolate was to be filled (Psa. 109:8; Acts 2:20).

We are told that our Lord thus himself laid the foundation of his church in his apostles, added to the prophets of the Old Testament times, himself being the chief corner stone (Eph. 2:20). And as the New Testament church was "built upon the foundation," it goes without further saying that the foundation did not constitute the superstructure. The figure thus drawn by inspiration is to be regarded as accurate, and its analogy as correct.

That this position is sound is further established by the following facts:

1. When the infant church assembled in Jerusalem after the ascension of our Lord, their first mentioned procedure was to elect a successor for Judas. And as a qualification for the office Peter expressly states that one must be chosen "of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went out and in among us . . . . to be a witness with us of his resurrection." To this stipulation the assembled church agreed, and selected two candidates, of whom one was chosen, after prayer, by lot, who was thenceforth "numbered with the eleven apostles" (Acts 1:21-26).

2. Paul was afterwards called to the office of an apostle of Christ, as he repeatedly asserts (Rom. 1:1; 1 Cor. 1:1; Gal. 1:1). And that he might be qualified for this important office in the foundation of Christ's church, our Lord himself appeared to him, thus making him a witness of his resurrection (Acts 22:14,15; 26:16).

3. Paul himself, when recounting the evidence of his apostleship writes to the Corinthian church: "Am I not an apostle? am I not free? have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord?" This fact was his first asset as an apostle, and when he enumerates the witnesses of Christ's resurrection in the same epistle, he declares himself among the number—"Last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time (1 Cor. 9:1; 15:8).

4. It is plain therefore that when those who were witnesses of Christ's resurrection had all died, there could no longer be found one qualified for the office, nor has anyone since the days of the Revelator been able to say truthfully that he had seen the glorified form of our risen Lord (Rev. 1:12-17). It is claimed that several others in New Testament times were called apostles besides those we have mentioned. If so they must have been chosen of those still living who were witnesses of Christ's resurrection. In Acts 14:14 Barnabas as well as Paul is called an apostle. He may have been among the infant church, or the five hundred brethren of whom Paul speaks (1 Cor. 15:6), who saw our risen Lord, of whom Paul said "the greated part" were alive when he wrote. Or, as the Greek word apostolos from which our English word apostle is transtated, means "one sent forth" (according to Robert Young), and Paul and Barnabus were both sent forth by the call of the Holy Spirit from the church at Antioch (Acts 13:2,3); it is quite possible that in this lower sense of men sent forth as missionaries by the church, Paul and Barnabus are here called apostles, rather than the higher sense we have been considering.

We must not forget while on this subject, that even in the early church there were "false apostles," of whom the believers of that day were warned (2 Cor. 11:13). Without any divine authority they claimed to be apostles of Christ, and deceived some, so that even Paul was questioned as to his office. Our Lord himself in his message to the church of Ephesus commends in them among other things this praiseworthy conduct: "Thou hast tried them which say they are apostles and are not, and hast found them liars" (Rev. 2:2). If they were false apostles then, there are quite likely to be such now.

Lastly, it is worthy of mention here that the Revelator tells us that the twelve foundations of the heavenly city, New Jerusalem, had "in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb" (Rev. 21:14). This being true in any conceivable sense, how can it be possible that living apostles of Christ's church were to continue as an order of the Christian ministry in centuries long after the generation of which the original twelve apostles were a part? In that case there would come to be many apostles, possibly hundreds, and all successors of the original twelve, partakers of their power, their faithfulness, their privileges in this high office, and then why not in their high honor and reward in the coming kingdom of God? The claim that there are now true apostles of the church of Christ is absurd, and too weak to merit further consideration. The good Lord pity and rescue those thus deluded.—Our Hope.

SIGNS OF CHRIST'S COMING

Signs show Christ's coming is near for we are told that there will be wars and rumors of wars. "And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars. See that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom and there shall be famines and pestilences and earthquakes in divers places" (Matt. 24:6-8). "As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. And they asked him saying, Master but when shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass. And he said, Take heed that ye be not deceived for many shall come in my name saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them. But when ye shall hear of wars and commotions be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; but the end is not by and by. Then said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom: and great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines and pestilences: and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven" (Luke 21:6-11). "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts. And saying where is the promise of his coming for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation" (2 Pet. 3:3,4). "This know also in the last days perilous times shall come" (2 Tim. 3:1).

"And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring. Men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass then look up and lift up your heads for your redemption draweth nigh. And he spake to them a parable; Behold the fig trees, and all the trees, when they now shoot forth ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled. Heaven and earth shall pass away but my words shall not pass away. And take heed to yourselves lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass and to stand before the Son of Man" (Luke 21: 24-36). "For then shall be great tribulation such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened there should no flesh be saved, but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened" (Matt. 24:21,22). If we trust in the Lord he will deliver us out of trouble. "But let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice; let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them: let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee. For thou, Lord, wilt bless the righteous; with favor wilt thou compass him as with a shield" (Psa.5:11,12).

A BRIGHT PAGE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Tidbits of Pleasant and Useful Information Gathered from Everywhere

A bishop recently addressed a large assembly of Sunday school children, and wound up by asking, in a very paternal way, "And now, is there any little boy or any little girl who would like to ask me a question?"

A thin, shrill voice at the back of the room called out, "Please sir, why did the angels walk up and down Jacob's ladder when they had wings?"

"Oh, ah, yes—I see" said the bishop. "And now, is there any little girl who would like to answer this question?"—Tit-Bits.

TWO KINDS OF PEOPLE

When we come in touch with some people, we feel as if a cloud, cold and dark, had swooped down upon us and shut out the sun and left us shivering in the cold. And how glad we are, though we may not say it, when they leave us. But others are like the sunburst, when, after the morning has been damp and chilly, and the east wind has been cutting like a knife, it blazes forth in light and warmth, and in moment changes us and all the world about us into light and laughter and hope and helpfulness. To which class do we belong? —M. M. Davis.

THREE KINDS OF PREACHERS

The late Archbishop of York is said to have classified preachers of the gospel as follows:

"There are three kinds of preachers. The preacher you can't listen to, the preacher you can listen to, and the preacher you can't help listening to." Of the three classes, the last is in a very decided minority.

Old Thomas Boston, the author of "The Fourfold State," who died about one hundred and seventy years ago, said that in his day there were four different kinds of hearers: First were the sponges, who sucked up everything indiscriminately and let it run right out again; second were the sandglasses, that let what entered in at one ear pour out at the other, third were the strainers, that let the good go and retained the bad, and fourth, the sieves, that separated the good grain from the chaff, and retained it to feed upon. If all preachers and hearers were like the last named classes, what royal times there would be in the church of Christ!—The Illustrator.

CONVERSION

Before conversion Paul was a courteous gentleman, an excellent scholar, a fine orator and a strictly moral man. There are many today of whom we can say this—but all these need to "turn right about face" just as Paul did.

"Conversion" is only a beginning—it is the start of the voyage, not reaching port; it is "turning right about face," but one must march after turning, or he gets nowhere.

For each of us conversion means the same, in our own degree. Have we turned around and set our faces toward the kingdom of God and right living?

After conversion Paul took Jesus for his guide. He was like a ship which had changed its course and was sailing for another port under another captain. The ship was just the same, and those qualities which made it sail in the wrong course were just those needed to make it sail in the right course.

Speak with God—it will lighten your cares; it will ensure good company; it will help you to consider your life, its meaning and purpose—to regard in the right light its joys, sorrows, gratifications and disappointments. The spirit of prayer is the spirit of submission to one wiser than you.

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. APRIL 10, 1917 NUMBER 14

TODAY AND TOMORROW

If the world today was a realm of joy,
And peace and contentment abided;
And all for his neighbor would do his best,
And each in the other confided;

If all the land was a garden of flowers,
And all the streets were of gold;
If sunshine glistened through all the bowers
With happiness now to behold;

If every one was gentle and sweet
And every one loved the other;
With courtesy to all we meet,
And kindness one to the other;

What would be left for tomorrow I say?
What would our future be like?
All we would need would be life for today
And tomorrow would be all night.

Most of our pleasure is anticipation,
So off in a distance there looms
A brighter tomorrow than today can afford
So we, brighter futures assume.

Its the thorn and the thistle, brier and stone
Of today, when we stumble and fall
That will help us o'ercome and bring us all home
And gather us in one and all.

Sister Georgia Gazeley.

EARLY HISTORY OF BAPTISM

While in Kansas we met some who desired to know what the earliest Christian writers say of triune and single immersion, and as we did not have our notes on that subject with us, we promised to give our findings on that line through The Restitution, provided the Editor did not object. Having been reared by parents who loved and respected the mode known as "triune immersion," I would naturally be loath to give it up. So I was ever diligent to find out exactly what the early Christians taught concerning baptism. We will begin with a pair of quotations from a triune immersionist giant, Elder James Quinter, "Single immersion was at first performed in the name of Jesus" (Triune Immersion, p. 84). Again, "Those who used single immersion baptized their candidates into the death of Christ, or into the name of Christ" (Quinter and McConnell debate, p. 113). Orchard says on baptism: "Consider how he hath joined both the cross and the water together; for thus saith he, blessed are they who putting their trust in the cross, descend into the water." Again: "We go down into the water full of sins and pollutions, but come up again bringing forth fruit" (History of Baptism, p. 12; also Wake's Apostolic Fathers, p. 292).

Hermas whom Paul salutes in the church at Rome (Rom. 16:14) says: "They are such as have heard the word, and are willing to be baptized in the name of the Lord; but when they call to mind what holiness it required in those who professed the truth, withdrew themselves." Again: "Before a man receives the name of the Son of God, he is ordained to death; but when he receives the seal, he is freed from death: now the seal is water, into which men descend under an obligation to death, but ascend out of it being appointed unto life" (Orchard's History, p. 12; Stennett's Answers to Russen, p. 143). Clement of Rome, who wrote about A. D. 96, says: "But when the time began to draw near that was wanting in Mosaic institutions, he supplied, as we have said, the prophet who should appear, whom he had foretold should warn them by the mercy of God to cease sacrificing; lest haply they might suppose that on the cessation of a sacrifice there was no remission of sins for them. He instituted baptism in water among them, in which they might be absolved from all their sins on the invocation of his name and for the future, following a perfect life, might abide in immortality being purified, not by the blood of beasts, but by the wisdom of God. Subsequently also an evident proof of this great mystery is supplied in the fact that every one believing in this prophet who had been foretold by Moses, and baptized in his name, shall be kept from the destruction of war, which impends over the unbelieving nations" (Anti Nicene Library, pp.169-170; Orchard's History, p. 12).

Ignatius says, "Baptism ought to be accompanied by faith, love and patience after preaching" (Orchard's History, p. 12; Dutch Martyrology, chap. 1). These are all writers of the first century, and men who associated with the apostles, and not a mother's son of them intimates that baptism was performed by triune immersion, while two of them speak of it being performed in the name of Jesus only; which Mr. Quinter says was the ancient manner of performing single immersion.

Justin Martyr, who wrote about A. D. 150 says: "Then we bring them to some place where there is water, and they are regenerated in the same manner of regeneration by which we are regenerated; for they are washed in water in the name of God the Father of all things, and of our Savior Jesus Christ, and of the Holy Spirit" (Apology, chap. 1. sec. 61). This writer speaks of the name, not names, as some would have him speak, and must also allude to the one name spoken of by the apostles, and their successors.

James Chrystal, the oracle of triune immersionists says: "But the passages quoted from Barnabas, Hermas, and Justin Martyr, state only the fact of being immersed or baptized, but do not specify further. We should naturally understand the testimonies to be of single immersion" (Modes of Baptism, p. 158). Mr. Chrystal is considered by all writers on triune immersion as being the most scholarly writer that ever defended that mode of baptism, and he is quoted by all of them, yet he admits that the earliest Christian writers favored single immersion, and that they are naturally to be so understood. What do you say to that, dear reader? Would a triune immersionist make so fatal an admission to his cause were the evidence not so strong that he was compelled to?

Mosheim, speaking of the first century says: "Whosoever acknowledged Christ as the Savior of mankind, and made a solemn profession of his confidence in him, was immediately baptized and received into the church." Again: "The sacrament of baptism in this century was administered without the public assemblies, in public places appointed and prepared for the purpose, and was performed by an immersion of the whole body in the baptismal font" (Eccl. History, chap. 1, sec. 8, Murdock's translation).

Elder N. A. McConnell says: "In every instance where the apostles commanded baptism, it was to be done in the name of Jesus Christ, or the Lord Jesus" (Quinter-McConnell Debate, p. 65). Anyone can easily verify this statement by searching the Acts of the apostles. True Mr. McConnell was a single immersionist, but Mr. Quinter never attempted to disprove the statement in the debate. It is now generally admitted that Turtullian, an African bishop who wrote about A. D. 200 to 220, is the first to mention triune immersion, and baptism being appointed in three names. In answering Praxeas, who baptized in one name he says: "Christ appointed baptism not in the name of one but three, Father, Son and Holy Ghost; therefore we are dipped not once but thrice into every person of the trinity at the mention of each name" (Adversus Praxeas, and Quinter's Triune Immersion, p. 195). This quotation shows that the Praxeans were single immersionists, and that the false doctrine of the trinity was the cause and reason for triune immersion. Turtullian would not have been fighting Praxeas had he been in agreement with him, and when triune immersionists find their mode they also run onto single immersion in the same historic quotation. They are like the negro who went fishing, and failed to find a pole on which to tie his line, so he tied it to his leg; soon a large fish came along and swallowed the hook, and, happening to be too much for the negro, pulled him into the water and drowned him; the fish also died on the other end of the line. A few days later another fisherman found both negro and fish lodged in a drift in the river, and looked on in amazement, wondering if it was the negro fishing or the fish negroing, as both were caught. Both are caught here: Turtullian gets too much for triune immersionists; the fish is too big.

"LET HIM THAT READETH UNDERSTAND"

Part 2

Chas. A. Goss

But another and more important starting point is that of the era of the Seleuciden, or the era of the founder of the Syrian dynasty (B. C. 312), which includes Antiochus Epiphanes, the first of the three powers referred to in the prophecy as defiling the sanctuary and causing the daily sacrifice to cease.

Reckoning from this era in lunar years, it terminates in A. D. 1919-1920, or just seventy-five years later than when reckoned in solar years from the decree of Artexerxes, before referred to. The propriety of reckoning this period in lunar scale is appreciated when we reflect that this is the great Mohammedan desolation and down-trodding, and that they use lunar time in their calendar, as did the Jews.

Now it is quite necessary, in order to clearly apprehend the meaning of such terms as "the time of the end," "the last days," "in the latter days," etc,. that we have some knowledge of the reckoning of time on both the solar and lunar scale; in fact, without it a right understanding of the prophetic periods of Daniel is impossible.

A brief digression to comment upon the above and note its application may not be amiss. We find that "the times of the Gentiles" (Luke 21:24) is the limit for the down-treading of Jerusalem, and this naturally suggests, by the intimate relationship of the two, that the "cleansing of the sanctuary" will be accomplished at the same time. The great "seven times," or Gentile age, is a period of 2520 years, a great week whose "days" are 360 years each. This period is also divided into two parts of 1260 years each by the term "time, times and a half" (i. e., one time—360, two times—720, half a time, 180—1260 years). This first half of the great "week" of Gentile supremacy is covered by the history of four great empires whose duration was as follows: Babylon, 217 years; Medo-Persian, 201 years; Grecian, 280 years and Roman 553 years. The papal "little horn" arose upon the fall of the Roman Empire, and the time of its dominion is specified as "a time, times, and the dividing of time" (Dan. 7:25), or three and a half times, thus covering the whole of the latter half of the great Gentile times.

In considering this whole grand period we meet two noteworthy facts; first, its being an arithmetically perfect number—2520 being the least common multiple of the first ten numbers; and, secondly, it is also perfect astronomically. It contains 132 lunar or meteoric cycles, in which the epact amount to 77 lunar years, and a remainder of 12 years, which remainder raises the epact of the entire period to seventy-five solar years. To make this clear, we will say that the difference between 2520 true solar years and the same number of lunar years is also 75 years. So we see that if we begin at any given date and reckon forward 2520 years in both solar and lunar years, the lunar will run out 75 years before the solar. This difference between the two scales is the epact. Or to put it still more clearly, 2520 lunar years, plus the epact (75 solar years) equals 2520 solar years.

A noteworthy example of the use of two or more endings to a series of prophecies is seen in the various terminal points given in the 12th chapter of Daniel. The oppressive and down-treading power comes to its end by divine judgments as recorded in the last verse of the previous chapter, and the 12th chapter opens with a brief outline of events up to the close of the present age; then follows the question of the 6th verse: "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?" The answer takes into consideration periods of time for the accomplishment of all that is to occur. When he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, in other words, to bring the time of their scattering, as well as the power which kept them out of their land, to an end, "shall be for a time, times and a half," 1260 years. And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, a thousand two hundred and niney days" 1290 years, or an addition of 30 years more (verse 11). Again, in the 12th verse there is another addition of 45 years in the cryptic sentence: "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." What, exactly, may be the events of that terminus we cannot surmise, but that it is the crisis, or full ending of the series of events, there is little room for doubt. The point I wish to fix in mind is the fact that these two additions carry us seventy-five years beyond the termius of the times of the Gentiles and introduces the Millennial Age and blessings -a transition period from an epoch of judgments to one of righteousness and peace.

Now to return to the consideration of the 2300 day period of dispersion and desolation of the sanctuary, the greatest importance is given in this prophecy to the "little horn" of the East. By comparing it with what we know of the Roman or western "little horn," we get a strong clue to the meaning of this prophecy.

Two, and only two, "little horns" are presented in prophecy, and only two powers are found in history which exactly answer the symbols. From small beginnings they gradually gain empire on religious grounds; growing exceedingly great thereby, they proudly oppose Christ, and fiercely persecute his people, repress and exterminate the truth, enjoy dominion for many long centuries (treading down Jerusalem, either spiritual or literal), and must perish at last under the judgment of God. The papacy does not stand out more distinctly as the great apostacy of the West than does Mohammedanism as the great parallel apostacy of the East. The one originated from within the church, the other from without; but they arose together in the beginning of the seventh century; they have run chronologically similar courses; they have both based their empire on religious pretensions; the one defiled and trampled down the church, and the other defiled and trod down Jerusalem; in their life they have been companion evils; in their death they are not divided, for the one has expired politically and the other is fast expiring.

For seventeen centuries all expositors, Jewish as well as Christian, held the view that the prophecy referred to Antiochus Epiphanes. Josephus and the commentaries on the Book of Maccabees record great details and trace fulfillment of these predictions to the little horn. But Antiochus never waxed "exceeding great," he never "threw down the place of the sanctuary," though he took away the daily sacrifice, and he lived too near the time when the prophecy was given to be the full and proper fulfillment of it, seeing it was to be "for many days"—"at the end of the indignation." Besides this, the time of the desolation effected by Antiochus—just three years—does not in any way or on any system correspond with 2300 days, so we are driven to regard this as one of those prophecies which has had a double fulfillment, like Hosea 11:1 or Psalm 72.

No sooner did Roman emperors cease to tread down Jerusalem than the Moslem power began and has not ceased to this day. The utmost efforts of Christendom (so-called), expended in eight different crusades, failed to drive the Moslem out of the Holy Land; for twelve centuries he has "defiled the sanctuary," and "stood up against the Prince of princes," "casting down the truth to the ground," "practising and prospering;" but it is written that when this period of 2300 years comes to an end "he shall be broken without hand" (Dan. 8:25), and "then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

And isn't it remarkably assuring of the correctness of this exposition that its ending dates coincide exactly with those of the great Gentile times? But even if these were not so clearly indicated there appears abundant confirmation in the fact that the year A. D. 1844 is indicated as the beginning of the end of this "little horn," for it was on the 21st of March of the year that the combined powers of Europe (England, Russia, France, Prussia and Austria) received the official declaration of the Sublime Porte relinquishing the practice of executing those who embraced Christianity, and practically signing away their sovereignty and independence as a power among powers.

Now note and ponder with what exactitude and certainty God deals with events and dates concerning his people. The date of the official declaration, March 21st, is very remarkable as being in fact the first day of Nisan, the first sacred month of the Jews. And this is the more notable as it is connected with the termination of the 2300 years. It will be noticed that Ezra is very specific in stating the dates (B. C. 457). "On the first day of the first month began he to go up from Babylon" (Ezra 7:9), and the whole time of the return and restoration was exactly one year (Ezra 10:17).

Ezra's commission for the restoration of the sacrifice was B. C. 457. The period of a year was occupied in the return and the cleansing of the sanctuary, B. C. 456. The restoration of sacrifices continued with slight exceptions to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, since which Jerusalem has been trodden down by the Gentiles, to the period of March 21st, 1844. This period, according to the Jewish year, ended March 20th, 1844, which made 2300 years. Now on the first of Nisan, 1844, the power of the Mohammedans to persecute Christians passed away, and liberty was given for Christian worship, the beginning point of the true cleansing of the sanctuary.

This is very remarkable because it was the 1260th year of Hegira, and so the closing year in Mohammedanism of that prophetic period, 1260 years. The Hegira or flight of Mohammed from Mecca to Medina was the turning point in the career of the false prophet, that which transformed him from the despised leader of a sect of fanatics to the prince and prophet of his people. In Mohammedan history the Hegira ranks second only to the capture of Jerusalem in A. D. 637. It occurred in A. D. 622, and to the important crisis in the decay and fall of the Mohammedan power, A. D. 1844, is just 1260 lunar years; and it should be remembered that they reckon in lunar years.

THE LIVING WORD

No. 5

By S. Roxana Wince

It may seem strange to my readers that I left our fourth lesson in so unsatisfactory a state with reference to the time in Azariah's words to Israel. I did so purposely, not only to show you how foolish it is to try to settle perplexing questions by irreverent and unwarrented guessing, but that I might excite your curiosity enough to set you to studying and better fix the matter in your memories. Read Judges 2:13-19; 3:5 to close of chapter; 4:1 to close; 6th, 7th and 8th chapters etc., and I think you will undersatnd that no guessing is needed in our study of the word of the Lord.

We are all familiar with the story of the good Jehoshaphat, but perhaps some of us have never taken a second thought as to why he was such a fine example of kingly piety and virtue, unless it was because his father had been so nearly true to God, and had schooled his son in the ways of righteousness. And Asa's teaching and example were indeed large factors in making Jehoshaphat an eminently great and noble man, walking in the first ways of David his father, and seeking not unto Baalim. But there was another reason; he had the living word. He "sought to the Lord God of his fathers, and walked in his commandments" as it taught him. "His heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord. And he took away the high places and the groves, out of Judah." Then, not willing to keep the blessed light to himself, he sent word to his princes and to the Levites to "teach in all the cities of Judah." Our lesson says: "They taught in the cities of Judah and had the law of the Lord with them and went throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people." "And the fear of the Lord fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands, that were round about Judah. So they made no war against Jehoshaphat."

Ah! Philip Mauro was right; the Bible does "live with a spiritual, an exhaustible, an inextinguishable—in a word, a divine life." There is nothing like it, nothing that wicked men so fear when once it has vivified the heart of a nation, for they feel in spite of themselves that there is an invincible power behind that book that all the armies of the world cannot meet and vanquish. The Romanist fears it as he fears nothing else. Take it out of the hands of the people and conquest is easy. Let its testimony be kept, and their defeat is sure. Just as sure as was the defeat of the Ammonites, the Moabites and Edomites who came against Jehoshaphat, though Jehoshaphat seems not to have struck a blow, but only to have cried unto the Lord: "Therefore, O my people, in this, your hour of awful danger. Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper."

But somehow Jehoshaphat failed in the training of his son Jehoram, or else his wicked wife Athaliah, the daughter of Omri king of Israel, turned his heart away from the precious lessons of the holy book, for he murdered his six brothers and many of the princes of Judah, and walked in the ways of the kings of Israel. A hard way to walk as he found to his sorrow. During his brief reign of eight years the Edomites revolted, the Philistines and Arabians broke into his palace, and carried off all he had in it, together with his sons and his wives leaving only the youngest called Jehoahaz or Amaziah. Smitten then by the Lord with an incurable disease, he died two years later.

Amaziah's story is a similar one, for, as Athaliah had probably counselled Jehoram, so she counselled her son to do wickedly and after a brief reign he was slain by Jehu in the city of Samaria. His children, all save the little Joash, were put to death by their cruel grandmother and she in turn by the captains of the hundreds of Judah. They had been set by Jehoida, the High Priest, over the host within the temple to guard it from any possible intrusion while the coronation of the little Joash was going on.

Joash, had been stolen and hidden by Jehoshabeath, the daughter of Jehoram and sister of Ahaziah who later became the wife of the High Priest, Jehoida.

Athaliah had become the ruler of Judah after Ahaziah's death and she, hearing the people running and praising the king, was anxious to know what it meant and elbowed her way into the temple, only to be dragged out and slain.

EARLY CONVERSION AND CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

1. Early Conversion is Scientific Because it is Right.

It is safe to say God wants the whole life of the person saved and consecrated to his service, from childhood to old age. He is entitled to the sweet and innocent childish faith and trust in the morning of life, and to that rugged and loyal service at noon-time, and to that praise and glory of a soul calm and peaceful in the twilight of evening looking back over a whole life given to the service of Christ.

It is also safe to say the less we know of sin by experience the better for us a thousand times over. The less time and room we give to sowing wild oats the larger will be our crop and harvest of wheat. It is never right to do wrong. It is always wrong to postpone doing right. It is never right not to serve God, and it is wrong not to serve God all the time.

Evil thoughts which grow into action make life-long impressions for bad, most difficult to erase from the memory. Evil habits formed and become a part of the nerves and muscles, take years for grace to form new tissue. These old thoughts and habits are a lifelong danger in an hour of temptation. Most every backslider is overtaken and falls over some sinful habit or association.

The associations and ties of a sinful life are so cunning and the undertow so strong that few who go down to its depths, are ever brought back to Christ. The chances for them remaining true is less than the child converted to God.

It is far better to grow a hedge about a precipice to prevent children from falling over than to wait and build a hospital at the bottom.

2. Early Conversion is Right Because it is natural.

The successful trainer of animals will tell you he can best saceed by being with the creature from its infancy. Some cannot be trained without this.

How the young vines reach out with their feelers to find a pole to entwine around. But how difficult to put the full grown vine around a pole and make it live. How easily the twig can be bent in the desired shape, but how difficult when it has become hard and stiff.

So the soul of the child can best be moulded for Christ by beginning in those years when it is the most plastic, the heart the most tender and affectionate, when the will is pliable and the soil pure. Thank God his grace can save a man or woman down and out in sin, and can keep them saved until Jesus comes. And thank God he can also save a child.

3. Early Conversion is Taught in the Bible Plainly.

Eccl. 12:1: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

Jesus' example, Luke 2:48,49: "And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing. And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

Children must learn daily in the law under Moses. Luke 18:16,17: "But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein."

Paul's instruction to children teaches he expects them to be Christians. Eph. 6:1-3: "Children obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right. Honor thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise; that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth."

Christ's teaching to Peter shows he expects children in the church. John 21:15: " . . . . . ., of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs."

Prov. 22:6 "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Paul's instruction, 2 Tim. 3:14,15: "But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them; and that from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation."

KINDNESS PAYS

It pays because in kindness there is strength. It is not, as many suppose a sign of weakness. It is a mark of that strength which is truest and best. No man is so strong as he who knows the secret of gentleness.

It pays because it wins the heart. There is no other such wealth as that of friendship, and there is no other such friend as the friend who remembers a kindness.

It pays because there is all too little of it abroad in the earth, and what supply there is is always at a premium.

It pays because no one is ever very far from the shining way who carries a loving heart within his breast, whose lips are careful to avoid unkind words, and whose hands are trained to helpful things

It pays because it knows a greater strength than that of force. It can melt its way through many a place where all the terrors of force can not drive a path.

It pays because it never has an axe to grind. It wins the world's good opinion by avoiding the very appearance of self-seeking.

It pays because it represents the highest law of human society—the law of altruism.

It always seeks to serve the other fellow, and when it cannot serve him, it at least manages not to hinder him.

It pays because it is true, and men everywhere are looking for something that is really true. Whatever else it may not be, kindness is sincere and faithful.

It pays because it reacts on one's own character. Each time he remembers to be kind, he makes another reach toward the height of real kingliness. It is thus that kindness never loses it's reward.

It pays because it is often returned with interest and if it is never returned at all, the angels do not forget to give credit. —Boys' World.

EDITORIAL

A sincere heart does not need to advertise itself by a solemn face.

A grudge does not hurt anybody but the man who harbors it.

The last week of March we spent pleasantly and profitably with the brethren and sisters in Roll, Ind.

6 A. M., April the 3rd, a daughter was born to the Editor and Wife. Mother and baby are both doing well.

Brother and Sister John E. Hogarth have returned from Los Angeles, Calif., and expect to make Cleveland their permanent home.

We have gained a valued addition to our number by the removal of Brother Owen Pottorf, from Akron, O. Sister Pottorf, now indisposed and living at Salem, O., will soon join her husband here, if the Lord will.

March the 31st, at Roll, Ind., Brother Cantwell Drabenstott and Sister Pearl M. Schmidt were united in marriage. The wedding was informal and private, only members of the immediate families being present. May the blessings of God attend Brother and Sister Drabenstott in their new life.

The total of Brother Wilson's fund to date is $58.00, B. F. Cook, Maud Darrow and Sister Hodson being the last contributors. We now have more than Sister Wince asked for, and we suggest that contributions cease.

Brother A. N. Durham writes: "I have been in the hospital for appendicitis, but I am out now, thank the dear Lord. I have not been able to attend my appointments, but hope to be able to meet with the church at Guthrie Grove the first Sunday, the Lord willing."

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL

No. 4

Some believe and teach that all not in Christ by baptism at his coming, whether they are living or dead, and whether their condition is due to rebellion or ignorance of his offer, are condemned to eternal death. Others do not go so far, but believe and teach that only those of this age, who have died out of Christ, by non-baptism, whether their condition is due to rebellion or ignorance, are condemned to eternal death. Those out of Christ, who are alive when he comes, will be permitted to live on and learn the truth and accept or reject it during his reign.

If these two teachings were true, they would give man the power to discern the fate of individuals, and not only to discern their fate, put to personally pass sentence upon them. For by these teachings we can declare anyone, who dies out of Christ in ignorance of his gospel to be dead forever. Nowhere do the Scriptures give us this right, nor do they reveal the fate of any person to us. He has made the conditions and has commanded us to reveal those conditions. Judgment and pronouncement of a sentence upon persons, he has reserved to himself. Paul says in 1 Cor. 4:3-5: "But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment. Yea, I judge not my own self, for I know nothing by myself, yet am I not hereby justified; but he that judgeth me is the Lord. Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the heart, and then shall every man have praise of God." Paul is rebuking the church for judging him more worthy or less worthy of praise than Apollos; and says even that is left to God when Jesus comes. How much more so the judgment which has to do with the life of a person.

In order to bring even the socalled Christian world, which forms a very small portion of mankind, under the condemnation specified in Mark 16:15,16, truth believers must make an admission which none are ever willing to make: they must admit that non-acceptance of the gospel, as it is taught by orthodox Christianity and Catholics, means condemnation. This can not be true, for if ever a perverted gospel was taught, they surely teach it.

Paul says in Gal. 1:8: "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached, let him be accursed." In verse seven he says they do not preach another gospel, but they would pervert the gospel of Christ. If such a gospel is accursed, no one can be condemned for not accepting it.

Alta King.

Editor's Reply

Reference is made regarding the belief of some to the effect that certain of the race "are dead for ever." We can see no objection to this thought since Christ has said that there are dead ones whom Jehovah is not the God of, as well as others of whom he is the God. The resurrection of the dead was the theme under discussion when Christ avered of the latter class, "all (such) live unto him." Living unto him here means life by resurrection (Luke 20:37,38). And in various other parts of the Holy Scriptures it is affirmed in repeated statements of diversified language that certain individuals of the human race "perish like the beast" and "shall never see light." Leeser's translation is more emphatic than our own version, as its translation of the following passages will show: "Unto eternity these will never see light" (Psa. 49:19); "(They are) dead, they will not live (again); (they are) departed, they will not rise (again): therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made to perish every memorial of them" (Isa. 26:14); "I will make them drunken, in order that they may be joyful, and (then) sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake again, saith the Lord" (Jer. 51:39). Thus "all the heathen" are to pass away in death as if they had never had an existence (Obad. 16), sharing with untimely births eternal oblivion (Job 3:11-19; 10:18,19).

Discernment of Fate Lawful; Judgment Prohibited

To the idea that some shall "not live again," an idea expressly inculcated in the Scriptures just quoted, it is objected that this gives "man the power to discern the fate of individuals, and not only to discern their fate, but to personally pass sentence upon them." We are commanded to exercise our reasoning faculties, and "discern both good and evil" (Heb. 5:14). May we not, then, lawfully discern the "good" which God has promised and reserved for the righteous; and likewise the "evil" which he has threatened the ungodly? Why should it be thought criminal to say of people out of Christ and who are ignorant of his gospel, "they are dead forever," when God himself says this very thing? Is it a sin to "discern" what God says, to believe what he says and to say what he says? The reply is: "Nowhere do the Scriptures give us this right, nor do they reveal the fate of any person to us." But the communication before us refutes this false claim; for it is written for the very purpose of teaching that all the ignorant are to have a chance in the next age. If the Scriptures "do not reveal the fate of any person to us," how does the writer know that such a "fate" is in reserve for the ignorant? The argument is top-heavy and falls to destruction by its own weight while the writer is trying to uphold it.

Distinguish things that differ and confusion is ended. Discernment of fate is one thing, its execution another: understanding God's law, the "good" it promises the righteous and the "evil" it threatens the wicked, is legitimate; judgment, the execution of the law, is entirely another thing. To say discernment of fate gives us power to "personally pass sentence upon" people, is to confound things which differ. "Judgment and pronouncement of sentence upon persons he has reserved to himself," is language that tells the truth of the matter. An illustration will perhaps help us to see the difference between discernment of fate and the executing of judgment: Sister King reads and "discerns" the laws of Nebraska. She finds that the penalty for murder is death by hanging, or electrocution as the case may be. She likewise "discerns" that private citizens cannot take the law into their own hands, judge and execute their judgment upon whom they please; but special men are appointed as "judges," and no man can be lawfully judged and executed but by those who are duly appointed to fill the office of judge.

In the process of time, Mr. Jones, a neighbor of Sister King deliberately kills his wife. Having read the law of Nebraska Sister King knows in advance what penalty is coming to Mr. Jones; she "discerns" his fate; she says he will be hanged or electrocuted; but in all this she is not setting up herself as judge, nor does she execute the judgment of the law. Here then are illuminative gleams which throw their rays upon future judgment. God has published his law and left it in our hands; he has commanded us to read and understand it. In his word he has told us the "fate" of the ignorant and the wicked and the righteous. He has said no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God. Mr. Jones, a neighbor, is a drunkard. If he does not repent Sister King knows his "fate;" she tells him God's penalty for this sin; but her knowledge of God's law, the penalty for drunkeness, etc., does not make her a judge. "All the words of my mouth are in righteousness; . . . . they are plain to him that understandeth, and right to them that find knowledge" (Prov. 8:8,9).

COMMUNICATIONS

Another Young Man Offers Himself For The Ministry

I noticed in a recent issue of The Restitution that there has been several calls for pastors by churches of our faith. If the places are not already supplied with preachers, would you care to place me in direct communicatin with them? I have never had any experience as a preacher, but twelve years of teaching in the public schools have given me plenty of courage to try it.

I am a young man recently married to one of our faith. I have known and believed the "one faith" all of my life—my parents being members before I was born. But I never obeyed my Lord and Master till I was immersed by Brother Heckman last summer. My wife has been a member for about ten years, having been baptized by our deceased brother H. H. Wilson.

As to my soundness in the "one faith" I wish to say the statement of faith in your book, "The Bible, Its Principles and Texts," I fully endorse.

The doctrine of a "Fair Chance" taught by some of our people and its natural sequence, universalism, does not look attractive to me; neither does the other extreme, the resurrection of the good alone meet with my endorsement. I believe with Paul, in the resurrection of just two classes, "just" and "unjust." The "just" awake from death's sleep "with God's likeness." They are "raised incorruptible." The "unjust" "awake to shame and everlasting contempt." They come forth "unto a resurrection of condemnation; they are to be cast into the lake of fire—the second death."

This being true, then the doctrine of a post resurrectional probation falls flat. What about the "heathen?" If they emerge at all it must be as either "just" or "unjust." But as the "just" include only obedient believers they are excluded from that class. Then are they reckoned as the "unjust"? No, for where there is no law sin is not imputed. Though they may sin it is not "imputed." Hence, they are not responsible sinners. What makes a sinner responsible? "He that heareth my word and rejecteth it." Then the "resurrection of the unjust" is narrowed to the enlightened evil-doer. This is just. Would it be just for God to have the "heathen" to experience a "resurrection of damnation" when they were utterly ignorant of such a fate in store for them? "They shall sleep an everlasting sleep to awake no more." Pardon me for writing so much against the Fair Chance Theory. I have been made to suffer by it in the past, and I have very little patience with it.

John Fiske, Jr.

Any church desiring a minister to settle among them should open correspondence with Brother Fiske. He might arrange to combine teaching with preaching. Address him at Sherwood, Oregon. Editor.

DEMONS, DIAMON.

Thirty-seven of the hundred odd texts in which the translators used the word "devil" should have been translated "false accuser." In the other seventy-seven texts the word is not "diabolos" at all, but a word from the root-form "daimon" altogether distinct therefrom in its meaning; and yet it has been rendered "devil" in all passages where both words have been used in the original. We shall now see what the word is that the Divine mind used in conveying a meaning separate from "diabolos," "false accuser," and which the translators have dared in the Common Version to translate by the same word (devil). If the Spirit used two words, are we willing to be content with one?

The Greek language was the fashionable language at the time of the Savior and his apostles. This word "daimon" is one which existed from an early period. In order, therefore, to discover the true meaning we must go to the Greek writers just as we go to the extant English writers for the true meaning of English.

Through extended inquiry we find that according to Homer, Hesiod, Plato, Cicero, Balbus (the Stoic), etc., the word daimon expresses "spirits" of departed human beings. Many such "spirits" of departed people were deified and worshipped by the ancients. Hence the meaning to the Greeks and those who used the language, namely, daimon—human departed "spirits" raised to the ranks of gods and dieties. Besides their gods the heathen maintained that certain spirits held a middle rank between the gods and men on earth, distributing the benefits and carrying on all intercourses. These were called daimons from daio, meaning to distribute. These spirits or demons became great objects of religious hope and fear, dependence and worship. Why? Because the further opinion prevailed that the celestial gods did not themselves interpose in human affairs, but committed the whole management to these daimons or demons.

The Phoenicians and Egyptians, from whom other people derived the custom, included amongst the greatest gods those who had been benefactors to the human race, and to these demons they erected pillars and statues and dedicated sacred festivities. Opinions similar to those held by the Greeks and Latins were entertained by the Jews. Very early in history they were aquainted with the gods of the heathen and were prone to adopt the principles and practices of the idolatrous neighbors. Were these "devils," these "idols," these "demons" worshipped by the heathen, intelligent? The Bible says: "The idols of the heathen are silver and gold, the work of men's hands. They have mouths, but speak not; eyes have they, but they see not; they have ears, but they hear not; neither is there any breath in their mouths" (Psa. 135:15-17). We can therefore readily understand why the apostle Paul should say, "We know that an idol is nothing in the world, and there is no other God but one." An idol, or devil, "which can neither see nor hear nor walk," surely is "nothing in the world." Aside from the visible image, "the work of men's hands," it has no reality, it does not exist. Hence we see that there is a large class of "devils" mentioned by various writers of the Bible which represent nothing more than the vain imaginings of unenlightened men, or men who departed from the true and living God, and followed their benighted and ignorant neighbors.

More than this, we are informed that these devils were a recent creation: "They sacrificed unto devils, not to God; to gods they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not" (Deut. 32:17). Again we see a sharp contrast between these "devils" and the devil of popular belief. While the popular devil is supposed to date from a remote past, these devils "came newly up," being unknown to the "fathers" of the nation of Israel. Hence Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob lived and died in ignorance of the devils of the later inhabitants of Canaan.

When Christ was claimed to have cast out the demons by Beelzebub, the prince of demons, the Jews were not excited because they understood. Beelzebub was esteemed a god by the Ekronites. They worshipped the fly and the word zebub or zebul is translated "fly." As this was a country which bordered on the sea it was exceedingly infested with flies, and because they thought that was the reason for contagious distempers, they worshipped and sacrificed to the god of the fly. He was a diefied human spirit which the Jews, like other nations, believed in. The fact that Ahaziah applied to Beelzebub in 2 Kings 1:2 shows at what an early date the Jews were influenced by the surrounding heathen beliefs. If Paul reasons that the idols of the nations were nothing, then this prince of idols or devils was nothing; and so it is true equally of other devils. Diamon then means only the deified human spirits of idolatrous nations.

Sister Francis Russell.

BEREAN NOTICES

The Executive Board of the National Berean Society will meet at the home of the president, Miss Leila E. Whitehead, 5439 Ohio St. Chicago, Ill. on Saturday April 21st, at nine o'clock.

If any state or local officers have any problems to be discussed or any Berean has any suggestions to make for our annual conference, please send in the same to the corresponding secretary before the Executive Board meeting. All committees please send in reports of work to date.

Another Society has joined our ranks and we extend a hearty welcome to Eden Valley, Minn. This is the first Berean Society in that section of the country, and we are sure that it will be the nucleus of a state organization.

The Glad Book

I have been keeping a "Glad Book" for a year now, and I am enjoying it so much that I would like to tell you of it. Instead of a diary, I just make an entry each day of something I am glad for, and when you are looking for things that are good and glad, it is surprising how many you find. Each day I find it hard to know what to put down for there are so many sweet, happy things that come up. Perhaps you will laugh—I did when I wrote it—when I tell you there were days last summer during our extreme heat when I wrote that I was glad to-day for the ice-man. It was not because of the fact that his cooling ice helped to relieve us, but because of his sunny optimistic nature. When every one was fretting and fuming, he would come in with his cheery greeting; with always a pleasant word, and a happy comment, and never a complaint of the weather.

One store that I have called up a great deal has caused me to write in my book that I am glad because the man who answers the phone has the pleasantest, happiest voice I ever heard, and is always so glad to have served you. "It takes so little to make us glad" does it not?

I have so many sweet little glad verses I would like to give you that I hardly know which ones to send. Here is a little poem by Strickland Gilliland that I am very glad to read over often.

Which Woman are You

Each day she spoils her happiness
By picking out the hardest thing
For her to get—a snowy dress
Upon her child who loves to fling
Dust by the handfuls in the air
And grime herself: a special shade
Of goods that she has seen somewhere:
A certain outer width of braid
Something exceedingly hard to get,
But that she has to have or fret.
So though the sun shine warm for her
And though the day be bright for her
The world aye holds a storm for her,
And nothing e'er is right for her.

Another says, "I must decide
Which are life's big things, which the small
If naught of cogent harm betide
My loved ones, which are best of all
That I possess: if I can keep
My wonted health and know no lack
Of needful clothing, food and sleep,
No trifles that bestrew my path
Can trouble me: and I shall praise
The giver of my glorious days."
So though the small things oft go wrong,
The larger joys of life are hers;
Her lips are aye attuned to song,
And she is glad what'er occurs.

And this makes me thing of the beautiful talk given before our club a short time ago by Miss D. In talking of her experience in working up the centennial celebrations throught the state, and her intimate talks with the pioneer mothers, she said one dear little old, old lady told her that in those early, hard and trying days, when each day held so much more to be done than she had the time or strength to do, she always tried to decide which things for that day were "the abiding," and she did "the abiding" and let the rest go.

A little article I have cut out and read over often says: "Happiness is a mosiac, composed of many smaller stones." It is the little acts of kindness, the little courtesies, the disposition to be accomodating, to be helpful, to be sympathetic, to be unselfish, to be careful not to wound the feelings nor to expose the sore spots, to be charitable of the weaknesses of others, to be considerate which are the little things that, added up at night, are found to be the secret of a happy day.

A little boy said to his mother, "I could not make little sister happy no way I tried it, but I made myself happy trying to make her happy." "I make Jim glad and he laughs," said a little boy speaking of his invalid brother, "and that makes me glad and I laugh." How much greater are all these than one great act of note-worthy goodness once a year. Our lives are made up of trifles.

A little clipping of Oliver Wendell Holmes is one of my favorites. "If you should give me a dish of sand and tell me there were particles of iron in it, I might look for them with my eyes, and search for them with my clumsy fingers and be unable to find them, but let me take a magnet and sweep though it, and how it would draw to itself the most invisible particles by the mere force of attraction. The unthankful heart, like my fingers in the sand, discovers no mercies, but let the glad heart sweep throug the days, as the magnet finds the iron, so it will find in every hour some heavenly blessing: only the iron in God's sand is gold."

And I wanted to give you one of my blue-bird calendar verses, but I do not want to tire you for then you would not be glad. Every page of the blue-bird calendar, though, is full of happiness and gladness.

I do so wish you everything that is glad and good and bright and beautiful.

Lovingly, E. S.

BAPTISMAL SERVICE.

At the close of our regular service at Plymouth, Sunday, March 25, Michael Fetters made confession of faith and was baptized at 3 o'clock p.m. At the close of the evening service James A. Stillson came forward and was baptized immediately after the close of the meetng. May the blessings of the Father, the love of the Savior and the goodwill of the Church be with these brethren.

Bro. Fetters has been contemplating this step for some time, and Sister Fetters is greatly rejoiced that all her family, who are old enough, have taken this important step. They reside at Lucerne near Logansport.

HOW TO GET A BEAUTIFUL VIEW OF THE BIBLE

Some of Brother J. F. Wagoner's Last Thoughts

"Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law." Amen. In a city in Europe a famous painting is hung in a gallery. The beauty of the painting can only be seen by adjusting the light from a number of windows made for the purpose of giving the proper shadings. Those who have viewed a glorious sun-set know the beautiful effect the light of the setting sun throws upon every object in the landscape. Even so do the bright rays of light that shine from "God's eternal purpose" illuminate the Scriptures that we are commanded to search. And to encourage us to search, God tells us his word is a lamp to our feet and a light unto our path. He declares that the "entrance of his word giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple."

A BRIGHT PAGE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Tidbits of Pleasant and Useful Information Gathered from Everywhere

Usefulness is the rent we pay for room on earth. Many of us are heavily in debt.

Only in dreams is a ledder thrown,
From the weary earth to the saphire walls;
But the dreams depart, and the vision falls,
And the sleeper awakes on his pillow of stone.

Cowardice asks, Is it safe?
Experience asks, Is it politic?
Vanity asks, Is it popular?
But the conscience asks, Is it right?

"One mediator between God and man." The papists do not believe so. They think that Mary is superior to her Son as a mediator. Philip Henry. tells us that at Dieppe, in Normandy, there is an image of Our Lady with a rod in her hand to correct her Son if he refuses to do what she wishes him.

O, desire of all nations, come! The resources of the universe will be in his hands when he comes. To him the Father hath said, "Thy throne O God, is forever," and the time hastens on when the whole earth will be one vast temple, filled with the glory of God, and echo with the hallelujahs of "an assembly such as earth never saw, such as heaven stoops down to see." Welcome the consummation! O months and seasons and years speed your tardy flight, and usher in the blissful day, that day when from every hill and valley, shall ascend clouds of incense, to return in sparkling showers of mercy; when every heart shall swell with angelic hymn, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace and goodwill to man;" when the pealing chorus of a renovated world shall answer back the thundering acclamations of the skies, and every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that is in them shall say, "Allelujah! the Lord God omnipotent reigneth! Worthy is the Lamb that was slain! Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever."—From Brother M. Joblin's scrap-book.

PENAL DEATH

"The soul that sinneth it shall die" (Ezek. 18:4).

Mark you, the passage does not say, The soul that sinneth it shall have no resurrection; but, "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

Neither does it say, The soul that sinneth, his offspring shall die; but, "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

Nor yet does it say, The soul shall die whether it sins or not; but "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

Here is a death due personal sin; a death exclusively for the sinner; and a death which the sinless will not die. This must be penal death. It is not a death to be borne for Adam's sin, for verse 20 reads: "The soul that sinneth it shall die; the son shall not bear the iniquity of the father." Surely this is a death that only the sinner himself shall die; a death that the repentant shall not die; for verse 21 reads: "If the wicked turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die."

Here is death that a man escapes by repentance. How does he escape? By a resurrection? No. By not dying. God does not say: Will have no resurrectino, but, "Why will ye die." This must mean the "second death," after the resurrection. What will you do with these facts my non-resurrection friends? We cannot escape the force of this argument by saying that this meant special national judgments on the Jews, for the language of the whole chapter admits of only individual sins. Every one who repents escapes the threatened calamity, which is never true of national judgments.

Neither does it refer to the infliction of death by the hands of man for the violation of the Jew's civil code, because:

(1) Repentance never saved anyone from the execution of the civil law where the crime had death appended as its penalty, any more than repentance saves a man from being hung for crimes in certain states.

(2) Some of the sins named in this 18th chapter of Ezekiel were not punishable by death under the civil code of the Jews, but as God threatens death for these sins, unless repented of, it is evident that a higher code than the civil law of the Jews is referred to.

Verse 26 reads: "When a righteous man (not a righteous nation) turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die." Here is a death for unrepented sin, that the lost sinner must die, and the repentant sinner will not die. Since the sinner dies once in his sin, and then for his sin, this last death must be the "second death." And there can be no second death without a resurrection.—"Our Hope."

Cause for Wonderment

A Scottish doctor who was attending a laird had instructed the butler of the house in the art of taking and recording his master's temperature with a thermometer. On paying his usual morning call, he was met by the butler, to whom he said:

"Well, John, I hope the laird's temperature is not any higher today?"

The man looked puzzled for a minute and then replied:

"Weel, I was just wonderin' that mysel.' Ye see, he deed at twal o'clock."

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O, APRIL 17, 1917 NUMBER 15

AWAITING OUR KING

Oh, what a glorious prospect
Does the blessed gospel bring,
That we at last may look upon
Our gracious Lord and King!
And when the day arrives that he
In righteousness shall reign,
We pray we may be worthy then,
If dead to live again.

But if we still are living,
When he comes to take his throne,
Oh, let us all be ready
When he calls us for his own.
And when the trump of God shall sound
And terror fills the earth,
Sweet music may it be to us,
And signify new birth.

So let us keep our garments white
And plod our onward way,
And keep our lamps well filled with oil
'Gainst that approaching day.
And when he stands on Zion's hill,
That day for which we long,
Then may the earth reverberate
With praises and with song.

THE GUIDE BOOK MEETS EVERY EMERGENCY

The word of God is a living word, and we do not believe that any new conditions will arise that the faithful, watchful servants cannot find adequate instructions for the occasion. The present conditions we believe to be the most perilous times that this generation has ever seen, and I suppose the world's history knows not a time of greater "distress among nations, and men's hearts failing them for fear; and for looking after these things." The fearful darkness that precedes the dawn is upon the world. Therefore let us cling to the guiding hand that alone can lead us to the perfect day.

Paul's exhortation to Timothy meets our need for today. "I exhort therefore that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority (now notice particularly why we should pray for all those men in authority: it is not for their conversion, nor for their salvation, but), that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior" (1 Tim. 2:2,3).

Now brethren, if those in authority have been exercised by these supplications and prayers, and have framed the constitution of the country to which we are subject, while awaiting for our king, so that every man may worship God peaceably and honestly, according to the dictates of his own conscience, we cannot see any scriptural reason why we should not thankfully receive this God-given privilege. Neither can we see wrong in petitioning those in authority to exempt us from the necessity of either taking up the sword, contrary to the commandments of God, and our conscience, or willfully refusing to obey those in authority. It seems no more than paying the honor that is due to those in authority, to ask them that we may lead peaceable quiet lives. Then if they refuse our petition, that we may serve God in spirit and in truth, "honor' is not due to the man who thinks to put his authority above the commandments of God. "Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake. For this cause pay ye tribute also; for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing." Daniel as bold as a lion, "purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank (notice here what Daniel did, he who was never known to dishonor his God), therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself." The prince was afraid to grant his petition; he feared it would cost him his life; but Daniel persisted in his plea until it was granted. "And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king who hath appointed your meat and your drink: for why should he see your faces worse looking than the children which are of your sort? Then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king. Then said Daniel to Melzar whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Prove thy servants, I beseech thee ten days: and let them give us pulse to eat and water to drink. Then let our countenance be looked up on before thee, and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat: and as thou seest, deal with thy servants. So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days.

Daniel had purposed in his heart not to defile himself, and as he finally had the opportunity to prove, if his petition had not been granted, he was ready and willing to face the firey furnace, or the lion's den, rather than to desecrate the name of his God. "Render therefore to all their dues; tribute to whom tribute is due, custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor." Brethren, let us use the means provided and prescribed for our use and use them thankfully. Let us watch and pray that we may be accounted worthy to escape the things that are coming upon the world of the ungodly, and to stand before the Son of Man.

If I am wrong in my views of this matter, I hope some one will set me right before all who may read this, for we cannot afford to be wrong either in our faith or practice in these perilous times. Watch ye therefore. Be ye also ready, for the king is at the door.

Your sister in hope,
Sadie Skeels.

BRETHREN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

S. H. Thomas

Eagerly I break the wrapper of each number of The Restitution, vainly hoping that some brother or sister has discovered some new light that will give us a clue as to the progress of events from now forward. Full well I know that eager eyes, beside my own, are intently watching the unfolding of God's wonderful purpose; and while we each have in our mind an idea of what seems to us to be the probable course of events, yet in the absence of any known, positive evidence, we hesitate to express our thoughts, and hence the silence of our paper upon the most engrossing subject.

But may not this be a mistaken policy? Would it not be better, and make our paper more interesting, if we would tell each other what we think may be the order of future events, and the probable date of the coming of the Lord? Such an exchange of ideas and opinions, could not but result in an increase in interest and knowledge.

Personally I look for a speedy ending of this present war, by the downfall of Germany and Austria, not by the arms of their enemies alone, but by internal troubles, probably rebellion and revolution, and the establishment of a republican form of government upon the ruins of the house of Hohenzollern, and Hapsburg. When the common people dethrone their bloodthirsty rulers, and cry for peace, the allies will gladly grant it. But the unspeakable Turk is doomed; the "great river Euphrates" will very soon become completely dry. Great Britain will possess Palestine and Egypt, while Russia will take her long coveted seat in Constantinople, the gateway of the east.

At the end of this war we may expect a peace conference of the nations of a magnitude greater than ever before in the history of the world, at which conference the entire map of Europe will be changed, and in the new arrangement of the nations, which will at that time take place, may perhaps be found an exact representation of Daniel's image, with exactly ten toe kingdoms on its feet from among whom another shall arise and subdue three. This is the antichrist, the man of sin, the son of perdition, the king of fierce countenance. He will speedily rise above the others from among whom he came, and take his place as the representative head of the restored image, and for the short space of seven years, will bear rule over that territory over which the head of gold once ruled. "His power shall be mighty, and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and do his pleasure. And he shall destroy the mighty ones, and the holy people, and through his policy he shall cause craft (trade and business) to prosper. He shall also stand up against the prince of princes (when he comes); but he shall be broken without hand" (when the stone smites the representative image on the feet, and reduces it to chaff).

Immediately after the great peace conference of the nations, I look for England to offer the Jews some proposition under which they will feel secure to return to their own land, and re-establish their old Jewish state, or commonwealth, with Jerusalem once more their own beloved capitol city.

This is a marked epoch, for at that time will begin the seventieth week of Daniel 9:27, and exactly seven years from the establishment of that Jewish state, the stone will smite the image. Jesus, the blessed Lord, will come with all his saints around him for at some point during these last seven years the Bride will go forth to meet her coming Lord it the air.

If therefore, these suggestions be correct, the march of events may be somewhat as follows: Rebellion and revolution in Germany and Austria, soon; abdication or assasination of present rulers, and a cry for peace from the common people; a gigantic peace conference, resulting in the formation of exactly ten kingdoms or governments, on the old Babylonian territory; the dismemberment of Turkey; the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine; the manifestation and rise to power of the antichrist; the catching away of God's people to meet their Lord; fresh trouble among the nations; invasion of Palestine by Russia and her allies, opposed by Great Britain and her allies, resulting in the battle of Armageddon, during which battle the Lord will come and all his saints around him. May you and I, dear reader, be numbered with that favored throng.

THE MANY MANSIONS

John 14:2,3

A learned D. D. of one of the popular churches, upon being asked by the writer for his strongest Scriptural proof that good people go to heaven when they die, replied: "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." Note the omission, "That where I am, there ye may be also."

The misunderstanding of this text, which is usually missquoted as above, and the assumption by ministers and people generally that the "Father's house" and the "many mansions" are in the sky, although sky is not mentioned in the text, and that the "immortal soul" at the death of the body immediately goes to inhabit these mansions, leads to many erroneous ideas which find expression in some of the popular hymns of the day; such as "When I can read my title clear to mansions in the skys;" "Sun, moon and stars forgot, upward I fly;" "Home above the stars, beyond the bright blue," etc.

Supposing for a moment these things to be true, let us consider what must necessarily take place. A good man's "house"—that is his body—dies, but he himself, that is his "immortal soul," escapes from its house, the body, and immediately takes its flight to its "mansions" in the sky. The question arises how long before he will arrive and be settled in his heavenly home beyond the stars and ready to receive calls from those who have "gone before"? That time is required for even angels' flight is abundantly proven in Dan. 9:20, 23, where we learn that Daniel had time to make a long prayer, before Gabriel arrived, although he was caused to "fly swiftly" from the beginning of Daniel's suplication.

Assuming, however, that he could travel as fast as light, he would pass the moon in a few seconds; he would reach the sun in about eight minutes, and the nearest fixed star in about three years; in one hundred years he would have reached the distance of the Pole star; in a thousand years he would pass some of the moderately distant stars. After six thousand years he would still be sailing among those heavenly bodies; for astronomers tell us that the light we see tonight from some of these distant suns must have started on their long journey before Adam's time; hence Adam has hardly yet reached his home beyond the stars. What a long cold journey, since scientists estimate the temperature of space at something like 600 degrees below zero; and then too, if Jesus comes soon, as we all hope and expect, and the resurrection takes place, Adam will have to double quick back, even at the risk of greatly exceeding the speed limit, or he will miss the resurrection by several thousand years, and his resurrected body will be without a tenant.

But all such delusions are based upon that old serpent's lie, "Thou shalt not surely die" (Gen. 3:4), which in modern times is expressed in the words "The immortality of the soul." These are some of the fables and doctrines of devils which we are so plainly warned against (1 Tim. 4:1,2; 2 Tim. 4:1-5; Rom. 16:17,18; 2 Thess. 2; 1 John 3:8).

But let us consult the Scriptures of truth, instead of the "precepts of men" (Matt. 15:8,9., R. V.), and determine what is meant by the "Father's house and the many mansions," and where they are located.

We find the word "house" frequently used to denote the members of a family or a class of people, as Acts 16:31. "And thou shalt be saved and thy house," or family. Verse 34, "Believing in God with all his house." Heb. 11:7, Noah "saved his house" or family in the ark. Matt. 10:6, "The house of Israel" or people of Israel.

God's people, the church, are called "the house of God" in 1st Peter 4:17; also in Heb., 10:21. Again, in 1st Cor. 3:9 the church is spoken of as "God's building," also in the 16th verse the individual members of the church or house of God are spoken of as the "temple of God:" "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you?" A temple is an elegant and costly building or dwelling place; likewise a mansion in which God dwells by his spirit, as we read in 1st Cor. 6:19: "What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the holy spirit (or spirit of God), which is in you?" Also in John 2:19-21 Jesus speaks of the "temple of his body."

From the above texts, and others that might be cited, we can easily learn that by the "Father's house" is meant his people, his church collectively. The many mansions are the individual members composing the house or family. Hence, "In my Father's house are many mansions" (members, bodies, temples, dwelling places for his spirit).

As further evidence of this, see Eph. 2:9,22, where Paul speaks of the household of God collectively being framed together like a building and becoming a holy temple in the Lord, for a habitation of God through the spirit. Therefore we have found the "Father's house" and the "mansions" not in heaven above the stars, but on the earth.

But Jesus says, "I go to prepare a place for you." For whom? For the house and the mansions he is talking about. Where did he go? In the 10th verse of this chapter he says, "I go to the Father." What has he gone there for? "To prepare a place for you," that is, as he explained more fully in a parable, Luke 19:12: "A certain nobleman (Jesus) went into a far country (to the Father) to receive for himself a kingdom (or authority as king) and to return." But can we not go to him? No; "for whither I go, ye cannot come," says Jesus (John 13:35).

How then can we obtain the place he has gone to prepare? He says in one text: "If I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again (which is overlooked by those that go to mansions in the sky), and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

As to his coming again and the place prepared, we read in Matt. 25:31-34: "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." And again in Luke 12:32, "Fear not, little flock: for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The church are to be joint heirs with Christ in his kingdom.

But how will he receive us unto himself? 1st Thess. 4:16-18: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first (not come down from heaven). Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so (in this manner) shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." Therefore when we read John 14:2,3 in the light of the Scriptures of truth, we get the following ideas: In my Father's house (family or abiding place in whom God dwells by his spirit). If it were not so, I would have told you, I go (to the Father like the Nobleman who went to a far country) to prepare a place for you (to receive for himself a kingdom); and if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself (as we read in Thess. 4:), "that where I am (when he returns) there ye may be also, even to sit with me in my throne (Rev. 3:20) 21), and as Paul says, "And so shall we ever be with the Lord." What a glorious comfort! How much more wholesome, reasonable and worthy of acceptance is the plain, simple, glorious truth of the Scriptures than all the delusions and fables of men. Let us love truth that God will not send us a strong delusion that we should believe a lie. (2 Thess. 2:10-12).

Turtullian attributes triune immersion to tradition, and admits that there is no Scripture for it. Dunkards quote a part of the quotation we now give, but have never as far as I have seen given it in full. It reads "How long shall we draw the saw to and fro through this line; when we have an ancient practice, which has made for us by anticipation the state of the question? If no passage of Scripture has prescribed, assuredly custom, which without doubt flowed from tradition, has confirmed it. For how can a thing come into use if it has not been first handed down? Even in pleading tradition, written authority, you say, must be demanded. Let us inquire therefore whether tradition, unless it be written, should be admitted. Certainly we should say that it ought not to be admitted if we have no case of other practice. If without any written instrument we maintain on the ground of tradition alone the countenance thereafter of custom affords us precedent. To deal with this matter briefly I shall begin with baptism. When we are going to enter the water, but a little before, in the presence of the congregation and under the hand of the president, we solemnly profess that we disown the devil and his pomp and his angels. Hereupon we are thrice immersed, making a somewhat ampler pledge than the Lord has appointed in the gospel. When we are taken up, we taste first a mixture of milk and honey: and from that day we refrain from the daily bath a whole week. We take also, in meetings, before day break, and from the hands of none but the president's, the sacrament of the Eucharist, which the Lord has commanded to be eaten at meal times, and enjoined to be taken by all alike. As often as the anniversary comes round we make offerings for the dead as birthday honors. We count fasting or kneeling on the Lord's day to be unlawful. We rejoice in the same privilege also from Easter to Whit Sunday. We feel pained should any bread or wine even though our own, be cast upon the ground. At every forward step and movement, at every going in and out, when we put on our clothes and shoes, when we bathe, when we sit at the table, when we light our lamps, on couch, or seat, in all ordinary actions of daily life, we trace upon the forehead the sign of the cross. If for these and other such rules you insist upon having positive Scripture injunction you will find none. Tradition will be held forth to you as the originator of them, custom as their strengthener, and faith as their observer" (Turtullian's De Corona).

This lengthy quotation shows that Turtullian believed there was as much Scripture for the sign of the cross as eating the Lord's supper before daylight, refusing to kneel on Sunday, offering for the dead, or tasting milk and honey after baptism. His statement is, "You will find none." No Scriptural injunction. Pretty bad, is it not Mr. Dunkard, for your most ancient witness? In one quotation he admits single immersion is being practiced by fighting it, and in the next he says there is no Scriptural injunction for a triune, and then puts the Catholic sign of the cross on par for being practiced with his baptism. If his authority is good proof that triune immersion is the most ancient baptism, then it is also proof that we should take honey and milk after baptism. The Dunkard will admit that Turtullian's theology was pretty rotten on most points, and if he does that he will have to allow that it is possible for him to be adding to the one baptism, as to the other things of the Christian life. His day was one when the idea was to do works of supererogation. They thought the more they did the greater their reward would be. Hence to them it would bring a blessing to add two dips to the one baptism.

But listen again to Turtullian: "Without expense a man is dipped in water, and amid the utterance of some few words is sprinkled, and then rises again, not much or not at all the cleaner, the consequent attainment of eternity is esteemed the more incredible" (On Baptism, ch. 2). Here he adds sprinkling to dipping, and if three dips are necessary, then sprinkling may also be. Our Dunkard friends have been very mute on this point, and have talked and written as though Turtullian advocated triune immersion, and that alone; and as he was so near the apostles they would have us conclude that triune immersion is apostolic baptism. But he goes too far for them when we allow him to explain himself, and gives them more than they will practice themselves. Mr. Dunkard, why do you not sprinkle after immersion, on the same historic authority that you have for triune immersion? Turtullian may have been a very big negro, but the big fish of eternal truth will drown him in the well of his own digging, for he has said too much. He was so Roman Catholic that he even mentions sponsors in baptism, holy water, and the idea that the water sanctified the baptized one (see On Baptism. ch. 6). Is he safe to follow? It seems that if we wish to follow Rome he is; but if we wish to have Scripture injunction for our faith to be founded upon, we had better let him alone.

Elder J. H. Moore in his pamphlet "Triune Immersion Traced to the Apostles," quotes the fiftieth apostolic canon: "If any bishop or presbyter do not perform three immersions of one initiation, but one immersion which is given into the death of Christ, let him be depoesd, for the Lord did not say, baptize into my death, but go ye and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Do ye therefore, O bishops, immerse thrice into one Father, and Son, and Holy Ghost, according to the will of Christ by the Spirit." This evidence, like the preceding, proves that single immersion was being practiced when it was written, and if it was as Mr. Moore claims, written in the first part of the third century, it proves single immersion was being practiced at that date; and then what some say of Eunomius being its inventor is false, and Dunkards should quit quoting it. Another thing should be here noticed: the two most ancient writers in favor of triune immersion admit the fact that some baptized by single immersion in their day, and that is fatal to the historic proof that triune is the most ancient form of immersion. Other ancient triune immersionists besides Turtullian said triune immersion was based on tradition. Jerome, A. D. 420: "Many other things which are observed by tradition in the churches have acquired the authority of written law, as for instance, to immerse the head thrice in the laver" (Adv. Lucif. ch. 4). Basil: "Triple immersion was derived through tradition" (De Spirit Sanct. ch. 28). Dr. P. Schaff says "The old practice of threefold immersion, which is first mentioned by Turtullian, is of venerable usage, but cannot be traced to the apostolic age." Mr. Moore failed to find it earlier than Turtullian, and so has Mess. Quinter and Chrystal, and if it had been there it would have left its mark; but it is not there, and Chrystal admits the evidence is to the contrary, and should be naturally so understood. Shall we not take the most natural way of understanding the evidence? And when we do we will be in harmony with the persecuted saints of the first centuries of the dispensation.

NEW JERUSALEM

A brother tells us in The Restitution of March 20th that John sees the holy city, New Jerusalem, and explains it to be the bride, the Lamb's wife. I admit that John was given a vision of the holy city as it descended out of heaven from God. I also admit that I have read this chapter many times in the past and several times since reading this brother's assertion, but I am wholly unable to find in that chapter where it is said that the holy city, New Jerusalem is the bride, the lamb's wife. Our brother advises that it does not say that probation ceases at Christ's second coming, nor does it say that any of the dead will be placed on probation after their resurrection.

If it is going to the extreme to affirm the above proposition to be true when they are not clearly stated, then is it not going to the extreme to affirm that the holy city, New Jerusalem, is the bride, the lamb's wife?

This city of God that is to descend from heaven is referred to in Rev. 3:12 thusly: "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is the new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from God." In Heb. 11:10 Paul asserts that Abraham "looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." What city does Paul allude to if not to the city that John saw coming toward the earth in Revelation 21? Paul also refers to the city of God and terms it the heavenly Jerusalem in Hebrews 12:22. It is made plain in Hebrews 13:14 that the people of God are looking for a city to come. "For here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come."

How can the above scripture refer to the church in its glorified state? Paul plainly says that we "seek (a city) to come." Could language be plainer? Or did Paul want us to know that this city that he refers to is the church in the glorified state and that we are seeking for ourselves? We think not. Abraham "looked for a city" and we "seek one to come."

John proceeds to give the size of this city. He tells us that it lies "foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal." Here brethren is the length, breadth, and height of that great city of God that John sees coming out of heaven from God. A furlong is one eighth of a mile, hence twelve thousand furlongs is equal to 1500 miles. A wonderful city of God! Is the above language to be taken as literal or symbolic,? If symbolic, pray tell us what it symbolizes. If this city refers to the church, then inform us how they got to heaven when Jesus tells his people that they could not go there. John (Rev. 21:2) simply says that the holy city is to be "prepared as a bride" not is the bride. Are we right? Let us study to know.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

EDITORIAL

Since last acknowledgements for Brother Wilson's fund we have received contributions from "A Sister," Edna and Chas. Anderson, Ella Knowles and Brother and Sister D. C. Robison. Total now is $68.00 Enough, brethren; thank you.

"So the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life" (Judges 16:30). This remark is made about Samson. It is still true that some men do more good by dying than by living.

A few brethren are opposed to military exemption. They have plausible arguments against it. They have, moreover, submitted these arguments to our readers. "He that is first in his own cause seemeth just, but his neighbor cometh and searcheth him" (Prov. 18.17). In our humble opinion the apparently "just" arguments which have been offered against military exemption, when "searched" out, are not able to stand. Just as we were ready to write an editorial to show this, an article came from Sister Sadie Skeels, entitled "The Guide Book Meets Every Emergency." It is published in this number, so please turn to it and read it carefully. She says in this article just what we were going to write in an editorial. Letters under "Communications" from Sister W. L. Robbins and Brother James Delozier are also to the point, and should be studiously perused. What these sisters say, together with what Brother Delozier writes, effectually rebuts all the arguments which have been made against military exemption. Those who want to join us in an effort to get a Scriptural and honorable discharge from military duties should sign, cut out, and mail to us the military petition on the last page of The Restitution.

Never was any wound healed by a prepared but unapplied plaster: never anybody warmed by the most costly garment made but not put on: never any heart refreshed and comforted by the richest cordial compounded but not received: nor from the beginning of the world was it ever known that a deceived, condemned, miserable sinner was actually delivered from his woful state until of God Christ was made unto him wisdom, righteousness, satisfaction and redemption. For as the condemnation of the first Adam passes not to us except as by generation we are his; so grace and remission pass not from the second Adam to us except as by regeneration we are his. Adam's sin hurts none but those that are in him; and so Christ's blood profits none but those that are in him.

We have been rather reticent editorially on the signs of the times lately, and particularly upon the present European war as touching the subject of prophecy. We feel that we have reasons which justify our position of silence. All students of prophecy are prone to forget that they are only students, and turn prophets. Brother S. H. Thomas has an interesting article in this issue on the subject of prophecy, and while he apparently favors Futurism, we are glad he leaves the matter without dogmatic assertion. The apostate churches talk about an "immortal soul" which does not exist; Sabbath keepers talk about a "ceremonial law" of which the Bible knows nothing; and sometimes even brethren write about "seven years" of a triumphant antichrist, without a shred of Bible proof for such a prophetic time period. Let us beware of speculations, and stick closely to the word of God.

TWO WAYS AND TWO DESTINATIONS

Psalm 1:6

"The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the ungodly shall perish." This text of Scripture penned by the man after God's own heart, takes cognizance of two ways: "the way of the righteous" and "the way of the ungodly." The word translated "way" in this text, and also in Psa. 1:1, is derek in the Hebrew, and means a "trodden path" (Young's Concordance). Webster's definition of way is, "A moving; passage; progression; transit; journey." The righteous and wicked are on a "journey." They are travelling different ways which lead them in different directions, hence they will reach different goals or destinations. The "way of the righteous" we are assured the Lord "knoweth;" while "the way of the ungodly" we are told "shall perish." Let us briefly, but devoutly and prayerfully, consider these two ways and the different destinations to which they lead.

1. "The way of the righteous." This passage or journey, is variously designated in the Bible; as "right" (Ezra 8:21); "good" (1 Sam. 12:23), "upright" (Isa. 35:8); "perfect" Psa. 101:2,6); "light" (Job 24:13); "truth" (Psa. 119:30); and "way of God" (Matt. 20:16; Acts 18:26). The "way of the righteous" is the Lord's way, the "way of salvation" (Acts 16:17). It is norrow and but few travel it, but it leads to life (Matt. 7:14).

2. "The way of the ungodly." This journey is described in the word of God as a way of "darkness" (Prov. 4:19); "not good" (Psa. 36:4); "hard" (Prov. 13:15); "folly" (Psa. 49:13); and "an abomination to the Lord" (Prov. 15:9). It is the way of Cain (Jude 11) and all false prophets (2 Pet. 2:1); it is full of "misery" Rom. 3:16), and is "pernicious" (2 Pet. 2:2). But many travel it, for it has a wide gate to enter, and its destination is "destruction" (Matt. 7:13).

Now here, dear reader, we have the two ways, and to where and to what they lead. All our ways are seen by the eyes of him with whom we have to do (Psa. 119:168). They are "before the eyes of the Lord" (Prov. 5:21); is he pleased with them (Prov. 16:7)? Remember God's ways are not like ours (Isa. 55:8); let us then not choose our "own ways" Isa. 66:3), nor do them (Isa. 58:13), but rather let us pray the prayer of David, "Teach me thy way, O Lord" (Psa. 27:11). "Let us take heed to our ways" (Psa. 39:1), "consider them" (Hag. 1:5-7), "search and try them" (Lam. 3:40); and "see if there be any wicked way" in us; and if we find there is, may God help us to go in the "way everlasting" (Psa. 139:13,24).

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins:

I see some are opposed to the petition for military exemption. I just want to ask them a few questions: Do you think Paul was afraid to trust God when he appealed to Caesar (Acts 25:11)? Do you think Christ doubted God's power when he and Simon paid tribute, lest they should offend the rulers (Matt. 17:27)? Paul says: "If it be possible, as far as in you is, live peaceably with all men." It seems to me that the peaceable way would be through a petition and if they refuse us we have lived peaceably with them as far as possible for us; then it would remain for us to do the next best thing, which seems to be point blank refusal to fight. But I believe we can get exemption if we only try. This would be much better than a flat refusal to obey our rulers. Peter says submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake (1 Pet. 2:13-15). The 6th verse says, "As free and not using your liberty for a cloak of maliciousness." It seems to me if we do not try the "peaceable" way, we are abusing our liberty maliciously. Now Paul says all things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient, so it seems that to provoke our rulers would not be expedient. Let us hear more on this subject.

I write this in all love and goodwill, and only want to find God's way out of this trouble. Your sister in hope of the Lord's soon return.

Mrs. W. L. Robbins

Dear Editor:

I am in favor of military exemption. If nothing else, it will show our president, senators, and representatives where we stand. Is it right to refuse to go to war if our government conscripts us to take up arms against our brother? Let the Bible answer: Jesus says in Matt. 5:41: "Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain." Paul tells us in Titus 3:1, "Put them in mind to obey magistrates." Is it right to refuse to be shot down?

Listen to Paul's exhortations to various duties in Heb. 13:17: "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves." If it would be wrong to appeal to our government for exemption, why did Paul appeal to the government under which he lived? He says in Acts 25:11: "For if I be an offender, or have committed anything worthy of death, I refuse not to die." What more would it take to offend our government for us to refuse to help defend our nation, if another nation should arise against our nation? I know it is against the word of God for his people to kill. I want to live loyal to my nation and be exempted from military duties in an honorable way. I signed the petition and sent it to our Editor some time ago, and I believe every brother ought to do this. I do not understand that this exempts us from national duties; it only exempts us from taking up arms against our fellow man. There is a great deal to consider on this subject. Come on brothers, act quickly; it will soon be too late when war is declared. Press on, Brother Huggins. Your brother in Christ waiting for the soon coming King,

James Delozier.

WHO CHANGED THE DAY

In a tract before me, written by Wolcott H. Littlejohn, it is asserted that the papacy changed the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day of the week. In another tract it is affirmed that the change was brought about gradually, by the Emperor Constantine, by Pope Sylvester (the first Sylvester I suppose) and such bishops as Eusebius. Now if a Roman Emperor, Sylvester, Eusebius and such bishops changed the Sabbath then the power symbolized by the little horn Dan. 7:8-20 that had eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things, had little to do with the change; yet in these same tracts it is affirmed that this little horn power did change the Sabbath; and Catholic authors are quoted in proof of the supposed fact.

It is a fact with which all readers of Roman history are acquainted that the bishops of the Roman church in Rome, had no political authority or power to change times and laws prior to the fall of Western Rome, and therefore prior to the division into ten kingdoms represented by the ten horns of Daniel's vision; after the rise of which three of these are plucked up by the roots.

It is foreshown in the vision that the power symbolized by the horn with eyes and a mouth, would "think to change times and laws." Seventh day keepers assume that the fourth command is included by the term "laws." Now it is a fact that the popes of Rome changed a great many laws, but who knows that the prophecy has any reference to the Sabbath as one of the laws changed? This is the point to be proven. If it is true that Constantine and pope Sylvester, and Eusebius bishop of Caesarea, and many such bishops and popes in Rome and out of Rome changed the Sabbath long before the boastful little horn arose, how can this same horn, or the power it represents, be charged with the crime of changing the Sabbath to the first day of the week?

Constantine by his edict did not change the Sabbath; he makes no reference to it. It was the first day of the week concerning which his notable edict was promulgated. The day was previously observed, as a day of public assembly for worship, by the Christians prior to the date of his edict which was designed to regulate its observance. At this period of the Emperor's history he may have intended to honor the day more for the benefit of pagans than for that of the Christians; and by the phrase "venerable day" meant the day of sunworship. This is nothing here nor there. Seventh day keepers observe Saturday or Saturn's day. If the Christian is paganized by worshiping in public assembly on the first day, so is the seventh day keeper paganized by assembling and worshiping on Saturday. It is impossible to miss a pagan day. Now the fact is that neither are paganized by so doing and could only be by worshiping the same gods that the pagans worshiped, and according their prescribed rituals. This being true, that we have apostolic precedent or precedent of the primitive Christian church, we will not be unsettled by the specious arguments, or objections rather, that it is the pope's day and those who observe it worship "the beast" and drink the wine of the old harlot church, and paganize themselves by observing a day set apart for the worship of the sun. This kind of bugbear may serve to frighten those not well versed in New Covenant truth. These third angel message proclaimers (?) seek further to frighten the timid by quoting Rev. 14:9,10 as foreshowing the certain doom of all Sunday keepers.

Did Constantine the first Christian Roman Emperor change the Sabbath? No. In 321 A. D. he issued an edict touching first day observance. The following is a transcript of the edict: "Let all judges inhabitants of the cities, and artificers rest on the venerable Sunday. But in the country husbandmen may freely and lawfully apply to the business of agriculture; since it often happens that the sowing of corn and planting of vines cannot be so advantageously performed on any other day; lest, by neglecting the opportunity they should lose the benefits which the divine bounty bestows on us."

Constantine was not a pope, and he lived long before the papacy was sufficiently developed to act authoratatively on a question of such grave importance. His edict recognizes the fact that the day was already observed as a day of Christian worship. It was not the design of his edict to transfer the sacredness of the seventh day to the first day. If the Emperor had intended to sabbatize the first day he certainly would have gone further and enjoined that husbandmen abstain from labor on "the venerable day." The Emperor may have regarded it as a happy coincidence that the Christian's day of public worship was the same day on which pagans met to worship the sun.

For Christians to meet and worship on the first day of the week is not to paganize themselves. The seventh day was devoted to the worship of Saturn and therefore called Saturday or Saturn's day. Are seventh day keepers aware of this? Mr. Hessey in his history of Sabbath and Sunday observance gathers up every reference to these days as found in Christian literature subsequent to the days of the Apostles, says Jewish Christians kept the Sabbath in the manner enjoined by the law and also met on the first day of the week for worship, following the example of the churches founded by the Apostles; regarding the day as that on which our Lord arose from the dead: thus keeping two days. Gentile Christians refused to keep the seventh day but observed the first. Mr. Hessey further says that very early in the post-apostolic church the question arose as to the binding obligation of the fourth command, but the obligation to keep the first day of the week was not a subject of dispute. The observance of the first day was not as that prescribed by the sabbath law. That the early church met for worship on the first day of the week can be proven. Acts 20:7 reads: "Upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight." Also 1 Cor. 16:2: "Upon the first day of the week, let each of you set apart whatever his gains may enable him to spare; that there may be no need to make collections when I come."

That the churches founded by the Apostles observed the first day of the week can not be successfully controverted; and following the precedent established by these churches the custom of assembling on this day for a specific purpose, was kept up subsequent to the days of the apostles and down through the centuries to the present day.

HOW GOD PURIFIES HIS PEOPLE

The Scripture tells of the sudden coming of the Lord to his temple and of the purifying process instituted among the sons of Levi. He sits an a refiner and purifier of silver. Let me tell you of a little gathering at a private house in the old country, for the purpose of reading and conversing upon the Scriptures. These verses were read; and after some discussion respecting the method of refining the precious metals it was arranged for one of them to enquire of a silversmith, how it was done and, particularly, what was the business of the refiner himself during the process, and how the silver was freed from the dross. This was promptly explained, and he was asked: Do you sit at your work sir? "Oh, yes;" he replied, "I must keep my eye steadily fixed on the furnace since, if the silver remain too long under the intense heat it is sure to be damaged." The beauty and propriety of the image employed were at once seen. "He shall sit as a refined of silver." As the visitor was leaving the silversmith called to say that he had forgotten to mention one thing of importance, which was, that he only knew the exact instant when the purifying process was complete by his seeing his own countenance in it.

These thoughts led to others. In Titus 2:13,14, we learn what our Lord is doing now. After speaking of the blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, we learn that he gave himself for us, which wonderful gift we celebrate today—that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a pecular people, zealous of good works. This, then, is what he is now doing. This is what Daniel had said nearly 800 years before—"Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly" (Dan. 12:10). And we learn from James 1:12 that there is no crown without the trial. The crown comes after the trial. The crown is only bestowed upon those who have been purified; and the same verse tells us that temptation is one thing to be endured—and a great part of what is to be endured, it may be inferred, because those who endure temptation are pronounced blessed. So that temptation covers nearly all the tests applied to us. And when we pass to the 14th verse we discover the great source of temptation. It is not he of the horns and hoofs so often blamed; but every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own inordinate desires. Read in Mark 7:20-23 the black list prepared as the product of the heart of man, and then decide that that is the grand seat of nearly all our trouble. Humiliating, but true. True, Peter speaks of some fiery trials awaiting the elect as if from without; but they are of a different character, and those sufferings then are in company with Christ—fellow sufferers with Christ - with the glory to be revealed, and the exceeding joy assured them. These chastizements are those of a fond Father for his children for their good. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. Of what help it would be to be able to always distinguish between the trials we bring upon ourselves, and those to which we are wisely subjected for purifying purposes! Doubtless it is in reference to these the promise comes that we shall not be tempted above what we are able. I think it would be a powerful, healthy restraining influence if we would watch the sources of our trials—whether from within or without.

But further: both classes of trials, those from without, and those from within, try the faith. The whole composes the trial of faith— the test of our faith. And Peter to the scattered faithful ones says they greatly rejoice, although for a season manifold temptations may make them heavy; because the "trial of their faith being much more precious than gold that perishes, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ, whom having not seen ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." Yes: trials make the pure metal shine. And although it be written that no affliction for the present seemeth joyous, but grievous, it is also written that it afterward yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousnes.

But let us examine the purifying agencies further. We learn from Acts 15:9 that hearts were purified by faith. There is no mysterious process—no miraculous influence at work to purify hearts. It is by faith, it is true, but purity of heart cannot be imparted as a reward for faith; it springs out of a natural law; it is the effect of a cause. Faith that operates by love; it is that which purifies the heart. But how does it purify? What is the process, I mean? Why, God's gracious covenants disclose so much of his love that we love him, as soon as we believe them; how could we help it? And the moment we love him, we went to keep his commandments; want to please him; and to please him, we must be pure—only the pure in heart shall see God, and we want to see him; and our desire to see him makes us try to learn more of him from his word, and to commune with him through our great High Priest, and in the very nature of things we assimilate, or grow like to whatever we worship. If constantly in company of those we love, we soon resemble them, and if our love be reciprocated they in some measure come to resemble us. This, very briefly, is the way by which I understand faith purifies our hearts, or minds. The mind of the flesh is displaced by the mind of the spirit; because we love its manifestations.

Then we are told in 1 John 3:3 that those who have the hope of seeing Jesus at his coming and being made like him, purifieth themselves even as he is pure. This is explained in the same way—the same natural way as faith is—and passing on to 1 Peter 1:22, where obedience to the truth is said to purify souls, it operates in the same natural way. The truth commands purity, as essential to salvation; and therefore obedience to it, must purify. O brothers and sisters, how is the work going on? It says if we have not the spirit of Christ we are none of his. This does not mean that we shall not hate some things. He hates some things, and expects us to hate them, and commends those who hate them; what are we to hate? Persons? No; deeds, characters, and doctrines that are out of harmony with his will; not persons. See Rev. 2:6-15. When he who is purifying to himself a peculiar people watches the process, does he see himself in us, as does the refiner of silver see himself reflected by the metal? O, tried ones, that is what he is watching for! Oh, that we may not flinch while in the furnace! May the trial of our faith be more precious than gold. May it be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ, which the daily announcements from the East assure us will not long be delayed. May we all make it the chief business of this life to adorn its doctrine, and truly represent him while absent, that we may be glad with exceeding joy to see the King in his beauty and hear his plaudit, "Well done." Amen.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS

It is the commonly conceived idea that Luke 16:19-31 is a statement of facts concerning man's condition in death. We believe this opinion to be wrong. To our mind it is a parable pure and simple, for the following reasons.

First.—It is a link in a chain of eight parables.

Second.—A Latin manuscript of the seventh century and one of the tenth century commenced this text by saying, "And Jesus spoke another parable saying."

Third.—Jesus was speaking to the pharisees (Luke 16:14), and to these he spoke but in parables (Matt. 13:24).

Fourth.—Nearly all commentators agree that it is a parable.

Fifth.—No one can take it literally. Even the "Orthodox" will tell you "Abraham's bosom," for an illustration, is a figure standing for heaven.

If Luke 16:19-31 then is a parable, then the things said are not meant. In the parable of the sower, what does the "seed" represent? the "sower?" the "enemy?" the "field?" the "reapers?" It is safe to say they do not represent themselves. The "seed" stands for the "word;" the "sower," the "Son of Man;" the "enemy," the "devil;" the "field," the "world;" the "reapers," the "angels." So with Luke 16:19-31: the things mentioned stand not for themselves but something else.

This being true, then what does "hades" represent? "Abraham's bosom?" the "rich man?" the "poor man?" the "angels?" the "great gulf?" Allow me to repeat, they cannot stand for themselves, but must represent something else. Then what do they stand for?

The "rich man" stands for the Jews for two reasons:

1. Abraham calls him "son;" he calls Abraham "father."

2. His brethren and therefore himself had "Moses and the prophets."

If the "rich man," then, stands for the Jews—two tribes—then the "five brethren" would stand for ten tribes. In other words, the "rich man" and "his brethren" represent the twelve tribes of Israel.

As the world is divided into but two classes—Jews and Gentiles—it follows that "Lazarus" must stand for the Gentiles. This "rich man"—the Jews—until his rejection of Christ, was the "son" of God, "rich" in his favor, but upon his rejection of the Christ, he "died" to his favored condition and was scattered by the hand of the Romans among the nations. In other words, he entered into his national hades. There he is being bitterly tortured during the "time of the Gentiles."

"Lazarus"—the Gentiles—before the rejection of Christ by the Jews, was then an "alien from God." But upon the Jews rejection of the Christ, God "turned to the Gentiles." Lazarus "died" to his past condition of being an "alien from God" and, upon subsequent belief and baptism, he was inducted "into Abraham's seed" or "bosom" by the "messengers" or "angels" of the gospel. There he is "comforted;" meanwhile the "rich man" is tortured.

What is the "great gulf" between the two? The law. Whoever "keeps the law" can not be a Christian. Whoever keeps it not, is not a Jew, so there it stands, a "great gulf" between the Jew and the Gentile.

But will the "rich man" remain in his national hades forever? Nay, verily. Hades is to be destroyed (Rev. 20:14). Paul says, "If the casting away of them (Jews) be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead?" So then the "rich man" is to "receive life from the dead," and hades is to be destroyed.

It is sometimes stated that all parables are founded upon facts. Some are, and some are not. There is a parable of the trees in Judges 9:8-15, but trees do not talk. It represents what kings did; so the parable of the two eagles recorded in Ezek. 17:2-7. Eagles never cropped off the tops of the cedars and set them out "in a city of merchants," but they represent what was done by two kings. Hence the statement "all parables are founded upon facts" is misleading.

If the "Orthodox" could prove the statement that "all parables are founded upon facts," the parable of the rich man and Lazarus might be of some service to them, but it is manifest that they can not.

A LIVELY HOPE

Peter was an apostle of Jesus Christ, and he blessed God, the supreme being, creator and preserver of the world, the object of worship and Father, the ancestor or forefather of our Lord Jesus Christ. Christ worshiped God as a supreme being, and obeyed him as a Father. God hath begotten us again into a lively hope. How was Peter begotten? By being born of water. Why was not Peter's baptism at that time a lively hope? Because Christ had not been raised. The lively hope is by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. So Peter could say, "I now know that whom I have trusted is the real true Son of God, and the Savior of the world; that he has been born of the spirit, can die no more, and is sitting at the right hand of God, and my hope is now a lively hope, because my Savior has passed from death unto life" (John 5:24; 1 John 3:14).

When do we pass from death unto life? When we become brethren. How do we become brethren? By being baptized into Christ. Peter' lively hope also reached to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for us. What is this inheritance? It is the inheritance that was promised to Abraham and his seed 1921 years B. C. Where is this inheritance now? It is reserved in heaven for us, with our hope (Col. 1:5). Who are the "us"? Those who are kept by the power of God. How are they kept? "Through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." Why is it that we have temptations? To try our faith, and faith worketh patience, that we may be perfect (James 1:2-4). When do we receive the reward for the trial of our faith? At the appearing of Jesus Christ. We have not seen him so how can we love him? By faith. What does this faith do for us? It saves our souls from eternal destruction. How do we purify our souls? By obeying the truth (James 1:18). How long does the word of the Lord endure? Forever. Can we become holy in this life? Perfect in a moral sense, pure in heart, "Set apart to a sacred use" (Psa. 86:2; Mark 6:20; Rom. 12:12; 1 Cor. 3:17).

A BRIGHT PAGE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Tidbits of Pleasant and Useful Information Gathered from Everywhere

Garlick mentioned in the Bible in Numbers 11:5, is still abundant in Egypt, from which country it was introduced into southern Europe. It is now grown in the temperate zones all round the world.

True happiness, true beauty, and true greatness do not depend upon the show of outward things. Neither the king's majesty nor the soldier's brief brilliance are of use to them when their time of trial comes. The finest and most beautiful thing in the world is the man that loves God and trusts in him.

Is Civilization a Failure

"And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep." That was the appearance of things "in the beginning when God created the heaven and the earth." We have made such a miserable failure of our life and civilization upon the earth after untold centuries of existence that it seems we ought to return to first principles and try it all over again. We have little to leave to posterity except a world of unrest, war, bloodshed, famine, brother against brother, misery, pain and poverty. A veritable world of Rachels "weeping for their children, and refusing to be comforted, because they are not."

Is civilization a failure? It certainly has not been a marvelous success.—Sel. by Brother Lang.

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

THE UNCLOUDED DAY

Dearest brother, dearest sister,
May we ever faithful be,
Unto Jesus Christ, our Savior,
Who has said, "Come, follow me."

For we know, that he has suffered
Even death, that we might live:
And he's promised to the faithful
That a crown of life he'll give.

When the Lord shall come in glory,
As the prophet says he'll come,
He will gather all the faithful
Into that blest Eden home.

Then our trials will be over,
And we shall immortal be,
Then we all may shout in glory,
"Grave, where is thy victory."

And we have his precious promise,
That all they who overcome,
May have power over nations,
And may sit upon his throne.

When the Lord shall dwell in Zion,
Then all nations he'll subdue,
Then all sin he will destroy,
Even death destroy too.

God himself will then be with us,
And will wipe all tears away,
In that kingdom under heaven,
We shall dwell through endless day.

WAYMARKS TO THE HOLY CITY

A Study of Daniel VII

Suppose you were traveling a road with which you were unacquainted. You enquire of a stranger, who tells you that the road leads to a glorious city, filled with every good thing, governed by the most benevolent and lovely prince that the world ever saw; and that in that city there is neither sickness, sorrow, pain nor death. He then proceeds to tell you what you may expect to pass on the road, by which you may know that he has told you the truth, and which will mark the progress you have made.

First, then, he tells you that, after leaving him and traveling a while, you will come to a monument that can be seen at a great distance, on the top of which you will see a lion having eagle's wings. At a distance beyond that, you will come to another monument having on it a bear with three ribs in its mouth. Passing on still, you will at length arrive at a monument on the top of which you will behold a leopard having four wings and four heads. After that you will come to a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, with great iron teeth and ten horns. And, lastly, you will come to another place where you will see the same beast with this difference: Three of its first horns have been plucked up, and in place of them has come up a peculiar horn, having eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth. The next thing you will look for, after passing the last mentioned sign, is the city.

With these directions you commence your journey. What do you look for first? The lion. At length you see it. That inspires in you faith in the person's knowledge and truthfulness who directed you. Having passed that sign, the next thing you expect to see, as marked in the directions, is the bear. At length you come in sight of that. "There," say you, "is the second sign he gave me. He must have been acquainted with this road, and has told me the truth." Your faith increases as you travel on. What next do you look for? Not the city, certainly. No; you look for the leopard. Well, by and by you behold that in the distance. "There it is!" you cry; "now I know he has told me the truth, and it will come out just as he said." Is the next thing you look for the city? No; you look for that terrible beast with the ten horns. You pass that, and say, as you travel on, "How exactly the man who directed me described everything." Now your faith is so confirmed that you almost see the city.

"But," say you, "there is one more sign to pass. It is the horn with eyes, then the city comes next." Now hope is high; your anxious eyes gaze with intense interest for the last sign. That comes in view, and you exclaim in rapture, "There it is!" All doubt is now removed. You look for no more signs. Your longing eyes are fixed to gaze on the glorious city next, and probably no man, however wise he might profess to be, could make you discredit what your director has told you. The city is fixed in your eye, and onward you go, hastening to your rest. Now, if we find on examination that all the events or signs that God gave us, which were to precede the Lord's coming and setting up of his everlasting kingdom, have actually taken place, what do we look for next? Answer, the judgment of the great day; the glorious reward of the just; the city of the great King. Let us then, examine the seventh chapter of Daniel, where these waymarks to the holy city and the everlasting kingdom of the Redeemer are given.

The Prophetic Beasts

Verses 1-3: "In the first year of Belshazzar, king of Babylon, Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed, then he wrote the dream and told the sum of the matter. Daniel spake and said, I saw in my vision by night, and behold the four winds of the heavens strove upon the great sea. And four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another." The four beasts seen by the prophet are symbols of four kingdoms which should arise, as shown by verse 17, which reads, "These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth." And to show that these are not kings simply, but kingdoms, the angel continues, "But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom." And still farther, in the explanation in verse 23, the angel says, "The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon the earth." Winds denote strife, political commotion and war. Sea or water, denotes people and nations. See Rev. 17:15.

The Lion

Verse 4: "The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings; I beheld until the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made to stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it." Babylon, as described in this vision, is here fitly represented by a lion, the king of beasts, denoting the glory of that kingdom, and corresponds with the head of gold in chapter 2. The eagle's wings represent the rapidity of its conquest, and the soaring pride of its monarch (Hab. 1:6-8). The plucking of its wings may refer to the humiliation of the proud monarch of Babylon (chapter 4:31-37), or the cowardice of Belshazzar who, instead of driving away his foe like a lion, shut himself up in the city, feasting and drinking with the lords, till he was killed and the kingdom given to the Medes and Persians.

The Bear

Verse 5: "And behold, another beast, a second, like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it. And they said thus unto it, Arise devour much flesh." The bear, corresponds with the silver breast and arms of the image, and represents the Mede and Persian kingdoms, which succeeded Babylon. It was noted for cruelty and thirst of blood. The three ribs, in the mouth of this bear, evidently symbolizes the three great powers conquered by the Medo-Persian kingdom, viz., Babylon, Syria and Egypt. See Roland's Ancient History. It subdued many populous kingdoms. Ahasuerus, or Artaxerxes reigned over one hundred and twenty-seven provinces (Esther 1:1).

The Leopard

Verse 6: "After this I beheld, and lo, another like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it." The leopard corresponds with the brazen side of the image of chapter 2, and illustrates Grecia. The four wings denote the rapidity of its conquest under Alexander. The Grecian empire maintained its unity only during the life of Alexander. When his brilliant career ended in a drunken debauch, the empire was shortly divided between his four leading generals, represented by the four heads of the leopard. Cassander had Macedon and Greece, in the west; Lysimachus had Thrace and the part of Asia on the Hellespont and Bosphorus, in the north; Ptolemy received Egypt and Lydia; Arabia, Palestine and Syria, in the south; and Seleucus had Syria and all the rest of Alexander's dominions in the east.

The fourth Beast

Verse 7: "After this I saw in the night vision and behold, a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth; it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it; and it was diverse from all the beasts which were before it; and it had ten horns." The fourth beast corresponds with the iron legs of the image in chapter 2, and represents the Roman kingdom. The ten horns of the beast correspond with the ten toes of the image, and represents the ten kingdoms into which the western empire of Rome was divided. The addition of heads, wings, or horns, to any beast found in nature would not answer as a symbol to represent this power. It was diverse form all others, and the symbol wholly nondescript, or unlike any beast in nature.

The Ten Horns

Verse 8: "I considered the horns, and behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots, and behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things." The prophet considered the ten horns. These represent: (1) The Alemanni; (2) Franks; (3) Burgundian; (4) Vandals; (4) Suevi; (6) Visigoths; (7) Saxons; (8) Ostrogoths; (9) Lombards; (10) Heruli. He saw a little horn forcing its way up among the ten, which plucked up three of them. This horn, little at first, but afterwards more stout than his fellows, represents the papacy. The three kingdoms plucked up before it were those of Heruli, the Vandals, and the Ostrogoths. But of this power we shall speak more fully when we come to the angel's explanation in verse 25.

The Thrones Set Up, or Judgment of The Eleventh Horn

Verses 9,10: "I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of Days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheel as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the judgment was set, and the books were opened." If the judgment is not described here, then certainly it is not to be found in the book of God. The Ancient of Days, God the Father, takes the throne of judgment. Those who stand in his presence either to minister or to wait, are not men but angels. Compare Daniel 7:10 with Rev. 5:11. Daniel describes the opening of the judgment of the righteous, which occurs in heaven prior to the return of the Lord to this world to raise them from the dead. The Father presides as judge. The angels of God are present as ministers and witnesses. At this tribunal the Son of Man presents himself to receive the dominion of the world. But men are not present to witness this part of the judgment. It is the Father and the Son and the holy angels who compose the grand assembly. The thrones named in the text are not those of earthly governments, but thrones of judgment. The best authorities give the words "cast down" the sense of "were placed." They render them "set up" or "established." Thus Adam Clark says: "The thrones were cast down, might be translated erected; as the Vulgate, and all the versions." The Revised Version, also the Douay reads, "were placed," and Matthew Henry in his exposition, renders it "set up." The term used by the Septuagint, literally rendered, according to Liddell and Scott would be, the "thrones were set." The judgment scene embraced the establishment of thrones and the setting in judgment of the great God, amid the brightness of that glory, feebly represented by fire and flame surrounded by angelic hosts, and the opening of the life records of men, from which they are to be judged.

The Voice and Word of the Eleventh Horn

Verses 1-12: "I beheld then because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake; I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame. As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away; yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time." There are those who believe in a thousand years triumph of the gospel and reign of righteousness over the world before the Lord comes; and there are others who believe in probation after the Lord comes, and a mixed millennium, the immortal righteous still proclaiming the gospel to mortal sinners, and turning them into the way of salvation. But both of these systems of error are completely demolished by the verse before us.

1. The fourth terrible beast continues without change of characters, and the horn continues to utter its blasphemies, and hold its millions of votaries in the bonds of a blind superstition, till the beast is given to the burning flame; and this is not its conversion, but its destruction (2 Thess. 2:8).

2. The life of the fourth beast is not prolonged after its dominion is gone as were the lives of the preceding beasts. This dominion was taken away, but their lives were prolonged for a season. The territory and subjects of the Babylonian kingdom still existed, though subjected to the Persian; so of the Persian kingdom in respect to Grecia, and of Grecia in respect to Rome. But what succeeds the fourth kingdom? No government or state in which mortals have any part. Rome's career ends in the lake of fire, and it has no existence beyond. The lion was merged into the bear; the bear into the leopard; the leopard, into the fourth beast; and the fourth beast, into what? Not into another beast but into the lake of fire, which is its final destruction. Then let no one talk of probation in a mixed millenium after the Lord comes. (The writer is wrong here in part. His argument is unanswerable so far as the fourth beast is concerned, and therefore refutes Russell's claim for another chance for Catholics; but it comes short of proving there will be no probation for anybody in the coming age.—Editor.)

The adverb "then" in the sentence, "I beheld then, because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake," seems to refer to some particular time. The work of investigative judgment is introduced in the verses before, and this verse would seem to imply that while the work is going forward, and just before the power is destroyed and given to the burning flame, and the little horn utters its great words against the Most

High. Have we not heard them, and that too, within a few years? Look at the Vatican council of 1870. What can be more blasphemous than to attribute infallibility to a mortal man? And here we have an Ecumenical council assembled for the purpose of deliberately deceiving, that this man of sin, possesses the perogative of God, and cannot err. Can anything be more presumptious and blasphemous? Is not this the voice of the great words which the horn spake? and is not the power near to the burning flame?

"AN ANCHOR OF THE SOUL"

Peter, in his second epistle says:"Through the knowledge of him that hath called us; are given to us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these we may escape the corruption that is in the world through lust" There never was a time when this knowledge was so necessary as it is in these times, which seem to be so surely the last times, the darkest hours before the dawn. All around us we see wonderful events taking place. Men can understand why some things are so and why they are being done, but many things are taking place that neither the learned nor unlearned can understand or make an excuse for. Paul in 2Tim. 3:1-4 truly describes the times we live in. We see on every hand speculation, doubt, mystery, fog, uncertainty and darkness. What a wilderness! What a sea of trouble! In the midst of all this, what is our position? The Captain of our salvation did not leave us without instruction as to our conduct in these troublous times of "men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth." "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

We don't have to speculate as to why this is so because "we have laid hold upon the hope set before us. The precious promises which God confirmed with an oath that we might have strong consolation, which hope we have as an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast" (Heb. 6:17-19). What precious promises they are, and what a glorious hope is ours! Life not only without grief, sighing, sorrows and tears, but life when the curse is removed, when all kings and rulers and authorities must give place to the King of righteousness and peace. We cannot now realize what life will be under these conditions. Without this hope what have we? Speculation; as the apostle says, "tossed about by every wind of doctrine," having no anchor and liable to be dashed on the rocks. But being so surely anchored, though we are in what Daniel calls the time of the night visions, yet we are on the watch for the coming of the great day star,when these mists and doubts and uncertainties will pass away.

Endeavor then to let others see that we have such an anchor and induce them to lay hold on this hope. As we see the troubles and turmoils among the nations, the terrible confusion, not only in the natural but also in the religious world, we hear Jude speak of "certain ungodly men denying the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ." "Raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame" (Jude 4,13). And Paul cautioned Timothy of this same thing, "not to neglect the gift that is in thee.... holding faith, and a good conscience, which some having put away, concerning faith have made shipwreck" (1 Tim. 1:19). Let us imitate the apostle, "Approving ourselves as the ministers of God in much patience, in distresses, in tumults, (margin "in tossings to and fro"), in labors, in watchings, in fastings" (2 Cor. 6:5). We can even rejoice during the storm because we know "the Lord maketh a way in the sea and a path in the mighty waters" (Isa. 43:16) Jeremiah says: "Though the waves thereof toss themselves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not pass over it" (Jerem. 5:22).

David, in calling upon men to praise the Lord for his goodness, gives a reason: "He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still. Then are they glad because they be quiet: so he bringeth them into their desired haven" (Psa. 107:29,30). In another place we read, "He stilleth the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves, and the tumult of the people." Truly precious promises. What a wonderful treasure this hope is to us and we can follow the exhortation, "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip." How we must watch the links in the chain so that we do not slip from the anchor. Remember the words of our Captain: "Watch, for ye know not the hour; be ye ready for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh. Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh, shall find so doing."

SOME THOUGHTS ON CURRENT EVENTS

I have just finished reading a book from the public library entitled "The Jews of Russia and Poland," by Israel Fried Cander, published in September 1915.

I cannot say that it is altogether an interesting book. No history of the Jews in their dispersion can be made interesting for the simple fact that the terrible abuse to which they have been submitted is just one long catalogue of distress and cruelty, with no redeeming features whatever. Every other history has its bright spots in interesting fights at least even if they were not all victories. Scotland has its Wallace, England its Cromwell, and America its Washington, and we sort of feel relieved in contemplating that humanity had an opportunity to assert itself in a kick at the oppressor and the bully, but in the case of the Jews it is only a long dismal account, unrelieved by any spark of hope.

But there are some things in this book, however, that I think will interest The Restitution readers, and I take the liberty to call their attention to a few points, and most particularly to the closing words of the author, which I will quote verbatim with some omissions for the sake of brevity.

This writer makes the statement that one half of the Jews in all the world live in what was once the territory of the kingdom of Poland. He gives as a reason for this, that during their terrible persecutions in the middle ages the Jews had somewhat of a respite there owing to political conditions, and there they flocked from all directions. All this changed, however, when the kingdom of Poland was divided among the age long Jewish oppressors, and when the bulk fell to the "Giant of the North." With the fact in mind of this great bulk of Jewry in this centralized position and in an organized condition, together with other interesting facts in regard to the Jews in America that no doubt our readers are aware of, the quotation from the Psalms looms up suggestively, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power." The following are the remarks referred to.

Remarks Quoted from "The Jews of Russia and Poland"

The advent of Nationalism and later on of Zionism, marks a racial turn in the inner development of Russian Jewry. It has given new hope to the despairing victims of Czardom. Imprisoned like criminals in that gigantic gaol which under the name of Pale of Settlement Russian autocracy had artificially erected for its Jewish subjects, shut out from the sources of economics and cultural progress, humiliated in their dignity as men and threatened in their existence as Jews, their eyes longingly turned to that natural and historic Pale of Settlement where the Jewish people, while retaining all the vigor of its religious and national distinctiveness might become a happy and useful member in the family of nations . . . . . . Zionism has called into play the inborn though latent energies which had almost been crushed by tyrannical oppression. It has revived the spirit of self confidence and self determination in Russian Jewry . . . . . . Russian Jewry, to use the phrase of Ahad Haam its greatest interpreter, is now standing at "the parting of the ways" . . . . Those with a pioneer spirit who are courageous enough to blaze a path for themselves will go to Palestine to fit the land of our fathers to become the land of our children; others will remain in Russia and assist in the rejuvenation of the mighty giant of the North . . . . . .

We are living at a moment when humanity is passing through one of its greatest crises in its history. The time is out of joint and our mind involuntarily turns to the mysterious "latter days" —the aharith hayyamim depicted on such soul stirring colors by our ancient prophets: "And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood and fire and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness and the moon into blood before the great and terrible day of the Lord come." But amidst the fearful gloom that threatens to engulf us, there is just one ray of light that saves us from despair. It is the hope that when the great and terrible day of the Lord will come, it will not come in vain; that it will be a day of reckoning for the power of evil, a day that will sweep out of existence all the wrong and injustice which has been accumulating for centuries in the life of mankind. And as Jews we can fervently trust that the day which will inaugurate a happier era in the life of humanity will also mark the end of the wrong and injustice which has been so monstrously heaped upon the Jewish people. And when the Jews now facing destruction in the empire of the Czars, will emerge from the world conflict to a free and happy existence, then will be literally fulfilled the words of the ancient seer uttered in a moment of supreme national danger: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined."

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

One of Nature's Marvels

There is probably no more remarkably example of natural statuary in the world than the famous stone face of the Pyrenees, in Spain. The elevation stands alone, surrounded by valleys so that the profile dominates the skyline for many miles.

The chin is firmly modeled, while the lips seem to be tightly compressed. The line representing the nose is drawn with a strong bold stroke, giving it a true Castilian character.

The mountain with this singular contour rises so high above the surrounding country that it may be seen for many miles. It is, besides, modeled on such heroic lines that the appearance of foliage, even the growth of forest, does not alter the lifelike appearance throughout the seasons.— Sel. by Brother Goss.

High. Have we not heard them, and that too, within a few years? Look at the Vatican council of 1870. What can be more blasphemous than to attribute infallibility to a mortal man? And here we have an Ecumenical council assembled for the purpose of deliberately deceiving, that this man of sin, possesses the perogative of God, and cannot err. Can anything be more presumptious and blasphemous? Is not this the voice of the great words which the horn spake? and is not the power near to the burning flame?

Peter, in his second epistle says:"Through the knowledge of him that hath called us; are given to us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these we may escape the corruption that is in the world through lust" There never was a time when this knowledge was so necessary as it is in these times, which seem to be so surely the last times, the darkest hours before the dawn. All around us we see wonderful events taking place. Men can understand why some things are so and why they are being done, but many things are taking place that neither the learned nor unlearned can understand or make an excuse for. Paul in 2Tim. 3:1-4 truly describes the times we live in. We see on every hand speculation, doubt, mystery, fog, uncertainty and darkness. What a wilderness! What a sea of trouble! In the midst of all this, what is our position? The Captain of our salvation did not leave us without instruction as to our conduct in these troublous times of "men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth." "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

We don't have to speculate as to why this is so because "we have laid hold upon the hope set before us. The precious promises which God confirmed with an oath that we might have strong consolation, which hope we have as an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast" (Heb. 6:17-19). What precious promises they are, and what a glorious hope is ours! EDITORIAL

We are gratified to report the following additions this week: Sister Nettie Robson by return to fellowship, and Mrs. Margaret Smith, formerly presbyterian, Mrs. Anna Prosek, formerly neutral, and her husband, Mr. Joseph Prosek, formerly Baptist, by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ. Sister Prosek is a sister in the flesh to Brother Wm Novy whose espousal of the truth some months since first called the attention of Brother and Sister Prosek to the gospel. Several others are interested and contemplate obedience soon.

THE PSALMS AS HISTORY AND PROPHECY

Psalms 2: 1.

Having established the prophetical and messianic character of the Psalms in general, and the second chapter in particular, we now enquire as to the time of their fulfillment. Are the psalms history or prophecy? fulfilled or unfulfilled prediction? Have they become history, or are they yet to be written on the page of history? We take the position that they are largely historical; but as historical events have only incipiently fulfilled them, we claim that in order to give them plenary scope and illustration, they will have in the future their full accomplishment in the person of Christ, and the events of his governmental reign. That they are both historical and prophetical will be made evident to the reader as we proceed.

"Why do the heathen rage ,and the people imagine a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord and against his anointed." That this language was applicable to the Messiah, and to the people of his day, and describes their wicked opposition to him, is made plain in Acts 4: 24,28. After quoting the Psalm now under review, the Spirit remarks: "Of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together." Here "the kings of the earth" who according to prophecy, were to "set themselves" "against his anointed," are mentioned by name. The "rage" of Christ's enemies, when they had "tumultuously assembled" (see margin of Psa. 2:1), the "vain" thought they had of getting rid of Christ by killing him; the "counsel" the officials had with each other—of all this it can be truly said: "Of a truth against thy holy child Jesus," this prophecy is written history. While kings and rulers and a raging populace were thus treating Christ, in putting him to death, "he that sitteth in the heavens" laughed (Psa. 2:4), and immutably declared, "The Lord shall have them in derision." And he did. On the third day he said to Christ: "Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee" (ver. 6). Subsequently Paul declared at Antioch: "And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same to us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is written in the second Psalm, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee" (Acts 13: 32,33).

The Old Testament is often quoted by Christ and his apostles; but this is the only quotation found in the New Testament where the chapter of the book is given from which the language is taken. The part of the second Psalm here quoted by Paul, he says "God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children." Almighty power revived Christ from the dead the third day, "no more to return to corruption" (Acts 13: 34). To the great "derision" of his enemies he was brought to life eternal by the resurrection of the dead, "after the power of an endless life" (Heb. 7: 16). The people who said, "Let his blood be upon us and our children" were spoken to in God's wrath, and vexed in his sore displeasure (Psa. 2: 5) by the desolating army, which destroyed the temple and scattered the Jewish offenders throughout all the earth. In a literal manner "God hath fulfilled" the words of his servant David.

Now while we have historically expounded and applied much of the second Psalm, bear in mind that we regard fulfilled prophecies, or many of them, as being capable of duplicating, or fulfilling again. By this we mean that there is first an incipient, partial or natural fulfillment, and afterwards a second, plenary or spiritual fulfillment. To illustrate our meaning by a Bible example: "When Israel was a child I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt" (Hos. 11:1). The Israelites were only God's son legally and nationally, and their call out of Egypt was followed by their sin and fall in the wilderness. "First the natural; afterwards the spiritual" (1 Cor. 15: 46). From the historical narrative of Israel's deliverance from Egypt, we "afterwards" get the spiritual interpretation in the life of Christ (Matt. 2: 15).

Prophecy is history written before it is performed on the stage of life; "history repeats itself," and is therefore, prophetical in its nature. We read the history of Moses as given in the Old Testament, and then turning to the New Testament, we are told "a prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me" (Acts 3: 22). This affirmation, that Christ is to be "like" Moses, lifts the account of Moses' life and history, as given in the Old Testament, from the obscure, individual, stale history of a man, and dignifies it with prophetical importance. So, while we apply things written in the second psalm to the first coming of Christ, we do it fully aware of the prophetical significance of history. That it will have its full and complete fulfillment at the Lord's second coming, is plainly seen from the following considerations:

1. The "kings of the earth" and the "rulers" of the people "rage" in wrath and war against Christ when he comes the second time (Psa. 2: 1-10; Zech. 14: 2).

2. They "set themselves" and "take counsel together" in opposing Christ's enthronement as King on the "holy hill of Zion," but they are broken "like a potter's vessel" by divine power (Psa. 2: 1-10; Dan. 2: 44; Rev. 11: 15).

3. With only a "little" wrath the wicked "perish from the way;" the kingdoms of this world are overthrown; and Christ as a "man of war" takes "the earth for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his posssession" (Psa. 2: 6-12; Hag. 2: 22; Rev. 11: 15).

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed one dollar and half for renewal subscription to The Restitution for another year. We cannot possibly get along without it, and it is getting better right along. A sister in the truth,

Mrs. M. E. Bray.

Editor Restitution:

I enclose you $10.00 to apply on the Lord's work, either the helping fund or otherwise as you see fit. The Lord's people need to help with all their talents. Not but what the Lord is able to do without our help; but that is the way he has chosen, and the means by which he accomplishes his purpose; especially in the spreading of the gospel. Let us work while it is called today, for the night is fast settling down upon us, when we cannot work, for the work will be finished in righteousness.

From Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Perrine.

Dear Brother Huggins and All the Brothers and Sisters:

I found a tract in my mother's Testament which I think belonged to my father. It is on the prophecies of Dan. 7, and I have made a copy of it. If you think it worth while to publish the copy I should be glad to have you do so. If it is not in accord with the Bible, some one should write on it and make it plain, for we need more said in that line than is being said. One sister I write to said she wished I would send you a copy of the tract, and I have now done so.

Your sister in Christ,

Susan A. Howard.

Dear Brethren:

When I was taking the wrapper off my Restitution on Sunday I noticed my subscription had expired on the day previous, so am sending you two dollars for renewal. I took the paper for some years in Sturgeon Falls, but allowed my subscription to lapse; but last year someone sent me the paper again. I have no doubt it was Brother Parker, who was instrumental in showing me the way of eternal life, and he also baptized me. I have appreciated the paper very much and feel as though I could not do without it, as there is no one here who gives any heed to the seeking first the kingdom of heaven. This is a big mining camp, and the mine owners are so busy making dividends and the miners so busy organizing for better wages to meet the high cost of living, that you could not interest them in anything else.

I am greatly interested in the war in the East, as I think when Palestine comes under British rule or a joint rule of different nations, it will hasten the return of the Jews, and bring the coming of the King so much the sooner. I see more plainly every day how great was Christ's ministry when he went about preaching the gospel of the kingdom, as the establishment of that kingdom is the only hope of sin cursed humanity.

I often give my Restitution to the Baptist preacher here and hope it will bear fruit. as he is a believer in the coming of the King; but he still believes that old lie of the immortality of the soul. Was sorry I could not help out with the Linograph Fund, but hope to give some further help this summer. If any person should also send in a renewal for me, use my subscription to send it to someone else. Remember me in your prayers that I may be kept faithful till the coming of the King. Your Brother in hope,

Robt. B. Holmes.

Brother Huggins:

I enclose a few copies for the young people's page. "Character and Self Respect" are taken from "Life Lessons" (Evans). I used this book in my school work. It contains what I call "gems of thought." If copies of this kind will in any way be helpful to you in your work as Editor of

The Restitution I will gladly furnish them. I am not physically able to do much else. I have but few years ahead of me, therefore I am desirous of being helpful to others and do the work assigned me by the Master. Love to all. Your brother,

D. C. Robison.

Many thanks, Brother Robison, for your valued cooperation in the work of the truth. There is always scarcity of copy during the spring and summer. Will our contributors and readers please remember this, and write often. You do not need to write long and labored articles; short ones make the paper look better, are always read, and are appreciated more.—Editor.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Have been deeply interested in "The Young People's Page" in "The Restitution," and knowing you to be a very busy man, thought that if you personally conducted this page and would care to be relieved of the worry and labor, I gladly would assume it. I feel that by making this page a feature, thus creating in the minds of the younger people that we have a direct interest in them, and making them feel that they are one with us, will do much to increase the circulation of The Restitution.

My idea of a "Young People's Page" is everything to be of an uplifting and enobling nature, but not necessarily spiritual or doctrinal—nothing of a nonsensical nature. Let me hear from you. Your brother anxious to labor for the Master,

Alexander D. Donaldson.

Many thanks to Brother Donaldson for his kind offer to share our burdens. We have had much trouble and work in getting proper copy for "A Bright Page for Young People," and have succeeded none too well. The copy must not be deep or heavy; neither must it be light or nonsesical—a medium pretty hard to strike. We gladly give over the page to Brother Donaldson, and urge our readers to cooperate heartily with him, and pray that by God's blessing our brother may indeed make this department a "Bright Page" in The Restitution. Readers should send all copy intended for this page to Brother Donaldson, 127 Ryerson St. N.Y. —Editor.

HISTORY OF MAN

A Beautiful Island Home

There was a time when there was not a man upon the earth (Gen. 2:5). Let us suppose a sea captain in voyaging over the great deep should land upon an uninhabited island covered with luxuriant grasses, fruits, vegetables, beautiful flowers, pure waters, rich soil, valuable minerals, mild climate, abundance of timber, grand scenery, living creatures, the sea teeming with every variety of fish and other food for man—would not this thought suggest itself to the mind of the captain: "What a beautiful place this would be for inhabitants suited to these conditions." This would necessitate organized beings whose wants could be supplied from their island-home and its surroundings. To secure all needed blessings the inhabitants of this island must be possessed of sufficient intelligence to enable them to obtain by pleasant exercise of their physical powers all the necessities of their simple, unperverted natures. Such beings would also cultivate refined tastes, a love of the beautiful in nature and art; the beautiful scenery of their island home would supply the one, while their inventive genius could supply the other. Suppose that in later years the captain revisits the island and finds it peopled with such beings as he had once thought would be adapted to the place, do you not think his curriosity would be sufficiently excited to learn the history of these people? How did they reach the island? Where did they come from? Why did they come there? If told that they had a record giving their origin and history, would not the captain take a deep interest in the perusal of this interesting history? Now, dear reader, I propose to present the simple truthful history of man as he appears in his primitive home, a vast island floating in the immensity of space. The information I offer has been gleaned from what I believe to be a truthful record of man' origin, nature and destiny. If my humble effort shall be the means of instructing the honest enquirer after truth, justice demands that I briefly state the cause that led to this effort.

Where did the Inhabitants of Earth Come From

A zealous devoted sister in Ohio who is laboring earnestly to instruct her neighbors in the truth, kindly insisted that I should write upon this subject, removing as far as possible the objections urged by believers in the inherent immortality of man. To her then let me dedicate these lines. There was a time when the earth was without an inhabitant, as the Bible plainly states. How did it become inhabited? What kind of being were the first inhabitants? Where did they come from? How were they created? The same book that tells us that at one time "there was not a man" also tells us how the first man was created, tells us who the Creator was, gives us a complete history of the man in every relation he sustains to his Creator. This account briefly, yet plainly informs us of man's origin, the material employed in the act of creation, the process by which life was imparted to the organized being to whom God gave the name "man." Before introducing the "history of man" let me quote an extract from Çarlyle: "Histories are as perfect as the historians are wise." As this statement will not be disputed what tremendous weight belongs to the history of man, as the author of that history is the very embodiment of wisdom, one in whom "all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid." Surely then such a record must be reliable and entitled to our fullest confidence.

Authentic History of Man

Now for the facts of divine history turn to Gen. 2:7: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life: and man became a living soul." Here in twenty-seven simple words is recorded the most stupendous fact in history. Whole volumes of human philosophy have failed to throw even a single ray of light upon the grand truths found in this brief statement, but alas, human wisdom has at best only obscured the beautiful light that shines from the inspired words. That the being described in Gen. 2:7 is the man of God's proposition is fully shown in every relation that man sustains to the divine plan. Ages after this dust made man was created the Psalmist David (Psa. 103:14) confirms the fact in these words, "He knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust." Job 4:19 tells us man's "foundation is in the dust."

A Creative Act Made Man, The Sentence of Death Unmakes Him

Now let us refer to the early history of man as recorded in Gen. 3:19. The closing words of the divine sentence pronounced against the man as the penalty for sin declares that "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken, for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Here man's origin is again declared, and his destiny when his sentence is executed brings him back from the condition from whence he was taken. The act of creation made him, the execution of the sentence unmade him. That a man whose history is here given is a being exactly adapted to the place he was to occupy is clearly stated in the description God gives of man's home in the newly created earth. Gen. 2:8,9: "And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden, and there he put the man whom he had formed. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil." That the man whom God had put into the garden with instruction to dress it and to keep it was an organic being possessed of a tongue, teeth, lips, palate, throat, digestive and assimilating organs is evident from the fact that the first command given him after entering the garden was concerning the food he should eat, and forbidding access to the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. But perhaps the interested reader of this history of man will ask, "If this is a true history of man in what respect is man superior to the animal creation; in short, what distinguishes him from animal creation?"

Man is an Animal

To answer these questions fairly and Scripturally, let us note first the points of resemblance given in the Bible as being common to both men and animals. In Gen 3:19 God gives us the origin of the lower animal creation: "And out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air . . . . ." However humiliating it may be to haughty and proud man to read of one common origin for both man and beast, the fact remains and man cannot change it. "But surely," says the objector, "man's superiority will be seen in the endowment of life: did not man receive from his Creator a higher life than the beasts?" To constitute man a living soul, person, or being, God gave him the breath of life. That the breath of life was possessed in common with man by the animal creation is clearly established in Gen. 6:17: "And behold I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth to destroy all flesh wherein is the breath of life from under heaven, and everything that is in the earth shall die." Also in the seventh chapter of Genesis after naming the whole animal creation in the 14th verse, we read in the 15th verse: "And they went in unto Noah into the ark, and two and two of all flesh wherein is the breath of life." That both men and animals originated in the dust and live by breathing the breath of life is a clearly settled Bible fact, whether men accept it or not. Human logic has no effect upon it. Scholarly ability in vain attempts to set aside God's positive declarations, and infidelity can go no further than to say, "I do not believe it." But that comparison may be complete let us view both man and beast in the state called death.

In Death Man and Beast in Same Condition

The reader's attention is now called to Eccl. 3:18-20: "I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts, even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they all have one breath, so that a man (in death) hath no pre-eminence above a beast, for all is vanity. All go into one place, all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." Here the broad sweeping assertion is made that in death man has no pre-eminence over beasts. However broad the distinctions in life may have been, or after death may be, the question is forever settled that durdeath's reign a perfect equality exists.

Failing to find the proofs of certain claims for man's highly exalted position, the advocates of such claims tell us that man's vast superiority over animals consists of knowledge, while the animal possesses only instinct. But this distinction will not stand, for every Bible student knows that knowledge is by no means man's exclusive prerogative. Here is God's comparative estimate of the intelligence of both man and beast: Isa. 1:3: "The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib; but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider." This comparative view is certainly not very flattering to man with all his exhaltation. The merest tyro in knowledge can testify to acts of intelligence on the part of animals. Certain animals have shown a degree of intelligence that would rank them with some of the human family. A few points of superiority in favor of animals ought in justice to them be presented. Many of them possess greater strength than man; they out speed him in the chase; they possess keener faculties; the ear detects sound quicker; the vision is sharper; the sense of smell is far more acute; they perceive danger when man with all his boasted knowledge is ignorant of it; man's utter helplessness in infancy is in sad contrast with the ability of some of the animal creation to take care of themselves almost from birth. What then distinguishes man from the lower animals?

Three Points of Man's Superiority

At least three things serve to show man's superiority in the divine plan over the other creatures of earth.

First, man's Creator showed him a marked preference in giving man a superior form, "the human form divine," for God created man in his image and after his likeness. No other creature on earth, in the air, or in the mighty deep can claim this high distinction. God's estimate of the value and sacredness of his image is shown in his displeasure when man's murderous hand is raised to mutilate or mar the beautiful image of the Creator. Read Gen. 9:6: "Whoso sheddeth man's blood (mutilates or mars the image), by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man." Those familiar with the Bible know that an image is an imitation, representation or picture, hence the image of God is expressed in the physical form of man. The use of the word in the history of man has no reference to an intellectual or moral resemblance, as is shown in the use of the word in Gen. 4:3: "And Adam lived an hundred and thirty years and begat a son in his own likeness, after his image and called his name Seth." Here the resemblance is to the physical form, the features; in short, the common use of the word conveys the true idea, "the child looked like its parent"—not in size, nor in intellectual or moral qualities, but bears a striking resemblance in the expression of the features.

The second marked distinction in man's favor is made in his capacity for increasing his stock of knowledge almost indefinitely, while animal knowledge is quite limited, yet sufficient to supply its wants. The mental capacity of animals, while quite limited, enables them to reason upon the simple problems with which they must deal. But man's field of research, investigation and reason, is so vast and the problems so intricate that a vastly increased capacity was a necessity in his case. Man's Creator honored him in the scale of existence by constituting him a responsible being in placing him under law for the regulation of his conduct. This act of the Creator stamped man as a moral agent, making him responsible to the Author of his being. This distinction places man upon the throne of animate existence upon the earth. This exalted position was conferred upon man, not by conquest gained in fierce and bloody struggles with his inferiors, but was given him at his creation. Gen. 1:26: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon earth."

Now let us look at the third and crowning mark of distinction that raises man above the animal creation. A brief period is allotted as the life time of the entire creation, but to man alone has the creator offered on conditions, a future state of existence, entirely free from all the unpleasant environments of this present life; and the value of this grand offer consists in the fact that the future life and the blessings attending it will be endless. Our present brief state of existence, with all its aches and pains, its bitter griefs and disappointments, does not abate our desire for its continuance; every effort is put forth to continue it even under the many ills that belong to it; even the animals when wounded fight fiercely to prolong their lives, though suffering intense pain. No wonder that love prompted the offer of endless life. John 3:16: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Should not every heart be attuned to praise God for his wonderful goodness to the children of men? Yes, even inanimate nature should break its lasting silence in tones of praise for such mighty love.

Oliver Wendell Holmes has said: "When we are as yet small children . . . . . there comes up to us a youthful angel, holding in his right hand cubes like dice, and in his left spheres like marbles. The cubes are of stainless ivory, and on each is written in letters of gold . . . . . truth. The spheres are veined and streaked and spotted beneath, with a dark crimson flush above, where the light falls on them, and in a certain aspect you can make out upon every one of them the three letters L, I, E. The child to whom they are offered very probably clutches at both. The spheres are the most convenient things in the world; they roll with the least possible impulse just where the child would have them. The cubes will not roll at all; they have a great talent for standing still, and always keep right side up. But very soon the young philosopher finds that things which roll so easily are very apt to roll into the wrong corner, and to get out his way when he most wants them, while he always knows where to find the others, which stay where they are left. Thus he learns—thus we learn—to drop the streaked and speckled globes of falsehood and to hold fast to the white angular blocks of truth.

Somebody did a golden deed;
Somebody proved a friend in need;
Somebody sang a beautiful song;
Somebody smiled the whole day long;
Somebody thought, " 'Tis sweet to live;"

God a Generous Thief

In the first two chapters of Genesis, the records as to woman's origin describe her as no less endowed than man.

The following story from the Rabbis is illustrative of their regard of woman's creation: A heathen once said to a Rabbi, "Your God is a thief. He came to Adam while he was asleep and took one of his ribs."

The Rabbi said, "Permit me to tell you a little occurrance. A few nights ago a robber entered my house and stole a silver goblet, but left a gold one in its place."

"What a generous thief!" exclaimed the heathen.

"Even such a thief is our God," rejoined the Rabbi, "he took away Adam's rib but left Eve instead."

The man who never makes a mistake is the man who never does anything.

The duty of obeying is no less than the responsibility of commanding.

Think twice before you speak, and then talk to yourself.

Better mend one fault in yourself than find a hundred in your neighbor.

The industrious man is light hearted—the man who works is the happy man.

The soul occupied with great ideas best performs small duties.

Be broad—make it your habit not to be critical about small things.

The man who thinks he can't is usually right.

No good thing is failure and no evil thing success.

Think less about your rights, more about your duties.

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. MAY 1, 1917 NUMBER 17

PROPHECY

'Tis near—
That great redeeming hour
When righteousness shall reign;
But God's elect look bravely on
And eagerly proclaim—
That though the nations be upset,
The time is nigh at hand,
When we shall sing our "Home Sweet Home"
In far off Canaan's land.

'Tis true—
Crowned heads are tottering
And soon shall come the fall;
Their years and years of honored strife
Be clashed against the wall.
'Tis God alone can bring us peace
In this great world of sin;
Hold fast to that redeeming love
That you have sought to win.

'Tis blessed—
Though there be this pall
Of terror, death and strife,
He suffered, then was crucified
That we might again have life.
And though these wars are raging
Like waves on an angry sea,
The time is fast approaching,
Upheld by prophecy.

'Tis promised—
That in latter days
These perilous times shall come.
All nations must uprise and fall
Before he takes the throne.
Let us be true and loyal
While earth like the tempests roar;
Be sure that your lamp is burning,
Christ waits outside the door.

The Son of Man and His Kingdom

Dan. 7:13,14. "I saw in the night visions, and behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of Days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all nations, people, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." The scene here described is not the second advent of Christ to this earth. It is a coming to the Ancient of Days, who is not on earth but in heaven. There in the presence of the Ancient of Days, a kingdom, dominion, and glory, are given him. The Son of Man receives his kingdom before his return to this earth. See Luke 19:10-12 and onward. This is a scene therefore which transpires in the heavenly temple, and closely connected with that brought to view in verses 9 and 10. He receives the kingdom at the close of his priestly work in the sanctuary. The peoples, nations, and languages, that shall serve him, are the nations of the saved (Rev. 21:24), not the wicked nations of the earth, for these are dashed in pieces at the second advent. Some out of all the nations, tribes and kindreds of the earth will find themselves at last in the kingdom of God, to serve him there with joy and gladness forever and ever (Rev. 5:9).

The Saints of the Most High and Their Kingdom

Verses 15-18. "I Daniel was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my body and the visions of my head troubled me. I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things. These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even forever and ever." No less anxious should we be than was Daniel to understand the truth of all this, and whenever we enquire, with equal sincerity of heart, we shall find the Lord no less ready now than in the days of the prophet to lead to a correct knowledge of these important truths. The beasts and the kingdoms which they represent, have already been explained. We have followed the prophet down through the course of events even to the complete destruction of the fourth and last beast, and the final overthrow of all earthly governments. What next? The saints take the kingdom. The saints, those of all others held in low esteem in the world, despised, reproached, persecuted, cast out, who were considered the least likely of all men were to realize their hopes, take the kingdom and possess it forever.

The Fourth Beast Stronger than the Others

Verses 19,20. "Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron and his nails of brass: which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet; and of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the others which came up, and before whom three fell: even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows."

Of the first three beasts of this series Daniel had so clear an understanding that he had no trouble in reference to them, but he was astonished at the fourth beast, so unnatural and dreadful. Wonderful was all this to the prophet; but something still more wonderful appears. it is the little horn that plucked up three of the ten horns as it came up. This horn has eyes; not the uncalculating eyes of the brute but the keen, intelligent eyes of a man. It also has a mouth, which utters proud sayings and makes arrogant claims.

It Makes War Upon the Saints

Verses 21,22. "I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints; and prevailed against them; until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." Daniel saw this horn making war upon the saints. Has this been true of the papacy? Let fifty millions of martyrs answer. Witness the cruel persecutions of the church of Rome against the Waldenses, the Albignes, and Protestants in general. It is stated on good authority that the persecutions, massacres, and religious wars excited by the Roman church, have occassioned the shedding of far more blood of the saints of the Most High than all the enmity, hostility and persecutions of all the heathens from the foundation of the world.

Its Ten Horns and the Eleventh

Verses 23-25. "Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down and break it in pieces. And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise; and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings. And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hands until a time, and times, and the dividing of time." We briefly notice the specification of the fourth beast, its ten horns and the little horn, as follows:

1. The fourth beast. This beast represents the fourth universal empire, which is Rome, the same as symbolized by the fourth or iron division of the great metallic image of chapter 2. Rome answers to the prophecy in diversity from other kingdoms, and in the universality and tyranny of her iron rule. "The empire of the Romans," says Gibbon, "filled the world." And when that empire fell into the hands of a single person the world became a safe and dreary prison for his enemies. To resist was fatal; and it was impossible to fly."

2. The ten horns. Between the years A. D. 351 and 476 the Roman empire was divided into ten kingdoms, as noticed in remarks in verse 8. Thus the ten horns are ten kings, or kingdoms, that arise out of the Roman empire.

3. The little horn. It will be admitted that a power has arisen answering with great exactness to the specifications of this horn, and that it is the papacy. It speaks great words against the Most High, and wears out the saints. The same character is given in Rev. 13:6,7: "And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven. And it was given him to make war with the saints." Paul calls this same power "the son of perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called god" (2 Thess. 2: 3,4). The titles which the popes have assumed of "Most Holy Lord," and their pretensions to pardon sin, even before its commission, if we had nothing else, sufficiently establish the blasphemous character of that power. A canon of pope Gregory VII says: "All princes should kiss the feet of the pope. To him it belongs to dethrone emperors. His sentence none may oppose but he alone may annul the judgment of all mankind. The Roman church never erred, and never can err" ("Baronius' Annals," 1076, Hildebrand. Epistle 55). Pope Urban II, in a great council held at Rome in 1098, said: "The hands of the pontiff are raised to an eminence granted to none of the angels, of creating God, the Creator of all things, and offering him up for the salvation of the whole world" (Dowling's History of Romanism, p. 269. Ed. of 1870).

Cardinal Manning of England, in a sermon preached when he was archbishop, put the following sentence into the mouth of the pope: "I acknowledge no civil power . . . . . I claim to be the supreme judge and dictator of the consciences of men . . . . . I am the sole, last, supreme judge of what is right and wrong" (Our Country, by Josiah Strong, p. 53, Ed. of 1885).

Here, most certainly is a power diverse from all others, and proud and blasphemous enough to answer to the character of the little horn. It is said of this horn that it shall think to change time and laws, or, as rendered in the Revised Version, "The time and the law." What law? and whose? Not the law of any earthly government, for it was nothing marvellous or strange for one power to change the laws of another, whenever it could bring such powers under its dominion; not human laws of any kind, for the little horn had power to change these so far as its jurisdiction extended; but the times in question were such as this power should only think to change, but not be able to change. They are the times and the laws of the Most High, the same being to whom the saints belong. And has the papacy attempted this? Yes, even this.

4. The period experienced by prophetic phrase, "and they shall be given into his hand until a time, and times, and the dividing of time." The pronoun "they" embraces the saints, the time and law, just mentioned. How long a time were they to be given into the hands of this power? A time is one year (chapter 4:23); two times, the least that could be denoted by the plural, two years; and the dividing of time, of half a year. We thus have three years and a half for the continuance of this power. We must now consider that we are in the midst of symbolic prophecy; hence this measurement is not literal but prophetic. The enquiry then arises, how long a period is denoted by the three years and a half prophetic time? The rule in the Bible is that when a day is used as a symbol, it stands for a year (Ezek. 4:6; Num. 14:34). The ordinary Jewish year, which must be used as the basis of reckoning, contained three hundred and sixty days. The three years and a half contain twelve hundred and sixty days, each day standing for a year. We have twelve hundred and sixty years for the continuance of this horn. Did the papacy possess dominion that length of time? The answer again is, Yes. The edict of the emperor Justinian, dated A. D. 533, made the bishop of Rome the head of the churches. But this edict could not go into effect till the Arian Ostrogoths, the last of the three horns that was plucked up to make room for the papacy, were driven from Rome, and this was not accomplished till A. D. 538. The edict would have been of no effect had this latter event not been accomplished; hence from this latter year we are to date, as this was the earliest point where the saints were in reality in the hands of this power. From this point did the papacy hold supremacy for 1260 years? Exactly.

Judgment of the Papacy

Verse 26: "But thejudgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and destroy it unto the end." At the close of this long period of its blasphemous and bloody rule the time had come for the prophetic words of Rev. 13.10 to be fulfilled: "He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword." From A. D. 538, the clearly defined date for the commencement of this prophetic period, measures 1260 years, and we are brought to A. D. 1798, when Berthier, a French general entered Rome, proclaimed a republic, took the pope a prisoner, and gave the papal head a deadly wound (Rev. 13:3). Thus again this power fulfills, to the very letter, the specifications of the prophecy. Some very startling events relative to the papacy, filling up the prophecies uttered in this chapter concerning that power, having taken place within a few years of the present time. Commencing in 1798, what have been the chief characteristics? Answer: The rapid defection of its natural supporters and great assumptions on its own part. At the close of the 2300 days of chapter 8, in 1844, the judgment mentioned in verses 9, 10, and 26 began to sit, namely, the investigative judgment, in the heavenly sanctuary, preparatory to the coming of Christ. Dec. 8, 1854, the dogma of the Immaculate Conception was decreed by the pope. July 21, 1870. in the great Ecumenical Council assembled at Rome, it was deliberately decreed by a vote of 538 against 2 that the pope was infallibel. In the same year Napoleon, by whose bayonet the pope was kept upon his throne, was crushed by Prussia, and the last prop was knocked from under the papacy. Then Victor Emanuel, seizing his opportunity to carry out the long cherished dream of a United Italy, seized Rome to make it the capitol of his kingdom. To his troops under General Cadarna, Rome surrendered Sept. 20, 1870. Then the last vestige of temporal power departed, never more, said Victor Emanuel, to be restored; and the pope has been virtually a prisoner in his own palace since that time. Because of the great words that the horn uttered Daniel saw the beast destroyed and given to the burning flame. The destruction is to take place at the second coming of Christ, and by means of that event; for the man of sin is to be consumed by the spirit of Christ's mouth, and destroyed by the brightness of his coming (2 Thess. 2:8). What words could be greater, more presumptious, more blasphemous, more insulting to high heaven, than the deliberate adoption of the dogma of infallibility, clothing a mortal man with the prerogative of the Deity, which was accomplished by papal intrigue and influence, July 21, 1870? Following in swift succession the last vestige of temporal power was swept from his grasp, and thus his dominion was taken away and consumed and destroyed unto the end; that is, the end of his dominion. Following the destruction of the temporal powers, there comes a reviving of its spiritual powers or domination, called "the healing of the deadly wound," the restoration of the papacy, a brief period of triumph, just before it is given to the burning flame (Dan. 7:11,21,22; Rev. 13:3; 17:8,12-17; 18:7-24).

The World Freed of Oppressive Powers,
The Saints Possess the Everlasting Kingdom

Verses, 27,28: "And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. Hitherto is the end of the matter. As for me Daniel, my cogitations troubled me, and my countenance changed in me; but I kept the matter in my heart."

After beholding the dark and desolate picture of papal oppression upon the church, the prophet once more turns his eyes with delight upon the glorious period of the saint's rest, when they shall have the kingdom free from oppressive powers in everlasting possession. What could the children of God do in this present evil world, sighing over the misrule the oppression of the governments of earth, and the abominations that are done in the land, if they could not look forward to the kingdom of God, and the return of their Lord, with full assurance that the promises concerning them both shall certainly be fulfilled, and that speedily? Now let us see whereabouts we are in the prophetic chain. We have passed the lion, Babylon; we have also passed the bear with the three ribs in his mouth; the sign of the leopard with four wings of a fowl, and four heads has been passed; the dreadful and terrible beast with ten horns has been seen; the little horn has already fulfilled verse 25, and his dominion has been taken away (verse 26). What comes next? The holy city and God's everlasting kingdom!—Sel. by Susan A. Howard.

TWO EXTREMES REFUTED

No. 12

Objections Answered

All Men, All People, and All Israel

We are told, "We trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men, especially of those that believe" (1 Tim. 4:10). From this text it is inferred that all men will be saved from Adamic death for this purpose, that those who were ignorant of the way of life now and in past dispensations may have an opportunity to learn of it. Why this text should be used to prove a future opportunity for any one is hard for me to see, as it says nothing about fair chance, nor universal resurrection, neither does it mention future probation, but declares God is now (present tense), the Savior of all men, and that his present special salvation is for those who believe. What are believers saved from? Their sins, now, but they must go into death just as other people. The word "Savior" is a translation of the Greek word soter which is defined by the best lexicons to mean savior, preserver; and those whom Jesus healed from physical diseases are some times biblically said to be saved. "He saved others; himself he cannot save," was said by his enemies at the cross. This could only mean a temporal salvation from the evils of the day. So then we need not expect that God is planning to save, in the future, those who "speak evil of the things they understand not; and shall utterly perish." He may prolong their lives here for a longer or shorter period of time, but he never promises them a future life.

The words "all men" are often scripturally used to represent only a limited number of the human race. Paul states that Ananias told him, "Thou shalt be a witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard" (Acts 22:15). If this text teaches that Paul is, in the future, to be a witness to dead heathen it also teaches that he will be a witness to the dead reprobate as well, and if his witnessing is for the purpose of converting the one, of it must be for the other; and that would give all men a future chance to be converted except the few to whom Paul witnessed in this life.

But further still: none would be left for the resurrection to condemnation except those who rejected Paul's preaching; he must witness to all others, even the converts made by the other apostles, and to the ancient worthies and the rejectors. This text most certainly shows a limited use of the words in question, and does not condemn the works of all other good men, and approve of Paul's alone.

Again, "This is the man that teacheth all men everywhere" (Acts 21:28). All men means the aggregate of the human family, does it? If it can be made to prop a false theory it does with some people, but here Paul is said to be teaching all men everywhere before the resurrection, and hence leaves none to teach after that time. Certainly our critics will not contend that this text teaches a future opportunity for dead heathens. But once more: "Unto me which am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ; and to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things: to the intent that now (not in the future) unto the principalities and powers in the heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God" (Eph. 3:8-10). Paul would not be guilty of saying so foolish a thing as that the dead heathen must be made to see the fellowship of the mystery which had previously been hid, before the church now (in his day) could know the manifold wisdom of God. The "all men" here was the all to whom Paul in his life time could preach and teach. Then there is no evidence in our text that even hints all men will be raised from the dead, but the Bible plainly declares that some will not be raised. "Nevertheless, man being in honor, abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish." "Like sheep they are laid in the grave (abandoned to sheol, literally); death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave (sheol) from their dwelling." "But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave, for he shall receive me" (Psa. 49:12,14 15).

Here is a class of people who are abandoned to sheol like sheep, and by contrasting their doom with his own future destiny David shows that they will not be redeemed from the power of sheol, but are like sheep who will not live again. But hear David speak further, "He shall go to the generation of his fathers; they shall never see light" (verse 19). Here then are some who shall never see light. If by light is meant the light of day, then they will never live again, and if it means the light of the gospel then they will never see it, and hence their resurrection is not necessary, and as they understand not (verse 20) they are not responsible, and hence, let them be as David puts it, "like the beasts that perish." "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead" (Prov. 21:16). If he remains there he does not come out, and if he comes out he does not remain; God says he does remain there, and we must believe. "O Lord our God, other lords have had dominion over us; but by thee only will we make mention of thy name. They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise; therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish" (Isa. 26: 13,14). To assert that those lords, rulers, will live again is to flatly contradict the word of God. "Thus saith the Lord, which maketh a way in the sea, and a path in the mighty waters; which bringeth forth the chariot and horse, the army and pwer; they shall lie down together, they shall not rise: they are extinct, they are quenched as tow" (Isa. 43:16,17). Here again is a positive declaration from Jehovah that some will not rise; shall we believe it? Or shall we assert that all heathen will rise and have an opportunity to be saved without one single text so declaring? "In their heat will I make their feasts, and I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice, and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake, saith the Lord." "And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men; and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake, saith the king whose name is the Lord of hosts" (Jer. 51:39,57). These texts not only declare of the heathen Babylonians, who were destroyed by the Medes (verses 11,28), that they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, but clinches that statement by the words, "And shall not awake." Who says they shall? Russellites; and others who teach that they will have an opportunity to be saved after the resurrection. "They that swear by the sin of Samaria, and say, Thy God, O Dan liveth; and the manner of Beersheba liveth; even they shall fall, and never rise up again" (Amos 8:14). If these texts do not teach the non-resurrection of the ignorant in what language could God teach it did he desire to so teach? And if they do teach it we must believe.

DEPRESSING THOUGHTS

Words Spoken at the Breaking of Bread

The earnest and solemn words of Brother Mason the other Sunday evening relative to the foolish virgins have recurred quite often with some depressing thoughts; one of which is the possibility that some of us might be among those who will seek to enter into the marriage supper after our Lord has shut the door. I say "depressing thoughts," because it is saddening to think that any of us, more highly favored than many believers, should neglect so great salvation. Neglect it after all the exhortations we have heard to "hold fast the beginning of our confidence firm unto the end," and such warnings from God's word as, "Ye cannot serve two masters;" "They that honor me I will honor;" "God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

It matters not how much we may love one another; none of us can redeem our brother, or our sister, or give to God a ransom for them; each must work out his own salvation with fear and trembling, and now is the time for such work. The day of grace will soon terminate and the records be forever closed. Shall we not then, while we still have the opportunity, revive the things that remain, and while remembering him this morning who died that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and whom God raised again for our justification, resolve anew to purify our hearts, asking our heavenly Father in the words of the Psalmist to "search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts, and see if there be any wicked way in me; and lead me in the way everlasting." Otherwise Christ will have died for us in vain.

Remarks

During March we have been able to reach a goodly number of people who have never before heard the truth. Several have invited us to their homes to talk of the things that seemed so new to them, and we can begin to see results and hope to be able to report some additions from these efforts soon. As we hasten on to the close of the age we become more and more anxious about those to whom we have spoken the truth. What a fearful doom awaits them if they neglect to obey! The war clouds thicken. But look for another great peace cry soon, and possibly a peace conference.

EDITORIAL

A great man once performed a great act. "Abraham believed God" (Rom. 4:3).

Contributions for Brother Wilson from Brother J. A. Dickinson and Sister Elnora Waldo bring up the total to $72.00. Brother Wilson joins us in the request for brethren to cease sending money to this fund. The total last acknowledged, $68.00, was an error. It should have been $65.50.

Paul prayed to be "delivered from unreasonable and wicked men" (2 Thess. 3:2). Unreasonable and wicked men are not all in the world; there is quite a few of them in the church. The question of military exemption has revealed the unreasonableness of some of our brethren. We are all agreed that it is wrong for a child of God to fight, and that God has "called us to peace," and has made us sons of peace. The one and only point of difference among us refers to how a condition of peace is best obtained, some thinking that military exemption the most feasible plan; while others think nothing should be done toward a mutual understanding with the government. The difference is purely a matter of opinion, not faith; and therefore The Restitution has published arguments on both sides of the question. Surely in doing this we have showed utmost fairness to all. We have enjoyed the arguments advanced by those on both sides of the question, and while some of them are fallacious, we have been made wiser by reading them. We cannot understand why some brethren are so "unreasonable" as to become offended at these arguments, just because they are opposed to their ideas. It certainly is very "unreasonable" in them to act so uncharitably.

One dear Brother writes that he will not sign a petition for military exemption, "for," he says, "I want to trust fully in God who is able to do that which he has promised." "Promised"—that is the question. "Trust in the Lord, and do good" (Psa. 37:2) are divine words, and they show that trust is not incompatible with doing. God has promised to feed the sparrows, but they have to scratch for a living; he has promised to clothe his people, but they are commanded to work. What would you think of a sparrow that refused to scratch, or a brother who refused to work, on the ground that God had "promised" to feed him; and that industry and economy would indicate that God was not "fully" trusted? The same remark applies to the military situation.

In the public defense act the following provisions are made: "All persons who because of religious belief shall claim exemption from military service, if the conscientious holdings of belief of such persons shall be established under such regulations as the president shall prescribe, shall be exempt from military service in a combatant capacity, but no person shall be exempt from military service in any capacity that the president shall declare to be non-combatant." It is said that later bills being considered, grant exemption from any military service. With such gracious concessions made by our indulgent president, every brother and sister should sign the military petition printed on the last page of The Restitution, and mail to us. Brother Geo. B. Alldridge is going to present this petition to Congress soon, so hurry up and get your signature in. It may save you from prison, fine, confiscation of your property, draft, etc., in the near future. Now is the time to be wise as serpents and harmless as doves.

EATING FLESH

Do Seventh Day Adventists teach that we must obey the law of Moses? Yes.

Proof: "God's people were expressly commanded not to eat the flesh of swine. Lev. 11:7; Deut. 14:8; Isa. 65:4."

From Advent Review and Sabbath Herald, Nov. 8, 1906. Since the above references are not in the decalogue (that which Seventh Day Adventists call "the law of God") they (the first two) must be in "the law of Moses." So then Seventh Day Adventists do not believe the "law of Moses" was nailed to the cross—at least this part.—J. J. Schamburger.

HISTORY OF MAN

Concluded

There is no Immortal Principle of Life in Man

In our investigations so far we have not found any intimation that man, as at present constituted, is in possession of any life principle that prevents the enemy death from taking full possession of the entire man. Why this profound silence in God's history of man as to any deathless or immortal principle? Even the words or terms that would express endless existence are not once applied to man in the history that God has given of him. With such facts before us let us review a part of the early history as given in Gen. 2. At the 9th verse the statement is made of "the tree of life in the midst of the garden." The name of this tree would indicate that its fruit could either impart life, or prolong life already given. What relation then did the man whom the Lord God formed sustain to this tree? If the tree could give life or sustain life already given, then the prolonging of the man's life would be an assured fact, if he could have access to the tree. To assume this position would nullify the penalty that God had pronounced upon the man, for that declared the man should die, and fully explained the penalty by saying that man should return to the dust from whence he had been taken. Now one of two things must be admitted: either the man was prevented from eating of the tree of life, or else God failed to execute the penalty upon the man as he had threatened. To settle this no discussion is necessary. We simply appeal to the history of man as recorded in Gen. 3:22-24.

Man is Cut Off from the Tree of Life

Let the reader note the facts in the time referred to: the act of sin had been committed, the man and his wife had confessed their guilt, the sentence of death had been pronounced, the man and his wife were yet in the beautiful garden. Now read the language cited in Gen. 3:18-24: "And the Lord God said, Behold the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming sword, which turned every way to keep the tree of life." Does this settle the question? Did this act of God prevent the man from continuing his sinful life forever? Can the man shut off from the tree of life suffer the penalty of death threatened by his Creator? All these questions are fully answered in one brief sentence, Gen. 5:5: "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years and he died."

We have thus briefly given a history of the man whom the Lord God formed of the dust of the ground. The identity of the man is clearly seen in all his relations to his Creator; in other words, it was the same man that God formed of the dust of the ground that was put into the garden of Eden; the same man that was told to dress the garden and keep it; the same man that was commanded to eat of all the fruit of the garden except the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; the same man that was driven out of the garden; the same man that was made to eat of the herb of the field; the same man that was to endure sorrow and labor all the days of his life; and the same man that lived nine hundred and thirty years and died. In all these relations no other man has been substituted, and the same dust-made flesh and blood man is the subject of God's dealings throughout the Bible.

Popular Phrases Descriptive of Man Unscriptural

In the face of all these facts how can intelligent men affirm that all these evidences found in God's history of man have no relation to the real responsible man, but relate to the body which has been conveniently called "the house in which the real man lives." Assuming the existence of such a being, or entity, or more properly non-entity, necessitated the coining of new words or phrases to describe that which exists only in the imagination. A great many words and phrases as well as attributes are found in God's history of man whom he created, but not one of them can be applied to the being that is not even mentioned in the Bible. The popular phrases and words found so often in religious literature and public addresses such as "immortal soul," "immortal spirit," "never dying soul," "never dying spirit," "deathless soul," "deathless spirit," "immortal man," "undying man," "deathless man" cannot be found in the Bible. The reason is plain: not one of them belong to nor can be applied to the man whose history is given in God's word. Why did not God use these words and phrases? Simply because they could not be truthfully applied to the being that he formed.

Divine Phrases

Look now at a few of the words, phrases and attributes that God has used in his history of man: "Die," dying," "dead," "mortal man," "mortal body," "corruptible man," "flesh and blood," "perish," "destroy," "burn," "burn up," "be as though they had not been," "not be," "silent in darkness," "a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away." These and similar expressions abound in the Bible and exactly fit the man that God had formed.

Soul and Spirit

Two words that occur frequently in the Bible are supposed to favor the belief in natural or inherent immortality, soul and spirit. The two words and their equivalents can be found over fifteen hundred times in the Bible, but in all the occurrences of these words there is a total absence of any word or term that expresses endless life. The words are not synonyms, both words have a variety of meanings, both words are applied to the lower order of the animal creation, the word soul being applied to every moving and creeping thing, even before it is applied to man (Gen. 1:20; 5:30, margin).

The soul is said to hunger, to thirst, to eat, to drink, to breathe and to die. The primary use of the word soul in the Bible is person or being. In this sense it is applied to man whether living or dead, and to beasts, birds and creeping things. A secondary use of the word expresses life. See Matt. 16:25,26; Mark 8:35,36; Gen. 35:18. Other uses of the word will be found in a brief search with the aid of a good concordance. As a soul, whether man or beast, lives by breathing, the word is often used to represent the life, but is never used in the Bible to represent an entity or thing that can live while the man is dead. Neither life nor death are entities, but both are conditions, and exactly opposite conditions.

The word spirit has a wider range of use in the Bible than the word soul, yet nowhere in the Bible can we find the use of the word as claimed by the advocates of inherent immortality. They once taught that man was dual in nature, a body and a soul, but at the present they tell us that man is tripartite, a body, a soul, and a spirit. They admit the body can die, that even the soul is not immortal, but that deathlessness inheres in the spirit. But if the spirit is the essential life of man how will they account for certain persons mentioned in the Bible who had no spirit and yet were living beings (1 Kings 10:5; 1 Sam. 30:12). Here in one case the Queen had no spirit in her, yet she was a living woman, overwhelmed by seeing the glory of Solomon's kingdom and palace. It took away her ambition to shine as a great ruler; and in the other case, the Egyptian was simply exhausted by his long fast, but the food given to him restored him to strength and vigor.

As more than forty different spirits are spoken of in connection with man, it will be readily seen by the Bible student that the use of the word in the Bible must be determined by the circumstances under which it is used. The word spirit in 1 John 4:1 is used in the sense of person, prophet, or teacher. Again the word is used in Eccl. 12:7 to represent death by man yielding up to God the life principle that God gave to man—"the breath of life." The same idea is expressed in Psa. 146:4. "His breath goeth forth (to God who gave it), he returneth to his earth (the dust); in that very day his thoughts perish." Now turn to Gen. 2:7 and Psa. 146:4 and see how death unmakes him; then turn to Psa. 6:5 and learn that the dead cannot remember God; then turn to Psa. 115:17 and learn that the dead cannot praise God; then turn to Eccl. 9:5,6 and you will learn why this is the condition of the dead, for there it is said, "The dead know not anything." All their mental faculties have ceased to act. In short, the man of whom God has given us a history, is dead and not alive. Man's identity has been clearly established in every relation he sustains to his Creator from the time he was "formed of the dust of the ground," until his "breath goeth forth and he returneth to his earth." Every fact in his history corresponds with the fact of his creation.

Man's Identity Hereafter

Now another question of deepest importance presents itself: Does the Bible in continuing man's history beyond the grave, preserve his identity in the future life? Most assuredly it does; every promise that God has made to man pertaining to a future life conveys this idea beyond a doubt. The promise of an everlasting inheritance of the land that God made to the fathers is a clear proof that their identity will be preserved. The identity of the land promised them is forever established in the description of the land by such terms as "this land," "the land whereon thou standest," "arise and walk through the land," "unto thee and thy seed (Christ) will I give this land." The names by which these men were known by their associates clearly identifies them in the time when they will occupy the land. Christ testifies that faithful ones should come from the east and the west and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven.

But we have evidence the most conclusive that the identity of the person is not lost but carried into the future state in the case of our blessed Redeemer whom God raised from the dead with an incorruptible body that yet bore plainly the spear cut and the nail prints. Such proof may be called a demonstrated fact. All saints of God have the promise, if they are faithful, that "these vile bodies shall be made like unto Christ's glorious body." That glorious body shining in immortal splendour was just as real, literal and tangible as when hanging upon the cross it was pierced by a Roman spear.

Importance of God's Plan of Salvation

The importance of recognizing the truth as set forth in the history that God has given us of the man of his proposition will be seen when "God's Plan of Salvation" is considered. The dust-made man, the flesh and blood man, the mortal man, in short the man of God's description, is the only being that can be a fit subject for the salvation that God has promised. An immortal being could not possibly be benefitted by this salvation, for when a proper subject of God's salvation has reached the immortal state his salvation is complete, as Jesus has taught (Luke 20): "Neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Salvation completed in this case puts the subject in just the condition that we are told the "real man" is in now. Such a being cannot perish, therefore God did not give his only begotten Son to save such a person. If there are any immortal beings in heaven or earth, they need no salvation. But dying, perishing, mortal beings are exactly adapted to God's plan of salvation, and it is the grand panacea that offers a full and complete remedy for all the ills he is heir to. Let us rejoice then "that God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

UNBELIEF

No 1.

Written for the Children by Request.

"If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." (John 8: 24.)

It is a delicate question to write about, but if our little linotype children and other little ones who are so eager to learn the blessed lessons given us in God's holy Book, are to be saved, they must know who Jesus was, for how can they believe on him unless they do?

So when Jesus said these words, little ones," If ye believe not that I am he," what did he mean? Some of the people said, "Of a truth this is the prophet," meaning the prophet that Moses said the Lord God would some day raise up, like unto him, and whom they must hear. Others wondered if their great men did not know that he was the very Christ, while still others said "This is the Christ"—the word "Christ" denoting the one who as the anointed of God, was to be the Savior of men, the great High Priest through whom they were to have their sins taken away and the wonderful King who would some time reign over the earth for ever. So believing that Jesus was the Christ, was believing a great deal: it was believing a good part of what Jesus said we must believe if we do not want to die in our sins.

But what did John the Baptist say? He and Jesus were second cousins, but John was not acquainted with Jesus, for he lived in the wilderness of Judea—a desert valley north of Jerusalem—while Jesus stayed close at home in the little town of Nazareth. But John knew that Jesus would soon show himself to his people, so he was at Bethabara—the Bethany over the Jordan—telling the great crowds who came to hear him preach, that they must leave off the sins they loved so well, believe on this coming Savior, and be baptized so God would forgive them. He was to make the way easier for Jesus, though he said he was not worthy even to carry his shoes.

But how did he find out who Jesus was? God gave him a sign. He said, John, when you see the Holy Spirit descending from heaven like a dove and remaining upon some one whom you have baptized, you may know that that person is Jesus. And listen Ethel May, Herschell, Alvin and Madeline, this is what John the Baptist said after he had seen that little dove: "And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God." That is just what we wanted. To deny that Jesus is the Son of God, is to deny everything, for "whosoever denieth the Son hath not the Father." We cannot have God for our Father and friend, unless we come to him in the Name and through the blood of Jesus. "This is his commandment that we should believe on the name of his Son, Jesus Christ." "In this was the love of God manifested toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him." "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life,and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life." Do you think then, dear children, that any one who is not the truly begotten Son of God can save us? It cannot be. God has said "There is no other name given under heaven among men whereby we can be saved," except the name of Jesus. We must believe just what God says about the birth of Jesus, that he had a mother but no earthly father. Adam was the son of God because he had neither father nor mother, and Eve was a daughter, in a sense, for she had no earthly parents. God made Adam out of the dust of the ground and Eve from one of Adam's ribs. Do the little ones think it was a very hard task for God to make a second Adam, to take the place of the first one? especially when there was the lovliest young woman in all the world, willing to become his mother, and who was "the woman" God told Eve about, whose "seed," or child should "bruise the serpent's head'? Auntie Wince does not; God's great angel had only to go to the dear maiden Mary and tell her she would have a child, and would call his name Jesus, who would be great, be called the Son of the Highest; "would be given the throne of his father David, and would rule over the house of Jacob for ever, of his kingdom there shall be no end." And God's Holy Spirit, and the power of the Highest, would cause it to come to pass, and the holy thing that would be born of her, would be called the Son of God (Luke 1st chapter).

And that is the way the dear Christ child came to be. God spake and it was done, just as he said it would be away back there in the garden of Eden To believe that Jesus is the promised "seed of the woman" or child of a young girl without any husband, and therefore the actual Son of God, is to believe that he is the one that Moses and all the prophets wrote of. And Jesus would say that believing this you believe "that I am he." But your lesson is already too long, and I will have to write another for you.

HEARING AND DOING, AND HEARING AND NOT DOING

The above is taken from the closing remarks found in the sermon on the mount (Matt. 7:24-26). Each is followed by the result. While these sayings may be applied in a personal way, the whole truth is learned when we apply this Scripture to systems. Those who hear the sayings of Jesus are themselves building upon the rock. Those who hear these sayings and do them not are building on the sand. Those who accept the confession made by Peter, viz., "Thou are the Christ the Son of the living God," are building on the rock. Hearing and doing the sayings of Jesus guarantee to us a resurrection from the dead and a position in the kingdom of God. This will constitute the mystery of godliness. Hearing and not doing constitutes the mystery of iniquity. This system will have for its foundation sand, and will not stand. The latter system is now being developed under the leadership of the federation of churches. The present life of their system is the Sunday system of evangelizing. It carries with it a great number of personal workers who preceed the evangelist, and succeed in getting the people aroused, that when the time arrives for the evangelist the people are ready to receive him and hail him as their personal savior. Besides this, there is a large band of singers and musicians who conduct their exercises to the full satisfaction of the entire audience. It is not true that Mr. Sunday is the whole power in this system of evangelizing: it is the system taken as a whole that makes it a success. It is doing more today to systemize and consolidate the mystery of iniquity than all other efforts. No evangelist can be a success unless he follows this system.

You will observe that there is an influence existing in these latter days that is closing up the chasm that has existed between Catholicism and Protestantism. When the proper time comes all these churches will unite under the leadership of the old mother of harlots. When this takes place the saints will have been gathered into their secret chamber, where Jesus will reward each according as his work has been. The spirit of God will not strive with this system, as it belongs to the body of Christ, and will be taken with the saints. This will constitute the time of the indignation. Some idea may be formed by reading Daniel 12:1. Men will seek death, and can not find it. They will call for the mountains and the rocks to fall upon them. When the spirit of God is removed from the world the baser passions of man will have full sway. The present war spirit may be regarded as a foretaste of the time of indignation. Let us praise God for the promise that we, his saints will be protected from their base system. We will have been gathered into the secret chamber. We then will be associated with Jesus Christ and all the ancient worthies who were faithful unto death, and who with Paul, will receive a crown of righteousness.

We have stated that those who accept the confession of Peter that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, are building on the rock. In connection with this confession Jesus said, "Upon this rock (or confession) will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." If we are benefitted by this confession we must believe it as revealed in the Scripture. A mere emotional confession does not constitute a Scriptural confession. Philip preached Jesus from Isa. 53:7,8. He evidently preached the humility of Jesus and his exaltation to the rulership of the world. To preach Jesus is to declare his death and resurrection, and God's purpose in raising him, which was to sit on David's throne (Acts 2:30). This testimony concerning Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. Without it every prophetic utterance is of no value, for as James states, the body without the spirit is dead. We must not only believe in the name of Jesus, but we must believe that he was anointed to do the work assigned him by the Father (Isa. 61:1,2; Luke 4:18-21). To only believe that Jesus is a personal Savoir will save no one. You must have an intellectual knowledge of the prophetic utterances concerning Jesus. The promise made to the woman (Gen. 3:15) was that her seed should destroy sin and exalt righteousness in the earth. Abraham's seed is to possess the land of Canaan (the gate of his enemies), and to bless all nations through the establishment of the kingdom which will in time extend over the entire earth. David's son is to build up his throne and kingdom for ever. These are the grand truths that must be believed in order to gain salvation. This is the intellectual part that will, with the physical act, baptism, assure an everlasting deliverance from the power of sin and death. Baptism is the act on our part that brings us under the protecting power of Christ's death. It is our confession that Christ died, was buried and rose again. We are then admonished to walk in this new life. If faithful till death we are promised a place in God's kingdom (Rev. 2:26,27; 3:21). Dear brothers and sisters, we are Christ's witnesses to proclaim his return to reward the faithful ones. Let us be steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the works of the Lord.

OBITUARY

Brother Taylor

Our dear Brother Taylor, of Iaton, Texas, has fallen asleep in Christ.

He was born in Talopoosa Co., Ala., Nov.29, 1853. He was of a family of eleven children, of which he being the sixth one to be stricken by the enemy, death.

He was married Dec. 14, 1875 to Miss Frances Ray. To this union was born five children, of which two survive; the oldest and next to the baby child. Three preceded him in death; two little boys in infancy, and one girl at the age of nine years.

Brother Taylor left Alabama Feb. 13, 1893, and settled at Comanchie. Texas, Comanchie Co. He lived there until 1899, when he moved to Taylor County and resided there seven years; he then moved to Nolan County, and stayed there one year; afterwards to Martin County, and lived there one year; and at the time of his death he was living in Mitchell Co., and had been a resident of Mitchell Co. nine years. He was baptized twenty-nine years ago by Henry Simpson, of Alabama, and was a minister of the gospel twenty-five years. His daily study was the Bible. He was the only preacher of the faith we had in this part of the state and it hurt us very bad to have him give up. His health has been failing since 1911. The second Sunday in May, 1911, at Larande, Texas, our dear Brother was stricken by a flow of blood to the brain. He was treated for six months and more, and finally got some better. In August, 1915, he took blood poison, and that stayed on his person until the summer of 1916. His heart got affected and doctors seemed to do him so much good, he told his family that he felt better than he had in five years. But the first of this year he was stricken with the same disease—heart trouble—only a great deal worse. He took to his bed Friday before the third Sunday in February, and kept getting weaker all the time. He lingered for seven weeks, one day and three hours. On the seventh of April, at 10:45 in the morning, death visited our dear Brother and took from our midst the one most dear. He said several times during his illness that he did not fear death. All he dreaded was leaving his family behind, and the sting of death. He said: "I have a right to dread the sting of death, as my Savior prayed that the cup might pass from him, but not his will—the Father's be done."

During all the seven long weeks of his sickness he bore it with great patience. Often in great pain he prayed to the Lord for rest. I am sure he realized he was near death's door,, but he never told his family because he was the most precious to each of the family. He knew it would grieve them, and he could not stand to see them sorrow.

All was done that loving hands could do, but to no avail. He fell asleep until the Lord shall call him from his dusty bed to die no more, but live with us forever. Yes, it will be a grand reunion where we will part no more forever.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer. Be of good cheer Sister Taylor, Brother Taylor will come again and will walk the vine clad hills of a new earth associated with his own dear family and all those of the faith of our father Abraham.

BAPTISM

Howard S. Zehner was baptized at Argos, Apl. 11. 1917, at 7 o'clock P. M. at the residence of Brother F. P. Boggs. We held services at the church immediately afterwards and received Brother Zehner into the church and held communion. May Brother Zehner find the Christian life a joy and a blessing. May he fully arm himself according to Eph. 6, and be able to meet and vanquish the enemy in every conflict. And not only be able to conquer the enemy, but may he develop a high degree of proficiency in righteousness, and thus be qualified and worthy to enter into the work and joy of the coming age with Christ and his elect in the fulfillment of the promise made to Abraham that in him and his seed should all the nations of the earth be blessed. May the church render him that support and help that is due the younger members. And may he find full opportunity for the exerise of his ability in showing the way and leading others to the same blessings he has received.

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD. AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O, MAY 8, 1917 NUMBER 18

THE SIGNS OF THE END

The fearful wars and winds of strife
The nations' stoutest hearts appall;
The wholesale sacrifice of life,
Precursors of proud Babel's fall.

The sages gaze with fearful dread
At rivers red with human gore;
The earth is quaking 'neath the tread
Of marching men on every shore.

The violence and sin and crime,
And drunkenness on every side,
Are witnessing the end of time,
When Christ shall come to claim his bride.

BRIEF BIOGRAPHY OF BROTHER ALMUS ADAMS

Data of this Life Sketch is Supplied by Sister Carrie Free

Brother Almus Adams was born near Monmouth, Ill., Aug. 12, 1854. His parents moved to Hardin Co., Iowa, arriving April 12, 1855, the day he was eight months old. He received his education in the public schools of that County. Brother J. T. Prime came into that neighborhood, preaching the gospel, when Brother Adams was but a small boy. He says he can remember the stir it created among the people. Brother Prime continued his work under the auspices of Mrs. Jane Harlan, who had come through from Indiana, and who was a very enthusiastic sister in the faith. Later G. M. Myers took up the work, which resulted in a twelve days' debate. J. W. Haughanout was chosen to represent the truth, and E. W. Barker, a Baptist minister, was the opposer. The truth prevailed, and at this time Brother Adams took his first deep interest in the truth. A little later C. C. Ramsey came. In the meantime Brother Adams was married to Miss Elizabeth Jane Wilson. About a year after their marriage, both were baptized by Brother Ramsey.

Sister Adams, as every one in Nebraska knows, has made many sacrifices that Brother Adams might go and spread the truth. He began his work of teaching at that time by leading in the Bible classes held in the neighborhood. He preached his first public discourse in 1883 in the City Hall of Gifford, Iowa; subject, "The Rich Man and Lazarus." And now he has written a splendid tract on that subject.

He came to Nebraska in 1884, accompanied by the families of S. W. Harlan and R. P. Story, who were in the faith, and practically the truth in Nebraska has spread from that little flock. He located on a homestead in Furnas Co., and began going to the different school houses, holding regular services. A conference was organized and Brother Adams was chosen president, which office he held for a number of years. He was elected state evangelist in 1888, and has been re-elected each year since, making twenty-nine years that he has held that office. His services have been sought by other states, and Nebraska's liberality in sparing him to meet those calls has resulted in his preaching in fourteen different states. He was a delegate to the National Conference held in Philadelphia in 1888, also at Chicago the following year. The old records are not complete, but we believe he has baptized a thousand people into the all-saving name.

Elder Almus Adams, Evangelist

We know enough of the location of his converts to the truth to know that they reside from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. He has held twenty-five public debates with the different sects, and is so well known as a debater they will not meet him any more. His early work was accompanied by many hardships: the members were few and all poor, and it was by patient toil the work was kept going. The brethren did the best they could, and now we are glad to know that the cause in the state is the most prosperous of its history. His forcefulness and manner of presenting the truth have been the great factors in bringing people to accept it. He has given a life of service to the Master, and the Lord alone can reward him. His power of speech and vigor of body he still retains, and he is now appealing to the church to put on her wedding garments, and be ready for the Bridegroom's return. No one has ever stood more uncompromisingly for the truth. Like Paul he can say he has fought a good fight, henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness.

FIGHTING CHRISTIANITY REFUTED BY THE TESTIMONY OF CHRISTIANS IN THE FIRST AND SECOND CENTURIES

Of all the Christian writers of the first and second centuries there is not one who notices the subject, who deos not hold it to be unlawful for Christians to bear arms; "and," says Clarkson, "it was not till Christianity became corrupted that Christians became soldiers." Our Savior inculcated mildness and peaceableness. We have seen that the apostles imbibed his Spirit and followed his example; and the early Christians pursued the example and imbibed the spirit of both. This sacred principle, this earnest recommendation of forbearance, lenity and forgiveness, mixes with all the writings of that age. There are more quotations in the apostolic Fathers, of texts which relate to these points, than of any other. A few examples from their history will show with what undoubting confidence they believed in the unlawfulness of war, and how much they were willing to suffer for peace.

Says Polycarp, the disciple of John: "We must not render evil for evil, or railing for railing, or striking for striking, or cursing for cursing." Maximilliar, as it is related in the Acts of Ruinart, was brought before the tribunal to be enrolled as a soldier. On the proconsul's asking his name, Maximillian replied: "I am a Christian and cannot fight." It was, however, ordered that he should be enrolled; but he refused to serve, still alleging that he was a Christian. He was told that there was no alternative between bearing arms and being put to death. But his fidelity was not to be shaken. "I cannot fight," said he, "if I die." The proconsul asked him who had persuaded him to this conduct. "My own mind," said the Christian, "and he who has called me." It was once more attempted to shake his faith, by appealing to his youth and the glory of the profession, but in vain. "I cannot fight," said he, "for any earthly consideration." He continued steadfast, sentence was pronounced upon him, and he was led to execution.

The primitive Christians not only refused to be enlisted in the army, but when they embraced Christianity, whilst already enlisted, they abandoned their profession, at whatever cost.

Marcellus was a centurion in the legion called Trajana. Whilst holding this commission he became a Christian, and believing, in common with his fellow-Christians, that war was no longer permitted to him, he threw down his belt at the head of his legion, declaring that he had become a Christian, and that he would serve no longer. He was committed to prison, but he was still faithful to Christianity. "It is not lawful," said he, "for a Christian to bear arms for any earthly consideration;" and he was in consequence put to death. Almost immediately afterwards, Cassian, who was notary to the same legion, gave up his office. He steadfastly maintained the sentiments of Marcellus, and like him was consigned to the executioner. Martin, of whom so much is said by Sulpicious Severus, was bred to the profession of arms, which, on his acceptance of Christianity, he abandoned. To Julian, the apostate, the only reason he gave was this: "I am a Christian, and therefore I cannot fight." The answer of Tarachus to Numerianus Maximus is in words nearly similar. "I have led a military life, and am a Roman; and because I am a Christian I have abandoned my profession of a soldier."

The principles of those men were principles of the whole body. They were recognized and defended by the Christian writers, their contemporaries. Justin Martyr and Tatian talk of soldiers and Christians as distinct characters. And Tatian says that the Christians declined even military commands. Clemens of Alexandria calls his Christian contemporaries the followers of peace, and expressly tells us that "the followers of peace used none of the implements of war."

About the end of the second century Celsus, one of the opponents of Christianity, charged the Christians with refusing to bear arms, even in case of necessity. Origen, the defender of the Christians, does not think of denying the facts; he admits the refusal and justifies it, because war was unlawful.

Even after Christianity had spread over almost the whole of the known world, Tertullian, in speaking of a part of the Roman armies, including more than one third of the standing legions of Rome, distinctly informs us that "not a Christian could be found among them." All this is explicit. Tertullian says Jesus Christ, by disarming Peter, "disarmed every soldier afterwards; for custom never sanctions any unlawful act."

Can any one who possesses the peaceable doc- other work, "when Christ has pronounced that he who lives by the sword shall perish by the sword."

Can any one who posseses the peaceable doctrine of the gospel be a soldier, when it is his duty not so much as to go to law? And shall he, who is not to revenge his own wrongs, be instrumental in bringing others into chains, imprisonment, torture and death? Tertullian appeals to the precepts of Christ's sermon on the Mount, in proof of those principles on which this essay has been insisting: that the dispositions which the precepts inculcate are not compatible with war, and war, therefore, is irreconcilable with Christianity. Christians, however, afterwards become soldiers. And when? When their general fidelity to Christianity became relaxed. When they began to dissemble, and to falsify their word, and to cheat; when Christian casuists had persuaded them that they might sit at meat in the idol's temple. When Christians accepted the priesthoods of idolatry. In a word, they became soldiers when they had ceased to be Christians. During the first two hundred years, not a Christian soldier is upon record. In the third century, when Christianity became partially corrupted, Christian soldiers were common. The number increased with the increase of the general profligacy, until at last, in the fourth century, Christians became soldiers without hesitation and perhaps without remorse.

And now, let it always be borne in mind by those who are advocating war, that they are contending for a corruption which their forefathers abhorred, and that they are making Jesus Christ the sanctioner of crimes which his purest followers offered up their lives because they would not commit. We seriously, then, and solemnly, invite the honest-hearted Christians of the present day to consider these things. And yet we have brethren who profess to be looking for the soon coming of the Lord, and profess to rejoice in the prospect of the overthrow of all the kingdoms and governments of this world and the establishment of the Kingdom of God under the reign and authority of Jesus Messiah. Yes, these brethren are using their tongues and pens in favor of a fighting Christianity, and throwing their fog and dust in the eyes of many of our dear young brethren, who are not informed in the matter, and thus, with their fair speeches and vain babbling, are deceiving the hearts of the simple and thus leading many of this class to speedy ruin and perdition. Better would it be for them, if their tongues were dumb and their hands paralized, than be guilty of a crime like this. The blood of those dear ones will be in the skirts of their garments. O shame on such Christians! who, as a general thing, have not courage enough to shoot a mouse. But when time comes for true Christians to show their colors and stand up manfully for the testimony of Jesus and the apostles, we hear them crying out, "Treason! treason! 'Be in subjection to the powers that be.' 'The powers that be are ordained of God,'" and all such like perversions of God's Holy Word.

According to their theory, the kingdoms of this world are to be dashed in pieces as a potter's vessel, to give place for the Kingdom of God. But the kingdoms that be are ordained of God, and the Christian must fight to support and sustain the kingdoms or powers that be; and whilst they are taking good aim with rifles to sustain the powers that be, pray "Thy kingdom come; forgive us our trespasses as we are forgiving those that are trespassing against us."

Most of the battles that have been fought on the first day of the week; and according to the teaching of those pious fighters, our brethren, instead of meeting on the first day to break bread, must meet on first day to break one another's heads! And instead of partaking of the blood of the New Testament, given for remission of sins, we must take the heart's blood of our fellow man; for the powers that be are ordained of God!!! O! my brethen in the one faith and hope; heed not the vain twaddle of those pious fighters; but instead thereof, "take Jesus for your guide." He is our law-giver; him shall you hear in all things. "And it cometh to pass that whosoever will not hear him, will be destroyed from among the people" (of God). If he says fight and kill, do it; but if he says, love your enemies, do it. If "do unto others as ye would others should do to you," do it. If "feed your enemies," do it. If "live peaceably with all men," do it. Don't consult expediency. Obey, and leave the event with God. Christ hath said, "Because you have kept the word of my patience, I also will keep you from the hour of temptation that shall come upon all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth." Says Jesus, "I am the Truth and the Life. He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of Life." "Learn of me, for I am meek and humble of heart, and you shall find rest to your minds. My yoke is easy and my burden is light." "He that seeks to save his life shall lose it; but he that loses his life for my sake shall find it." Blessed hope. Who is willing to suffer for the Truth in these trying times?

Thank God for one Editor that dare speak plain. You shall have my influence and co-operation.—L. H. Chase. Written in Oct. 1862, and published in Millennial Harbinger.

THE TWO GOSPELS

There are two gospels preached in the world today: the false, and the true. The false is the oldest. It was preached in the garden of Eden to the first woman, and this woman was a creation of God. She was created a helpmeet for the man that God had made in his own form and likeness out of the dust of the ground. The garden of Eden was a beautiful garden and God placed the first man and woman in the garden to till and care for it. He also gave them the privilege of eating of all the fruit of the garden with the exception of one tree in the midst of it, and he forbade them to eat of that tree; and if they should eat, they would sin and receive the wages of sin. "For in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Gen. 2:17). "For the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23).. 4004 years B. C. came a wonderful preacher into the garden of Eden, and preached a gospel to the woman, "He said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden. The woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden, but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die."

This is the foundation on which the false gospel is built. Why do we call it the false gospel? Because the author of it was a liar and the father of it (John 8:44). 1921 years before Christ the true gospel was first preached and God was the preacher, and these are the words he used: "God said unto Abram, In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 12: 3; 13:15; 15:18). 1913 years B. C. God changed Abram's name to Abraham, and further taught him the true gospel (Gen. 17:5-8; 18:18; 22:15-18; 26:35; 28:13,14). Paul an inspired writer and preacher says the words God said unto Abraham were the gospel (Gal. 3:8). He preached and wrote it, and declared who taught a different gospel, should be accursed (Gal. 1:8).

How can we tell the difference between the true and the false? The true is the one that uses the words that God spake to Abraham; and the false is the one that uses the words that the serpent said unto Eve. The true gospel teaches that the nations of the earth are to be blessed through Abraham and his seed (Gal. 3:8). Who is his seed? Christ (Gal. 3:16). Do all receive this blessing? No. Why? Because only the heirs by promise receive the blessing. Who are the heirs? "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Who can be baptized into Christ? All those that hear the words God spake unto Abraham, and believe them. Who speaks these words? Every one that speaks the words of Christ. Paul and other inspired writers spoke and wrote it. What is the object of speaking these words? To influence man to become related to Abraham in such a way that he may receive the same blessing that was promised to Abraham.

When do the believers of the true gospel receive the blessings promised to Abraham? At the resurrection. "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead" (1 Cor. 15:12-23). Where do they receive the reward? Here on earth. Does the true gospel teach that man, or any part of him, ever leaves the earth? No. Proof: "I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God" (Gen. 15:18; 17:5,8,19).

Now what does the false gospel teach? "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4). Do men die? Sure they do. "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth so dieth the other: yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast" (Eccl. 3:19). Can a man live without the one breath? No. "And they went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life" (Gen. 7:15). "All in whose nostrils was the breath of life, and all that was in the dry land died" (Gen. 7:21,22). "Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust" (Psa. 104:29). "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish" (Psa. 146:4).

Then the statement that "ye shall not surely die" is false. The false gospel teaches that what is called death is death to the body only, and that returns to dust, but the real person leaves the body and goes to heaven. Christ in teaching the "true gospel" to his disciples tells them that no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven (John 3:13). David is not ascended into the heavens (Acts 2:34). "Touch me not: for I am not yet ascended to my Father" (John 20:17). "Whither I go ye cannot come" (John 13:33). The real man thinks when alive, but in death his thoughts perish (Psa. 146:4). The gospel taught in the garden was false. But man in order to "believe the lie" must either add to or take away from God's word. So he adds to it and says the real man is immortal and cannot die, copying the words of the serpent. The true gospel says, "God only hath immortality," and commands us to "seek for immortality" by patient continuance in well doing. Life and immortality were brought to light through the gospel (1 Tim. 6:16; Rom. 2:7; 2 Tim. 1:10; 1 Cor. 15:53,54). The word "Immortal" occurs in Tim. 1:17, and in no place is there any statement that man is immortal.

The theme of immortality is the most prominent doctrine in the "false gospel." The false gospel is not recorded in the Bible, only the foundation of it is recorded in Gen. 3:4, and its author is the father of lies. From this foundation has sprung many hundred isms that can have no hope in the true gospel. They have no faith in it, and have hardened their hearts, and have become servants to sin. They will not endure sound doctrine, but are wise in their own conceit (Rom. 11:25; 12:16). They will not listen to the word: they do not worship God; they know not what they worship. "God is spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and truth" (John 4:22-24). They have not the spirit of Christ, but the spirit of the author of the "false gospel." They have not the truth, therefore cannot worship God, for it is vain for them to try, seeing that they teach for doctrines the commandments of men who have accepted the doctrine taught by the serpent (Matt. 15:8,9). The true gospel leads to life; the false leads to eternal death. Dear brothers and sisters, choose life rather than death.

HAVE YOU ENLISTED?

I wish that every one that reads this might be able to answer "yes." I do not mean to enlist in the fight where carnal weapons are used, and where we are expected to kill our brother; but the fight I mean is the fight Paul speaks of where he tells us to take the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God. This saves men instead of destroying them. We can never gain peace by taking up the sword against our brother, as the world is now doing. The Lord will do our fighting for us, and we must not engage in the present conflict. We will never have peace on the earth until Jesus the "Prince of Peace" returns to the earth to establish his kingdom.

Paul says to "Take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day" (Eph. 6:13). And it seems that we are in "the evil day" now. Read farther and you will find what this whole armor is. In the 16th verse he says: "Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." We must have faith in the Lord that he will keep us during the tempest of strife and commotion that is now raging. It seems that some are already losing faith like those that were in the ship with Jesus, when they said, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" They seem to think he is asleep now, but when he gets ready he will calm the waves, and it will not take him long. It grieved me very much a few days ago when I was talking with some ladies about the war and I said, "Well the Lord will soon destroy the armies that are fighting, I think." One of them spoke up and said, "I think it will take more than the Lord to destroy the Germans." So you see that is the kind of faith some people have in God's power.

A little farther along in Eph. 6 we read: "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit." This is some more of the armor. How many of us do it? Would it not be better for the nations to "pray always" for the Prince of Peace to come and establish peace, instead of trying to bring about peace by the sword? But how few believe that Jesus is soon coming to the earth to establish his kingdom, and how few are looking for him! Hence the Bible says, "That day will come as a snare on all the inhabitants of the earth."

No, brothers, let us not engage in killing our fellow men, no matter what the cost. If we have on the whole armor of God we need not be afraid of the enemy. If we lose our life here, we will find eternal life when Jesus comes. Let us in no way connect ourselves with earthly governments. Christ's government is the only one we should work for.

If we obey God, are we not worshiping him? If we obey the government in killing our brother, when the Bible tells us we should not do so, are we not worshiping the government? If a beast is a symbol of government or power, let us beware that we do not "worship the beast" and get the plagues that are sent on beast worshipers (Rev. 16).

It seems that we are now living in the feet of Daniel's image, or in the latter part of the fourth (Roman) universal empire. Listen to what Christ's kingdom is going to do to the feet in which we are now living: "Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain (kingdom), and filled the whole earth" (Dan. 2:34,35). Please read entire chapter and it will be very plain.

Dearly beloved, let us so live that we may be worthy to reign with Christ in this glorious kingdom which is soon to be established in the earth, when men shall beat their spears into pruning hooks and their swords into plowshares; and better than all, the inhabitants will not say, "I am sick."

SERVING GOD

There is one thing constantly reiterated by our Master, the order of all others that is given the oftenest, "Do justice and judgment." That's your Bible order; that's the "service of God," not praying nor psalm-singing. You are told, indeed, to sing psalms when you are merry, and to pray when you need anything; and by the perversion of the evil spirit we get to think that praying and psalm-singing are "service." If a child finds itself in want of anything, it runs and asks its father for it—does it call that doing its father a service? If it begs for a toy or a piece of cake—does it call that serving its father? That, with God, is prayer, and he likes to hear it; he likes you to ask him for cake when you want it, but he does not call that "serving him." Begging is not serving; God likes mere beggars as little as you do. He likes honest servants, not beggars. So when a child loves its father very much, and is very happy, it may sing little songs about him, but it does not call that serving its father; neither is singing songs about God serving God. It is enjoying ourselves; most probably it is nothing, but, if it is anything, it is serving ourselves, not God. And yet we are impudent enough to call chantings and beggings "Divine service." We say "Divine service will be performed, (that's our word—the form of it gone through,) at eleven o'clock." Alas! unless we perform Divine Service in every willing act of our lives, we never perform it at all.—Ruskin.

REWARD FOR SERVICE

Luke 16:13; Rom. 12:1.

Beautiful are youth's sweet flowers,
  If one cultivates them well;
They will be our greatest treasures,
  None of which we'll care to sell.

It will be our greatest pleasure,
  When we've grown old and gray;
Just to glance at them at leisure,
  If we've fought and won the day.

If you have become disheartened,
  And have almost lost your way,
Let at once your hope be strengthened,
  And enlist with God today.

Your reward is life eternal,
  Will you stand and look aghast
At your many sins internal,
  Till your present life is past?

Better quit yourself a soldier,
  Don God's armor with delight;
What did Christ deem holier
  Than to quit himself and fight?

EDITORIAL

April 30th the Editor had a most enjoyable visit with Brother and Sister Ernest Blyth, of Columbus, Ohio.

Brother Robison has a tract that he wishes to distribute entitled: "The Gospel of the Kingdom of God and the Covenants made with Abraham and David." This may be had by addressing the writer, D. C. Robison, 366 W. Main St., Salem, Ohio. The price is 2 cents per copy for those who are able to buy. To those unable to do so, they will be sent free.

During the week a call came from Brother Netts, of Springfield, Ohio, to go there and preach the funeral of Sister Wilson, a daughter of our deceased but greatly beloved Brother Howell. When we arrived in Springfield to perform this sad duty Brother Benjamin Kauffman, a charter member of the Springfield church, suddenly passed into the sleep of death. These are the busy doings of death which have filled our Springfield brethren and sisters with mourning. In Cleveland we have also been called to weep with Sister Irish and her daughter, Sister Jennie Irish, who have suffered the loss of their husband and father by death. God hasten the time when the inhabitants of earth shall not say, "I am sick." "O land of rest, for thee we sigh":

CHILDREN OF GOD CANNOT BEAR ARMS FOR THE GOVERNMENT

In 1862 the Civil War was in progress. The question then was raised among believers if it were right to engage in war. The discussion culminated in a debate between Brother O. R. L. Crozier and Brother T. G. Newman, then Editor of "The Millenial Harbinger," which paper was The Restitution of that day. Brother Newman's defense of the truth was so full of wisdom and the spirit (Acts 6:10) that Brother Crozier and others who sought to justify war never raised their voices or pens in its defense again. Since this discussion there has not been a residuum of militarism in the hearts of our brethren. The war spirit is again abroad, and there exists the possibility that a few young brethren may get infected with it. To safeguard them from this evil we publish herewith Brother Newman's resume of the debate and his unanswerable arraignment of militarism among the friends of God. It is taken from "The Millennial Harbinger," Aug. 6, 1862.

As the apostolic teaching was to "the Jews a stumblingblock, and to the Greeks foolishness," so is the pure "Gospel of peace" to the war-sustaining professor—"soft sentimentality." But we, as humble minded Christians, are willing to be accounted fools for Christ's sake, while keeping his commands. Some of the legitimate effects of having the war-spirit are these:

1. Having a wordly mind instead of "the mind that was in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 2:5; Col. 3:12; 1 Pet. 4:1).

2. Being without natural affection to our brother man and void of that lovely character which we should exhibit to all the world (Eph. 5:1,2).

3. Being unable to love their enemies, bless, and curse not, etc., etc., (Matt. 5:44-47).

4. It engenders strife, hatred, ill-will, malice, etc.

5. It makes men "fierce," as Paul says in 2 Tim. 3:3; "implacable, unmerciful."

6. It does not permit men to obey Christ, "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them" (Luke 6:31).

7. It destroys that peace of mind which the Christian should always enjoy (John 16:33). We are called to peace, not war (1 Cor. 7:15). It must dwell in our hearts (Col. 3:15). We must be filled with peace (Rom. 15:13). If the war-spirit is there, there is no room for peace, for the two cannot dwell together—much less can one be "filled with peace."

8. It unfits us to be kept in these evil times by the God of peace, for in order to be thus kept we must "live in peace" (2 Cor. 13:11; Phil. 4:7).

9. It so far kills the professed Christian that he cannot bear the fruit of the Spirit, which is "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, meekness, goodness," etc. Instead thereof he shows the works of the flesh, which are, hatred, variance, wrath, strife, murders, etc., (Gal. 5:18-22).

10. Having the war-spirit we are unable to "live peaceably with all men" (Rom. 12:18); or to obey God's commands, "Follow peace with all men" (Heb. 12:14), and we are positively told that "without which," when coupled with holiness, "NO MAN SHALL SEE THE LORD." "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say?" (Luke 6:46).

11. It unfits us to pray for our rulers (1 Tim. 2:1,2). There is no spirit of prayer in war. We are not required to fight! No! but pray. What for? "That we may lead a quiet and peaceable life."

12. When men take vengeance, they disobey God. He says "avenge not yourselves." "Vengeance is mine, I will repay," etc. (Rom. 12:19; Heb. 10:30; Isa. 59:16-18).

13. By using "carnal weapons," men deny the Lord and desert his cause, (2 Cor. 10:4) and become entangled with the affairs of this life (2 Tim. 2:4), and get their armor of the enemy, for God's armory contains no "carnal weapons;"—examine his stock (Eph. 6:10-18).

14. It begets the bitter envying and strife which James says is a "lie against the truth," and is "earthly, sensual, devilish," which is unlike "the wisdom that is from above (which) is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits," etc. (James 3:14-17). That wisdom which God approves is that which justifies the heart, so that it being "first pure (is) then peaceable and its peace flows like a river.

We hope that every one who believes in "the gospel of the kingdom of God" will examine the source of war in these days, before he thinks of engaging in it. Mark! The "spirits of devils" are sent on the mission of gathering the nations "to the battle of the great day of God Almighty," and those thus gathered will be finally destroyed (Rev. 16:13). Reader, are you willing to be gathered by such an agency? Can you be satisfied with such associates? Will you accept such a destiny? Pause and think! The time is at hand.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins:

You will find enclosed 75 cents in money order for which please extend my subscription to our dear good paper. I am quite feeble at this writing and have been all winter; suffering the effects of a breakdown which I experienced several years ago: but my faith grows stronger and my hope brighter as the coming of the Lord draws near, and I am thankful to our heavenly Father for strength to keep so.

We are truly living in perilous times. O, what would we do if it were not for the blessed hope we have through our Redeemer. "Blessed is the man that maketh the Lord his trust." "He is a shield to them that put their trust in him." Let us cast all our cares upon him and cling closer and closer to his precious promises. I can say Amen to Brother S. H. Thomas' article on prophecy in last number, which I read with much interest.

Brother Huggins please pardon my delay, as I am a little behind. Thank you ever so much for sending the paper. I love The Restitution and feel very much attached to it, on account of its many Bible truths. May the Lord soon come and put an end to sin and usher in his peaceful reign on the earth, is my prayer.

Sister A. J. Martin.

MILITARY EXEMPTION

Chas. A. Goss

Shall we petition for military exemption or shall we not? If merely petitioning for it would secure it, doubtless the president and congress would be overwhelmed with petitions for military exemption. But any one in the least cognizant of current events know that the whole trend of affairs is toward universal military service and equal sharing of the burdens of war by all—every individual, according to his or her capability for service, which is just.

Much of what has been said by those writing on this question is in accord with my understanding, particularly that part which shows that we are to "submit ourselves to every ordinance of man" and "obey them that have the rule over you."

To assume that we are not "citizens," or to give the people to understand that we are "aliens," would not be true in any sense in which it would be understood by them. Could we then say we were "glorifying God" or that we were "suffering for our faith?"

So far none of the quotations of the words of Christ, or the apostle Paul have any direct reference to the question of going to war; were in fact purely inferential. Neither Christ nor his apostles condemned or rebuked those who were soldiers, but in Matt. 8:10 we read how Jesus highly commended one who was a Roman captain for his faith. And in Acts 10:3-7 a Roman centurion is highly commended and receives baptism by Peter, and not the slightest suggestion is made that he ought to quit the soldier life. In Luke 3:14 we find the soldiers enquiring and saying: "And what shall we do?" They were admonished to be content with their lawful pay and not to despoil and rob the citizens, as many did. No other duties than were common to all were laid upon them. Thus the distinction between robbing and killing for personal gain and fighting the battles of your country and for home and kindred are not confused in the Scriptures.

It has been quoted that the commandment of God is, "Thou shalt not kill." We would not think of applying this text as an argument against eating meat, for which we have to "kill" the sheep and cattle and fowls. Our common sense tells us that while the letter of the law forbids "killing" and makes no exceptions, "the spirit and understanding" apprehend the true intent and purpose, which is: "Thou shalt do no murder." A soldier fighting for his country and the cause of humanity is not a murderer, either in the law of God or of man.

Compare Gen. 14 and Heb. 7:2 and note how Abraham went to war, did battle and returned victorious. I do not find any record that God directly authorized him to take up arms to rescue Lot. As far as we know Abraham did not ask the Lord about it. His kinsman needed his help, and that was enough. The same holds good now with all men when it comes near enough to their own. It were better for the nation if all American citizens came to realize this, and we of the church of God and "household of faith" would far better show our faith by trusting God to guide and direct affairs for our good.

This petition looks to me as though we were afraid to trust him. One brother has suggested that we should not recognize ourselves as "citizens" and as holding allegiance to any political power, and therefore not privileged to petition as such. Another takes the opposite view and suggests that our being privileged as we are to petition for exemption from military service may be God's providential arrangement for our use. I would like to offer another suggestion, which is based upon the president's well known determination to make the "selective draft" principle a law, and the extreme improbability of our getting any petition before him for consideration under the circumstances. Consider the vast amount of business which the war has put upon him and the magnitude of the affairs he is daily transacting, and say what chance have we to command his attention when we differ from him and oppose his fixed policy and determination? His policy is outlined in the following letter and is a masterpiece of political wisdom. In a letter written to Representative Guy T. Helvering of Kansas, the president said:

> What is meant to be understood by the selective draft is not generally understood throughout the country. I took occasion the other day in an address to the people of the country to point out the many forms of patriotic service that were open to them and to emphasize the fact that the military part of the service was by no means the only part, and perhaps, all things considered, not the most vital part.
> Our object is a mobilization of all the productive and active forces of the nation and their development to the highest point of co-operation and efficiency, and the idea of the selective draft is that those should be chosen for service in the army who can be most readily spared from the prosecution of the other activities which the country must engage in and to which it must devote a great deal of its best energy and capacity.
> The volunteer system does not do this. When men choose themselves they sometimes choose without due regard to their responsibilities. Men may come from the farms or from the mines or from the factories or centres of business who ought not to come, but ought to stand back of the armies in the field and see that they get everything that they need and that the people of the country are sustained in the meantime.
> The principle of the selective draft, in short, has at its heart this idea, that there is a universal obligation to serve and that a public authority should choose those upon whom the obligation of military service shall rest, and also in a sense choose those who shall do the rest of the nation's work.

Now our brethren can ally themselves with any kind of work which is organized under the government's approval, and that service will be considered as public service and a war measure. In our city many avenues are opening for service, and only yesterday a man who is a farmer was dismissed from jury service by the court, the judge saying that his work as a farmer was the more important public service. This is an indication of what the government wants of all; that is, to do that which they can do best for the good of all. So I say we may find work to which none can object, and there is room for all in it. The way is open; enter who will, and thank God for the chance.

This war is leading to some most wonderful developments. The recent political changes in Russia, those now foreshadowed in Germany and other countries, show God's hand in the affairs of nations, as thousands are beginning to see who never saw it before. And as for the bringing of England and the United States into closer alliance with each other, it can only be compared to the bringing of Israel and Judah together as prophesied in Ezek. 37:22. And was not the separation of the thirteen original colonies from England by the ill-advised and unwise conduct of the King of England, quite like the division which took place when the ten tribes revolted under Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, and made two nations of the twelve tribes of Israel. God has promised to make them one nation again no more to be divided. History is like the log-book of a sea-going ship. Comparing its records with the chart we know how far we have sailed and how far from the port which marks the end of our journey. So we compare history with the divine chart of the ages and make our reckoning to locate where we are. "Whoso readeth, let him understand" (Matt. 24:15).

Your first lesson, little ones, began with the first chapter of the gospel of John. Let us read also a few verses from the same beloved disciple's first letter. How firm he was in his faith that Jesus was the Son of God. Almost ever since Jesus was here upon earth men have been trying just as hard as they could to make us believe that he was not, that even God could not have a dear Son born at Bethlehem in such a strange unheard of way.

But let us go back awhile to the beautiful story John tells us in his gospel. I think it is just as sweet as it can be. One day, he says, John the Baptist saw Jesus coming towards him, and he said: "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world." He knew Jesus then, so I think this must have been after Jesus was baptized. What do you suppose he meant by calling Jesus a lamb?" It was because long ago God had made a law for his people Israel that every day, year after year, little lambs, just one year old, should be offered on his altar.

The blood of these little lambs was intended to put the people in mind of the Savior who had been promised to Eve; the Savior to whom the offerings of Abel, the brother of Cain pointed; the Savior in whom Abraham trusted to raise Isaac from the dead, had he been offered up; the Savior whom Moses esteemed it greater honor to suffer for than to have all the treasures of Egypt; the Redeemer whom Job said, would "stand in the latter days upon the earth," and whom David and all the prophets looked forward to as their great and everlasting king. The blood of these litle lambs told the Israelites that they must look to this Savior in faith, if they wanted to be saved; because it was only through his shed blood that their sins would be taken away. Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin or the penalty for sin.

It would do no good for a sinful man to die to save sinners from death. Our laws will not let bad men out of prison because other bad men offer to take their places. It will not even set a man free when another offers to die in his place. But if an innocent man happened to be put into prison in place of a guilty one we could not keep him shut up there; we would have to open the prison doors and let him go. Jesus is the innocent one, but he did not get into the prison-house of death by any happen so, he gave his life freely for our sakes. When he was tried, as there was no sin found in him, no guile in his mouth, no cause for putting him to death, the old jailor, death had to let him out. And God has promised us, if we have faith in his name, that he will save us.

What do your suppose it is to have faith in a name? It is to believe that God will do for us just what he has said he will do, because of that name. But we must have that name for our name. It must be named upon us and we must get it according to God's law. God gives us the name of Christ when we are baptized. Baptism, after we believe the gospel of the kingdom, and resolve to leave off our old sinful ways, is the ordinance or law whereby we get into Christ, into God's family; and into God's commonwealth of kings and priests. Your old, sinful self, so ragged and hateful, will be all covered up and hidden by the beautiful cloak of Christ's righteousness and you will be counted sinless in the eyes of God. So if you happen to die before Jesus comes, that hateful old jailor, death, will have to let you out too to die no more, just as he did Jesus. There is another beautiful thing about baptism, little ones, that perhaps Auntie has not made quite as plain as she ought to have done. She did tell you that when we get the dear Savior's name for our name we become members of God's family; that is, we are adopted as his sons and daughters; but she did not tell you that this Christ name, given to you at baptism by God, is a name that belongs to God also, and to the holy spirit as well. Jesus is the Greek form of the name of our blessed Lord. The Hebrews used the word Johsua. These words are formed from the word "Jah," meaning "to save."

It is a part of the wonderful name Jehovah, a word that the people of Israel thought so holy, they would not pronounce it. Yet God said of Jesus, "In my name shall his horn be exalted," and again: "And this is the name whereby he shall be called, Jehovah our righteousness." So you see that Jesus and his Father have the same name: a name, that becoming ours in baptism, covers our sins, so that we too can be helpers of Jesus in the saving of men.

BAPTISM

At our regular services in Plymouth on Sunday evening April 22nd, Sister Elsie Stillson made confession of faith and was baptized the following Tuesday evening in the church baptistry. Sister Stillson is the wife of Brother James Stillson who was baptized a month ago. May the fellowship of the church be an inspiring and helpful influence in the Christian warfare that these two worthy people are starting out upon. May the blessing of God and the spirit of love in Christ attend their journey in life, and bring them to an abundant entrance into the kingdom.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

MARRIED

Ernest L. Van Camp and Maysie Ruth Nichols were united in marriage at the home of her grandfather, Brother B. F. Taylor, at 7 o'clock, on the evening of April 26, 1917, in the presence of immediate relatives. The contracting parties, accompanied by the bride's parents, Brother and Sister Cordill, came from Mishawaka to Argos on the evening train to have the happy event take place at the old home where much of Sister Ruth's life had been spent. After partaking of a bountiful luncheon, spread by Sister Lura Taylor, they returned to their home.

The groom is a young man of sober, industrious habits and is employed with the Ball Band Shoe Works. He is a member of the M. E. church, stands high in moral worth, and bids fair to lead a life of earnest endeavor. The bride is the only daughter of Sister Florence Cordill and was born and reared in Argos, where she is a member of the church of God. She was compelled to stop the High School course during her last year on account of ill health. She afterwards took a commercial course in South Bend and has been employed as stenographer in a Mishawaka railroad office.

We join their many friends in wishing them the blessings of a successful and happy life.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S PAGE

A Section Devoted to the Edification, Encouragement and Entertainment of Youth

Edited by A. D. Donaldson 127 Ryerson St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Memory Verses: Micah 6:8; Titus 2.13,14.

A Foreword

Through the courtesy of Brother Huggins, the writer will in the future have charge of this page, and while he will use every endeavour to keep it up to the high standard set by the rest of The Restitution, he realizes he is but human. Therefore he is limited, and craves the indulgence of the readers at large; all of whom are invited to send him short articles either original or copied, on such subjects as would appeal to those of the younger generation. The writer is not trying to satisfy any personal ambition; his work always has been with and for the young; and at this time his sole desire is to serve The Restitution in assisting with the upbuilding of its younger readers to the glory of God the Father. Pray that the work may succeed.

As said above, the writer does not look upon himself as perfect, nor nearly so. An occasional letter of encouragement might not be amiss, but a letter of correction, written in a friendly way, would be much more appreciated. He believes our mistakes are corrected and advancement only made by criticism, therefore criticism will not only be expected but courted. Of course believing as he does that it is much easier to keep out of trouble than to get out of trouble, he will make an earnest effort not to deserve adverse criticism; but when you think he does deserve it, let him know, and a personal letter of thanks will be sent to every one showing such interest in him and his work.

Each issue will contain a passage of Scripture which we will call "The Golden Text." All readers are asked to look up the passage and memorize it. Further particulars are unnecessary as the line at the top of the page tells the story of our desire and hope. Let us dedicate the page with

The Lord's Prayer

"Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory for ever. Amen."

The Golden Text: Prov. 22:1.

Nearer My God to Thee

Nearer, my God to thee,
  Nearer to thee;
E'en though it be a cross
  That raiseth me.
Still all my song shall be,
  Nearer my God to thee:
  Nearer to thee.

And when the trumpet sounds,
  May I still wear
The righteousness of Christ,
  My garment fair:
Called then with him to be
  Nearer my God to thee;
  Nearer to thee.

Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow

Yesterday gave us our burden, today gave us our work; tomorrow gives us our inspiration.

It was yesterday that God, in his great love toward man, gave his Son, the only begotten, that those who put their faith in him might have life everlasting. It is the knowledge of the manifestation of this great love that makes it burdensome upon us today to work in showing to fallen man God's plan of salvation. Knowing that tomorrow Christ will come and reward every man according to his work, we are inspired to continue to watch, to wait, and to pray.

The Mixed Seed

"Have you any seeds of kindness for sale?" a little boy asked at a seed store.

"Seeds of kindness? What are they?" asked the seedman.

"Why in our Bible school we sing:
" 'Then scatter seeds of kindness
For our reaping by and by.' "

"I have a little garden, and I want to plant some kindness seeds."

"Oh, they come in a mixed package," said the seedman as he took a big book from a shelf.

"That looks like a Bible," the little boy thought. And sure enough, it was.

"Let me see. I think I will find that package of seeds in the first chapter of Second Peter," said the man. "Yes, there it is. See if you can read it for me, beginning with the fifth verse."

So the boy read: "And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity."

"Eight kinds of seeds in this package you see," said the man.

"But aren't there any real seeds?" said the boy. "Does it just mean that you are to be kind to folks?"

"Yes; that is what it means," said the man. "But kindness and charity and faith are real things; and if you plant them in your heart they will live and grow just as seeds grow in the garden."

"What is the reaping by and by?" said the boy.

"It means that if you are kind, people will be kind to you," said the gentleman. "And better than all, it means that God, who is kind to the unthankful and evil, will be pleased with you."

"I shall find that package of mixed seed in my Bible when I get home," said the boy, "and it may help me to remember to be kind all the time."—Classmate.

What are Another's Faults to Me?

What are another's faults to me
  I've not a vulture's bill
To pick at every flaw I see,

A PETITION FOR MILITARY EXEMPTION

To the President and the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress Assembled:

Petition of the church of God, praying exemption from active participation in war, from naval and military service.

1. The petition of the people known as members of the church of God, who through obedience to the gospel are to be made participants in the Abrahamic covenant, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nation of the earth be blessed."

2. They recognize that this only can be accomplished by a government established and supported by God in the person of his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose personal advent is now imminent, and upon his return he will set up his divine government over all the earth.

3. They owning allegiance to this, the earth's rightful king, under the present government they are but aliens, subject to the laws of this country and faithfully obey those laws, refraining only from that which commands to take part in war, strife or conflict leading to the taking of life, which conflicts with the laws of God.

4. Your petitioners humbly beseech your Honorable House to grant their prayer, that they may live quiet and peaceable lives, following out as far as possible the command to "Recompense to no man evil for evil, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions: and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.50 the copy.

"A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. MAY 15, 1917 NUMBER 19

O COME TO REIGN

Kingdoms now are reeling, falling,
Nations lie in woe appalling,
On their sages vainly calling,
All these wonders to explain;
While the slain around are lying,
God's own little flock are sighing,
And in secret places crying,
"Jesus come O come to reign!"

Now the wicked live securely,
And tomorrow boasting surely,
While from those who're walking purely,
They extort dishonest gain;
Yea, the meek are burdened, driven,
Want and care to them are given,
But they lift the cry to heaven,
"Jesus come O come to reign!"

Selected by H. E. Russel.

THE LAND OF REST

Over the river, in the land of the blest,
Over the river, forever to rest;
Over the river on bright Canaan's shore,
Never to sorrow, nor sigh any more.

The home prepared by Jesus o'er there,
The home that will ever be free from care:
That Abraham viewed in hope from afar,
God invites us now the gate's left ajar.

The prophets foretold it in God's sacred word,
This is the message we gladly have heard;
The wine is prepared, been long on the lees;
The lifegiving fruit is bending the trees.

The Savior is coming, he can't tarry long;
Are you ready to greet him with rapturous song?
The saints of all ages will hie to that shore;
When Jesus gives welcome, we'll sorrow no more.

The saints are waiting to welcome our Lord;
The plow to replace the spear and the sword;
The flock and the herd shall gamble and play;
And sorrow and blight shall all flee away.

O say, are you ready is your white robe on?
Is Jesus your Savior, are your sins all gone?
Are you ready to welcome him on that glad morn?
Or will your lot be to sorrow anr mourn?

J. E. Hogarth.

THE TREE OF LIFE

Chas. A. Goss

Trees were frequently used as types of kings, or men of wealth and power. The favorite method of teaching among the ancients was by parables that illustrated the point sought to be conveyed by means of a "word picture." Thus by a comparison of a tree and its fruit to a man and his acts, the Lord used a method of teaching which was at once natural and simple, yet clear and unmistakable in its application.

As Jesus warned the people against the false prophets, he made use of the tree for a comparison thus: "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." "Wherefore, by their fruits ye shall know them." (Matt. 7:17). And again, applying the same figure to himself in Matt. 12:33 he says to those who charged that he "cast out devils by Beelzebub, the prince of devils:" "Make the tree, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by his fruit."

Going back into the prophecies we find a similar use of a tree to symbolize a man. Thus we read in Jeremiah 17:7,8: "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is." And then he makes this comparison: "He shall be like a tree planted by the water, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful (anxious) in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit."

Back in Ezekiel, (31st chap.) the Lord speaks by the prophet, concerning Pharoah, King of Egypt, and again we have the comparison with a tree, a mighty cedar tree of the mountains: "Son of man, speak unto Pharoah King of Egypt, and to his multitude; whom art thou like in thy greatness? Behold the Assyrian was a cedar in Lebanon with fair branches, and with a shadowing shroud, and of high stature; and his top was among the thick boughs. The cedars in the garden of God could not hide him: the fir trees were not like his boughs, and the chesnut trees were not like his branches; nor any tree in the garden of God was like him in his beauty. I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches: so that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him."

A few verses further on the simile or comparison is continued in these words: "I made the nations to shake at the sound of his fall, when I cast him down to sheol with them that descend into the pit: and all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, shall be comforted in the lower parts of the earth." "They also went down with him, slain with the sword they that were his arm that dwelt under his shadow in the midst of the heathen." In verse 18 the question is repeated as at the first: "To whom art thou like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden? Yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden unto the lower parts of the earth; thou shalt lie in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword. This is Pharoah and all his multitude, saith the Lord God."

Thus did God threaten the mighty king of Egypt with a similar downfall and destruction of all his power and glory such as had been meted out to the great Assyrian monarch before. And it all came to pass as predicted. Both these mighty powers became as nothing, like a tree fallen and rotted and disintegrated and not a semblance of its glory and strength left.

In the book of Daniel we read of a vision granted the king, Nebuchadnezzar and therein he is represented as a great tree cut down, felled to the earth, but whose roots are allowed to remain, thus giving promise of restoration when he had been punished for his pride, and had repented with acknowledgement of God's omnipotent power to give the kingdom to whom he would (Dan. 4:10-24)

In Isaiah 61:3 we read that as a result of the coming of the anointed, he "will appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified." Being familiar with these uses of the tree to symbolically represent men and their deeds; how natural and easy for Paul to do the same in Colossians 1:6-10, exhorting to "fruitfulness in every good work," while Jude verse 12, characterizes the corrupt as "trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots." Hopeless cases, if this figure has any relation to the actual happening, and who can doubt it? The wisest man Solomon (Prov. 11:30), says: "The fruit of righteousness is a tree of life, and he that winneth souls is wise." In another proverb he says: "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. She (wisdom) is more precious than rubies, and all things thou canst desire are not to be compared to her. She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her, and happy is every one that retaineth her." Pause and think what the "tree of life" implied to our first parents. The apostle Paul refers to Christ as "the power of God and the wisdom of God," and as we read the proverb again, that he who "findeth wisdom" is happy because wisdom is a "tree of life," we see that there is a special fitness in the comparison to Christ, who is the embodiment of divine wisdom and the source of life eternal. And if kings and mighty rulers of old were fittingly symbolized by trees, how much more so is God's anointed King of kings who shall reign over the whole earth in paradise restored.

The literal "tree of life" in the garden embodied that doctrine of conditional immortality for which all must "strive" in order to obtain. To obey God's commands was the only way to have a right to the tree of life. Disobedience of God's laws cut off the first human pair from the right to the tree of life. They disregarded the divine "Thou shalt not," and the flaming sword of his divine justice "kept the way of the tree of life," so that his word had become a certainty that they should "surely die." Not having life "in themselves," but requiring daily food to sustain them even temporarily, how could the sentence "dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," be long avoided?

But men go on from generation to generation believing the serpent's lie about their being like the gods (Elohim) and never dying, when the truth is that this great object lesson should teach the whole human family that without right to the tree of life—Christ—who is the anti-type of that tree which stood "in the midst of the garden," they have no hope of life in that restored and glorious paradise of God, of which we read in the last chapter of the book. Here is the consummation of God's grand design in creation—an earth filled with his glory and peopled by sinless, immortalized beings who will honor and glorify his name. "And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him" (Gen. 3:17; Rev. 22:3).

That man without Christ is doomed to a hopeless death is evident from various Scriptures. Christ himselt, though divinely begotten and acknowledged as God's Son, by that voice from heaven declaring, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased" (Matt. 3:17) did not claim to have "immortality" or eternal life in himself except as a special gift of God. "The Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself" (John 5:26). God having acknowledged Christ as his Son in this way, how can any man say that God was mistaken, or does not mean it. He certainly knew more about it than any of us, and John, his faithful servant says: "Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is anti-christ that denieth the Father and the Son" (1 John 2:22). If Jesus is not the Son of God, we deny that God is the Father when we say so, and become "anti-christ"—or against the anointed.

Great possessions will not harm the one who insists on remaining master, but too often our possessions possess us.

Many a one who thinks he would like to be rich for the good he could do, comes to love wealth for its own sake, and forgets that every dollar of surplus means an obligation to God and to the world.

TWO EXTREMES REFUTED

No. 13

Objections Answered

All Men, All People, and All Israel

The evidence is conclusive, if we take the plain statements of the prophets, that the dead heathen who are ignorant of the way of life will not live again; but the word "all" in John 5:28 looks pretty large to the objector, and he wonders what he will do with it. The word here translated "graves" is mnemeios, and is defined memorial, grave (See Young's Concordance, and Liddell and Scott's Lexicon). Then we could give the word "all" an unlimited meaning and add the truth "memorial graves," and have no contradiction to the texts which declare that some will not rise; especially in the light of what David declares in Psa. 88:3, "Free among the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave, whom thou (God) rememberest no more." If they were in memorial graves God would have them in his memory; but as he does not, then we conclude they are not in such graves, and hence Jesus does not mention their resurrection among those who have done good and evil!

But we are told that the angel said unto the shepherds, "Behold I bring you glad tidings of great joy which shall be to all people" (Luke 2:10). And it is thought that here is positive proof that all men of the human race will hear of Jesus at some time and hear of his gospel. "All" must mean all people here, it is said. But how about "all" in this passage? "For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people" (Luke 2:31). Was the salvation prepared before the face of the dead heathen? If yes, then they will not be raised to see what they have already seen; and if no, "all people" does not here include the aggregate of the human family; and if not in one verse in the second of Luke, why should we be sure it does in another of the same chapter? The word "all" is so often used biblically in a limited sense that it is useless to go further with this verse; but we conclude that all people cannot in any turn be made to mean those whom God declares shall perish without law, and in their ignorance.

But "all Israel shall be saved" we are told, and God certainly will save them all. Shall every Israelite that ever lived be saved? Our objector seems so to think. If so, then they who were children of Gehenna shall be saved (Matt. 23:13); and they who cannot escape its damnation will also be saved (Matt. 23:33). But worse still, hypocrites shall also be saved, and even the unrighteous, for Jesus speaks to just such Israelites in Matthew twenty-three. Jesus told some Israelites "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Perish by a violent death as those of whom he spoke perished. Paul told some of them if they abide not still in unbelief they should be graffed in. Some and the majority of those who have lived during past dispensations abode in unbelief and there is no proof that they will ever be graffed in again for Jesus told them that they should be thrust out of the kingdom of God, cast into utter darkness, and be raised to damnation. Not saved then, but lost, and that eternally. But Paul states, "And so all Israel shall be saved, as it is written." What is written? "And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord" (Isa. 59:20). Then it is the "all" of Israel who turn from transgression that will be saved, and no others. Again, "To the Jews I became as a Jew; to them under the law, as being under the law; to those without law as being without law, to the weak as weak" (1 Cor. 9:20-22). But Paul, for what purpose did you go to all this trouble? "That I might by all means save some." Then all the Israelites will not be saved, and Paul put himself to lots of trouble and suffering to reach those who could have had a better opportunity in the future if they had been left in their ignorance; and some of them to be saved anyhow.

Pardon us for once more quoting this passage from Ezekiel: "As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you (in the kingdom age): and I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out, and I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face. Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord God; and I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant; and I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me: I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and they shall not enter into the land of Israel; and ye (those who are not rebels) shall know that I am the Lord" (Ezek. 20:33-38). This lengthy quotation shows that the rebels of Israel are not termed "Israel," and hence shows us exactly who are the true Israel of the return, and the "all Israel" Paul mentioned. Jesus came to them in the first advent, but the majority of them rebelled saying, "We will not have this man to rule over us;" and they will be destroyed miserably. God sent his servants, the prophets, at various times to them, and they too were rejected; and the apostles went to them first and were rejected also; they were rebels, and will not be permitted to enter into God's eternal rest; but those of the nation who are submissive, and turn from their sins at the return of the Redeemer, Deliverer, shall never be pulled up out of the land which God hath given them (Amos 9:15).

But we are told, "This indeed is the Christ, the Savior of the world" (John 4:42). The word translated "world" here is kosmos, and means the present order of things on earth, and the wicked of the earth, and all who are not of the truth. Proof: "The whole world lieth in wickedness" (John 5:19). "They are of the world." "We are of God." "The world heareth them." "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Then those who have the promise of eternal salvation are not of the world, and if we can find what is to be the destiny of the world we will know whether it is to be saved or not. What does God tell us? "The world passeth away, and the lusts thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:17). Then the world will not be saved, and abide for ever but those who do the will of God only; and that if Christ is the Savior of the world it must be a present salvation, and not that of the future; and we know that in a sense the world is saved daily from destruction. Peter tells us God spared not the old world, but saved Noah, and destroyed the world of the ungodly with the flood. Paul told the Corinthian brethren, "But if we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world" (1 Cor. 11:32). Which shows that the world is condemned.

Blind men are those who cannot see. So long as a man can see he is not blind; and when a man is spiritually blind he is in darkness concerning spiritual truths, and does not see them. Jesus says, "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." That is, it is dangerous for one blind to follow another of his kind. But why so if both are to have an opportunity in the future to get out of the ditch, and have their eyes opened? People who are deceived are in darkness to the truth, yet God often commands to be not deceived. But why if the deceived are to have the truth given them? The fact that Jesus commanded his disciples to go and teach all nations, by preaching the gospel to them, is another proof that now is the day of salvation to the people of this dispensation; for if he had in his plan a future probation for the most of the people it would have made no difference whether they heard the gospel now or then. The fact is there is not one text in holy writ that promises any probation after the resurrection to resurrected people; if the reader thinks so let him cite the text.

DON'T LOWER THE STANDARD

"We will rejoice in thy salvation, and in the name of our God we will set up our banners." "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other: or else he he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." "One is your Master, even Christ." "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Yes, we will serve our Master with our bodies, our lives, and our all; our first allegiance is to our Lord and king, "The King of kings, and Lord of lords."

The spotless Lamb of God shed his own precious blood for our standard. Will we lay aside this spotless banner, which stands for love and mercy, and take up the banner of strife and carnality? or shall we stand for it under any and all conditions? The motto of our banner is, "Do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he is thirsty give him drink." The sword of the spirit is the only weapon furnished the soldier of the cross. "Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the Lord our God. They are brought down and fallen, but we are risen, and stand upright. Save, Lord: let the king hear us when we call." "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

The natural question arises, what shall we receive who have left all and followed thee? No, not an iron cross, nor your name engraven on a marble shaft. "But he that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." There is not another commonwealth in the universe which gives so great compensation to its servants as the commonwealth of Israel. The promise is a hundredfold for all we give up for the cause, in this life, and in the world to come eternal life. The brave soldier who has to sacrifice a foot, or a hand, or an eye, under this banner, will receive a home in the glorious city of the great King.

Dear brothers and sisters, let us stand firm for the standard of our absent Lord and King. All signs point to his near return, therefore stand fast. Don't let threatening of bonds, or imprisonment, cause us to falter for a moment. "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as unto the Lord, and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ." "We will rejoice in thy salvation and in the name of our God we will set up our banners." Brethren, let us watch and pray that we may be counted worthy to stand for this grand and glorious cause.

UNBELIEF

No. 3

"If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins."

Do my dear little friends understand what I have said so far? Then I think we will talk a little while longer about that first chapter of John's gospel.

John the Baptist seemed quite anxious that his friends should get acquainted with Jesus, for it was only the next day as he stood with two of his disciples looking upon Jesus as he walked that he said again, "Behold the Lamb of God." They both heard him speak and followed Jesus, and he saw them and said, "What seek ye?" or, what are you trying to find out? and they said, "Where dwelleth thou?" "We will tell you when we come to the house." And they must have asked him many questions and he must have told them just who he was, for Andrew was so happy over what he had learned that he went right off and hunted his older brother Simon Peter up and said, "We have found the Messias, which is being interpreted, the Christ."

It was a wonderful discovery for Andrew. I wish we could have heard him tell Peter, "We have found him!" Why are not people just as glad now when they find him?

Andrew brought Peter right to Jesus, and I half suspect that it was the John who wrote the story who went with Andrew to the home of Jesus to seek the truth.

And there was another man named Philip: it may have been him instead of John, who with Andrew, followed Jesus to his home, for he went off to tell his friend Nathaniel the glad news "We have found him whom Moses in the law and in the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph." Philip did not mean that Jesus was the real son of Joseph, he knew he was only his step-son, Joseph having married his mother, Mary. Is was the custom of the times to speak of a step-son as if he were a son.

When Jesus saw Nathaniel coming he said, "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile." Nathaniel was surprised, he could not think how Jesus had found out so much about him, but when Jesus told him he had seen him under the fig tree, he answered, "Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Israel:" all seeming to believe alike that Jesus was the Son of God.

But what did Jesus say of himself? Just what the rest did. Get your Bible Herschell, and see "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." Do you believe it? Read a little farther: "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved." "He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God" (John 3:16-18).

Do you see how absolutely necessary it is that you believe in the sonship of Jesus? I want to lovingly warn you, for all you little ones want to be Christians and wear the robes of white and have harps and crowns of gold when Jesus comes. But wicked men, men who preach and talk beautifully about somethings in the Bible, will tell you that Jesus was only the son of Joseph, and that his death has nothing to do with our salvation, and of course that is true if Christ is only the son of Joseph, for no mere human being can give God a ransom for his brother, that he should still live forever and not see corruption (Psa. 49:6-9). But how can we be saved if we have no Savior?

These men will tell you "that the salvation of every one" depends on their own good deeds, but God tells us that "our righteousness is but filthy rags," that "while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us," that "we are justified by his blood," and will "be saved from wrath through him," are "reconciled to God by the death of his Son, and being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life." Don't you see, little ones, that every step in this wonderful plan of salvation depends upon Jesus (Rom. 5:8-11), there being no atonement without him.

These men will tell you too that it was a dreadful thing to offer human sacrifices to God. But neither the Jews nor the Romans had Jesus slain as an offering to the great Creator. The Jews had him killed as a criminal; the Romans cared little about it.

But we have been to the fifth chapter of Paul's Roman letter. Let us now turn to Hebrews and see what he says to them: "Christ entered by his own blood into the holy place, having secured eternal redemption for us." And, "Now once in the end of the world, hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself."

Auntie Wince thinks this is a long enough lesson for little folks, but she does not want them to give up the dear Savior, the precious gift of God at Christmas, and the joy and hope of all our days. We cannot give him up; we must trust in him, for in and of ourselves we can have no hope of future life. God has said Jesus is his only begotten Son; the angel said he would be so called; Jesus said he was God's Son, and called God his Father; his disciples made the same claim. The whole Bible from beginning to end is full of witnesses to this blessed, comforting truth. To believe otherwise is to say the Bible is not true. So believe the Holy Book: believe God; believe Jesus; shun every one who tries to shake your faith in it, and strive to win the life that has no end.

Auntie Wince.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

EDITORIAL

Brother E. W. Knapp, of Oregon, writes to thank the brethren and sisters in the East for their kind hospitality to him during his visit last last winter.

Sister Wince writes: "Why don't you scold? Such a dilatory contributor as I have been for the last two months! But we are not made of iron. I gave out from overwork and loss of sleep. I just could not keep my eyes open to write any length of time. I am not quite rested up yet." We were beginning to miss Sister Wince's articles, and so were some of our readers, but we can understand from experience how to sympathise with our Sister in the toils and problems of life.

Among the ecclesial happenings in Cleveland this week the following may be given as of general interest: Brother Pottorf, whose removal here was reported some time since, has found it necessary to take up his residence again in Salem, O.; Brother and Sister George Groves have settled among us permanently, coming from Geneva, O.; we have had pleasurable visits from Brothers Ashford Lehman and Alfred Smith; and on Sunday, May the 6th, William Keith, the son of Brother and Sister Keith, and Mrs. E. J. Andrews, were baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. This Brother and Sister have been industrious and apt students in acquiring a knowledge of the truth; and we fervently pray that they may never weary in well doing in the duties and privileges and opportunities of the truth, the rudiments of which they have learned so well in the beginning of their new life.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brother Huggins:

I am in favor of military exemption. I know it is against the word of God for his people to kill. I believe in living up to the laws of the land, but when it comes to killing, that is wrong, no matter what the one killed has done to you (Rom. 12 and 13 chapters).

Yours sincerely, Chas. E. Anderson.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Enclosed find my boy's and my request to be excused from military service. If all soldiers would do as commanded in Luke 3:14 there surely would be no war; for they were told to be content with their wages, and do violence to no man. I wonder how many nations would have soldiers if that rule was followed!

Your brother longing and waiting for the Prince of Peace and the establishment of his kingdom.

H. B. Hathaway.

Dear Brethren:

We have been undecided about asking for military exemption, since the Scripture was not just plain, or rather, we were not able to discern its meaning in regard to the subject. After reading the last issue of The Restitution it seems the peaceable way is to petition Congress for exemption. The 46th, 91st and 125th chapters of the Psalms show the care that is given the godly, nevertheless it may be our duty to identify ourselves as members of the church of God, and in this way avoid taking up arms, which we do know is wrong. Kind regards to you all.

Brother and Sister Coy.

Dear Brother in the faith:

I am sending you my signature and address to the petition for military exemption. My home is in Hagerstown, Md., but I will probably locate in Washington, D. C. I was in Cleveland about a week ago and visited Brother Huggins, and he informed me that you had charge of receiving the names or signatures. I sincerely believe that it is the best thing to do. Rev. 13:10, "He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword." Gen. 9:6: "Whoso sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed." Exod. 21:12: "He that smiteth a man so that he die, shall surely be put to death." "He that useth a sword shall perish by it." It is absolutely wrong for us to bear arms in warfare against our fellowmen. God forbids us to take part in bearing arms. My membership is in Maurertown, Va., where I was baptized. Wishing you success and with love and best wishes to you all. Your loving brother, Ernest J. Miller.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Enclosed herewith please find signed petition for military exemption cut from The Restitution.

At first I thought it advisable not to sign it in my case, as I am engaged in the government service in the Navy Department, and besides would not be acceptable anyway owing to physical disqualifications; but now take a different view and join hand with the Church of God as a whole.

If this petition is granted it would free many young men in the church and in the families of the church members from being forced into war by conscription or otherwise. They can remain at home on the farms where their services will be needed in raising crops and taking them to market for general distribution, and in other ways they can be of real service to their fellowmen.

Of course we, the people of the Church of God, have been looking for these things to take place in due time, and if it is God's will, the fulfilling of prophecy, it must go on to the end according to his ruling. The faster his plans are unfolded the sooner developments will arise to bring about that perfect day; and finally, when all is over, this earth will be filled with the glory of God peace and righteousness established and a kingdom set up which will never be destroyed, with Christ as king on the throne of his father David. Then wars shall be no more. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly! Oh how I long to see that day!

Your brother watching and waiting,

R. A. Daniels.

I take pleasure in writing a few lines to The Restitution, as I am a late subscriber, and have just read the last issue of April 17th, and was delighted to read the good letters from the different brothers and sisters; but only one of whom I am acquainted with, Brother Delozier, of Texas. I heartily endorse his views as to the church of God sending our petition for exemption in the present war. Surely no Christian can afford to take up arms and take the life of his fellowmen. It does look like we are living in the end of the age, at the winding up of the Gentile times. We are living now when nations are beastly mad and the earth a slaughter filled for satan, but no doubt a worse time yet is ahead of us. Soon our nobleman will return from the far country to take possession of the earth and establish the everlasting kingdom. You and I, dear brothers and sisters, are looking forward to that time. The bright morn of Zion's glory will soon appear; our king will soon come and call for his joint rulers. May you and I be ready. May we meet over in the age where we will be with our king and see him in his beauty, and see the ancient worthies of old - meet them where sad partings will be no more. No death, no pain, no sorrowing, no shedding of tears, but eternal joys as the ages roll on.

Owen Jones.

Dear Brother in Christ:

Enclosed you will find a copy of our War Resolutions which were adopted by the church of God here at Waterville in 1893, and subsequently by the central Washington Conference of the church of God, of the faith of Abraham. These resolutions were adopted by the church of God at Antioch, Indiana, in 1861, and also at other places. They were written by my father, Richard Corbaley, and others, and in the Civil War were the means of keeping the members who adhered to them out of that conflict. Thinking they might be of interest to the church in these thrilling times, am sending them with the request that they be published in The Restitution.

A. L. Corbaley.

The Civil War Resolutions

We believe that the members of the body of Christ must not participate in war. Therefore we whose names appear upon the membership rolls of the churches of God of the faith of Abraham, subscribe to the following war resolutions, as adopted by the church of God of Waterville, Washington, on the 19th day of March, 1893.

To-wit: Whereas we are living in perilous times specifically pointed out by the sure word of prophecy, and whereas the same unerring prophecy points with unmistakable certainty to the fearful doom which shall come upon this world resulting eventually in the battle of Armageddon (Rev. 16:14-16; Zech. 14:1-3).

And whereas it is apparent that the governments of the present time are making unparalled preparation for war in preparing war material, and marshalling and training men as soldiers to go into the awful scene of blood and carnage.

And whereas, civil governments are established and maintained by the sword and will thus continue during this dispensation.

And whereas all civil governments are swayed by the political parties in power, and that all political parties are war parties, and the governments of this world by their military strength will oppose the Lord Jesus Christ when he comes to establish his kingdom (Psa. 2:1-9), under whose authority righteousness and peace will be established upon the earth (Jer. 23:5,6; Dan. 7:13,14,27; Rev. 5:9,10; Rev. 11:15) .

And whereas the Scriptures forbid Christians in engaging in taking the lives of their fellowmen or to avenge themselves of imaginary or real wrongs (Rom. 12:19).

Therefore be it resolved, that we as members of the church of God of the faith of Abraham, in whatever locality situated, do hereby solemnly declare that we cannot conscientiously engage in the scenes of political strife, or engage in war, thus participating in the cruel destruction of those supposed or known to be enemies of the civil governments under which we live (Matt. 26:52; Matt. 5:21; Luke 3:14).

We are willing to go where the word of God directs us, and do what his word commands us. For the protection of our rights and our property, allowing us to live quiet and peaceable lives, we are willing to pay taxes, or tribute, custom and honor; and everything we can do, not conflicting with the law of God, until the establishment of the Kingdom of God upon the earth, when and where righteousness will prevail (Luke 1:31-33; Isa. 11:1-9; Isa. 35:1-10).

TRACT ON THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS

I wish to say I am having the article that recently appeared in The Restitution on "The Rich Man and Lazarus" printed in tract form with my photo on the front page by request. This tract should be out attacking the citadels of error. Every reader of The Restitution should have one of them in his library. You always know of someone who holds the popular view of this text, and can give them one. I was prompted to write this article by a preacher of the Congregational church who heard me preach on it last winter. Now brethren, I believe most tracts are printed at a loss or no more than breaking even, and as I have had for several months serious sickness in my family, which has been quite a burden, I have decided to ask you to give me a dime for this tract, which is small to you, but would be a little profit and mean much to me. The few dollars profit I feel I have earned. I speak of this that you may know why I charge more than this size tract generally sells for. A number are responding liberally: how many can I look for a dollar's worth or more? If you do not wish so many enclose a dime for one. In thes last days let us be up and doing. When the Master comes will he find us asleep or awake?

Almus Adams,

FAITH AND TRUST IN GOD

Our Duty in Regard to War

Dear Restitution:

In this great crisis it must be apparent to every one of the household of faith how necessary to know the truth just as far as possible. How necessary to study, as Paul said, and as each member speaks and writes we see the necessity of dividing the word of truth rightly. We must be very careful that we do not cite Scriptue and interpret it to suit our ideas. We must compare Scripture with Scripture.

As Sister Skeels has referred to my article against military exemption. and as I gave Scripture as proof of my position, and our good sister has cited others which she thinks supports the other idea, it is necessary for us to examine these carefully and see which one of us has interpreted the Scripture wrongly.

By reading Daniel 3 we learn that Daniel went right against the command of the king; also in Daniel 6:10-28. Then in Acts 4 we have a beautiful account of perfect trust in God; these brethren completely disregarded the command of the rulers. Note verse 19. Then see verse 24. Now we should be lifting up our voices with one accord to God. Instead of these brethren appealing to higher earthly authorities they lifted up their voices to God. In verse 26 they refer to kings and rulers and what they did; and in verse 29 they refer to their threatenings, and appeal to the Lord to protect them; and he did.

Again in Eph. 6:10-24 we have another example of trust. Here we are positively told we wrestle against principalities and powers and rulers. Now in this conflict or wrestle are we to appeal to the parties we are in conflict with? No. We must put on the whole armor of God. See verse 13. With this armor we are to be able to withstand in the evil day. Are we praying and supplicating God for deliverance, as in verse 24? If we were put in prison for refusing to fight we could sing psalms and pray there as well as in freedom, like Paul and Silas, and when the Lord wanted us he could send his angel and deliver us, as he did Peter. O brethren, let us show the same trust these brethren did! Now in the face of the fact that these brethren disobeyed the commands of the rulers, what did Paul mean to pray for those in authority? He meant just what he says: that prayers and intercessions be made for all men—not those in authority only, but for all men. We are not to court the enmity of the world or its rulers. When the world tries to array our members against the King we serve, it stirs up the camp; and it is just as bad for us to try to array the subjects of these worldly kingdoms against their rulers. While we are in conflict with them we pray for them instead of trying to cause division, just as we are taught to pray for our enemies. In this way we lead a peaceable and quiet life. Paul says in verse 3 that this is good and acceptable in the sight of God, to the end some of them at least might be saved and come to a knowledge of the truth.

The above interpretation of Paul's request to pray for rulers is borne out by Acts 24:12,13. Here Paul in his defense says he was not disputing, nor raising up the people. But in verse 14 he confesses the whole trouble came about by his contention for the truth. Then in chapter 25:8 we have the key. Paul answered for himself and said: "Neither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Caesar have I offended anything at all." So Paul was not in the habit of stirring up strife among the people by trying to get them to become disloyal to their institutions. But when they came into Christ he taught a separation.

Again to confirm the above, hear Paul in Col. 4:5,6: "Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time. Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." It is not good form to offend the world, but do as Paul has said above, and we will gain their respect. This will answer the case of Daniel that refused to eat the king's meat; and that is just what we propose to do. But did Daniel appeal to to the king for exemption? No, it never came to his notice. He never heard of it. God took a hand in that case just as he will in ours, if we trust him as Daniel did. Dan. 1:9 says: "Now God had brought Daniel into favor and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs." God was using means here to protect Daniel. The prince of the eunuchs thought if Daniel refused to eat the kings meat he would become thin and when he took him in before the king, he would notice it, and he would lose his own head. Now here comes the supreme moment: the final test must be made. "Prove us," says Daniel. Does not that sound good? He was loyal to God and he alone could provide the way of escape, and he did. After eating pulse and drinking water for ten days they were more fleshy and fairer than those who had eaten the king's meat so when they were brought in before the king he never knew the difference. Daniel was exempt, but God provided the means. Our trust and loyalty to God must be put to the test. "There hath no temptation (trial) taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (1 Cor. 10:13). That is what he did with Daniel and others. and has promised the same to us. Can we trust him?

According to the latest report Congress has just turned down a measure that had in it the object of exempting those who had conscientious scruples. If true, then we are forced to trust God, and I am afraid that will not be pleasing to God. Paul suffered all kinds of trial and persecution without appeal, but when dragged before the council and falsely accused he appealed, and by that means Rome heard the gospel. "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help" (Psa. 146:3). "But the salvation of the righteous is of the Lord: he is their strength in the time of trouble. And the Lord shall help them and deliver them. He shall deliver them from the wicked and save them because they trust in him" (Psa. 37:39,40). "Behold, God is my salvation: I will trust and not be afraid, for the Lord Jehovah is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation" (Isa. 12:2). Let us trust God and see in the end if we are not fatter and fairer than those who eat the king's meat.

OBITUARY

M. G. Barnes

Margaret Gable Barnes, daughter of David and Sarah Gable, was born in the state of Pennsylvania, Nov. 6. 1838 and departed this life April 27, 1917, aged 79 years, 5 months and 21 days.

She came to Indiana when a young girl and spent the remainder of her life here. She was married in the year 1858, and her husband died March 17 1910. She was the mother of eight children, four daughters and four sons. Two daughters and two sons are still living.

For the past seven years she had lived with her daughter, Mrs. Richard Reed, of Bourbon, Ind. She had been in poor health for two years, gradually growing weaker until the end came.

She was a member of the church of God at Plymouth, Indiana, and lived according to her faith. As a wife and mother she was kind and loving, and a grandmother never to be forgotten by her devoted grandchild, Edith Marie Neidig.

She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, two sons, three grandchildren, two greatgrandchildren, one brother, four sisters and a host of friends. Her life was lived so well that she has done as William Cullen Bryant's beautiful "Thanatopsis" suggests:

> "So live, that when thy summons comes to join
> The innumerable caravan, which moves
> To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
> His chamber in the silent halls of death,
> Thou go not, like the galley slave at night,
> Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed.
> By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
> Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about > him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

By the Relatives.

Funeral services were held at her daughter's, Mrs. Richard Reed in Bourbon, April 30, 1917, at 2:30 o'clock p. m. The house was filled with friends and neighbors, and beautiful flowers showed the love and esteem in which Sister Barnes was held. We spoke words of comfort from Rev. 1:18. We then laid the beloved one away to await the coming of Jesus.

MILITARY EXEMPTION THE TRIAL OF OUR FAITH

It seems that there are some who misunderstand those writing against military exemption. It is not because we think it wrong to be exempt, but we think it shows a lack of faith for us to petition any mortal man for it.

If you will, I will give you an example of what I mean. Two of the brethren here the other day were talking, and their conversation drifted to the question of military exemption. Brother A was against and Brother B was for it.

"Well," says Brother B, "what are you going to do if you are drafted if you don't get exemption?"

Brother A—"I will refuse to go."

Brother B— "Well, they will kill you."

Now brethren, judge for yourselves: whom was this brother fearing—the one who could kill the body and do no more, or the One who after he had killed, has authority to cast into Gehenna?

I believe that if it is the will of God for us to be exempt he will provide a way.

One writer spoke of Paul's appeal to Caesar. Let us see what we can make out of that. What did king Agrippa say when Paul was brought before him? He said, "This man might have been set at liberty if he had not appealed unto Caesar" (Acts 26:32). Brethren, I think the question a trial of our faith. If we appeal to president Wilson, when we stand before the King of kings he may say, "You might have been set free if you had not appealed to (put your faith in) president Wilson."

It seems to me that asking the president and congress to save us from military service would be putting our faith in them, and not in Christ. He has promised if we keep the word of his patience, he will also keep us from the time of trial, which is to come into the world to try those who dwell on the earth, and I think that trial is near.

Brethren, lastly, let us have faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, for without faith it is impossible to please God.

Hoping that this will be received in the same good will in which it is given, I am, your Brother in the faith,

Grover Gordon.

PEACE

We who live by the divine oracles revealed in the holy Scriptures live in peace having no fear of the worldly strife going on around us day after day. Surely we are living in a grand and awful time—grand to us who are looking for the Savior from heaven, watching the signs given for warnings so that we may not be caught asleep, but ever ready to meet the Lord at the sound of the last trumpet. But those who are not watching for the Savior, surely live in darkness without hope.

Peace comes to all who live in faith and love of Jesus Christ— a wonderful and beautiful gift which no mortal can bestow. In these days when "the nations are involved in this great conflict, do you think they are living in a time of peace? Absolutely no. How could they live in peace when they are disobeying God's great commandment, Thou shalt not kill?" rather than loving one another as he has loved us and so tenderly cared for us.

This then would be peace, the bountiful gift from our heavenly Father who looketh down from heaven upon us all. It is peace to be wholly inspired by the prophetic word of Christ and his disciples, and peace to confide in our dear Lord, knowing he is ever listening to our prayers and is with us in all things.

Sometimes the shadows seem deep, but it is the Lord's will, so be patient, hold fast to that which is good, for every perfect gift cometh down from above, and anything that is made is not made without the Lord's assistance. Man's work is perishable, but Christ's work is imperishable, his promises faithful, his calling sure. David said, "I will both lay me down in peace to sleep, for the Lord only maketh me to dwell in safety" (Psa. 4:8). "The Lord will give strength to his people: the Lord will bless his people with peace" (Psa. 29:11).

Let us labor in Christ's vineyard, daily letting our light shine forth as a bright sunbeam, lest this world's great conflict overcome us and we be found unprepared to meet the bridegroom. Be ye ever ready, for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not. Dear reader, will he find you ready and waiting?

Your Sister in the Blessed Hope, Alice Bassett.

ONTARIO MAY MEETING

The twelfth Annual May Meeting of the Church of God at Fonthill, Ont., will be held Friday and Saturday evenings, May 25th, and 26th, commencing at 8 pm. On Sundey services will commence at 10 am. with Sunday School, and continue throughout the day, at times to be given out at that meeting. Brother D. E. VanVactor of Argos, Ind., has kindly consented to assist with the speaking, and we are looking forward to some good meetings. The usual refreshments and accommodation for friends coming from a distance will be provided. Everyone welcome. Everyone come.

Thanking you in advance for your kind attention, I remain, Sincerely yours,

Arthur Gilbey.
Sec. of Church.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE NOTICE

The Annual Conference and Bible School of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith in Michigan will convene on Thursday of the third full week in June, and will be held at Dutton, Kent Co., Thursday evening, June 21st, 1917, and continue over the following Sunday. The Bible School will be held immediately following the annual Conference.

It is expected that Brother S. J. Lindsay, of Oregon, Illinois, will be at the Conference and Bible School to teach the word of truth, assisted in the good work by Brother L. E. Conner. A large attendance is desired at Dutton.

THERE IS A GOD

There is a God. The herbs of the valley and the cedars of the mountain adore him; the insect hums his praise; the elephant salutes him at the dawn of day; the bird chants him in the foliage; the thunderbolt flashes forth his power; and the ocean declares his immensity. Man alone has said "There is no God."

He then has never, in his adversity, raised his eyes toward heaven, or, in his prosperity, turned his regards towards earth! Is nature so far from him that he has no power to contemplate it? Or does he believe it the simple result of chance? But what has power to constrain inorganized and rebellious matter, to arrange itself in an order so perfect?— Chateaubriand.

If when morning breaks,
Clouds obscure the sky,
Fear not, God, who makes
Clouds, has sunshine nigh.
Fear not.

But why, you ask me, should this tale be told,
To men grown old, or who are growing old?
it is too late! Ah, nothing is too late
'Till the tired heart shall cease to palpitate.
Cato learned Greek at eighty; Sophecles
Wrote his grand Oedipus, and Simonides
Bore off the prize of verse from his compeers
When each had numbered more than fourscore years;
And Theophrastus at fourscore years and ten.
Had but begun his characters of Men.
Chaucer at Woodstock with the nightingales,
At sixty wrote the Canterbury Tales;
Goethe at Wiemar, toiling to the last,
Completed Faust when eighty years were past.
"As the barometer foretells the storm,
While still the skies are clear, the weather warm,
So something in us as old age draws near,
Betrays the pressure of the atmosphere.
What then? Shall we sit idly down and say
The night hath come, it is no longer day?
The night hath not yet come; we are not quite
Cut off from labor by the failing light;
Something remains for us to do or dare;
Even the oldest tree some fruit may bear;
For age is opportunity no less
Than youth itself, thought in another dress,
And as the evening twilight fades away
The sky is filled with stars, invisible by day."

Some Things

That Make Our Country Great.

The largest deposits of anthracite coal in the world are in Pennsylvania.

The greatest mass of solid iron in the world is the great Iron Mountain in Missouri.

The greatest natural bridge in the world is the natural bridge over Cedar Creek in Virginia.

The longest railroad in the world is the Pacific Railroad, which is over three thousand miles in length.

The largest lake in the world is Lake Superior, which is truly an inland sea, being four hundred and thirty miles long and one thousand feet deep.

Real Poverty

Not one person in 10,000 in South America has seen the Bible or heard the word of God, and 53,000,000 of the 75,000,000 inhabitants can neither read nor write, were statements made by Alfred Winn, secretary of the South American Missionary Union, who talked on "The Black Story of Our Sister Continent."

He declared there was far greater need of missionary work in South America than there ever was in Africa.

Flowers and Children

Do you love flowers? Yes, that I do!
Garden and hot-house and wild ones too;
Sweet little messengers gracing our sod,
Teaching us lessons of nature and God.

Do you love children? Yes, that I do!
Brown-eyed or black-eyed, or grey or blue;
Dear little messengers blessing our earth,
Filling our dwellings with beauty and mirth.

No flowers! no children! what should we do?
God knows, so sends them, and loves them, too;
Placing them here, on our earth home, to prove
Pledges of heaven and tokens of love.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

EARTHLY CONDITIONS

"Why is it all this tumult is raging,
When we are educated?" so people say;
Why, it is only that war is waging,
Driving most humans to fast decay.

How many hungry souls are sighing,
Just for the touch of a vanished hand;
How many starving people crying,
For food and peace on many a land.

It is time the Lord, in his tender kindness,
Came from the heavens in love to teach,
That only peace, not war in its blindness,
Will help us far better the goal to reach.

It will take many years of work and sorrow,
Many more partings in grief and pain,
Before there will dawn a bright tomorrow
With joy and health and peace again.

So let us live in hope and pray
That when our sons to manhood grow,
We will not need to hear them say,
"Off to the war I now must go."

But may the world in friendly glory,
Rejoice to live in friendship true;
No more battlefields soaked and gory,
But always our best for each other to do.

Sister Andrews.

EARLY HISTORY OF BAPTISM

No. 3

Dr. J Priestly says: "We have no distinct account of the administration of baptism in this first century period; but it is evident that very few words are employed in the business. In general it was no doubt performed by the immersion of the body in water, that being an easy and pleasant custom in hot climates, and the dress was such as to easily put off and on. The baths also would furnish convenience for the ceremony in most places. In whatever the rite of baptism consisted it was administered upon the simple profession of repentance and faith in Christ, the person who administered probably saying, 'I baptize thee in the name of Jesus Christ,' or varying the expression as he thought proper. If we may judge from the instances of baptism occasionally mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles we may safely conclude that the persons who baptized did not think themselves obliged to make use of the form of words mentioned by Matthew, 'in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.' Though nothing was originally meant by them besides baptism into a religion, which came from God, which was published by Christ, and which was confirmed by the gifts of the holy spirit or miracles" (History of Christ, Vol. 1, pp. 171,172).

Again: "With respect to the followers of Paulus Samosatensis,it was ordained that if they returned to the Catholic Church they should be rebaptized in the name of the Father and Son, and Holy Spirit. In the name of Christ only was not deemed a valid baptism. These Unitarians, no doubt, believed that much superstition was kept up by the usual form of baptism (triune immersion), and that it was not the original method of administering it to the apostles themselves" (History, Vol. 2, p. 53). "But the Romish party went still further in their maintenance of the formula of baptism; it even declared that baptism which was administered in the name of Christ only, without the use of the fuller formula, was objectionally valid. Cyprian, on the contrary, maintained that the formula was of no value unless it was the full formula of Matthew. We perceive here the freed spirit of the anti-Cyprian party; the idea being before their eyes that in the belief in Christ every thing which really belongs to Christianity was properly contained" (Neander's History, pp. 206, 207).

"There were some very early who turned the doctrine of the trinity into tritheism, and instead of three divine persons under the economy of Father, Son and Holy Spirit, brought in three colateral, co-ordinate and self-originated beings, making them three absolute and independent principles, without any relation of Father or Son, which is the most proper notion of three gods. And having made this change in the doctrine of the trinity they made another change answerable to it in the form of baptism" (Bingham's Antiquities, book II, ch. 3, sec. 4).

These quotations show:

(1). That the earliest formula used in baptism was in the name of Jesus Christ;

(2). The apostles always so baptized;

(3). Those so baptized were to be rebaptized if they wished to get into the Catholic Church;

(4). The doctrine concerning the three divine persons was the cause of the change from single to triune immersion.

Triune immersionists cannot discredit Bingham and Neander for they quote much from their works, and one of them says Bingham is a very accurate historian. The Catholic Church is noted for her many inventions and for taking the authority to force the people to observe them. The followers of Paulus Samosatensis were baptized in one name and hence, by single immersion. Dr. Adam Clarke says: "'And he baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ.' Take upon you the public profession of Christ by being baptized in his name, and acknowledge yourselves as his disciples and servants. It was by being baptized into the name of Christ that men took upon themselves the profession of Christianity; and it was in consequence of this that the disciples were called Christians" (Commentary on Acts 2:38). Baptism according to its old characteristic mark was denominated a baptism into Christ as the acknowledgment of Jesus as the Messiah and was the original article of faith in the apostolic church. And this was probably the most ancient formula of baptism which was made use of in the third century" (Neander's T. and P. of Church, p. 161). "The words used in baptism, in the name of Christ alone, seems to be more ancient than in the name of the persons of the trinity" (Hagenback's History of Doctrine). "The abridged form, in the name of Christ, as first used, was valid to the third century" (Schaff's History of Apostolic Church). "The conditions of entrance into the church are at first extremely simple. No guarantee of preparation, of instruction and examination is required; conversion has at this period an exceptionally sudden and supernatural character. The sign of initiation into the new society is baptism. The formula of baptism was not pronounced in full; the neophytes were simply baptized into the name of the Lord."

Again: "There is no example in the New Testament of the employment of the full formula of baptism. Bingham in vain attempts to deny this fact" (Pressenese's Early Days of Christianity, pp. 51,375). "The Praxeans and Monarchians baptized by single immersion" (Beveridge's Works). "The Praxeans were followers of Praxea Artemon who flourished about A. D. 187" (Cave's Works, and Priestly's Corruptions). "The followers of Neotus and Beryllus, who flourished about A. D. 250, practiced single immersion" (Beveridge). "Baptism as an initiatory rite was performed simply in the name of Jesus" (Hare's History of Church). "There is no mention of baptism in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit in immediately post-apostolic times" (Robinson's History of Baptism). Irenaeus, a disciple of Polycarp, who was a disciple of John says, "Naaman, being a leper was baptized and cleansed for our information who, being lepers in our sins, are cleansed by the water and invocation of the Lord from our old transgressions, as new born children spiritually regenerated" (History of Christian Ordinances, by Forney, p. 53). Here we again have an early writer testifying that baptism was performed by the invocation of the Lord, and an array of historians testifying that that was the most ancient formula and the one used by the immediate followers of the apostles as well as the apostles themselves. What of all this array of evidence? Is it of any weight? If not, all history should be discarded and Dunkards should go to the Bible alone for their practice instead of history.

But if this evidence is of weight then single immersion is proven to have been practiced as early as A. D. 187, or twenty-five years before Turtullian wrote and thirteen years before the fiftieth apostolic canon is claimed to have been written by Elder Moore, and that makes it the ancient baptism of history. Then we have seen that Mr. Quinter admits that single immersion was performed in the name of the Lord Jesus, or name of Jesus Christ and that fact proves that Clement of Rome, Hermas and Irenaeus, were single immersionists, for they all teach that baptism was performed in the one name in their day. As they were the disciples of the apostles, the fact is established that the apostles baptized by single immersion, thus proving it to be the apostolic mode of baptism. But Dunkards have claimed that Eunomius invented single immersion. After they have shown that is was practiced in earlier ages they quote Sozomen thus: "Some say that Eunomius was the first who dared to bring forward the notion that the divine baptism ought to be administered by a single immersion; and to corrupt the tradition that has been handed down from the apostles, and which is preserved by all (or among all) . . . . But whether it was Eunomius or any other person who first introduced heretical opinions concerning baptism, it seems to me that such innovators, whoever they have been, were alone in danger according to their own representation, of quitting this life without having received the holy rite of baptism; for if, after having received baptism according to the ancient mode of the church (i e. by triune immersion), they found it impossible to reconfer it on them selves, it must be admitted that they introduced a practice to which they had not themselves submitted, and thus undertook to administer to others what had never been administered to themselves (that is single immersion unto the death of Christ). The absurdity of the assumption is manifest from their own confession; for they admit that those who have not received the rite of baptism have not the power of administering it. Now, according to their opinion, those who have not received the rite of baptism in conformity with their mode of administration (i. e. single immersion) are not baptized; and they confirm this opinion by their practice, in as much as they rebaptize (i. e. by single immersion) all who join their sect, although previously baptized (i. e. by triune immersion) by the Catholic Church" (Chrystal's History of Baptism, p. 78).

At the risk of worrying the reader we will requote this as given in Sozomen's history: "Some assert that Eunomius was the first to maintain that baptism ought to be performed by immersion, and to corrupt in this manner, the apostolic tradition, which has been carefully handed down to the present day . . . . . But whether it was Eunomius, or any other person, who first introduced heretical opinions concerning baptism, it seems to me that such innovators, whoever they may have been were alone in danger, according to their representation, of quitting this life without having received the rite of holy baptism; for if, after having received baptism according to the ancient mode of the church, they found it impossible to reconfer it on themselves, it must be admitted that they introduced a practice to which they had not themselves submitted, and thus undertook to administer to others what had never been administered to themselves. Thus after having laid down certain principles according to their own fancy, without any data, they proceed to bestow upon others what they had not themselves received. The absurdity of this assumption is manifest from their own confession; for they admit that those who have not received the rite of baptism in conformity with their mode of administration, are unbaptized; and they confirm this opinion by their practice, inasmuch as they rebaptize all those who join their sect although previously baptized in the Catholic Church."

The reader can readily see that Mr. Chrystal or some other person has added the word "single" before immersion, and then filled in parenthetically "single immersion" and "triune immersion" wherever he thought it necessary to make emphasis to his supposed meaning of this writer. If Sozomen had meant single immersion he should have so said, and then he would not have had to have been corrected by a nineteenth century interpreter. He says, "Some assert that Eunomius maintained that baptism ought to be performed by immersion"—not single immersion, but immersion, immersion. Robinson tells us that the administration of baptism by sprinkling was first invented in Africa in the third century in favor of clinics or bedridden people. Sozomen was born about A. D. 400, and flourished as a writer about A. D. 440. Thus the reader will see that sprinkling had about a century to grow till his day and that would give it a good length of time to lay claim to tradition. Eunomius opposed it as baptism even for sick people, and so he was accused as being the inventor of the idea that baptism ought to be performed by immersion and not by sprinkling even on sick people. All who came to the sect to which Eunomius belonged had to be rebaptized by one of his party. Sozomen accused this sect of going out of the Catholic Church: and of at first being baptized by Catholic clergy, but now refusing to accept Catholic baptism. The reason Eunomius asserted what he did is because he refused in any way to endorse sprinkling, but in A. D. 440 it was customary in the Catholic Church to sprinkle the sick where one was esteemed a heretic who refused said custom.

However Dunkards say the Greek church practiced triune immersion, and they understand the Greek language, hence they conclude it must be right but do they follow the Greek church in all things? Does she not claim that Matthew 28:19 teaches that infants should be baptized? Do they not teach that John 6:53,54 make it imperative that infants take the communion and hundreds of other things which Dunkards do not allow? If they are so correct in understanding their language in one thing, why not in all? The fact is that the Greek church is as treacherous as her sister the Roman, and the pope is the biggest cause of them being separated. Neither is safe to follow. Our motto should be the Bible and the Bible alone, for it teaches single immersion which alone is patent from Ephesians 4:5, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." Elder H. H. Miller says in the concluding part of his work on immersion: "It is not strange that many who have been baptized by affusion have become concerned about the matter when they come to change worlds and desire baptism by immersion because it, beyond all doubt, is acceptable with God." Why is immersion acceptable? Because it is the baptism ordained by God. "There is no doubt about it" (Mr. Miller). Then as there is no doubt about immersion being baptism, baptism is immersion, and one baptism is one immersion, which is single immersion, and all the world cannot overthrow this fact.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS

"Exhort one another and so much the more as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10:25).

God's elect who are children of the day and not of darkness, are to have understanding and wisdom during the period of momentous events which, coming in rapid succession, herald the near approach of the great day of the Lord. By keeping a close watch on these events in the light of what the prophets have given us, it is our privilege to make wonderful discoveries which strengthen our faith.

The spirit of apostacy, utterly in the dark and opposed to the real Christ spirit, criticise students of prophecy as being pessimists, when, in fact, they are the only real optimists. "The time has already arrived when events undermine in a convincing manner the false doctrine that the world is to be christianized before Christ returns, aside from plain Bible truths. Indeed present day theology removes completely the necessity for Christ to ever return by advocating judgment and reward at death, making the resurrection a farce and of no meaning. And how disheartening it is to see professed Christians denying the blessed hope of Christ's return to reign on David's throne to bless all nations.

While trying to present the truth to a Methodist lady recently, she evidently thought she had driven and clinched a nail by asking if I really thought Christ in his purity would ever return to the world in its present sinful condition. Her hope rested in women's suffrage, anti-saloon agitation and other activities which are championed by many not making any religious profession. Ah, the ignorance is appalling concerning the mission of Christ and the wonderful work awaiting his personal return!

Believers who have been brought to a knowledge of God's wondrous truths may sometimes fail to realize their responsibility. God has revealed all that is sufficient for those of this dispensation to know, through his Son and the apostles, concerning his plans and specifications as architect of the universe. He worked miracles through them to prove the authenticity of their testimony. If we believe their report and accept the spirit of truth, and are led out of idolatry to worship a known God, what manner of men ought we to be? We begin to realize the justness of eternal condemnation for going back on the truth, the unpardonable sin. By overcoming persecution and the lusts of the flesh we are made to hate sin and are convinced of the righteousness of God. We need never expect to attain to the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus by taking some circuitous route which eliminates the purifying flame. If we fail in ability to overcome self and setting aside the first Adamic proclivities, can we reasonably expect rulership or participation in the bringing in of righteousness in the day of Christ?

I believe it is possible for us to dwell on non-essentials to the detriment of more important things and the growth of beginners in the truth. No doubt there is much to be done in the kingdom of God not revealed to us before Christ as conquering king of the earth returns, having received his commission from the Father. One thing we are sure of: God's ways are equal. As we grow older in the truth we begin to realize that the truth came to us for a dual purpose. Not alone to save ourselves, but to be a servant to carry the light and save others. We know that the bride is now being completed and after that is done and the bridegroom returns and the marriage takes place, the appointed time will have arrived for the rearing of the children of the kingdom. So the question is whether or not material rejected for the bride will be used as subjects or material for the children. Again the question would resolve itself into whether or not God is to condemn eternally those whom he knows would not accept if they did hear. For example: When Paul assayed to go into Bithynia, the spirit suffered him not, but he was told to go over into Macedonia to preach the gospel to them (Acts 16:6-9).

Another thing is certain and that is, that God in mysterious ways furnishes the opportunity for those to hear and believe the gospel call who shall be the ruling power in his coming kingdom. It is natural for us to go beyond what is intended and sufficient for us to know. Daniel pressed the angel for information on events he had inklings of, that should transpire centuries after his time, but he was told to go his way, and when the day came he would stand in his lot. Paul in speaking of ages to come no doubt saw glimpses of ages beyond the thousand years reign of Christ, of which it is not necessary for us to know about in this age. The gospel of the kingdom is of sufficient power to draw us to God and save. The thing necessary for us to do is never let slip an opportunity of carrying the gospel truth to others and never by word or deed cause an offense for it is written: "It is impossible but that offenses will come, but woe unto him through whom they come" (Luke 17:1).

One thing David desired: to dwell in the house of the Lord forever. He continually supplicated before his God for a clean heart and a right spirit. Truth is the only sure foundation upon which can be built Christian virtues. A show of righteousness is not recognized by God, it must come from the humble and sincere heart. We are apt to long for the next age, when we can help glorify God's name in the earth, and forget that it is not only our duty but our privilege to do that now. We can do this by taking wrong patiently, doing good for evil, refusing to pass along a reproach against our nieghbor, providing all things honestly in the sight of all men, having a forgiving spirit and trusting to God who, seeing in secret, will reward openly. Paul declares not only the goodness but the severity of God in Rom. 11:22. God did not condemn Adam and Eve without first warning them. "To him who knows to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Christ's appearing and kingdom does not mean so much a change of character as change of nature for the saints. The Christian life is a constant warfare. To see our own faults and conquer them is where the real conflict begins. The tree of life is still guarded and those who shall have access to it must at least get rid of known defects. We may have faith to remove mountains but without charity or love it availeth nothing. "Blessed is the man unto whom God will not impute sin."

I am persuaded that a great sifting time is just ahead for the church. Prison walls and even death had no terrors for the faithful of the early church. The faith of Paul and Silas caused prison doors to open and also opened the eyes of the jailor to the truth. Paul's appeal to Caesar opened an effective way for the gospel to be preached to the Romans and for a church to be established there. The living members of the church who pass through the critical period of the last days, unshaken, and stand as pillars of God's truth, will witness some wonderful experiences before the call of the bridegroom.

In hope of the approaching day,

J. E. Hammond.

NORTH WEST CONFERENCE

The North West Conference of the Church of God invite the brethren of the various churches of the state and other states to meet with them at Felida, Wash., June 21st to June 24th at their annual Conference.

Some murmur when their day is clear
And wholly bright to view,
If but one speck of dark appears
On their bright sky of blue.
While others with true, thankful hearts,
Are filled with glory bright,
If but one ray of light appea.
In the darkness of their night.

Set your pride in its proper place, and never be ashamed of any honest calling.

THE NEW JERUSALEM

The object of this brief communication is a little talk with Brother T. H. Drinkard about the New Jerusalem. The Brother says he is not able to find it stated in the chapter that the New Jerusalem is the bride, the Lamb's wife. Well, let us see if it is there or not. In verse 9 the angel says to John: "Come hither; I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain and showed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God." The angel promised John a view of the bride and he showed him the city. Now if the city is not the bride, the angel did not fulfill his promise to John. The city does come down from God, but not literally. "There was a man sent from God, whose name was John" (John 1:6). Christ says to the Jews, "I am from above; ye are from beneath." This is true but not literally.

When God called Abraham from his country and relatives, it was in order to prepare the material for the building of this city. This city is a great gift from God, who is the giver of every good and perfect gift (James). The overcomer who is to be a pillar in the temple and on whom is to be written the name "New Jerusalem," is evidence that the overcomer is a component part of the city. Not merely a dweller in the city.

Again, the objection that in seeking the city (if it is a symbol of the saints), we are seeking ourselves, is explained thus: We seek ourselves as we seek for immortality; not in our present condition, but in the condition that will exist in the holy city.

Again, the city is four-square. The length, breadth, and heighth of it are equal. Can you conceive of a city of its dimensions being as high in the air, as it is long and wide? Here the literal view becomes absurd. If we adopt the literal view of the city, as the Adventists do, we multiply objections a hundred fold, and contradict the testimony of the angel to John. It should always be remembered when reading the Revelations that it was given by signs. The angel taught John in the sign language. The literal is only found in explaining the symbols.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

PEARLS AND PAIN

"And the twelve gates were twelve pearls" (Rev. 21:21). This text was chosen as an Easter theme on one beautiful Sunday morning by a pastor of one of the orthodox churches in the East, but the true significance of the text was entirely obscured to make it harmonize with modern theology.

Pearls typify suffering. Pearl divers inject a fluid into the shell of the pearl thereby causing the little animal intense pain; but in the hardening process which this fluid develops, it becomes a beautiful pearl, much admired. As with the pearl, so with those who love the Lord—through much suffering and tribulation are we perfected and made vessels for the Master's use, not only in the present age, but in the age about to dawn. The character of the individual must be developed here and now, not in the future.

The wonderful light of the gospel has shone into our hearts; the great love of the Father has called us apart for his use, and separated us from the things of the world. What a privilege to serve him! How pregnant with joy we should be, and what simple and humble lives we should live; for have we not his promise that he will redeem us and make us kings and priests and that we shall shine as the stars forever and ever. But faintly do we realize this glory and honor.

What a blessing and honor to know the true and living God and his dear Son. "I will sing unto the Lord, making melody in my heart all the day long." How distorted the word of God became in the hands of this blind preacher. Poor misguided people without a shepherd. As I sat there in my little corner of the church, looking about me, my heart cried out for the time when all shall know the Lord—when the knowledge of him shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven," was the prayer I breathed.

There will be no more heartaches concerning those whom we know and love, who are outside the pale of the Christ circle—not in the number who make up the living stones in the temple of our God which he is building now; for in that age all shall know and worship him in the beauty of holiness. Hasten this joyous consumation, O God.

EDITORIAL

As May 29th is a fifth Tuesday, no Restitution will be published next week.

May 13th, after the usual Sunday morning exhortation, Miss Zephene Brown, formerly Lutheran, was baptized for the remission of sins. Our Sister had a hard fight to bring her mind and thoughts into harmony with the truth and submission to Christ, but as she had a good and honest heart and an unquenchable desire to know "the truth as it is in Jesus," she has won a glorious victory . May she lead a life under the guidance of God's good spirit, and at last be crowned with glory and honor, is our prayer on her behalf.

May 14th, we were called again to help in the last and sad rites of death—this time in laying to rest Sister Robson, who died in the 77th year of her life. "Grandma Robson," as she was called by her brethren and sisters and a large circle of friends, was an earnest and sound believer of the truth, and we enjoyed nothing better than to visit her and hear her talk of God's coming kingdom and glory. Her spiritual conversation was always melodious as music to our ears. Another life has gone out in darkness, but thank God, her meek and quiet spirit, her faith and good works, are only temporarily suspended. Ere long her life, with all its sweet and beautiful manifestations, will burst out in immortal splendour to beautify the earth and fill it with spiritual fragrance. May this happy day speed to her and to us upon the wings of the wind!

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL

No. 5

It is sometimes argued that the doctrine of probation in the age to come, for any who die during this age, is dangerous, because it involves a second chance, thus engendering the spirit of putting off salvation until the next age when it can be gained under more favorable conditions. This is not true; but supposing it were true, the argument has no force. Any one who accepts God's offer of mercy because he sees it is his last chance, is being scared into the Christian life, as much as anyone who accepts through fear of eternal torment in hell fire.

Future Probation for the Dead An Immoral Doctrine

Probation is always attended with certain liberties which may be used for immoral purposes. Probation even now, circumscribed in both extent and time, ministers to sin in some degree. The Scriptures repeatedly say this. "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil" (Eccl. 8:11). "Because they have no changes, therefore they fear not God" (Psa. 65:19). Yes, even the riches of God's goodness, forbearance and longsuffering are abused, the very "goodness of God," intended to lead sinners to repentance, is an occasion for them to sin with impunity (Rom. 2:4,5). From these Scriptures it appears that the privileges of probation, to conserve holiness of heart and righteousness of life, must be extended to man prudently and sparingly. Otherwise probationary privileges only create opportunities for sin, and if they be indefinitely granted, they finally become equivalent to condonment of iniquity. Now if all of this can and may be said of present probation with its limitations of time and circumscriptions of extent, what must be the immoral tendencies of a future probation both universal and compulsory, ushered in upon the dead like an enchanting dawn of promise, that each of the ignorant and depraved may ripen with the eternal day into physical glorification and enjoy perpetual bliss? Is it not morally debasing to preach to people already impure that at the resurrection they will be placed in "more favorable conditions"—remedial conditions,capable of drawing them powerfully to the ways, delights and enjoyments of penitential obedience? Is it not "dangerous" in the extreme to represent to sinners, now under corrective discipline that the throne of judgment will be occupied by a judge at the return of Christ who will smile complacently on sin and sinners and the unfit of earth, and who will breathe forth delectable Memnonian strains of hope and peace to regale the vicious and unfortunates of past ages? If Felix "put off" salvation under the Pauline preaching of a coming judgment, so awful as to make him "tremble," and pleaded for a more "convenient season" (Acts 24:25), when he knew every breath inhaled was one breath less in the number of inspirations to be drawn, that every heartthrob was one throb less in the total series the organism is capable of executing, what would he have said and done if Paul had preached "another chance" to him—a chance at a time when "more favorable conditions" would prevail, and when he would be subjected to a course of salutary discipline (again), more or less painful perhaps, but happily resulting in his conversion and final salvation? If he "put off salvation" when it was offered to him in the "day of salvation" (2 Cor. 6:2), when the offer was liable to retraction or lapse any moment, it is a forgone conclusion that he would have put it off without hesitation if it had been proffered to him in the future "under improved conditions." So would we. So would you. So would any man of prudence, sagacity and common sense. If God were to make two propositions to any normal man, and in the first offer him salvation now in unfavorable conditions, and in the second, salvation in the future "under more favorable conditions," he would instantly reject the former and gladly and wisely accept the latter. To accept the first offer would be madness; to accept the second, wisdom. "This is not true," to quote the words of another, "but supposing it were true, the argument has no force." It may be true that with some people a true argument has "no force," but there are a few candid and fair minded people with whom a true argument is a forceful and convincing argument. May the Lord increase their number.

Preaching the Gospel Now to the Ignorant If They are to Have a Millennial Chance Probationizes Them Prematurely

In The Restitution of Feb. 13, 1884, Brother Wiley Jones, than whom no better Bible exegete lived in modern times, nor any brother more beloved by our brethren and sisters, in expounding the second Psalm, made the following remarks which are worthy of deep thought and meditation, and are reprinted here for the benefit of the thoughtful:

"Hence this prophecy of Psa. 2:8,9 is rather a denial than a proof of a pre-adventual conversion of 'the heathen' or nations, for it indicates that when Christ comes he will find nations living on earth so wicked as to deserve being broken with a rod of iron and dashed in pieces like a potter's vessel. To say this, however, is not to call the gospel a failure, for the object which the Lord had in sending it to the nations, Gentiles, or heathen, was 'to take out of them a people for his name;' and at the close of this dispensation it will have 'prospered in the thing whereto he sent it' (Acts 15:14; Isa. 55:11). And this agrees exactly with the etymology of the divinely chosen term rendered 'church' which is ecclesia, derived from the two Greek words ek, out of, and klesia a calling. The church is therefore a called-out body of people never to be blended, identified, and unified with 'the nations,' but must remain till the return of her Lord 'a peculiar people.' This doctrine does not discourage missionary efforts, but should rather encourage and incite to them, that out of the nations we 'might by all means save some;' for we know not how soon the door may be shut, this dispensation closed, and all such efforts brought to an end. But those mistaken souls who teach that deceased heathen must have a millennial 'chance'—probation, because they have never heard the gospel—do indeed discourage and repress missionary efforts, both at home and abroad; for carrying the gospel to people now would be depriving them of a millennial chance then—a far better chance than the present. To enlighten them now would, if that teaching were true, be probationizing them prematurely. And thus what the Bible calls 'glad tidings' they would probably call sad tidings, on account of its depriving them of that millennial chance! And instead of saying, as now,

Shall we whose souls are lighted
By wisdom from on high,
Shall we to men benighted,
The lamp of life deny?

it would, in that case, be more consistent to say,

'Twere love and human kindness
To leave them all alone,
And let them 'in their blindness
Bow down to wood and stone.' "

"Fair Chance," "Another Chance," "Second Chance," "Last Chance" and Perpetual Chance

The advocates of the "Fair Chance" theory make great pretensions of "fairness," and they often make a good appearance by juggling terms. They represent with an air of injured innocence that we do them a wrong when we confound them with those who believe in "Another Chance." They do not believe, they say, that anybody who has had a chance here will have a chance there. They plead not for "Another Chance," nor for a "Second Chance" for any body; not that, but for only one chance. But they add, "So many people now have only an unfair chance, and others no chance at all, they must have a fair chance in the coming age." Now this kind of talk sounds very nice. Apart from the reflections and odium which such remarks cast upon God, they sound sweet and bewitching. But the sound of words soon dies and then only the meaning remains. After all the important thing is not what you say, nor the way you say it, but what you mean.

Look now deeper than the golden fleece which covers this quotation and see the meaning of the quotation itself: "Any one who accepts God's offer of mercy because he sees it is his last chance, is being scared into the Christian life,as much as any one who accepts through fear of eternal torment in hell fire." If people can be "scared into the Christian life" we had all better embark in the scaring business; for it is infinitely better to "scare people into the Christian life" than for them to live apart from the Christian life unscared. Now what will scare them into Christianity? Why, tell them this is their "last chance"! You must not then, according to this representation of the matter, intimate to sinners that God's "offer of mercy" now is their "last chance." Such an intimation would scare them into obeying the gospel—terrible deed! perfidious iniquity! Tell them this is not their "last chance"! And when they ask us why this is not their last chance the preacher, to keep from scaring them, must say: "You have a chance now, but it is not fair; you have the 'right' to a 'fair chance,' and you will get it in the future."

Speedily against this reasoning is hurled the arguments of the interested sinner. He understands that his chance now to become a Christian is not his last chance if a "fair" one is to come in the future. More than this, is the "fair chance" in the future the last chance he can have? If so, he will be "scared" into the Christian life then as much as he would be now. As a climax he is led to believe in any number of chances; for always if there were no "other" chance, or if the "millionth" chance were the last chance, he would be as effectually scared into right doing in the future as at present. And so we send him on in his life of ignorance and sin, holding before him his right of a "fair chance" and the awful idea that to never get scared into the Christian life, he must not believe in any limited number of chances. Why? Because that belief would have a tendency to frighten him into right doing and give him cause for alarm. This then is the conclusion drawn from the findings of our arguments, that, contrary to the command to "seek the Lord while he may be found," we have multiplied the chances and are offering to the sinner the theory of perpetual chances, because any other action on our part may "scare" him.

REPORT OF INDIANA CONFERENCE

The Indiana Quarterly Conference convened at South Bend, May 4-6, through an invitation from the church at that place. The meeting was well attended both by the local members and members from other churches in the state.

Brother F. Stilson, the president of the conference, presided at each session. The first sermon was on Friday evening, at which time our Indiana people had their first opportunity and pleasure of meeting Brother Benjamin Cummings from Mich., who preached for us. He spoke again on Sunday. We found him a very earnest and conscientious Christian and a pleasant speaker. May his greatest desire in this life be granted · that his preaching and daily walk may be instrumental in bringing many into a knowledge of the truth.

On Saturday and Sunday we listened to Sister Mary A. Woodward, whom we all know and love. Brother VanVactor was also with us Saturday evening and Sunday. His sermon on "Service" was especially interesting and instructive.

The principle theme in all conversation, talks in devotional meetings and sermons was naturally upon that concerning "the times" in which we are now living. The many evidences before us now of the fulfillment of prophecy—the wars, the rumors of wars, etc., bring us nearer to the word of God; cause us to more fully realize that his hand is in the affairs of the nations now; and cause us to rejoice that "our redemption draweth nigh," when Christ shall come to receive his elect, to raise those who are "dead in Christ," and the living ones, and finally reign over the whole earth gloriously.

This meeting was full of admonition to one another, that we might continue faithful and ready to meet the King when he comes. In fact, our minds were so filled with these things that no business session was called, there being no important business to transact anyway at this time.

The kind hospitality of the South Bend Church was fully enjoyed and appreciated by all who attended from a distance.

Remarks

During the month the war clouds have thickened and rumors have resulted in declaration of war by the United States. Now ninety per cent of the nations are in war, and there are rumors of others going in. Wars and rumors of wars. If ever a Scripture was literally fulfilled it is that one. Then comes famine, and the whole world is facing that now. Then on account of scarcity of food unwholesome food will be eaten by the poorer people, and pestilence will folow, just as Jesus said. So as far as our voices will carry let us sound out the gospel to a dying world and a dying age. The twilight of this age shows gross darkness is fast approaching. Our duties and responsibilities are before us. We should be like the horse running in the race, chafe under restraint. Let us petition the great Head of the Church to remove every obstacle and every restraint that may hinder us from using our voices in loud acclaim of the gospel. If the world could only know the woes of which this is only the beginning!

During the month two made themselves ready to escape these things that are coming in the earth by putting on Christ. Sister Hammond, wife of Brother John Hammond, is an excellent addition to the body, and Brother Banning, who had his attention called to the truth by Brother and Sister Harper. He is a man of sterling worth. The month we believe has been very prosperous, and we expect in the kingdom to greet two more worthy ones.

Almus Adams, Evangelist.

OBITUARY

Benjamin Kauffman

Brother Benjamin Kauffman passed away at his home in Lawrenceville, Ohio, suddenly and unexpectedly Friday morning, April 27th, 1917, at 5:45. The end came so peacefully—just ceasing to breathe while in a sitting posture, going to sleep like a tired child, not moving a muscle.

He had been in failing health for several years; suffering no acute pain, only weakness and loss of flesh, on account of aversion to hearty food. But patient and uncomplaining, always seen about, going to church service when able, doing whatever he could, and in the last few weeks planted and made garden. A recent attack of jaundice superinduced acute pain from torpid liver on Wednesday and Thursday, 25th and 26th. But obtaining relief by use of hyperdermic rested therefrom until the end came, dying with apoplexy.

Brother Kauffman was born in Springfield Ohio, October 18th, 1834. He lived there until after his marriage to Miss Mary Fish, Dec. 13th, 1857. To this union six children were born, four of whom survive. They are Anna, Harry Benj. F., Mary L., Owen A., Jessie M. B., and Frederick M., son of B. F. Anna and Harry died in 1867 and 1892, aged 18 months and 34 years respectively.

These parents were both charter members of the church of the Abrahamic faith that was organized by the writer's father, William Fish, in 1857. They were baptized into the "All saving name" of Jesus in 1858. After this, Brother and Sister Kauffman lived in Dayton, Alpha, Springvalley and St. Mary's, Ohio.

In 1877 they drifted back to Springfield where, in 1907, at their quiet rural home in Lawrenceville, Brother and Sister Kauffman celebrated their golden wedding. The mother was then taken. Brother Kauffman through all the vicissitudes of life never relinquished his faith in God's word and his hope in the resurrection.

The funeral service was held at the house Sunday afternoon, the 29th, Brother Robert G. Huggins, pastor of the Cleveland church, officiating. He had been called for the same purpose for Sister Cassie Howell Wilson, Friday 27th, she having died on the 25th from pneumonia. Brother Huggins spoke words of comfort from the word of the Christian's faith and hope. "If a man die, shall he live again?" The language of Job 18:25-27, is the answer: "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another."

We commend our two sisters who believe in this hope to God our Father, who careth for them, and with them we sorrow, not as do others who have no hope. We believe that our Brother will live again.

Two hymns were read, expressing the faith and hope of Brother Kauffman. Floral offerings were many and beautiful. The house was filled with members of the Brush Creek and Lawrenceville churches, relatives, sympathizing friends and neighbors.

Burial was private Monday the 30th, when in beautiful Fern Cliff Cemetery we laid our beloved to rest to await the resurrection morn at the appearing of Jesus the Christ and our Life Giver.

H. Matilda Woodbury.

TO DESIRE AND TO WILL

To desire a thing and to will a thing are two entirely different acts of the mind. We desire very many things which we do not will to be. We desire to be wise, or useful, or good, but our desire does not ripen into a will force which impels us to earnest effort to attain these things. How many desire to be Christians who never will to be such! They would indeed like to have an experience of the Savior's grace and love, but they never decide to arise and go to Christ. Our desires often are poor, spongy make-believes, which do us more harm than good. Let us compel them into action, and see if there be any value in them or not.

I dwell too near to God for doubt and fear.

BEHEADING TRIUNE IMMERSION

By P. E. Osborne in Messiah's Advocate

It is something of a job to behead a theory, isn't it? Well, the theory can be beheaded, if the right process is used. Beheading is a process carried on for the purpose of producing death, and when a theory is dead, it needs a resurrection. Many a theory is pulled out of the murk and mold of the tomb, and set up in a corner, and worshiped as if it were alive. The theory of triune immersion was dealt a fatal blow by the writer of the book of Revelation, centuries ago, yet we find it doing duty for a real live doctrine today—in some quarters. We purpose to give a history of that execution—briefly.

To do a good job of beheading, we need a sharp axe. One is found in Revelation 20:4. Says Barnes regarding this passage: "The word here used—peleki(d)zo— . . . properly means . . . to hew or cut with an axe—from pelekus, axe. Hence it means to behead with an axe. This was a common mode of execution among the Romans and doubtless many of the Christian martyrs suffered in this manner.

We we told by advocates of triune immersion that bapto means to dip or immerse, and that bapti(d)zo means to dip repeatedly, hence to baptize means to dip repeatedly; that is three times, once in the name of the Father, once in the name of the Son, and once in the name of the holy Spirit.

Now the basis of this argument is the statement that the little syllable in the Greek word, i(d)z, is said to be a frequentative, a suffix which means frequent or repeated action. (The syllable is spelled as written above to show the correct pronunciation.) But if bapti(d)zo means to dip repeatedly, surely peleki(d)zo means to behead repeatedly. So that those martyrs were supposedly beheaded three times apiece, to be sure they were dead!

Have we not used that axe pretty thoroughly to behead triune immersion? Well, let us complete the job. If we succeed in hitting the idea again, I think we shall have the whole body badly mutilated, just as that Roman headsman must have done when he struck the second and third blows at those martyrs— unless his aim was poorer that ours has been at this theory.

As a matter of fact that little syllable i(d)z is not an index of repitition, but of thoroughness: it is what grammarians call an intensive, and it signifies that if the job is thoroughly done the first time, it need not be repeated. I saw a minister dip a candidate a second time, because he did not get him under the first. And baptism, once thoroughly done, need not be repeated. The reason why some people are re-baptized, or rather dipped, after being sprinkled, is because they thought the sprinkling was not a thorough and satisfactory job. Only a few triune immersionists have ever asked to have the dipping done over. And they did not need it.

But let us use the axe again—to make a thorough job of it, for the satisfaction of the triune immersionists. "Are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death?" We are told that we should be dipped three times. The first time is in the name of the Father. Is God dead? Who saw him die? When did it occur? It needed a God to raise up Jesus from the dead, but who accomplished the resurrection of the Deity himself? Or was he ever raised? Is he not still dead, if he died once? These questions would be serious if they were not so manifestly absurd, and their absurdity makes them exceedingly serious for the advocate of triune immersion. The references you will find in Romans 6:3, and Acts 2:24, R. V.

Good-breeding is the result of much good sense, some good nature, and a little self denial for the sake of others. and with a view to obtain the same indulgence from them.

Love not getting, but giving. It is goodness and honor and peace and pure living—yes, love is that, and is the best thing in the world, and the thing that lives the longest.

Paths of Peace

Take my heart, O Father, take it,
Make and keep it all thine own;
Let thy spirit come and take it,
Turn to flesh this heart of stone.
Heavenly Father, deign to mould it
In obedience to thy will;
And, as passing years unfold it,
Keep it meek and child-like still.

Father, make it pure and lowly,
Peaceful, kind, and free from strife,
Turning from the paths unholy,
Of this vain and sinful life.
May the blood of Jesus heal it,
From its sins give full release;
Holy Spirit, take and seal it,
Guide it in the paths of peace.

Meaning of Biblical Terms

An exchange gives the following table of biblical terms translated into present-day meaning. It is convenient to paste in a Bible for reference. It may also be used at times to arrest the attention of boys whose alert minds will be glad, for instance, to figure out just how tall Goliath was, and to approximate what measurement in the classroom the giant would reach were he present. This is the table:

A day's journey was about 23 1-5 miles.
A Sabbath's day journey was about an English mile.
A cubit was nearly twenty-two inches.
A span was nine inches.
A hand's breadth is equal to 3 5-8 inches.
A finger's breadth is equal to 1 inch.
A shekel of silver is about 50 cents.
The ratio of a shekel of silver to a shekel of gold was apparently 16 to 1.
A talent of silver was $538.30.
A talent of gold was $13,809.00.
A piece of silver, or a penny, was 13 cents.
A farthing was 3 cents.
A mite was less than a quarter of a cent.
An ephah, or bath, contained seven gallons and five pints.
A hin was one gallon and two pints.
A firkin was about eight and seven-eighth gallons.
An omer was six pints.
A cab was three pints.

Keep your mind on the great and splendid things you would like to do.

Faith as a Child

As trustful as a child that looks
Up in its mother's face,
And all its little fears and ills
Forgets in her embrace;
So I to thee my Savior look,
And in thy face divine
Can read the love that will sustain
As weak a faith as mine.

America! America!

O beautiful for spacious skies,
For amber waves of grain,
For purple mountain majesties
Above the fruited plain!
America! America!
God shed his grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood,
From sea to shining sea.

O beautiful for pilgrim feet,
Whose stern, impassioned stress
A thoroughfare for freedom beat
Across the wilderness!
America! America!
God mend thine every flaw,
Confirm thy soul in self-control,
Thy liberty in law!

O beautiful for heroes proved
In liberating strife,
Who more than self their country loved,
And mercy more than life!
America! America!
May God thy gold refine,
Till all success be nobleness,
And every gain divine!

O beautiful for patriot dream
That sees beyond the years
Thine alabaster cities gleam
Undimmed by human tears!
America! America!
God shed his grace on thee
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!

Charade

A word I know will quickly show
What wicked people are;
And when transposed will be disclosed.
A name they always share.
Transposed aright, 'twill bring to light
What all would wish to do,
If altered now, 'twill fairly show
What hides them from our view.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

WHAT WOULD YE DO?

Why hold ye back your social hand?
Because he is a Jew!
If Christ would come into your land,
What would ye Christians do?
Would ye bar gate
With heart of hate—
Or say, "How do you do?"

Would ye invite him to your club,
Or slam the door in face?
Would ye your blessed Savior snub
As oft ye do his race?
With lame excuse
Because they're Jews
By God's eternal grace!

If Christ should come again on earth,
Would he be crucified
As Son sublime of marvel birth
Or homage him denied?
Because of trace
A Hebrew face—
Or would ye bend your pride?

If Christ should stray to Russia's land,
Would Czar to him bend knee?
Or, of this lowly Jew demand
His passport then to see;
Since Muscovite
Has barred the right
To Jewish liberty!

Would ye permit this faultless Jew
At your exclusive inn?
Or say: "We have no room for you,
Nor for your Hebrew kin!"
Or burn your ire
In holy fire
For him who pardoned sin?

MILITARY EXEMPTION
GOD'S WAY OF DELIVERANCE

I thank God that his followers all seem agreed that, to fulfill the law of Christ, leaves no room for us to fight and destroy our fellow creatures. They are purposed in their heart not to do that which the law of Christ says, "Thou shalt not." We claim "Thy word is a lamp unto our feet and a light unto our path." "Thy testimonies have I taken as an heritage forever: for they are the rejoicing of my heart. I have inclined my heart to perform thy statutes alway, even unto the end." Paul who was appointed as an apostle, to us who were once Gentiles in the flesh, tells us, "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ." We therefore feel safe in following his word and example, as he gives them both to us. When Paul was overwhelmed by an infuriated mob at Jerusalem he said unto the chief captain, "I beseech thee, suffer me to speak unto the people." "And when he had given him license" (Paul neither ignored nor treated with contempt his authority), he preached a grand old sermon, and made some sad confessions of happenings before his conversion. The chief captain commanded him to be brought into the castle, and be examined by scourging, but Paul did not propose to be scourged, just for the sake of posing as a martyr, unless it would in some way glorify the cause of Christ, when, for the asking, the laws of the country would prevent it. Therefore "Paul said unto the centurion that stood by, Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned? When the centurion heard that, he went and told the chief captain, saying, Take heed what thou doest, for this man is a Roman." Yet he had appealed to Rome for exemption from bonds and scourging, which their law granted: and he appealed again to the law when the high priest commanded them that stood by him to smite him on the mouth. "Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee, thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law? And they that stood by said, Revilest thou God's high priest? Then said Paul, I wist not brethren, that he was the high priest: for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people." When the young man, told Paul of a conspiracy among the Jews against his life, Paul prayed the centurion to let the young man speak to the chief captain in his behalf, which was granted. When the young man had made the conspiracy known unto the chief captain, he put his humble petition to him, as the one with the necessary authority, to prevent the execution of the conspiracy, in these words. "But do thou not yield unto them: for they lie in wait for him of them more than forty men, which have bound themselves with an oath, that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him: and now they are ready looking for a promise from thee." The chief captain was not a Christian, but the Lord allowed his authority to be used in Paul's defense. When Festus, wishing to please the Jews, asked Paul to go up to Jerusalem, and be tried before him there, Paul, squarely refused to go saying: "No man may deliver me unto them. I appeal unto Ceasar." Paul said "If I be an offender, or have committed anything worthy of death, I refuse not to die." But he was not offending the law; they were the ones who were constantly ignoring the law by false accusations and false judgments and unlawful conspiracies. Festus' testimony agrees with Paul: "But when I found that he had committed nothing worthy of death, and that he himself had appealed to Augustus, I have determined to send him." God was not afar off, while his faithful servant Paul was combating with the powers that be. They are for our protection. He knew Paul and Paul knew the law. But when the elements became angry, and the great sea lashed and foamed, "and we being exceedingly tossed with the tempest, the next day they lightened the ship, and the third day we cast out with our hands the tackling of the ship. And when neither sun, nor stars, in many days appeared, and no small tempest lay on us, all hope that we should be saved was then taken away." Paul feared there would be much damage, not only to the ship, but also to life. Paul knew not how to meet these conditions; they were not natural conditions, and there was no natural way of escape provided, and they must perish, unless it was God's will to save them by a special miracle, which had not been promised. Paul believed and trusted God when he had his promise, but he could not depend on a promise before it was made. But listen to his confidence and good cheer, when he is assured by a promise: "And now I exhort you to be of good cheer. For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve, saying, Fear not, Paul: thou must be brought before Ceasar: and, lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee." And it all worked out as the angel had promised, and Paul explains to Ceasar, why he had appealed to him. It all looks very natural and plausible to Ceasar, who gives Paul a respectful hearing.

He explains that the Jews deliveded him into the hands of the Romans. "Who when they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me. But when the Jews spake against it, I was constrained to appeal unto Ceasar: not that I have ought to accuse my nation of. For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you: because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain." Ceasar found nothing against Paul, but wanted to hear of him, concerning that sect that he knew was everywhere spoken against. "And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him." This is a long way to liberty, and it was fruitful in developing Paul's sympathy for others, as he showed in his answer to King Agrippa who said, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. And Paul said, I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds." Paul had no special liking for the bonds, as he said, "I know how to be abased;" yet he said with unflinching determination, "I can do all things through Christ which strengthened me." Because this deliverance came about in a natural way, through the protection of the appointed officers, was it any less the fulfillment of the promise made to Paul at his conversion, "I will appear unto thee: delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom I send thee" than it would if the deliverence had come about by a special miracle. It was the Jews who persecuted Paul, not those in authority. When Paul had finished his course, he said he had kept the faith, and was expecting the crown. Let us therefore keep the faith, whatever may come, and trust to God for deliverance, and trust to him to give in his own time and way. Our thought and prayer must be to be worthy of his favor and grace. Watch and pray.

Sadie Skeels.

WORK FOR EXEMPTION RIGHT; WAR WRONG

Dear Brethren:

I have not written to you for a long time; but I have not been entirely idle in the vineyard. I receive and answer many letters, and in my weakness try to build up some, if I can, through the word in our most holy faith, to comfort those who mourn and encourage those who are disheartened. Tonight I feel as if I needed to be helped by those more faithful, more wise and strong than am I. It does seem as if God was testing every saint to see if he was a man after God's own heart who would do all his will. The world and its allurements are turning some away; false doctrine is making shipwreck of many; some are turning back to the country from which, like Abraham, they were called out.

I have read with keen interest and with some sadness the articles on exemption from military service. Paul appealed to Ceasar, and not a hint is given in the Bible that he did wrong in so doing. Why may we not appeal to Washington? While God does work for us, it is his command that we work also (Haggai 2:4; Mark 16:20; 1 Cor. 3:9; 2 Cor. 6:1). Jesus says do not be anxious and worried as to the necessities of this life, for God knows that we have need of these things (Matt. 6:30-32). But how does he provide them? Are we to sit down and with folded hands wait for them to be given to us? No. The command is, "Be not slothful in business" (Rom. 12:10), and to work with our hands (1 Thess. 4:11; 2 Thess. 3:12; 2 Thess. 3:10). Workers together with God. Why should not this apply to exemption from military service? Let us do all we can for ourselves, then God will do his part. If he permits the utmost test to come to us—if we are compelled to enter the service, then do as Jesus said—do not fight, because our service is not given to this world but to the King of Israel (John 18:36). Should we not obey God rather than man (Acts 5:29)? And if we stand the test God is able to deliver us even from the lion's den and the fiery furnace.

Now as to our citizenship. There is no need to multiply words. Our citizenship is in heaven (Phil. 3:20; Eph. 2:6-19; Col. 3:1-3). Why is our citizenship in heaven? Because our King is there. If we give our allegiance to another we are traitors. This may sound harsh, but it is the word of the living God. Now stop and think, brethren, for one moment. The nations fighting now are the nations that are going to fight against our King in the last battle (Joel 3:9-13; Rev. 16:14-16). Do you want to be found in the ranks of those who are trying to overthrow the power of the King of kings, our gracious Redeemer who died to save us? Some of these nations are going to fall upon the mountain of Israel to rise no more (Ezek. 39:4). Do you want to be among them? Many of the ancient people whom God says he loves with an everlasting love (Jer. 31:3), will be shot to death. Can God's blessing rest upon these who do this terrible slaughter? There is a vast difference between a man protecting his family from outrage and murder and voluntarily placing himself in a situation in which he must kill. God has not brought his saints into this strait yet. Indeed he has prepared a place of safety for those who are faithful where they may hide until the indignation be overpast (Isa. 26:20,21).

Another thought. Can you, brethren, imagine our Lord taking a gun and killing all he could find? He is our pattern in all things pertaining to this life. These are indeed perilous times and temptation comes so insiduously, satan appearing as an angel of light, that only those that build upon the word will be able to stand (Matt. 7:24-27). Brethren, be not deceived. God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap (Gal. 6:7). All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword (Matt. 26:52; Rev. 13-10).

Your sister in the Lord,

SEES JEWISH REPUBLIC WITH U. S. PROTECTION

London, May 18—The republic of Judea or the republic of Israel, a home-ruled nation—under the protectorate of the United States of America! Site: The land of their fathers, Palestine; capital, Jerusalem.

The world war, in the view of many, seems about to bring true the dream that has persisted through the centuries that the Jew has wandered the earth. He is about to have his own home back again to live there in security. That this security should be maintained by America is the idea of Israel Zangwill.

"Such a protectorate," he said, "would be expected of course, to endure only so long as was necessary to see the Jewish nation firmly established among the nations of the earth."

This statement to the United Press by the great leader of Jewish opinion is significant for its indication of a meeting point between the efforts he has led and the efforts of the Zionists, of whom Louis D. Brandeis has been the most prominent in America.

The Zionists have made Palestine their sole objective. Zangwill's organization has urged that it is more important that the Jews should colonize somewhere at the earliest possible time than that they should return to their own ancient land.

Admitting the strength of the tie that bonds them to Palestine, he has urged that if this is not feasible they should settle elsewhere.

Zangwill won the support of Joseph Chamberlain and Winston Churchill to his colonization scheme before the war, but South Africa, Canada and Australia opposed it in turn.

A Jewish nation in Palestine is another matter. Zangwill's idea of an American protectorate is based on the desire that Jewish interests should be protected by a great power that had no self interest there to serve.

The above article taken from "The Cleveland Press" of May 18, is especially interesting to the household of faith and appropriately brings out the force of an article appearing in the old files of The Restitution under the caption: "One Nation upon the Mountains of Israel," commenting upon Ezekiel 37:22, "I will make them one nation," etc., in which the writer said: "The text quoted above gives assurance that a permanent union of the two nations under one King shall yet be effected, and already God's stately steppings are seen among the nations, which will culminate in the rescue of his ancient people."

In view of this yet future union of Israel and Judah, how do many brethren also declare that there are no "Israelites" outside those known as "Jews"? I do not accept much of the Anglo-Israel teachings, yet in my mind, those British Isles are referred to in Isaiah 41:1; 24:15; 60:9; and Jer. 31:10, and were intended by God in his mercy toward Israel as a sanctuary in which to "Renew their strength," in preparation for the work he had for them to perform among the nations in these latter days as his "battle ax" and "sharp threshing instrument," etc.

How long this time will be, we may only surmise from similar epochs of which the Scriptures tell us. By "last days" or "latter days" I understand some such period as mentioned in Gen. 6:3, where we see that a period of 120 years was marked off in which God's purpose to bring about a new dispensation was visibly going on. A similar time is seen in the bringing of Israel out of Egypt, from the birth of Moses (their visible and fleshly leader under God), to the actual crossing of Jordan by the people (Deut. 34:7). Also, from the time the first of Israel were taken away to Assyria until all were carried captive by the Gentiles. In other words, the visible gradual rise of Gentile power, and corresponding decline of Israel in God's favor, until they were utterly scattered, was another period of about 120 years. From these and other similar facts in God's dealings with Israel, I incline to the view that it is a fixed rule; and that the grand change from "Gentile times" to the return to Israel of God's favor and blessing will be a similar period of about 120 years. The deduction is simple and natural that God must now be favoring Israel in gradually increasing degree and withdrawing from the Gentile powers the degree of divine favor which gave them their supremacy.

We are nearing the end of this age, as all Bible students agree, therefore, when I find a certain people peculiarly favored by the God of Israel, we are bound to explain it reasonably with the facts. Let us look at the Anglo-Saxon race with this thought in view. Concerning her growth in population, the great English Statesman, W. E. Gladstone, once said, "There is no parallel in all the records of the world to the case of that prolific British mother, who has sent forth her innumerable children over all the earth, to be the founders of half a dozen empires." (Compare Gen. 35:11). And of America he said, "While other countries have doubled, or at most, trebled their population, she has risen, during one century of freedom, in round numbers from two millions to forth-five millions." And, although this was over thirty-five years ago, the ratio has remained much the same, proving God's continued blessing of a people in the end of Gentile times whom many say are "Gentiles." (Compare Gen. 48:17-19.)

The Anglo-Saxons have, in their history duplicated the history of Israel in the land of Canaan, literally fulfilled by them for centuries. For instance, before they crossed Jordan to enter that land, Moses said of them, "Israel then shall dwell safely alone" (Deut. 33:28). And here we see that the primary reason of their isolation was for safety. And, looking at Deut. 33:16, we read his words again, "So shall we be separated, I and thy people from all the people that are on the face of the earth." The next verse shows that the natural result of this separation, this "dwelling safely alone," was an enormous increase in numbers so that they are practically innumerable. England's splendid isolation has called forth many comments as being the source of safety.

In the article referred to it is said that England is one of the greatest among nations and that that alone proves that England is not the ten-tribed kingdom. Truly, England is very great in many ways, and bearing in mind that we are in the last days of "Gentile times," England's greatness is one evidence in favor of the belief that she is the ten-tribed kingdom which had God's promise of returning at this time. And while I see clearly that the blessing indicated as resting upon Israel in early times is all that is intended by Numbers 23:10, I believe I can show that the same blessing was to, and therefore has returned to, Israel after she had been made "few in number" for her former sins. To begin with, Jer.3:11, 12, gives the reason for the blessing of the ten-tribed kingdom that "the backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah," and so we are prepared for the declaration in Jer. 31:2: "The people which were left of the sword found grace (God's favor) in the wilderness, even Israel, when I went to cause him to rest." And why do I exclude Judah from a part in this favor which went out toward the ten tribes, since Judah was also "of Israel?" For answer read Ezekiel 16:51, speaking of the Jews, "Neither hath Samaria committed half thy sins." See also the parable in Ezek. 23, which shows most conclusively the distinction as to the culpability of the two peoples--Israel and Judah, a distinction never lost sight of after the division of the kingdom under Rehoboam, son of Solomon. Now reading from the 41st chapter of Isaiah, I find in the Anglo-Saxon people, a people very much resembling what is there fortold of Israel. Then remembering that the "last sands of Gentile times are about to run out," as Brother Joblin often expressed it, "I say, where shall we find room for another such nation?" "Keep silence before me, O islands! and let the people renew their strength." What islands are these, and what people are to renew their strength, and what weakened them? I think I know who "the people" are from the tenth verse: "Fear not, thou worm, Jacob; and ye men of Israel, I will keep thee, saith the Lord and thy Redeemer, and Holy One of Israel." This has been fulfilled in time past toward England, and also the 15th verse. In the last mentioned verse God says he will make them a "sharp threshing instrument to thresh the mountains (kingdoms) and beat them small" In Jer. 51:20-22 a similar picture which was written of Israel after their dispersion: "Thou art my battle-ax and weapon of war; for with thee I will destroy kingdoms," etc. Brother Joblin has often used the expression, "England is God's battle-ax." What caused him to apply this term to England, if not the undeniable fact that her armies have been instruments in dealing with the Gentile powers?

In the words of Micah 5:8-9, they shall be like "a lion among the beasts and a young lion among flocks of sheep." It says this shall take place "among the Gentiles." "In the midst of many people." Surely the God of Israel must be using his people during these closing days of the Gentile times, the ten tribes who "found grace" in his sight while in dispersion. It was the Jew only who was to be known by the show of his countenance (Isaiah 3:9 and 8-9) in order that his greater sin should meet its punishment throughout the Gentile age. "A by-word and a curse among all nations" (Psa. 44:13-15) has been his portion (Jer. 24:9,10; Luke 11:51), and upon him (the Jew) should come the blood of all the martyrs even of the Lord himself, as seen by Matt. 27:25. These words do not apply to Israel as a whole; only to the people of Judah.

It is useless to seek to prove that all that are left of "Israel" are now known as Jews. Much testimony, both historical and scriptural, can be brought to prove the contrary. In the effort they get no further than to show that Jews are Israelites, which everyone knows. Is not every Jew an Israelite seeing Judah was but one of the tribes of Israel? They are a part of Israel and properly enough referred to as "Israelites" or Israel without implying that the whole nation was, therefore, necessarily understood to be amalgamated into one people again.

The ten-tribed kingdom called "Samaria" (Micah 1:5), existed under a line of nineteen kings, covering a period of 250 years, before they were transported to the cities of Media; Holah, Habor, and the region bordering the Caspian Sea. Scores of passages prove that even the "King of Judah" recognized "Israel" as a separate kingdom and did not pretend to reign over both Samaria and Judah (2 Chron. 18:28,29).

ETERNAL LIFE: WHEN OBTAINED

In John 10:27,28 we read: "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me. And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." We see from this statement that Jesus has promised to give to the sheep or righteous eternal life. Do they now have it in possession, as so many teach, or is to be obtained at some time in the future? Let the Scriptures answer.

In 1 John 2:25 we read: "And this is the promise that he has promised us, even eternal life." Now let us see where this eternal life is: 1 John 5:11: "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." So if this life is in God's Son, in actual possession, it would render him an undying creature. Rev. 1:18: "I am he that liveth, and was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen, and have the keys of hell and of death."

Then in what sense have the children of God eternal life? They have it in hope. Titus 1:2: "Paul a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness. In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began" (or before times eternal). We have learned now that this eternal life is in Christ, and is promised to the believer, and that the believer has it now in hope.

The next thing is to find out when the believer gets life in actual possession (Rev. 2:10): "Fear none of these things which thou shalt suffer. Behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried, and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." But the great question arises, Do they get that life at the time of death? Let us still search the Scriptures. Mark 10:29,30: "And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions and in the world to come, eternal life." Dan. 12:2: "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Now we have learned by the Scriptures just when the children of God get eternal life—in the world to come, and by a resurrection from the dead.

HUMAN NOT ANGELIC EXCELLENCE

In our cleaving to Christ as our divine Savior, we too often overlook the intensely human in his nature, and yet a human without sin. Jesus lived in our nature. He suffered; he longed for love. "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" He craved for sympathy. "Could ye not watch with me one hour?" He felt the most tender compassion, "Jesus wept."

It is a failure to apprehend this truth which has led the ascetic and the enthusiast to seek to become Christ-like, by crushing out every impulse of human nature. But let us ever remember that the diviner impulses are not to be brought into supremacy by stilling the spirit of humanity within us.

"We do not reach spirituality of character by spasmodic, unnatural efforts to crush the nature that is within us, but by slow and patient care to develop and disengage it from its evil. It is not angelic, but human excellence at which we are to aim; nor can we be "perfect as our Father is perfect," except in our degree. To become saints we must not cease to be men and women—

For man is not as God.
But then most God-like, being most a man.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

EDITORIAL

Hypocrites seek merit with men; formalists seek merit with God.

The last word from Brother Wilson is that he plans to move to Cleveland in July.

We are happy to have with us again Sister Roberta Lang, after a long visit with the brethren in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Weights may be changed into wings. Duty at first seems a load; but if it is cheerfully, habitually, constantly done, it becomes delight.

A card bearing Christian greetings is sent from Brother and Sister Ashate announcing the birth of a baby boy on May 14th.

We need all our strength and all the grace God can give us for today's burdens and today's battles. Tomorrow belongs to our heavenly Father.

People who whimper and whine because of the lack of a "chance," either commercially or religiously, are usually afraid of hard work and responsibility.

BIBLICAL USE OF THE WORD "ISRAEL"

Many influences are at work all the time to pry us away from the precious word of God. An instance occurs in this issue of The Restitution in the words of W. E. Gladstone, which are quoted in connection with Gen. 35: 11: "There is no parallel in all the records of the world to the case of that prolific British mother, who has sent her innumerable children over all the earth to be the founders of half a dozen empires.' (Compare Gen. 35: 11.)" The text speaks of "a nation and a company of nations." The Anglo-Israelite gloss on the passage is the "nation" spoken of is England, and the "company of nations" is her colonial possessions. The text pertains to "Israel" or the ten tribes, they say. A few superficial readers are content to accept this allegation without taking the trouble to even turn up and see if the application is rightly made.

The word "Israel" was used before the ten tribes existed (Gen. 35:10); and it is used after they are in final extinction (Rev. 21:12). We have "Israel" before the ten tribes existed, and after they cease to exist. Yet Israelitish boasters always think of the ten tribes whenever and wherever they see the word "Israel." But of whom is it said in Gen. 35:11, "A nation and a company of nations"—the ten tribes? No! Begin at the tenth verse: "And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob; thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel. And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins." "Of thee"—Jacob; whatever the meaning may be, it applies to Jacob, and not to the "ten-tribe people" of Anglo-Israel phraseology. There can be no question as to the meaning of the passage: Jacob was multiplied, not into ten, but into twelve minor nationalities in one nationality. A long succession of "kings" came out of Jacob. Why steal a promise made to "Jacob" and give it to ten of the tribes, and cheat the other two tribes out of what rightly belongs to them? Why separate this promise from the Jews, who were equally constituents of the national "Jacob" with the ten tribes who are cast off? What the text says applies equally to all the tribes. A more exact translation of the text sets forth this idea in even clearer light. Change "and" to "even." Any Hebrew scholar knows that "even" is an admissible rendering of the Hebrew wav in construction with a substantive. "A nation, even (wav) a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins." And that was so: a nation consisting of twelve nations has come out of the loins of Jacob, and played an important part in history.

Use what talent you possess. The woods would be very silent if no birds sang but those which can sing best.

BOASTING IN THE FLESH

In this issue the reader will find an article entitled "Sees Jewish Republic with U. S. Protection," in which the writer advances the theory of Anglo-Israelism. There is not one brother in a thousand that will agree with the writer that Englishmen are Israelites, and we expect to be flooded with articles from brethren in refutation of the idea. Our primary purpose in writing this editorial is to ask brethren to desist from writing replies to this article, as we do not think the arguments used are calculated to convince the skeptical, and controversy enervates instead of edifies.

Personally we have only seen bitter fruit borne by the tree of Anglo-Israelism. When our pastorate was in Oregon, Ill., a "Rev." Mr. Brown learned the truth there, but when he became tardy in obeying it in baptism, we enquired into the cause of his disobedience, and then he revealed the fact that he was an Anglo-Israelite. The curious reader may wonder what there was in that to cause disobedience of the truth. Well, the "Rev." Brown revealed the secret when he told us that being an Anglo-Israelite, he believed, of course, that Englishmen were Israelites, and the Church of England was therefore the real Church of God, and the one to which he would like to belong, but since no Episcopal church existed in Oregon, he immediately joined the Methodist instead and began preaching for them! Right glad we are that Brother Goss says he does not "accept much of the Anglo-Israel teaching," for Anglo-Israelism proper is a system of speculation wild and fantastic in the extreme, spluttering about prophecy in a cheap and childish fashion, and reducing history to mythical legends of Scotch and Irish absurdities.

To be plain, brethren, we are tired and disgusted with too much Israelism after the flesh. Human nature in all nationalities is prone to boast about itself. The Lord has declared that he "shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David . . . . do not magnify themselves against Judah" (Zech. 12:7). Thus an Anglo-Israelite, who is usually an Englishman, boasts that Israel (meaning himself) is better than Judah, although our Lord sprang out of Judah, the royal tribe. Yes, he "magnifies" Israel, and belittles Judah! Then again, Christ was a blood relative of the Gentiles (Matt. 1), and "Israel" (Englishmen?) killed the prophets (Rom. 11:3), stumbled and fell (vs. 11), were broken off (vs.17), were diminished (vs. 12—curiously enough we are told that in one century the United States has increased from two millions to fifty-five millions, and this increase proves we are Israelites! Well our increase has come mostly from Italians whom the pope has dumped upon our shore, and from the negros in the South. Are negros Israelites?), are enemies of the gospel (vs. 28), and God has smitten them with blindness "until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in" (vs. 25). Men who boast of being Israelites certainly are boasting over a vain thing; and if England is Israel she is doomed to blindness and diminution so long as Gentile times last! Room for boasting lies rather with the Gentiles, and therefore Paul asks them not to "boast against Israel" (vs.18), not to be wise in their own conceits (vs. 25). When shall we learn that the flesh profiteth nothing (John 6:63), not even in the case of Jesus Christ (2 Cor. 5:16); that Israelites after the flesh are not children of God (Rom. 9:48), but are men of any nation who are free from guile (John 1:47); and that a Jew is one inwardly, "whose praise is not of men, but of God" (Rom. 2:28,29)? The "praise of men" is poured out on the flesh; the praise of God has an eye to the heart. And when the Lord returns we shall see fulfilled the words of the prophet: "Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty. The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men be bowed down: and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day" (Isa. 2:11,12). Then the "greatness of England," about which some men now foolishly boast, will fade like a leaf, and disappear like withered flowers. May God help us to put the flesh aside and give more prominence to the spirit.

COMMUNICATIONS

"They shall make known unto you all things which are done here" (Col. 4:9).

Dear Brother Huggins:

My wife made the good confession of faith, and being unable to secure a preacher of the gospel, I baptized her in the Bitter Root River Mother's Day, May 13th. May she ever prove faithful and receive a crown of life at the last great day. Faithfully yours, J. A. Dickinson.

Dear Restitution:

I have been reading "The Waymarks to the Holy City," and as we see such things coming to pass we may know that it cannot be long till it will be declared that time shall be no more. With wars and rumors of wars and kingdoms trembling we know the time is not far distant when the God of heaven will break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed.

I see in this issue of the paper where Brother Almus Adams has held a number of debates. We are commanded to contend earnestly for the faith, but do they do it? No. When I talk to those of the immortal soul heresy they say, "Well, we won't argue; you have a right to your belief, and I to mine." I say No; unless we can give a "thus saith the Lord" we have no right to our belief. They have drifted into the idea that anything will do, but years ago when I knew such men as J. C. McKinzie, Thacker, Hicklin, Foore, and some others of our staunch advocates they would fight for their belief. I have not heard a gospel sermon for many years, but this does not diminish my faith in the least.

Mattie E. Ridgway.

Dear Brethren:

I will write a few lines of admonition to the household of faith. Lift up your heads and rejoice, beloved ones, for the coming of the Lord is near, even at the door. The signs fulfilling around us certainly show where we are at in the history of the age. The great world war is upon us; all nations must drink of the wine cup and be mad. It is almost so now. We pray the great God for his protecting care over all of his children in this trying hour. We long for our dear Lord to come and rule in righteousness then we know that justice will be done in the earth. Be strong in the Lord, for he that is to come will come and will not tarry.

Yours in hope,

M. E. and E. F. Randolph.

Mr. Robert G. Huggins:

Dear Sir: I am writing in regard to the isolated sister, Louisa Corbaley. She is 84 years old, and has been bed-fast during the past 3 weeks. She has been quite poorly for two years. Her friends and neighbors have been helping her all they possibly could during this time, but now, owing to the high prices of everything, the limit has been reached. And now will the brothers and sisters help her a little? She has a nurse now but her nurse cannot stay with her much longer without some pay, and she would not require high wages. She has many friends and neighbors here who would be sorry to see her sent to the alms house.

Mrs. Corbaley is strong in the Abrahamic faith. She fully enjoys the "dear old Restitution," as she calls it. She has taken this paper for nearly fifty years she tells me. I am Mrs. Corbaley's friend and neighbor.

Yours very truly, Mrs. H. D. Duggins Bangor, California.

Editor's Note.—We are not personally acquainted with Sister Louisa Corbaley, nor with her friend and neighbor, Mrs. H. D. Duggins, who writes the above letter. These remarks are not made to deter any one from helping her financially, God forbid; but when an appeal is published in The Restitution readers seem to decide instinctively that we endorse and approve the appeal. Appeals for financial aid through the paper are easily abused, and it seems to us that we shall soon need to adopt some kind of rules for self-protection. Our present method leaves a big opening for impostors to profit by our generosity. We publish Mrs. H. D. Duggins' letter with the understanding that she will receive any contributions that may be sent for Sister Corbaley, and that she will acknowledge through The Restitution the amounts sent and be responsible for the disbursement of same.

Dear Restitution:

A few of our brethren evidently do not approve of military exemption, and are not in favor of the Church of God petitioning the government to that end. Whether we are relieved of military duty by the president and congress or not, we should let those in authority understand that we can under no circumstances serve the government as combatants.

Supposing the United States were at war with Great Britain instead of Germany, and our brethren in Christ in Canada were forced into the British army, and brethren in the United States were likewise placed in the army. In a short time the brethren in both countries would be trained in military tactics and placed on the firing line with a rifle in hand, or behind a machine gun or cannon, and ordered to do their utmost to destroy the enemy. As there would be brethren of Christ in both armies, brethren would be shooting at brethren! What a position to be in! We ought to be willing to lay down our lives for the brethren, instead of trying to take their lives. We should not go to war, we are non-combatants. We ought to show our colors. I do not mean waving the flag of the United States, but to let all know that we belong to Jesus Christ.

J. C. Thompson.

MILITARY EXEMPTION PETITIONS ARE SENT TO CONGRESS

Many of our readers will be glad to read the following correspondence between Brother Alldridge and Representative William Gordon:

Brother Alldridge's Letter to Representative Gordon

Cleveland, O.,
May 14th, 1917.

Hon. William Gordon,
Representative 20th District,
Cleveland, Ohio.

Dear and Honored Sir:

Enclosed please find petition signed by members of the Church of God praying exemption for this organization from Military and Naval Service.

We are closely related to the religious body known as The Christadelphians, whom the U. S. Government granted exemption from Military and Naval Service during the Civil War. We are willing, if ordered to do so, to serve the Government in any capacity except bearing arms as combatants.

We cannot, owing to our religious convictions, engage in strife whereby the life of our fellowmen may be jeopardized.

Trusting you will present these petitions to the attention of the proper authority on the behalf of the Church of God, so that suitable consideration and action may be taken.

I remain, Dear Sir, Respectfully yours,

(Elder) Geo. B. Alldridge.

11320 Knowlton Ave.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

Representative Gordon's Reply to Brother Alldridge

Washington, D. C.
May 23rd, 1917.

Mr. Geo. B. Alldridge,
11320 Knowlton Ave.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

Dear Sir:

I received yesterday your petition with two hundred and ninety-four others, and your letter of May 14th in reference to same. The bill for the increase of the military establishment which authorized the president to draft into the military service, was approved by the president on May 18th, 1917, so your communications and the petitions were received too late to be considered by congress or the president before the bill became law.

I have forwarded your petition, however, and letter to the Secretary of War for his consideration in the administration of this law, and have advised him that I am retaining the other two hundred and ninety-four petitions received with yours. I will make such disposition of these other petitions as you desire and request.

Yours truly,

William Gordon.

Brother Alldridge's Response to Representative Gordon

Cleveland, Ohio.,
May 28, 1917.

Hon. William Gordon,
Representative 20th District
Cleveland, Ohio.

Dear and Honored Sir:

In reply to your letter of May 23rd, would say: The writer cannot understand how an appeal for exemption from an act can be made until that act becomes a law. Paul reasons that, "he had not known sin, but by the law" (Rom. 7:7). A paragraph in section 3 of the act passed by the sixty-fifth Congress now in session, reads, "Nothing in this act contained shall be constructed to require or compel any person to serve in any of the forces herein provided for if found to be a member of any well organized religious sect or organization, at present organized and existing, whose creed forbids its members to participate in war in any form, and whose religious convictions are against war or participation therein in accordance with the creed of said organization," etc.

The petition now in your custody representing the membership of the organization known as "The Church of God," established in the year 1863, comes within the spirit and protection of this act.

Dear Sir, please place these on file in the proper department, for the purpose of reference when in the different states on the day of registration, exemption may be sought in accordance with the law as set forth in section 3, as above quoted.

Thanking you, dear sir, for your kindness in this matter, I remain respectfully yours.

(Elder) Geo B. Alldridge.

BEREAN REPORT

The Executive Board of the National Berean Society met at the home of the president on April 21st. Brother Frank E. Siple conducted the devotional service.

The first business was the consideration of the registration of the recording secretary, Sister Ella DeMont,, of Indiana. Because of the excellent reasons given, her resignation was accepted with regret. According to Art. 4, Sec. 6 of the Constitution the board filled the vacancy and elected Sister Dessie McDonald, of Plymouth, Ind.

The report of the Cor. Sec. showed an increased interest and activity throughout the country. A detailed report will be given at the end of the year.

The tract Committee reported nearly 2000 tracts distributed to date. The money for this important branch of the work came from two sources only, the National paying the postage. What is the work worth to you? This is a matter which must be discussed at the next meeting; do not forget it.

The social correspondence work has been a new department this year, and the report of the chairman of the committee shows that it has been eminently worth while. Will any who have received or written letters write to the chairman of the committee, Miss Anna L. Adams, 408 E. Chamberlain St., Dixon, Ill. before Conference telling her what you think of this work. Would you like to see it continued?

The organization committee has done splendid work, and we feel that putting this work into the hands of a small committee was one of the wisest moves we could have made. Sisters Lydia Railsback, Indiana, and Idona Romine, Nebraska, have done wonderful work in the field, as reports in the paper have shown from time to time. Besides the societies that have been organized through their efforts, they are in correspondence with a number of places where the interest is very active.

Plans for the conference were discussed. We hope that as many as possible will try to attend the conference at Oregon, Ill., next August. Let each society try to send a delegate.

E. K. Harsch, Cor. Sec.
Rec. Sec. Pro Tem.

Note.—The quarterly dues from the State societies and all societies not affiliated with some states, are now due. Any one desiring Berean pins may secure them at 25 cents each. The supply is limited and the new ones will cost more. Send dues and ordes for Berean pins to L. N. Roose, Treas., Charter Oak, Iowa.

How frequently it happens that we lose our blessings because we do not love the giver, or live in habits of thankfulness.—Mrs. Sherwood.

Faith must destroy fear, or fear will destroy faith. A confident trust in a loving heavenly Father is incompatible with fear.

LOVE

"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity (love), I am become as sounding brass, or tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and though I have all faith so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing" (1 Cor. 13:1,2).

We read this Scripture often, but do we believe it or not? I know that love is the fulfilling of the whole law, and I try to be loving and kind to do to others as I want them to do to me. Now let us look closer and ask ourselves a few questions. How many kind deeds of love have you or I done during this last week? Have we been busy running back and forth, giving all our time and strength to our own household and family, and have we deceived ourselves into thinking that if our time is well spent, make nice comfortable surroundings for our family, that we are showing how we love? The most loving mothers I ever knew were not even Christians! all mothers spend their time and strength for their own. That is love, but not the love that our text speaks of. "If we love those who love us, what thanks have we? do not even sinners the same?" Can it be said of you or me as was said of some of our own people living in our midst, "Well, they may be Christians, but they are not very loving ones: they live only for their own immediate family, and they are only kind and loving to the ones of the family that have obeyed the gospel. The disobedient ones are not loved, are not even hardly visited when sick, for really by the time they do for and help bear the burdens of the ones who please and obey them, their time is fully occupied."

But you quote, "Do good to all men, especially to those who are of the household of faith." We can hide behind this text as thousands are doing, but if we look we will see that we are not exercising love, for we by nature love our own flesh and blood; but we are commanded to love the ones who do not love us; to return good for evil. Oh, sad as it may be, there are children who would have been won if the truth had been held up with a love that faileth not, instead of in a harsh commanding way. The pages of our dear Restitution are full of knowledge and good help,but we do not lay more stress on what we believe than how we love? Yet Jesus says all the law and the prophets hang on this one subject. God grant that our lives may be big enough to love others because he loves us, and not make ourselves believe that if we show the world we love our favorite child that we are exercising a love that will ever win or draw anyone to Christ. "While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us," knowing that if he be lifted up he would draw all men unto him. If we do not show and live lives of love we cannot draw any man unto him. God is love; his greatest commandment is love; his life is love—love to whom? To sinners as well as saints, to the world as well as his own family of sons and daughters. Father, help us to walk in thy steps, and follow thy example more and more each day. For we see our lack of love.—Mrs. Chas. Thomas.

Memory Verses Micah 6:8; Titus 2:13,14

Golden Text: 1 John 4:10

John 3:16

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

In this verse we have revealed ten strong points:

1. God: the Creator.
2. The world: the created. In this instance it is the inhabitants of the world that are called "the world." Through man's disobedience sin entered, pain, anguish, misery, sickness and death followed. To relieve this condition.
3. God's love is revealed.
4. God offers a conditional gift.
5. God's gift is his Son.
6. The condition is belief or faith in that Son as able to save.
7. The offer is to all: "Whosoever believeth."
8. Those who accept the gift are to have something.
9. That something is life.
10. The duration of that life is eternal.

The love of God was not an ordinary love, for God "so loved."

The gift of God was not an ordinary gift, for God gave us his Son.

This Son of God was not an ordinary son. God has many sons, but this Son was God's only begotten.

It was God who gave, and it is his Son that he gave.

And it is in him—this Son of God—we must have belief.

The belief we are to have is that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God.

By having this belief we accept Jesus as our Savior.

Jesus is our Savior, for he saves us from the result of our sins.

The result of our sins is the opposite of eternal life, eternal death or perishing.

So those who accept Jesus as their Savior will have fellowship with God and his Christ in the kingdom throughout eternity.

Have you accepted him? If not, why not?

There will come a day, when the blue vault of heaven will break, and through the opening will appear Jesus the Christ the Son of God. Simultaneously the brown crust of earth will part and out from its bowels shall come forth the saints of God, who shall ascend to meet their Lord in the air, to be forevermore with the Lord.

Come, Lord Jesus; come quickly.

Success and Faith

There is a kind of faith that is not a part of religion. It is the faith that you use when you go into a dark room and put your hand on the thing you wish to get. You know it is there or you are sure enough about it to go and put your hand where you think it is.

If you put good seed into the ground, you have faith it will do well. A carpenter builds a staging of light stuff and climbs to it and stands there. He has faith it will hold him. Other men who have not his faith think he is risking his life.

Men and women who succeed have faith. Faith is a great secret sf success. Believe in your work, your skill, your power, your knowledge. Make up your mind about your work and then have faith in your own thinking.

Of course, things will not turn out exactly as you plan; you will meet with trouble; matters go wrong for the best planners. But if you are going to succeed, you will believe in your own ideas when your friends think they are foolish.

If you have thought more on the subject than they, if you know what they have not found out, stick to your ideas and win!

Make the best of trouble. Believe in what you know and have reasoned out. Change some plans if necessary, but have faith and stick to your work.—World's Chronicle.

"Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself."—Psa.37:7.

Art thou anticipating, with nervous apprehension, some formidable evil? Is thine heart trembling at the very thought of it? It may be thou art like one who has come to the far end, like the apostle Paul in Asia, "Pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life." If so, accept a word of encouragement. It is our deep and earnest desire to strengthen your hands in God and to encourage your heart to trust him for all that is before you. "Fear not," only believe. He never fails a trusting heart —no, never. Make use of the resources which are treasured up for you in him. Just put yourself, your surroundings, your fears, your anxieties, all into his hands and leave them there.—C. H. M.

The Paying Harvest

I sowed the seed of a cheering hope.
  In the saddened heart of a suffering one,
And it overflowed with cheer his heart,
  And came one day back to my own.

And once I helped a needy soul,
  When helpless seemed his sorrowing way,
And from that grateful one there came,
  In my sorrow and need, his help today.

Think not anything little, wherein we may fulfill his commandments. It is in the midst of common and ordinary duties that our life is placed; common occupations make up our lives. By faith and love we obey; but by obedience are the faith and love, which God gives us, strengthened. Then we shall indeed love our Lord, when we seek to please him in all things, speak or are silent, sleep or wake, labor or rest, do or suffer, with a single eye to his service.—Edward B. Pusey.

Services may mean sacrifice. Christ warned one would-be disciple that to follow him did not mean ease and honor,but hardship and sacrifice. If the Son of Man has not where to lay his head, what can his disciple expect?

Most true it is that what costs little is worth little! A religion which costs us nothing, and consists in nothing but hearing sermons, will always prove at last to be a useless thing.—J. C. R.

Example is more forcible than precept. People look at our six days of the week to find out what we mean on the seventh.

The vital power of good example lives on from generation to generation, keeping the world ever fresh and young.

No one is so quick to suspect others of hypocrisy as the one who knows that his own goodness i s nothing but a veneer.

A good deed is never lost. He who sows courtesy, reaps friendship; and he who plants kindness, gathers love.

A friend is the first person who comes in when the whole world has gone out. Make God your friend.

Wisdom is knowing what to do next. Skill is knowing how to do it, and virtue is doing it.

An unkind word falls easily from the mouth, six horses can not draw it back again.—Chinese Proverb.

Nothing is too high for us to reach, but we must climb with care and confidence.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has settled many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. JUNE 12, 1917 NUMBER 22

A VALUABLE SECRET

Keep Still

It doesn't take a Plato to prosper in life
And gain a full share of respect;
For winning your way through the scuffle and strife,
There's one rule that you may not reject.
The fellow that wins both the plums and applause
Is not the first man up the hill;
But the fellow who knows when its proper to pause—
The man who knows when to keep still.

In councils of state, in the circle at home,
The fellow who's sparing of speech,
Who knows thoughts are the sea and that words are the foam—
He's the chap we are trying to reach.
"A word fitly spoken" is fine in its place,
The ear it may soothingly fill;
But the man who runs first at the end of the race,
Is the man who knows when to keep still.

In politics words have wrought wreck and defeat;
In love they've resulted in woe;
For its mostly the case, when the tongue is too fleet,
The hand and the mind are too slow.
In anger or sorrow, in joy or despair,
Reflection was ne'er known to kill,
And the man most worth trusting, most faithful and fair,
Is the man who knows when to keep still.

THE DEVIL

By Sister Viola G. Meermans

Like one who on a lonesome road
Doth walk in fear and dread,
And having once turned round walks on
And turns no more his head,
Because he knows a fearful fiend
Doth close behind him tread.

Immortal Personal Devil and Associate Doctrines a Dreadful Contagion

The above, taken from Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner," expresses the modern idea of a personal immortal devil. The superstitious beliefs which most people entertain with reference to a personal devil are detrimental in various ways. They confuse the mind, stultify the understanding and pollute the languages. Much of this is due to so-called "spiritual leaders." At one time public attention was called to the fact that a father stamped out the life of his child in order to destroy the devil which he believed the child to possess. Common sense, cultivated by education, will serve as a corrective to this superstition which is antique and fantastical. The practice of witchcraft, in the 16th and 17th centuries illustrates one phase of the modern belief of devil-possession, which belief was that some supernatural power had evil influences over people and thus could work evil among their neighbors . The one accused of such was condemned and destroyed. At this time the jails were unable to hold all condemned, and there were not enough judges to try all the cases. In some countries whole counties were depopulated that no witch might escape. In a certain place four thousand victims were sacrificed at one time. The dreadful contagion struck North America and developed in all its fury at Salem, Mass., in 1692, when a number of people were executed.

Belief in an immortal personal devil originated in the morbid imagination of ill-informed men who dug caves, built cells, and hid themselves from society and from the possibility of acquiring knowledge. They thought out horrible terrors and imagined they saw things.

The Idea of Two Spiritual Opposing Forces Originated in Babylon

The doctrine of two opposing spiritual powers sprung from the Pantheon of Babylon, a temple erected for the worship of gods. according to mythology. In Chaldean mythology the great Merodach, champion of the gods, looms up, going forth to battle to fight Diamal and her serpent brood, armed by all the divinities and entrusted with their powers. Such stories of two opposing spiritual powers are found in Scandinavian mythology and in that of barbarous nations. This dual divinity seems to have taken a deep hold on the nations of antiquity. It can be traced to Babylon, Egypt, to the Brahmanism and Buddism of India, and even according to one writer, "the later Jewish and Talmudic ideas are strongly leavened with it." It eventuated in the third century A. D. in the heresy known as Mancheism, named from Mani or Manes, the founder, who was a native of Persia, and who was crucified there in the year 276. Mani claimed himself to be "the last and greatest of the prophets," and his doctrine was a medley of Hebrew, Christian, and Zoroasterian philosophy—the rival opposing forces of the Godhead, with the ultimate victory to the good being the main line of his teaching. Dualism perished with Mani, yet the false philosophy that he worked out tinctured and tainted religions. On a somewhat reduced scale this teaching of opposing spiritual powers has come down to the present age through the intervening ages of spiritual darkness, and it crops out large and bold early in the English language and literature, and still remains one of the standard superstitions of our modern heathenism.

Poets Have Helped to Shackle Men with the Chains of Dualism

For further promulgation of this inconsistent doctrine we are indebted to some of our greatest poets. At the time of the Reformation in the struggle when religious thought was ridding itself of its shackles, some poets came in and tangled folks up again. In some of our modern poetic teaching about the devil, instead of a rival God, we have a mighty spirit that aspires to universal power and with a host of rebels makes a vain attempt to overthrow Omnipotence. In the modern world there is no better illustration of the wheat and tares growing together than that of the truth and the mixed-up devil story. Though choked and smothered, the wheat continues to grow, and we do find some common sense exerted, also some who treat the matter as it should be treated.

Diabollo Considered Etemologically

Out of one hundred and some passages in the Scriptures in which the word "devil" is used, thirty-seven of these rendered "devil" is "diabolos." "Diabollo" is a Greek word; dia (through); ballo (to strike); to pierce as with an arrow. "Diabollo" means, then, "to pierce through," as when a man's character is attached by the false charges of another; his character is pierced through. "Diabollo" also means "to culumniate" (falsely accuse). As the idea implies that the accusations are false, the term "diaballos" means a false accuser or culumniator. The term "devil" is the improper meaning, first given by the translators of the Scriptures into Greek. Leigh says about this rendering, "Nowhere else sampled (i. e. used) in any Greek author."

Me Diabolos, or Devil in the Plural

In searching the Scriptures we find that in some passages the word "diabollos" in the Greek, is translated "devils," in other passages the same word "diabolos" is translated "false accusers" and "slanderers." Paul, when stating the qualifications of deacons and their wives in 1 Tim. 3:11, with reference to the wives he said: "Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things." In the original we find the words from which the translators translated "not slanderers" are "me diabolos," which if translated as most all other passages are, "devils," would read. "Even so must their wives be grave, not devils," etc. Perhaps the galantry of the translators, to avoid giving offense to the fair sex, made them translate the passage correctly. The same statement might be made with reference to Titus 2:3: "The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becomtch holiness, not false accusers," etc. "Not false accusers" in the original is "me diabolos." Read 2 Tim. 3:1-3 and know that the word rendered "false accusers' here is "diaboli" "devils"—if that be the proper translation.

The Word "Devil" is Applied to Human Beings, Not to an Immortal Being Apart from Man

In passages just quoted the word is applied to human beings and not to supernatural. invisible beings. Now, if the word "false-accuser" or that of "slanderer" is the proper translation in these passages, why should not a similar rendering be given throughout the Scriptures? Why has not the word been rendered uniformly throughout the Scriptures? Do any two people agree on the character of the devil, his existence, his attributes? Seeing then, that there is a simple meaning, and seeing there is a mysterious meaning, can it be proper, can it be advantageous to substitute a word which has no definite meaning for one which has a fixed, a practical meaning? Put the intelligent meaning of the word "diabolos" in passages rendered "devil" and it will make them more intelligible and practically useful. In John 6:66-71 we read these words of Jesus': "Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?" Then Judas was a devil. "He spake of Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon" (John 6:71). Then this conclusion would overturn the common idea of the devil that he is a supernatural being. "Devil" represents not only a human being who falsely accuses but the state of mind when false accusations arise. It represents a ruling, active, selfish, accusing state of mind, which enters a man, gains possession of his mind, creates in the man those mental states by which the man as a false-accuser, manifests himself. Judas, before the betrayal, was a false accuser, a servant of self-love principle, accusing his master principle; he became subject to its dictations and a slave in carrying out its behests. Vicious plans and habits are not produced in a moment. The selfish desire works a long time before it comes to its development. A vicious state of mind works insensibly oftentimes before the vice enters the heart of the man, that is before it is so influential as to break forth in positive acts. Such was the case with Judas. He had long been in a state of mind in which he falsely accused his master: mark how he grumbled respecting the ointment used for the anointing of Christ (John 12:1-6). Then the false accusation state of mind, "diabolos" entered and possessed him. Now read John 6:70 and translate "diabolos" correctly "false-accuser:" "Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a false-accuser."

Diabolos is Correctly Translated "False Accuser"

Following are a few texts in which "diabolos" is the original and which should rightly be translated "false-accuser." Acts 13:6-10. In this pas-prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner" (Eph. 2:20)? Here we have it all explained. We are glad to know that this dear brother agrees that the Scriptures are our standard, and that the dead are not promised a future opportunity to gain salvation in the future. As we have seen, the resurrection is for only two classes, the just and unjust; the unjust go into the second death; the just into life eternal. We repeat again that the Scriptures must state God's will to humanity, and if they do not declare that the bride is the New Jerusalem, then they declare that the angel told John a falsehood, for he did not show John what he said he would, but something else. Now dear brother, read and ponder the words of this chapter again, and be not hasty in saying the Holy City is not the bride. May God bless us all in our investigations of his word.

IS "EVOLUTION" DOOMED?

It will surprise many, says the Boston "Herald," to hear that the great doctrine of evolution is not as firmly fixed as the scientists would have us believe. While accepting evolution as a fact, they have disagreed so profoundly over its method that the process itself has come to be doubted. The theory of natural selection, known as Darwinism, is especially under criticism, and the strictures on it add to the confusion. For, before referring everything to "the survival of the fittest," you need to account for the origin of the fittest. It is easy to say that if a new type of gas engine or automobile happened, from whatever cause, to be superior to every other, it would have the right of way, get itself diffused, and form the foundations of further improvements. We could thus have a Darwinian theory of progress in the mechanical arts. But we should want to know by what factor of intelligence and planning the new type got its superiority. It is this lack of information in evolutionary doctrine about plants and animals which makes all the trouble.

Dr. W. B. Scott in a book on the theory of evolution, assumes the task of justifying his own belief in evolution, and is yet constrained to take sides with the very doubt which he puts aside, and warns us against "making evolution into a sacred dogma, which no one shall dare to criticise or doubt." He even hints at "revolutionary discoveries which may change the aspect and significance of all previously acquired knowledge," suggesting "half a century hence" as the time when our whole outlook regardng evolution "may assume a different aspect." Should this half-prediction be verified we may see great scientific names tumbling down from their places of authority and the world rushing back to views which it has long been taught to regard as outgrown.—The Christian.

Self-distrust is the cause of most of our failures.

"HOW DID YOU LIKE THE SERMON?"

Asking that question has become a habit which it will probably take centuries to eradicate. It is a demon which can be cast out only by prayer and fasting. No wonder spiritual results of preaching are so meagre. What can be expected from preaching unless laymen realize that they are to follow up the work of persuasion by driving home the word set forth by the preacher? Sermons are not toys to be played with, or pretty pieces of rhetoric on which every member of the congregation is expected to pas judgment. To ask "How did you like the sermon?" is to drag it down to the level of a crazy quilt, or a piece of crochet-work. A sermon is not an exquisite bit of literary brick-a-brack to be chattered over and judged by the technical rules of art. It is not a dumpling into which every self-constituted critic is invited to stick his fork that he may praise or condemn the cook. A sermon is a solemn warning, a bugie call to duty, a burning condemnation, an earnest stroke against a giant wrong, an exhortation to high endeavour, the illumination of a majestic truth. What a question for an earnest Christian to ask inside the house of God: 'How did you like it?' Sermons are preached, not to be liked, but to be accepted and lived. Suppose, pray, you did not like the sermon! What of it? Suppose that scapegrace who sat with you in the pew went away disgusted! The preachers in the New Testament were not anxious that their sermons should be liked. Never ask that insipid question: "How did you like the sermon?" Such a question injures the one that asks it, and debauches the person who answers. It trains men to measure sermons by false standards and to seek for entertainment rather than for truth.

The cruical question is not: "Did you like it?" but "Did it help you?" "Did it comfort you?" "Did it give you new visions of duty?" "Did it bring you nearer to God and his Christ?" "Did it make you think you could do a bit more for the cause than you had done in the past?" The parable of the sower has an abiding significance. Those birds which devour seeds are like the poor; they are always with us. In our days such birds have no feathers, but in instinct they are true to the nature of the birds which Jesus Christ saw; and one of their favorite methods of rendering vain the work of the sower is asking: "How did you like the sermon?"—Selected.

ZIONISTS BID FOR ALLIES

Petition Balfour to Support Restoration of Jews

Ottawa Ont., May 29.—In view of the likelihood of Palestine passing permanently under allied control, Clarence I. Desola, on behalf of the Federation of Zionist Societies, applied today to Foreign Minister Balfour for the co-operation of Great Britain and the other allied governments in a project to repopulate the Holy Land from the Jewish population of the world. Sympathetic consideration was promised.—Selected by Bro. Chas. A. Goss.

EDITORIAL

We are pleased to report a pleasant and enjoyable visit from Brother and Sister William Coy, of Salem, O. Brother Newman Smith, accompanied by his sister Mary, of Monroeville, O., have also been among our visitors.

Dating June 1, Brother David F. Beck, of Springfield, O., writes: "We take great pleasure to inform you that on last first day, May 27, before Sunday School, we baptized Roy E. Lutz into the all-saving name. He is the husband of Sister Lutz, who was baptized when Brother Anderson was with us."

Sister F. F. Cook writes: "Have you The 'Catechism of the Bible?' It was printed in Plymouth, Ind., Democrat Printers and Binders, 1888. I have most of one left; a few of the last pages are gone. It is very good; texts from the Bible are given in answer to each question. I would be glad to get some if they can be obtained." We have never seen a copy of this work, and if any reader knows if it can now be procured, will he please communicate with Sister Cook, 16 East Main St., Waterbury, Conn

BIBLICAL MEANING OF THE TERMS "JUDAH" AND "ISRAEL"

We are told in the word of God not to give heed to genealogies (1 Tim. 1:4). They are classed with "Jewish fables" (Titus 1:14) and "foolish questions and strivings about the law" (Titus 3:9), which are unprofitable, vain, and strife-breeding subjects (2 Tim. 2:23). These Scriptures were brought afresh to our mind when we read the proof of the article in this week's Restitution entitled "A Jewish Republic." The article is an Anglo-Israelite effort, an attempt to make the grandly significant phrase "the God of Israel" mean "the God of England"! It is not our purpose to give a seriatim review of all the points made in this article, and to show the misapplication of texts, applying some to Judah that belong to Israel, and others to Israel which belong to Judah, and in one case quoting for Bible a statement which cannot be found in the Bible, namely, "They shall no more be remembered by their name of Israel, but shall be called by another name."

Our purpose now is to invite critical attention to the following quotation from the article aforesaid touching the meaning of the terms "Judah" and "Israel:" "Considerable importance is attached to a clear and definite understanding concerning the distinction between 'Jews' and 'Israel.' Many say: 'Why, are not all Jews Israelites?' and such seem to think conversely that therefore all Israelites must be Jews. About as logical as to say that 'all Americans are New Yorkers' . . . . for the reason that these are certainly Americans. We must drop the habit of confusing the terms 'Israel' and 'Jews' as though they were synonymous terms."

The distinction made in this quotation between "Judah" and "Israel" is an Anglo-Israelite distinction much insisted upon by Edward Hine, the father of Anglo-Israelism in England, who says in his published works (so boastful and egotistical as to disgust any modest man) that the distinction between the terms "Judah" and "Israel" is as pronounced as between England and France; and that they are so separate and incompatible that you might as well talk of mixing fire and water. If the distinction is as distinct as Mr. Hine claims, we would still be prepared to show that it fails to support the cause of Anglo-Israel. His invented formula, "All Jews are Israelites, but all Israelites are not Jews," however, is not true, as we shall now show.

Jews Are Israelites

While it is true that the house of Jacob was divided into two political sections in the latter part of Jacob's history, and for the sake of distinction were called the "house of Israel and the house of Judah," it is entirely untrue that there is a distinction between the terms "Judah" and "Israel" as defining two parts of the same stock in all succeeding time. Jews are Israelites, and Israelites are Jews, according to the Bible. The term "Jew" is an abbreviated form of Judah.

sage "Thou child of a devil," there is no authority in the original for such translation. The proper translation is "Thou child of calumny," as we say of wicked person, "a child of vice." Read John 8:44. In Ephesians 4:27 people are urged to look out for those who are looking for opportunities to charge them with offenses against the law. Paul refers to a human, and not an invisible enemy where offenses are referred to that are objects of notice by the civil magistrate before whom the false-accuser, not the "devil" would be happy to have the opportunity of taking a believer. Read Rev. 2:8-10 and read "devil" "false-accuser.' A false-accuser, by branding them with charges before a civil magistrate, might obtain their committal; but an invisible agent called "the devil" could not cast human bodies into prison.

We are urged to submit ourselves to God, and James says, "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you" (James 4:7). With complete submission to God, and complete resistance to the false-accuser we will not be charged falsely nor will the opponent have any opportunity to falsely accuse. Paul says, "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil" Eph. 6:11).

The Temptation of Christ Reasonably and Scripturally Explained

Read Matt. 4:1-11; Mark 112,13; Luke 4:1-13 and you will find the account of Christ's trials, when he was tempted of the devil. "No passage of Scripture admits of a literal interpretation unless all the parts of the same admit fairly, and in accordance with common sense, of such literal interpretation." By the study of these passages we will find that the temptation of Christ must not be taken literally. This temptation or trial of Christ was a conflict of the human heart with divine authority. A prudent commercial man always sees that careful preparation is made before entering upon a new enterprise. A philosopher always sees that his students keep silence for a long time before he begins work with them. Every sane man carefully reflects on any cause he purposes to pursue before he fixes upon the pursuit of that course. We find that Christ is in the wilderness for this purpose. For forty days he is engaged in heavenly contemplation. Christ realized his great mission and for a period of time considered it. At the end of forty days he was hungry and as he looked at the stones on the ground he realized that because of the divine power in him he could turn the stones to bread. But Christ was to triumph through the human nature he possessed and he refused to tempt God. The record states that "the devil taketh him up into the holy city and setteth him on a pinnicle of the temple." If the devil were the being some think he is, how unseemly it would be to have such an one walking up to the holy city with Christ! Again, we are urged to take up our cross and follow Jesus. We wish to follow him alone. Christ knew that God would care for him, but he did not wish to tempt his Father.

We find in the next trial of Christ, that in no way could the transaction be literal. It is recorded that "the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them; and saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." There is no mountain high enough and so situated that by standing on it all the kingdoms of the world could be seen. However, the glory of a kingdom consists of its institutions, wealth, power, and intellectual character, all of which could be realized only by a close position in a kingdom. These were thoughts he entertained and struggled with, and over which he triumphed gloriously.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND CO-ORDINATE INCIDENTS

No one ever outlives his usefulness. God has something for us to do as long as he keeps us here.

IS THE NEW JERUSALEM THE BRIDE

A brother seems to think not; but let us see what John says: "And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials, full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, and I will show the bride, the Lamb's wife." What did the angel show John? Listen: "And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me the great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God" (Rev 21:9,10). This shows that the Lamb is now married, in this part of the vision, and that the holy city is the bride. John in chapter nineteen had see the marriage, and here he is shown the bride. There she is represented as a pure woman clothed in white: here as a city. There she is seen in heaven (ver. 14); here she is seen coming down from heaven. The white clothing is explained to be the righteousness of the saints. Surely the saints are wearing their own righteousness, and that proves the armies in heaven to be the saints, and shows them to be in heaven.

But the brother thinks the saints never get to heaven where Jesus went, and gives Scripture to prove it, and we agree with him on that point, but the word "heaven" is often used figuratively in the Bible, and especially in the book of Revelation. John sees war there (Rev. 12:7), the man child caught up to God and to his throne (Rev 12:5). The dragon, which is a symbol of pagan Rome, cast out of heaven, and the angel flying in the midst of heaven having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth, "saying," that is, preaching as he flies, and in mid-heaven, but he is preaching to those that dwell on earth. Who would think that the angel will be where Christ went, and hollowing so loud that men will actually hear on earth? Nor is it believable that an actual war occurred in God's dwelling place, and that the dragon was actually after giving his seat, and power, and great authority to the ten horned beast, cast from that exalted place; but the heaven was used as that which is exalted, and kings were represented as in heaven while the people are on the earth.

Jesus says, "I came down from heaven." How did he come down? By being of heavenly origin, and not literally; for he was born here, made of a woman, made under the law. Paul speaks of the saints as being clothed with a house from heaven, after the earthy house of this tabernacle is dissolved. Does he teach that the resurrected body will actually be made in heaven and brought down to us? No; but that resurrection and immortality are of heavenly origin, and hence come from there. Saints are now said to be in heavenly places (Eph. 1:3) and to sit in heavenly places (Eph. 2:6), as well as the powers and principalities (Eph. 3:10). More properly the heavenlies, and hence the word represents much more than God's dwelling place Paul says the saints are caught up in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air. Could they not be seen descending from there? Paul says we have come into the heavenly Jerusalem (Heb. 12.22-24). That this text represents present time is clear from the fact that Paul speaks of the church as one of the things to which we have come.

Yes, Abraham looked for a city, and so do we with all who are properly taught in the Scriptures; but what city will be the throne of the Lord? Jerusalem (Matt. 5:35; Isa. 24:23; Zech. 1:17; Mic. 4:7). It is to be rebuilt (Jer. 30:18; read whole chapter; Jer. 33:10,11; Isa. 61:4; Jer. 33:16). Strangers will help build it (Isa. 60:10). People will be required to annually go there to worship (Zech. 14:16-21). When the Lord returns to Zion, he will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem (Zech. 8:3). All these texts teach plainly that Jesus is to dwell and reign in the ancient city of Jerusalem; and one other says: "But Judah shall dwell for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: for the Lord dwelleth in Zion" (Joel 3:20,21).

Now let us reason a little. The texts we have referred to not only teach that Jesus' throne is to be in Jerusalem, but on Mount Zion as well, and they also state that the waste cities are to be rebuilt over the land of Israel and Judah. Now put one large city 1500 miles square down there and it would not only cover Judah and Israel; but it would reach out a long ways into other countries, and there would be no room for any other city in Palestine. But the throne of God and the Lamb is in the New Jerusalem (Rev. 22:4). Now if it is a literal city it must stand so that Mount Zion will be in it, and as the city is to stand so that there will be three gates to each of the four cardinal points of the compass, we must conclude that it stands square with the world. Now let it stand with Mount Zion in it, and if it runs any ways south it will take in desolations that are to be rebuilt and inhabited by Israel; and if it is only extended to the north the same is true of northern cities; and as it is to be square it must run either one way or the other; and what would the sons of strangers have to do in the building of the walls of a literal city from the literal heaven? But the walls are to be as high as their length and breadth, and that would make a fifteen hundred mile high wall. For what purpose would such a wall be used? The fact that the city is the glorified bride proves that it is not literal, and its walls are the precious stones, "lively stones," as Peter puts it, which are built together for a habitation for God. The twelve foundations bore the names of the twelve apostles. A name often is biblically used to represent the thing which bears the name. Example: "And when they believed the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized" (Acts 8:12). Paul dwelt two whole years in Rome, "preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching these things which concern the Lord Jesus" (Acts 28:31). The things which concern the kingdom of God, and those which concern the Lord Jesus, are the same, and that proves that "the name of the Lord Jesus" is equivalent to saying the Lord Jesus; and may it not be so here. especially in the light of the fact that the church is "built on the foundation of the apostles and that Israel of the ten tribes and Judah of the two tribes became amalgamated during their captivity into one people. The ten tribes had forgotten their God and the covenants before their captivity by Tiglath Pileser, and shalmaneser (1 Chron 5:25,26; 2 Kings 15:29; 17.6): and because of their persistent idolatry were they thus carried away. Notice that they are not carried to Babylon, but to Halah, Habor, and the River Gozan, and other cities in Northern Media near the Caspian Sea. This was B. C. 739 to 720. Now in B. C. 588, Judah was carried away to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon (2 Kings 25:8:20; 2 Chron. 36:20). During the seventy years which Judah spent at Babylon, how could they have mingled together? But coming down to the time when Judah returned from Babylon after the seventy years captivity, Ezra, in Chron. 2:63 says, "The whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and three score" (42:36). And further, Israel had gone, in fulfillment of the word by Jeremiah, "out of the land of the Chaldeans" before Judah and Benjamin and the Levites were carried into Babylon. Mingling together was impossible ; it needed no other prohibition than that which distance from each other raised. The Jews themselves know of no such things. To whom did the Jews themselves refer, in John 7:35, as "the dispersed among the Gentiles," if not to the ten tribes? Could any people but them be so designated by the Jews in this connection?

Trusting that I have presented some food for thought, and that what is only outlined here may assist my readers to see God's dealings with Israel of today in a clearer and more scriptural way. I appeal to every lover of truth to cast aside all prejudice and preconceptions and weigh the evidence of God' word impartially. You may recognize them as the people of Israel, and the people over which the twelve apostles shall sit, and judge on twelve thrones, according to the promise of the Lord Jesus. Whether the present movement among the Jewish people will culminate in the establishment of a Jewish Republic or not under a protectorate of the United States, who can tell? The recent drawing together of our country with the Mother Country, and the unifying of our war plans, would seem to be wonderfully and providentially propitious for the accomplishment of the hope and aim of the Zionists for securing Palestine for the Jewish people. A broad view of the international situation, and even a moderate understanding of chronological "times and seasons," many of which terminate and point to a crisis at this time, should prepare our minds for even more surprising events than those recently developed.

"When we cross the desert, plant trees by the way, it may chance to you to return old and weary, to sit under their shadow, and eat of their fruit," runs an oriental proverb. There are more senses than one in which it is possible to make the barren and dreary places of today become beautiful and refreshing ones of some day that is coming.

WAYMARKS TO THE HOLY CITY

In The Restitution of April 24th and of May 1st there is an article on the subject of "Weymarks to the Holy City." I wish to offer a few remarks thereon.

In the article of May 1st under the subhead, "The Son of Man and his Kingdom," the writer says: "The peoples, nations and languages, that shall serve him are the nations of the saved (Rev. 21:24), not the wicked nations of the earth, for these are dashed in pieces at the second advent." When I read this statement, a passage of Scripture on the same subject came to my mind: "The nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted" (Isa. 60:12). The context to this quotation proves it to refer to the time when Christ reigns in his kingdom. If all the nations are destroyed when Christ comes to reign, when will all the nations be blessed in Abraham and his seed, because Abraham obeyed his (God's) voice (Gen. 22:18; Micah 7:20)? If the nations are all destroyed when Christ comes to reign, who will Christ and his saints reign over? And how will the twelve apostles reign over the twelve tribes of Israel, in the regeneration?

(It is possible that Brother Francis has read with some misunderstanding the quotation he has criticised. Surely it is the "nations of the saved" and not the "wicked nations of the earth, dashed in pieces at the second advent," that are blessed as subjects during the reign of Christ. And Isa. 60:12 speaks of certain nations which shall be "utterly wasted" then Is Christ going to reign over "wasted" nations? We think not. "If all the nations are destroyed," an expression Brother Francis repeats, suggests to us that he has misunderstood the writer somewhat.—Editor.

Under the "judgment of the Papacy" the writer says: "We are brought to A. D 1798, when Berthier, a French general entered Rome, proclaimed a republic, took the pope a prisoner, and gave the papal head a deadly wound (Rev. 13:3)" The Roman beast of Rev. 13:1 has seven heads. Now the question is, Is the papacy one of the seven heads? In Rev. 17:9 we read: "The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth. And they are seven kings; five are fallen, one is the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue a little while" (R. V.). The fifth head was fallen in John's day. One was, the imperial which fell A. D. 47; the one to come was to continue a short space. This cannot be the papacy, for it has lasted longer than all the others put together.

The first appearance of the papacy is a horn on the head of the beast, among the ten horns (Dan. 7:8). "This horn's look was more stout than his fellows" (verse 20), classing him as a king and a fellow to the other kings. In Rev. 17:11 the papal beast is "the eighth, and is of the seven.' This is according to the facts of history. The papacy is the eighth from the Roman empire, church and state united; but the papacy is not one of the seven heads. The head that was wounded (Rev. 13:3) was wounded before the rise of the papacy as a civil power. The beast that received the wound (Rev. 13:3) is the Roman empire, and in verse 5 the empire received a "mouth (the papacy) speaking great things and blasphemies." And after this we read, "And power was given unto him to continue forty and two months." This forty and two months is during the reign of the papacy 1260 years after the wounding of one of the heads of the beast. "It was the removal of the seal of government from the Tiber to the Bosphorus (by Constantine) that made the pope the greatest personage in Rome, and in the prostration after Alaric's invasion he was seen to be so (Bryce's Holy Romna Empire, p. 136). It was the rise of the papacy that healed the wound, given the empire by the invasion of the northern Goths and Vandals; so that instead of the papacy being the one that received the wound, the papacy is the power that healed the wound.

Furthermore, the receiving of the wound, and the fall of the civil power of the papacy is more than 1300 years apart. The most remarkable statement of the writer of the article in question is the following after 1870: "Following in swift succession the last vestage of temporal power was swept from his grasp, and thus his dominion was taken away and consumed and destroyed unto the end; that is, the end of his dominion. Following the destruction of the temporal powers, there comes a reviving of its spiritual powers or domination, called "the healing of the deadly wound." Here we are taugh that the reviving of the spiritual, heals the temporal wound. This is confounding things that are different. And how could the spiritual be revived that was not wounded? How bright and harmonious the truth appears when contrasted with error! "Buy the truth and sell it not;" and again, "The truth shall make you free."

I have a work, "Lectures on the Apocalypse by Seiss." And to show the power of creed to confirm men in error. I will give two extracts: "The theological standpoint of the writer is that of Protestant Orthodoxy. He claims to be in thorough accord with the great confessions of the early church and the reformation. Contrary to these he has nothing to teach." In the next quotation we shall see how he sticks to his text. On the word "Apocalypse" he says: "It is called 'The Apocalypse of Jesus Christ which God gave unto him.' Some understand this gift in the sense of signified, made known to; and to put themselves under the necessity of explaining how this could be without compromising our Lord's divinity." Thus the plain meaning of the language, "to shew unto his servants things shortly to come to pass," is ignored in order not to compromise the Lord's divinity. Jesus Christ had been fully revealed in the four gospels. Here we see how error blinds.

SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE RESTITUTION

By Auntie Wince

No reports of new subscribers for our paper, so far as I have seen. I have secured but one, with half-way promises of two more, for I can reach people only through my pen.

But this will never do. God asks more than this at our hands. When he gave us the Linotype, we dedicated it to his service, we said it was his Linotype. But what can the poor Linotype do if no agents offer themselves to put its finished products into the hands of those who are perishing for a lack of the truth?

These are fearful days, I know, they are full of foreboding, of terror Money cannot buy food when there is no food to buy. Our great men warn us that we must face starvation, flour costing $8.00 per hundred weight, that two years ago could be had for $2.40; wheat frozen out, and weather too chillingly cold for the planting and growth of other staples. What then? Must the Lord's work be halted? Shall we stop working for him: stop giving lest we suffer for lack of food? That will not help matters, it will only make them worse. "Trust in the Lord and do good, and verily thou shalt be fed." Elijah was. Is not that "verily" strong enough? But what if we stop trusting; cease doing good? Will food be given then?

Men are out canvassing for "the Youth's Companion," for "The Fort Wayne Evening Journal" and other papers, and are making in some instances $100.00 or more per week. I feel a sense of hurry. Surely with the end so near we ought to hurry. Subscribers can be secured for The Restitution as well as for "The Youth's Companion." Try it and see. Ask every man and woman you meet, make a regular house to house canvass of your neighborhood, and do it in faith and with prayer to God for success.

Blest be the hands that toil to aid
The great world's ceaseless need--
The hands that never are afraid
To do a kindly deed.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

This is undoubtedly the philology of the word, but conventional usage overrides philology in thousands of cases. The word English, of which Anglo-Israelites make so much, is an example. It comes from the Angles, who in conjunction with the Saxons invaded England to help the Britons against the Picts and Scots of the north. Later came Danes and Normans who laid the foundation of England's heterogeneous stock. From the Angles the country acquired the name Angle-land; and the people occupying it came to be called Angle-ish or English irrespective of original extraction. The fact is, there is a very small Angle element in England, and yet all alike are Angle-ish according to the philology of the name. These remarks are equally true about Judah. We must not tie ourselves up with strings of philology (1). We have the "habit" of mixing up the terms "Judah" and "Israel" because we have acquired it from the Bible. What is the "habit" of Bible writers in this respect—what is the Scriptural usage in regard to the term "Judah"? Let us see:

Paul was a Jew (Acts 22:3).

Paul was an Israelite (Rom. 11:1).

Therefore a Jew may be an Israelite, and an Israelite may be a Jew.

Israelites Are Jews

In the book of Esther Artaxerxes (Ahasuerus) reigned as king over one hundred and twenty-seven provinces of Persia. His jurisdiction covered the while of the region to which the tribes had been removed. Now how are they described? Haman, their adversary, contrived to obtain a decree for the extermination of the whole nation. Listen with both ears will you? "The letters were sent by post into all the kings provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews" (Est. 3:13). The 12th verse says the decree was sent "to the governors that were in every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language." This decree covered a variety of nationalities, and in all these nationalities "all Jews" were to be extirpated, whereas, according to the Anglo-Israelite theory, the Jews, having been only a short time in Babylon, had gone back to Jerusalem and were there at this time. The ten tribes were Mordecai's people, as well as the two tribes; they were in the Persian empire and are described as "Jews." Such are the facts in the case. When Jesus said, "Salvation is of the Jews" (John 4:22), did he mean salvation is of the two tribes, to the exclusion of the ten? Then what would become of the Anglo-Israelite claim that salvation is the peculiarity of the ten tribes, that while Judah is cursed, Israel is blessed? Do we find the Jews to whom salvation appertains called "Israel" also? Yes, we do! Let Paul instruct us while he talks to the chief of the Jews (Acts 28:17): "For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you, because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain" (Acts 28:20). The hope of Israel and the hope of the Jews are therefore the same thing.

Therefore an Israelite may be a Jew, and a Jew an Israelite.

FINAL CORRESPONDENCE ON MILITARY EXEMPTION

Representative Gordon's Last Response to Brother Alldridge's Letter

Washington D. C.
May 31, 1917.

Mr. George B. Alldridge,
11320 Knowlton Ave.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

Dear Sir:

I have your letter of the 29th instant. Male citizens between the ages of 21 and 30 inclusive who are required to register under the conscription law on June 5th, may obtain exemption under that law by registering and claiming exemption in writing at the time of registering.

Yours truly,
William Gordon.

P. S. I enclose letter from the Secy. of War in answer to mine. W. G.

Secretary of War's Response to Representative Gordon's Inquiry

War Department,
Washington D. C.
May 28, 1917.

Honorable William Gordon,
House of Representatives.

My dear Mr. Gordon:

I desire to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 23rd in which you enclose a petition from the members of the Church of God, as submitted to you by Mr. George B. Alldridge, of Cleveland, Ohio

While the selective service law authorizes the president to exempt from draft persons who are members of well regulated religious organizations whose beliefs and creeds forbid them to participate in war, the determination of whether a par ticular claim for exemption, exclusive or discharge, shall be granted will be made by boards to be appointed by the president. These boards will function under the law and under regulations prescribed by thie president. The only regulations that have as yet been prescribed, are those governing the registration alone. The determinations of exemptions, exclusions and discharges is a second step, quite separate from the registration. Regulations governing the determination of exemptions, exclusions and discharges will, when promulgated, be made available to all concerned at the offices of the local boards. Until such regulations have been promulgated further information cannot be given as it might later prove misleading: and even after the regulations have been made public, decisions concerning exemptions, exclusions or discharges in individual cases cannot be made by this office, since the law provides that all such cases shall be heard and determined by the boards to be established for that purpose.

(1) We feel like it is our duty to say here that etymology is an unsafe guide to a word's meaning, for usage carries off a word frequently very far from its etymological meaning. The word "dilapidation" is a good example. Etymologically it can only be applied to a stone house, but usage permits it to be used of a wooden house as well. No one now seeks to restrict the word "cynosure" (so often used of beautiful women) to its etymological meaning of "dog's tail." So with the word "Judah." Etymologically it means the Jews; but the "habit" of enlarging its meaning to embrace Israelites soon became fixed with Bible writers in both Testaments. We are not ashamed of a "habit" which we have acquired from writers who were moved by the Holy Spirit.

Very truly yours,

A JEWISH REPUBLIC

Concluded

Will there be a Jewish republic established under a U. S. protectorate? Why should the political opportunity for such a plan present itself just at this time if the God of Israel is not providentially ruling the affairs of the nations for Israel's good? I confess inability to answer. "He watching over Israel slumbers not or sleeps," and that does not mean the Jews only.

Considerable importance is attached to a clear and definite understanding concerning the distinction between "Jews" and "Israel." Many say: "Why, are not all Jews Israelites?" and such seem to think conversely that therefore all Israelites must be Jews. About as logical as to say that "all Americans are New Yorkers, or Rhode Islanders," for the reason that these are certainly Americans. We must drop the habit of confusing the terms "Israel" and "Jews" as though they were synonymous terms. Only two tribes Judah and Benjamin (the latter being a very small tribe), with the priests or Levites, were left after the captivity of the ten tribes which revolted under the reign of Solomon's son Rehoboam. It was only after the two tribes were carried to Babylon for the 70 years captivity they began to be called "Jews."

In 1st Kings 12:20, we read, "There was none that followed the house of David but the tribe of Judah only." The next verse tells us that Rehoboam "Assembled all the house of Judah and the tribe of Benjamin." How he came to assemble Benjamin is shown in the previous chapter. How accurately and faithfully God's promise in 1st Kings 11:13 is here fulfilled. He has declared that this separation into "two kingdoms" was his doing. Every movement and feature of it was foreseen and foreordained of him. He had said to Solomon: "Howbeit, I will not rend away all the kingdom, but will give one tribe to thy son (Rehoboam) for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, which I have chosen." And in this same chapter (1st Kings 11:36) we read that God gave "one tribe" to the king of Judah, "that David my servant may have a light alway before me in Jerusalem" (1 Kings 15:4). God's word (1 Kings 12:21-24) has pronounced the decree which makes Judah and Israel two nations, and if his word stands they will not be made one nation again, until he makes them one on the mountains of their own land. To affirm otherwise, shows ignorance of God's declared purpose. Ezek. 37:15-22 shows that the two nations will remain two with Israel called by another name. In Hos. 1:10, we find although Israel shall be called "Lo-Ammi," (not my people), in their dispersion, in the place where they were so called, it shall also be said: "Ye are the sons of the living God." "They shall no more be remembered by the name of Israel, but shall be called by another name." They are at this time, "in numbers as the sands of the sea." Then shall Israel and Judah be gathered together, as shown by Hos. 1.11, not before, although the theory of there being "no Israel but the Jews," annuls this and similar passages. "In those days" (this time now upon us) the house of Judah shall walk to the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I gave for an inheritance unto their fathers" (Jer. 3:18). How will "Judah walk to Israel" if all Israel is now absorbed into Judah? Does not the theory forestall the plan of God about this matter? In Isa. 11:12-13, we see that he will recover his people from all the countries "and from the islands of the sea both the outcasts of Israel and the dispersed of Judah;" which shows that he recognizes the distinction which he put between them when he divided the kingdom. When they are awakened to the tremendous fact of their identity and once realize God's hand in the affairs of the nation, the "homing" instinct will be revived in Israel, and then "they fly as a cloud, and as doves to their windows," hastening to their old Fatherland. "Surely the isles wait for thee, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from afar, their silver and their gold with them unto the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee" (Isa. 60:8,9).

England is "Tarshish," and hence you must see the propriety of England's ships being "first" to carry back the long exiled people to their own land. Before Judah was carried away, during the first century of Israel's captivity, the prophet Jeremiah wrote of them, "Remove out of Babylon, and go forth out of the land of the Chaldeans, and be as the he goats before the flocks" (Jer. 50:8). Israel is compared to "sheep" which wandered through all the mountains and was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none search or seek after them. See Ezek. 34:16. This was written during Israel's captivity, and positively indicated what was to happen to them and was fulfilled literally by their migration from Assyria. There is absolutely no foundation for the theory

Golden Text: James 1:5

"Between the dark and the daylight,
  When the light is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupation
  That is known as the children's hour."
Longfellow.

"I and My Father are One"

In reading the Scriptures we find a magnificent harmony prevailing throughout in reference to the will of the Father, embodied and carried out by the Son. Although the one is clearly distinct from the other, yet a unity of purpose prevails, emanating from Jehovah, the spring and centre of all glory and good. "Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion" (Psa. 2:6). Although Jesus the Christ, the Son of God and also the Son of David, will reign in Jerusalem yet for all that, the main spring of action is from the Father, who will execute his glorious future purposes in a blessed and obedient Son.

How to Kill, Embalm and Bury the Bible School

Here are the rules:

1. Don't come.
2. But if you do, come late.
3. If it is too wet, too dry, too hot, too cold, stay at home.
4. When you come, be sure to find fault.
5. Don't do anything to help.
6. Don't take any part in the class.
7. Try not to encourage the officers or teachers. They don't need it.
8. Believe all the scandal you hear.
9. Don't contribute to the expenses.
10. If you have a friend who does not belong, use your influence to keep him from joining.

If "children of older growth" wish to wreck the Church, they can take the above to themselves simply by changing the caption from "Bible School" to "Church Meeting."

Do you look up, read and commit to memory the Golden Text? Remember that at a critical moment a memorized scriptural passage recurring to mind, will do more than any other thing toward the withstanding of temptation and the upbuilding of character.

Be quick to praise and slow to scorn
For what the future holds, who knows?
To day the vine has but a thorn—
Tomorrow brings the rose.

"Rejoice in the Lord, and again I say, rejoice."

Habit

Man is such a child of habit
  If he once performed a thing
Then it comes so very easy,
  Just like chasing round a ring.
One cigar will get him going,
  It is all off with reforming,
And when he has smoked a score
  He's a chimney evermore.
A Bad Habit
If he gets into the habit
  And the way of drifting round
To the corner billiard parlor,
  Where congenial souls are found,
And a social visit holds him
  He is restless as the tail
Of the busy bright eyed puppy
  Or the gentleman in jail.
A Dangerous Habit
If he takes a certain paper
  He is lost without the sheet,
If a strange hotel he enters,
  There is nothing there to eat.
If he finds a special barber
  Daily in the selfsame place
And to that man's chair gets fitted
  No one else can scrape his face.
A Foolish Habit
Thus it is we form our habits,
  Bad, indifferent and good,
At the same place every morning
  On the same old job saw wood.
In the same old ruts we travel,
  Custom holds us on the rack,
If we step aside a minute
  We are lost till we get back.—Buffalo News.
Read 1 Cor. 10:13.
A Good Habit
If you wish to form a habit
  That of you, good thoughts will raise;
Cultivate the good things only,
  And to God devote your praise.
Keep away from evil places
  Where are sown the seeds of lust;
Then watch the people who know you
  Place in you, their perfect trust.—A. D. D.
Read Psalm 1.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O, JUNE 19, 1917 NUMBER 23

WHEN JESUS IS COMING

Soon the wars will cease
And we will all be glad;
For we know that he is coming
For the Bible tells us so.

When that very day will come
We are not so very sure;
But we know that he is coming
To this world forever more.

Raymond Larkin, (twelve years old.)

THE DAY OF THE LORD

Blow ye the trumpet in Zion!
Ye watchmen who stand on her walls,
And sound the glad word to her children;
Your long sought deliverer calls
To all the dispersed of his people,
Who wander as strangers alone;
His voice sounds throughout all the nations,
"Ye children of Israel return!"

Jerusalem's desert shall blossom;
Her vales with new beauty shall bloom;
With the songs of rejoicing and gladness
Her children return to their home.
The field is all ripe for the sickle,
The day of the Lord draweth nigh,
And Jesus, with armies celestial,
As conqueror descends from the sky.

His foes in deepest confusion,
Shall yield to his power divine;
Death and hell be cast from his presence,
While his saints in their glory shall shine.
And see! in Life' Book they are written,
The names of those worthy to reign!
O Lord! make us each of that number,
And come, yea, come quickly! Amen.

THE MAN OF SIN

The Future and Individual Theory Exposed

The church at Thessalonica had been agitated with ideas of the imminence of Christ's appearing. Paul writes to quiet their apprehension on the subject, and reminds them of what he had told them while he was with them, namely, that before the day of Christ would come, there should be a widespread departure from the truth, and a subsequent and consequent development of "that man of sin, the son of perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God" (2 Thess. 2:3,4).

The Man of Sin Developed by Apostacy

These words of Paul amount to a paraphrase of the words of Daniel. There is, however, a feature in them which is lacking in Daniel's representation of the matter. Paul connects the development of the "man of sin" with the "falling away" that was to come, and intimates by the concentration of his words, that the one was to result from the other—that the revelation of the "man of sin" was to be the result of the falling away from the truth. This is an important addition to the information communicated by Daniel, without which the identification of the power represented would not have been so complete as it is. There is nothing in Daniel to indicate that the appearance of the little horn of the fourth beast was to be connected with God's operation among men by the truth. For anything there is in Daniel to the contrary, the little horn might have represented a heathen power, like Babylon, or like the original ten horns, having no germinal connection with anything pertaining to God; but by Paul's words we are enabled to see that this little horn was to be the political offspring of an apostacy which was to take place among those professing the truth of Christ.

Faithfulness of the Brotherhood Retarded his Maturity

This leads us straight to the papacy, for the fact is notorious that the papacy, which has ruled the political and ecclesiastical destinies of Europe for twelve centuries, is nothing more nor less than the political incorporations of the principles developed as the result of a departure from the truth on the part of the early professing Christians. In the papacy therefore we behold the man of sin indicated by Paul, and the system which is to be consumed with the spirit of his (Christ's) mouth, and "destroyed with the brightness of his coming." So long as the brethren, as a whole, were faithful to the truth, it was impossible for this man of sin to be revealed, and, therefore, it was impossible for Christ's coming to take place, because the coming of Christ was to occur for the destruction of the man of sin.

Paganism Also Hindered

There was another obstacle in the way at the time Paul wrote. "Ye know," says he, "what withholdeth, that he might be revealed in his time." The man of sin was to be supreme power in the state. Before this could be accomplished, paganism in high places had to be abolished. The pope, as the professed "Vicar of Jesus Christ," claiming to be "King of kings and Lord of lords," could never be politically developed in Europe until the Roman empire was revolutionized, and changed from a pagan to a professed Christian power. The paganism of Rome was therfore an obstruction. It was "that withholding" the revelation of the "man of sin." But the hindrance was to be "taken out of the way," and "Then shall that wicked be revealed." We know, as a matter of history, that paganism in due time, was taken out of the way, and that the way was thereby opened for the uprise of the little horn on the head of the fourth or Roman (symbolic) beast, which as a "man of sin," should prevail against the saints for 1260 years, and exalt himself in the earth above every object of worship.

Individual Theory of the Man of Sin Absurd

There are some who hold that this "man of sin" is a particular person—an individual of extraordinary audacity and impiety, who has yet to appear and theoretically abjure the existence of the Almighty, and offer himself to all the world as the object of worship. But such take an extremely narrow and utterly untenable view of the matter. All they rely upon is the phrase "man of sin;" but this no more proves the personality of the power referred to, than do Paul's other words, "The old man" prove that he meant a literal octagenarian whose company we were to avoid, in "putting off the old man and his deeds." If the "he" applied to the man of sin, proves the personality of the power referred to, what is to be made of the "he" applied to the "what withholdeth?" "He who now letteth (or hindereth) will let (or hinder) until he be taken out of the way." There was a "he" existing in Paul's days, obstructing the development of the "man of sin" and who was in due time to be removed to make way for his impious successor. Who was this? Let the individualists answer. Was there a particular man living in Paul's day, whose death or deposition was necessary to the appearance of the "man of sin?" If the answer is "yea," who was it? and how is it that eighteen hundred years have elapsed since his death, and yet the "man of sin" of the individualist has never made his appearance? A full confrontage of this difficulty will demolish the individual theory.

The Papacy is Essentially a One Man System

The obstruction in the way of Paul's man of sin was the faithfulness of the brotherhood, and the political supremacy of paganism. Both these barriers vanished in course of time, and these reprove, in the historical arena, that monstrosity which has overshadowed the historic page with records of transcendent cruelty and iniquity. Historically, the pope is absolutely the man of sin; for throughout all the generations of the papacy the pope has been the only man in the earth in his position. The system of the papacy is essentially a one man system. The theory of the system does not admit of more than a single head. It has happened once or twice that there have been rival popes, but this was an anomaly never sanctioned by the system. Politically the pope is the man of sin, whoever the pope may happen to be. The individuality of the man is entirely absorbed in the position. No individual man is essential to constitute the popeship. The popeship has always found a man to fill it whoever has lived or died, which shows that it is the office or position which Paul contemplated when he spoke of the revelation of the "man of sin." One man filled the man of sin office when that which hindered was taken out of the way; and an entirely different man will be in it when Jesus is manifested to destroy the whole system.

Literal Time Theory of Futurists a Palpable Error

Those who individualize and futurize the "man of sin" are in the habit of literalizing the period of the little horn's prevalence. "Time, times and a half," are literal three and a half years, at some undiscoverable time in the future, during which "the Anti-christ" of their theory will appear on the scene, rise to the summit of universal power and come to his end by divine interposition. How this theory can be entertained by an intelligent mind on a full review of the bearings of the case, it is difficult to conceive. It involves several anomalies of the most palpable kind. In the first place, if the time, times and a half of Daniel's fourth beast are literal and future, of course the little horn represents a power yet to appear; and in that case, the political visions shown to Daniel and John take no notice of the greatest political phenomenon of the fourth beast period of the world's history.

Daniel is shown the fourth beast and told about the fourth beast kingdom, and put in possession of details respecting it, but is withheld all information of the most prominent, extraordinary, and longest lived feature of the system, viz., the papacy. The most astounding phase of the fourth beast history is left out of the symbolism of the fourth beast period! He receives no information of a persecuting regal imposture, which should lift its head and voice over all the kings of the continent for more than 1260 years, and tramples under foot the truth and the friends of the truth all that time; but he is particularly enlightened with reference to an insignificant three years and a half during which a daring man is only to equal (for he could not surpass) the impiety and cruelty exhibited by the Roman pontiffs for more than a half score centuries!

The suggestion has only to be started to be condemned. How utterly incongrous, that in a symbol, confessedly extending over a chronological period of 2000 years, an incident of only three and a half literal years' duration should receive a place as its most conspicious feature—a period of utter insignifigance as history goes. Again, such an assumption would make the vision teach that the saints were not to be prevailed against in the course of history, except during three and a half years at its close, and would place in a curious position the fact, that as a matter of history, the papacy has spoken great words against the Most High, and prevailed against the saints for a period of 1200 years. Besides, of what would the vision be, if its applicability were confined to a single oppressor, and a period of three and a half years at the close of history? Especially as it is denied by those who maintain this theory, that there is any clue to the time when the man of sin may be expected to appear. And it could in that case only interest those contemporary with that epoch, it would throw the vision into the corner, as a thing destitute of spirituality for all time, and only possessing the kind of interest attaching to any prodigy—a view of the matter eminently derogatory to God, in view of the fact that it was communicated by him for enlightenment, encouragement, and guidance. The literal theory is puerile and untenable. It is utterly unworthy of consideration, and can never be entertained when a broad and competent view of the facts is taken. The historical view of the matter, which is, "the truth of the matter," gives utility and importance to the vision. We read in it the consoling assurance that "the Most High ruleth in kingdoms of men," and that the "practising and prospering" of human wickedness and presumption in the earth, has a determined end—that the triumphing of the wicked like the waves of the sea, has an appointed bound that it cannot pass—that the times of the Gentiles are fixed and defined, and that standing where we are, we can look forward with intelligent expectation to their early expiry, and the glorious manifestation of the Ancient of Days in righteousness to judge and make war, and destroy them that destroy the earth.—Selected by Flora A. Wood from "Christendom Astray."

SOME THOUGHTS ON THE MINISTRY OF PAIN WITH REMINISCENCES

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither will there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

Pain is a warning from nature, an admonition of the Most High. Suffering is the result of error—sin if you please, although not in the sense of wickedness perhaps. Pain is a "curtain lecture" that is particularly applied to the human race because they are supposed to be more or less capable of understanding its meaning and the more refined and delicately capable the nature, the straighter the line of demarkation is drawn and the tighter the girth. Thus it has often be observed that in the more savage races the tension on the nerves is much less, both bodily and mentally. The further down among the lower animal races we go the less we find the necessity for the application of pain and the less it is experienced by created things until plant life is reached and lo, the apple may be pulled from the tree, or the ear of corn from the stalk, just as the oyster may be rent from the shell or sponge from the rock, and there is no evidence that either plant or animal experiences anything of a shock, far less a pain.

I am aware that some will question the correctness of these statements, who judge more by sentiment than by actual facts and experiences and who imagine that the lower animals and savages have experiences and even thoughts and sentiments like the higher races of civilized human beings; but all such ideas are only instances of nature faking not in accord with the truth.

Thus the author of the book "Rifle and Hound in Ceylon" relates many instances of this callousness of his dogs in the chase. One instance I recollect in which the dog was charged by a stag at bay and ripped open. Then when the deer started again, this same dog continued the chase, entrails trailing on the ground, and when the hunt was finished they pushed them back and sewed him up and he came out all right again. Could any human being endure such? Then we have no end of narratives of wild animals wounded even fatally but who charge down on the hunters though riddled with bullets none of which have reached a vital spot.

I have myself seen many instances of this callousness to pain in the lower animals. I mean too, that keen agony such as is the fate of our race. Some one shot into my flock of ducks once and for two or three days I noticed that one poor thing waddled peculiarly although he fed just the same, and when I came to examine her the abdomen was peppered with shot. That domestic animals do feel pain to some extent is sufficiently evident to the observer; even a hen in laying an egg experiences something of the pangs of child birth perhaps, and the higher order of animals more in proportion, but the difference in degree when compared with the human instance is so vast that it can hardly be mentioned in the same breath.

This limiting of the experience of pain in the lower animals where it would be of no use is one of the wise "dispensations of Providence" that are shown throughout all creation. With the bodily there is also the limiting of the mental capacity so that it ranges only in certain limits. Inside of these certain ranges there is absolute perfection of intuition; outside and beyond all is blank. Is there anything for instance, more strenuously perfect than the mother love of a hen? The beautiful figure is used even by the Master to express the perfection of divine care; yet when a chick is dead there is no expression of grief; she has no more use for it, and shows no more disappointment than in vain attempt to hatch a china egg. All such experiences would be useless in the case, hence nature simply blots out the capacity to understand. No unnecessay waste, no delay; the thing is done—the grind goes on for the purpose that the grind was intended.

And this brings us to the contemplation of the beautiful text at the head of this article, no more pain. In the altered conditions of the redeemed earth, the renewed earth, pain would serve no useful purpose, no helpful educational purpose such as it serves here and now, for we shall then "know as we are known." Then the intuition of righteousness, when that which is perfect is come to the human race, will be absolutely correct as the minor intuitions that serve as monitors to the lower races which we can now study and observe. As the swallow knows its course and its time, so the bee finds its way home. When that day comes the dread messenger that signals distress ahead to imperfect knowledge would be a supererogation, therefore there will be no more pain.

But just think in this connection of the atrocious doctrine that some even now attempt to promulgate—the doctrine of "eternal torture." I had thought that this vile thing would have died a natural death in the twentieth century, and perhaps it would but for the ignorant ranting of the Billy Sunday type of proselytizers who ever and anon rise with raucous voices and violent gestures to drum up recruits and pound out a considerable gratuity for themselves. There is nothing that gives a "black eye" to the profession of Christianity as this calumny does. Every semi-civilized self, styled "free thinker," holds it aloft with a complacent grin which he considers argument enough, and as the thing has such a strangle hold on the common sense of all sorts and conditions of humanity, his argument holds good for all such, and one wonders how many and how various are the victims of the delusion.

Some years ago when I lived on the eastern shore of Maryland, and where I was kindly granted much freedom in the local press, I was casually introduced one day to a man with a rich Irish brogue. In hearing my name he pondered a while and then exclaimed, "Why this is the fellow that does not believe in hell!" "Oh," I said, "I believe in a hell all right, but I do not believe that the Creator submits his creatures to eternal torture. Would you do it?" "Why no," said he, "I would not do it, but its God's way you know." Then Scotland and Ireland had it hot for a while, and later when I was in the neighborhood where the Irish friend lived I enquired about him and told my little story to some sympathizers in the gospel there. Then they laughed, and one said if there was a hot place to put miscreants he was the one in the nieghborhood that deserved it. Another said that he was about the only man in the district that they were really ashamed of as a neighbor—a drunkard and a ne'erdo well. I have met similar instances. One "soak" of my acquaintance comes to mind who would start an argument with me on the subject of hell every chance he had until I made a sort of personal application in a humorous way, and told him that according to all accounts he was heading for the hot place and he need not be so anxious.

Such folks are not worth wasting breath on for the most part profane babblers. They stand at the corners of the street and in the slum saloons profaning the name of the God of heaven, who to them is a "damning" God, a furious ogre of iniquity, a magnified image of themselves, plus additions of their base imagination. It is different though when we meet with gentle people benighted by this delusion, virtuous and otherwise sensible people; women of Christlike dispositions, men clean minded and amiable held down by this moral and mental nightmare. I have in mind now a preacher of the Presbyterian Church who might almost be described as "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners," whose whole object in life seems to be helpful and kind to his neighbors with a clear vision of God and his Christ, and yet so tied up with the conventionalities of sectarianism and so limited with its shortcomings and errors that an otherwise superior mind is stultified.

I often listen to his preaching and have noticed his difficulty almost to resentment with the popular and Presbyterian idea of hell. When he reads such a passage in the Bible as that beautiful one in the Psalms, "Though I make my bed in hell," you can almost see the chill running down his spine. Ignorant of the simple solution of the whole question his soul struggles for an apology for the monstrosity, and he makes a crude attempt to minimize the thing and reduce the pain of the future "to a sort of dismal feeling," a kind of mental grippe, something less than toothache and rather more than corns maybe. In a late endeavour he put it down to remorse— this seems to be the latest fashionable resort in the matter. Just as if any of these toughs experienced any such sentiment as remorse.

David was right when he said in the seventy-third psalm that they are not tried "like other men" their "strength is firm," and they have even "no pangs in death" as others. Remorse is a poetical fiction, another nature fake with no basis whatever, in fact so far as the brute is concerned, else the Deutcher junkers and the Hohenzollerns would have all grieved to death long ago.

THE HOLY CITY BOTH MYSTICAL AND REAL

Dear Brethren:

I have noticed some letters in The Restitution that deal with the subject of the New Jerusalem, or as it is sometimes called, the Holy City. One letter by T. H. Drinkard takes the position that it is a real, material city, having streets and houses walls and gates. Another letter by Geo Francis holds the position that the saints in their glorified state are what we are to understand by the Holy City the New Jerusalem. With him to seek a city that hath foundations whose maker and builder is God is simply to seek immortality.

Now this subject is one of intense interest to all believers of the truth who have set their heart's affection on the gospel hope of a future life. If it is possible to rightly understand what God has promised to those who love and obey him, then it will strengthen our character and we will be better equipped to fight the good fight of faith in these perilous times. In making a few suggestions and giving my thoughts on this subject I wish it to be understood that it is not that I wish to criticise or find fault with any, but rather that we may all learn. Indeed, I feel very grateful to the brethren for having raised this subject. I think that the views set forth by Brothers Drinkard and Francis are not contradictory and if properly examined are quite harmonious.

A City Defined

My first thought in considering this subject is, what is a city? The dictionary gives this answer: A large number of inhabited houses in one place; also a collective body of inhabitants incorporated and governed by officers as a mayor, etc. This definition shows that "city" may mean either the houses or the people, though the usual sense includes both.

Resurrected Saints Material Like Christ

My second thought is of the resurrected and glorified saint. What is he like: is he a material being, does he occupy space? For answer we must look to the risen Christ. He is the first fruits, the sample of all that follow. Christ was a material being. He could be seen and touched. He ate and drank. I conclude, therefore, that the risen saints will be like Christ, material beings; organized into a corporate body under their great head with other officials to assist. They lack but one thing to constitute a city, that one thing being definite location or home. Will they have a home? If we answer in the affirmative it follows that it will be a material home, for no other kind would suit material beings.

The angel invited John to come and he would be shown the bride, the Lamb's wife; the record tells us John saw the holy city, Jerusalem. In verse 2 of chapter 21, it is said to come down from God out of heaven; in verse 10 of the same chapter it is said to descend out of heaven from God. But one brother objects in this way, if this is literal and a material city is meant then the angel did not keep his promise to show John the bride, the Lamb's wife. My thought here is that John tells of seeing something else besides the material city. He saw the kings of the earth. What kings are referred to here—the wicked kings that destroy the earth and rule by force and cruelty? Oh no; none such can enter this city. These kings are the risen saints now invested with kingly authority. They will live and reign with Christ and constitute the bride, the Lamb's wife. But what are they doing that takes John's attention? Why they are bringing their glory and honor into the city. In other words the glorious bride is moving into her new home. The word spoken by this angel was steadfast and John saw what the angel promised to show him.

Measurements According to Angelic Standard

Our Brother seems to see hundreds of objections to the literal city. I must confess I have not seen so many. The measurements of the city seem to him very absurd. To this I reply, we are not always in a position to judge as to what is reasonable and what is absurd. The other day I read of a fierce battle and where do you think it took place? Why, three miles up in the air beyond the clouds. Fifty years ago this would seem a very absurd story, but our knowledge has increased since then.

Just a few thoughts on the measurements of this holy city as given by John. It appears that these measures were made according to the measure of a man. But John is careful to note that it was not a mortal man, but an angelic man that did the measuring. If I may venture an opinion, judging from John's description of the holy city, it would be that city is quite unfit for the abode of mortal man. But we must bear in mind that it was never designed for mortal men. The inhabitants of that city are all made equal to the angels and can die no more.

From what we know of the angels they possess powers quite beyond the human. In one case an angel gives the time that he took to fly from the throne of God to the city of Babylon, just while Daniel made a short prayer. The distance is not stated, but it is reasonable to think that men, possessed of the same powers of locomotion, would find no difficulty in getting about a city of 1500 miles square. Then again, angels seem to have power to control or suspend the law of gravitation, they move horizontally or upwardly with equal ease. Again, the changes in atmospheric conditions present no difficulties to them. All these things have a bearing on the question of whether the measurement of the city is reasonable or not. I can think of no difficulty that would prevent it being literal when we take into consideration the nature of its inhabitants.

Then, when we consider the purpose for which this city is established, to be the capital city of the earth and the headquarters for the rulers, it would seem to be necessary to have constant communication with all the rest of the earth. If we consider the possibility of wireless telegraphy the light of the city might have a distinct advantage. I have thought a good deal of the light that will radiate from that glorious city. Its effect on vegetation alone can scarcely be estimated. No wonder the surrounding country shall bud and blossom as the rose.

But dear brothers and sisters, I have said enough to indicate my line of thought. I know that it is very easy to be mistaken, and if any see where I have gone astray from the written word in these rambling thoughts I would esteem it a favor to have them point it out to me. At present, if we do away with the literal account of the glorious city of God, I really do not know what we can put in its place.

John Parker.

EDITORIAL

June the 10th we had the pleasure of another visit from Brother Ashford Lehman.

Never bear more than one kind of trouble at a time. Some people bear three—all they have now, all they ever had, and all they ever expect to have.

The Editor began a series of special meetings in Salem, Ohio, June 12th. Further comments upon this meeting may be expected in next week's Restitution.

All seem to be pleased with Brother Donaldson's "Young People's Page." The Brother is getting up an interesting and instructive page, and we congratulate ourselves in having so competent a helper as Brother Donaldson for a fellow-laborer.

Sunday evening, June 10th, after a sermon on "The Mysticism of Baptism," Ralph S. and Raymond E. Murray, sons of Sister Murray, were baptized into the name of Jesus Christ. Sister Murray has special grounds for gratitude in the fact that now all of her children are with her in the faith.

Copy is rather shy now, as is usual in the warm months. Will writers please note this intimation of our need, and kindly send some MSS.

Fear has no place in working out our salvation: love must do it all: and perfect love casts out all fear. —Alta King.

Editor's Reply

Fear Essential to National Life

Take the verdict of history as illustrating the importance of fear. Take the strenuous ages—the heroic periods of human history—and you will find them all characterized by a deep earnestness which sprang from a profound awe and reverential fear of God. The same remark is equally true of the classic ages. As long as the utterances of the Delphic oracle were received as undoubted truth, and Erinnys feared, Greece was great in virtue, heroes and power. But when their horrible sanctions lost their power over the public conscience, then set in that slow decay of manhood which made Greece an easy prey for the Roman arms.

Through the loss of fear Greece became a nation of airy triflers, without awe, without convictions and without shame—a people whom Paul found gossiping on Mars Hill (Acts 17). That is what came of eliminating a fear of the gods from the national faith. All periods of the world's history marked by the birth of liberty, by resistance of tyrants, have been characterized by a fear of God. God is more than a sentiment—he is justice. There is something to fear in God. His attitude towards evil and wrong should alarm evil doers. Nowhere in nature do we find God a loose and easy Sovereign. He is kind—but within the limits of inexorable law. He is good; but you can take no liberties with him. Find, if you can, anything loose or erratic in the flaming sun and circling stars—anything out of order in nature—from a drop of dew to an ocean's tide—from a grain of sand to the farthest star? Do you imagine, O ye sentimentalists, ye who say "fear has no place in working out our salvation," that the God who never has an unequal balance in nature, will confound the distinctions of right and wrong in moral government? Impossible! For then the God of this vast, orderly, law-abiding physical universe would be contradicted and discredited by the God of the moral and spiritual universe—and that cannot be! Better fear God, dear reader. He dashes Dagon in pieces—he speaks in wrath as well as in love—he has a scourge for impenitent guilt, and a left hand that points to outer darkness, as well as a right that shows the way to the kingdom of God. Beware of God is the message we must lay upon the hearts of the children of men (Exo. 23:21).

Moral suasion is not enough—sentiment alone will not do—sweetness and light have no vertebre, backbone, against the seductions of sin—no motive sufficiently strong to keep men away from the sorcerous shore of the Sirens. You cannot grow an oak in a hot-house. You cannot get depth of character and solidity of conviction out of the teaching that ignores authority, despises law, and fondles with excessive indulgence and sentiment the child, the church, the state. "Fear has no place in working out our salvation," is a statement which sounds like it had been copied from "Science and Health;" it certainly was not taken from the Bible. A religion without any fear in it; a religion which has "no place" for fear, is necessarily a limp, self-indulgent, indolent thing, tolerating evil, and easy in its virtue—if it has any—a thing of sentiment rather than principle; a song rather than a service; a profession rather than a practice.

Sinai Before the Mount of Beatitudes; Moses, then Christ

These remarks, we admit, may offend many nice people, of soft voices, tender sentiments, refined manners and tolerant views; but the prevailing lack of our times is the fear of God, and we must tell the truth whether our testimony is appreciated or not. Fear is the beginning of wisdom (Psa. 111:10). Fear is the beginning, not the end of wisdom. Fear is the A, not the Z of wisdom. It is good to start on. It goes before the assurance of faith, and the perfect love which casts out fear. Just as Sinai came before the Mount of Beatitudes, and prepared the way for it. Sinner friend, the only safe road to the sermon on the Mount, and the tenderness of Christ, is by a way that leads past Sinai. We must quake under the thunders of the law before we are prepared to appreciate the grace of Jesus Christ. In training children, you should be careful to win their esteem and admiration, as well as evoke their love. In all life, law with penalty, appealing to fear, comes before grace and forgiveness appealing to love—law, then grace; Moses, then Christ. The same law holds in your home. The son to whom you expect to leave your property and money must learn to obey, must hear from your lips, "Thou shalt not," and sometimes feel in his flesh the penalties of broken law. Boys must be taught the fear of wrong-doing if they are to grow into self-controlling men. Authority, equally with love, enters into family discipline. When you were a boy, a falsehood started fear; a profane word made you conscious of deserving punishment; and it was good for you they did. Of course, as boys we fretted under restraint, and wondered why we were continually headed off with "Thou shalt not." We lost our temper, sulked, soiled our clothes, but only a vision of a rod, or dark closet, or lost dinner, brought us to terms. Fear has its place and a very useful place too, in the life of children. "Honor thy father and thy mother" (Exod. 20:12) is the only command in which one person's will is subordinated to another. It is only the moral, undeveloped character of the child that can justify this subordination. And here is a beautiful picture of man's relation to the Supreme Father. The claim of the higher Parent gradually grows up and overshadows this delegated authority over the child.

PROPHECY AND THE PRESENT CONFLICT

I think that we should not apply prophecy until we can say as Jesus said, "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your hearing." That is one objection I have in applying Ezek. 38 to the present war.

Let us examine Joel 3:12: "For behold, in those days and in that time, when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem." "I will also gather all nations and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there for my people and for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted my land."

The whole world realizes the fact that after this present strife, there will be a Jewish state in Palestine. Germany and England have both made some such statement. The new Russian government has granted citizenship to the Jews, and in the United States thousands of dollars are being raised for their relief. We notice that the Jews are becoming more prominent of late; surely this is the time when God is getting Israel out of the nations where they are scattered. We can surely say all nations are in battle because those not really engaged are taking steps in that direction.

The only thing which is not quite clear is the place mentioned by Joel, as there is no record of a valley of that name in his time. Possibly he referred to the valley which is now called by that name, which is near Jerusalem. He later calls it "the Valley of Decision," and Cruden's Concordance gives the meaning of Jehoshaphat as the Lord's Judges, or he will plead for him. Could we not say, "All nations being brought to battle, the Lord will decide or judge for his people and his heritage Israel?"

Let us read on and see if what he says will agree with the things coming to pass now. Joel 3:9: "Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles: Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up." From the time the present war broke out the nations began crying "Preparedness," and began to call upon their most able men. We know this to be true in our own country. They are now trying to force the conscription bill through so they can call all the able bodied men to war.

Verse 10: "Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears: let the weak say I am strong." Are they doing this? Steel has made a great advance in price because they are beating it into implements of war (swords) instead of farm implements (plows). Even the farm tractor is being used to make thei war tanks, said to be one of the most deadly weapons now in use. When peace is mentioned either side will say, "We want a peace that will give weak nations equal rights with strong". ("Let the weak say I am strong").

Now turn to Zephaniah 1:15. He calls it the day of the Lord's sacrifice that day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness. This surely is a day of waste and desolation. As badly as food is needed we see it shipped across the ocean only to be sent to the bottom. The land where the armies are, is so dug up with trenches that it is a desolate waste. Yes, these are dark and gloomy days, conditions are growing worse, and no relief is in sight.

Verse 16: "A day of the trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities, and against the high towers." Every day we read in the paper of some stronghold being threatened.

Verse 17: "And I will bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord: and their blood shall be poured out as dust and their flesh as the dung." Every nation now in the war has gone into it blindly, not knowing what they were fighting about, and apparently without thought of what the outcome would be. Still they are going on as blind men. What about the last of the verse? Do we not read of the rivers running red with blood? I think that we will all agree that their blood is poured out as dust and their flesh as dung when we read of the fields covered with dead which they cannot bury on account of the heavy fire.

Let us now turn and see what Nahum says in describing the chariots in the day of his preparation. Nahum 2:4: "The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways, they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings." Who could give a better description of the automobiles of today? When seen after night they resemble torches, and in every little town they are raging in the streets. We have two broad ways (highways) in Nebraska, The Lincoln and the O. L. D. Tourists are jostling together, some going one way and some another. I think that all will agree on the last part, they shall run like the lightnings.

Verse 5: "He shall recount his worthies: they shall stamble in their walk, they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the defence shall be prepared." Here we have some more about making haste to the wall, and preparedness also. Let us look in the book of Luke and see what Jesus said would be the sign of his coming. In Luke 21:24 he has just finished telling of the destruction of the temple, and he says: "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." In verse 25 he tells of the signs of his coming: "And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars: and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring." We can plainly see the distress of the nations on the earth by the way the commission sent here by England talk. They came here to tell America that we were up against a real fight and to be prepared to make any sacrifice, also to warn us against the mistakes which they had made. They cannot see the outcome and are walking blindly dragging everybody into their quarrel that they can, to try and save themselves.

Verse 26: "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken." Let me ask, Are men's hearts failing them thinking of what this time of trouble will finally come to? Almost every day we hear some one say, "I don't see what this will come to, we are shipping all this food to Europe when it is so badly needed here; and then if they draft all the young men into the army there will be no one to take care of the crops if we raise any." Stop and think what it will be should this country be in the condition of the countries of Europe. Are their hearts beginning to fail them now?

In the next verse he says: "And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

Brethren, I think that we can see that these things are beginning to come to pass, so let us who are of the day be sober, putting on the breast plate of faith and love, and for an helmet, the hope of salvation (1 Thess. 5:8). These are the weapons we should use to fight our battles. I am your brother, praying that we may all be worthy to meet the Lord when he comes.

Grover Gordon.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Truth is tough. It will not break like a bubble, at a touch; nay, you may kick it about all day like a football, and it will be round and full at evening.

The wages of sin are always paid. If there is any delay in settlement, compound interest is added.

COMMUNICATIONS

"They shall make known unto you all things which are done here" (Col. 4:9).

Brother Huggins:

On May 19th father started a two week's meeting at Dry River, Va. While that meeting was going on, the church made up money and bought us a buggy, which we appreciate very much. The meeting ran from Saturday evening until the next Sunday evening when they were expecting to close, but they wanted it to continue. On Friday evening June 1st, Mr. Willie H. Boyer, son of Brother and Sister M. E. Boyer, put on the all-saving name. On Saturday evening his brother, Samuel H. came forth for the remission of his sins. Sunday morning, after the sermon, Mr. Otis Ritenour also came for the truth. Immediately after the sermon, father led these brothers down into the liquid grave, where all three put on the all-saving name and entered into newness of life. May they continue to walk in the steps of the Savior, is our prayer.

Mellie L. Anderson.

Dear Restitution:

I feel constrained to express my heartfelt thanks to God for you, brethren, in continuing your weekly visits to cheer us on our way. "Where no counsel is the people fall: but in the multitude of counsellors there is safety" (Prov. 11:14; 24:6). So "let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Think not for a moment that Paul did wrong in appealing to Ceasar, for see what it led to in Acts 28:21-31. He acted wisely as commanded in Matt. 10:10. Amen. For why should we die before our time of probation, 70 years? Matt. 8:10, as cited by Brother C. A Goss, only shows a man's standing and his faith in the Christ. In Acts 10:3-7 and 16:14,15,40 we find two people of character ere they become obedient to the gospel.

Christ teaches his interested brde, both by precept and example, not to go to war, saying, "Put up thy sword into the sheath" (John 18:11; Matt. 26:1,2). And Paul shows all true believers their armory in Eph. 6:10-18. We are taught to ask and we shall receive; and as ye would that men should do unto you do ye even so unto them. So is it not right and not wrong to let our government know of our hopes and fears? Amen. Luke 3:14 puts a stop to war for all who follow the Christ by John telling the soldiers to do violence to no man and have no strike. He knew that Jesus would soon teach them the way of life (Matt. 3:11,12).

We ought to know that this world is evil and not patchable, and that God has established his church here for a special purpose on trial for a better (Gal. 1:4; Matt. 9:14-16; Heb. 5:9; 12:2; Acts 20:28). The friend of God has left us an example in order to have peace, and to become his seed we must walk in his and the Master's steps (Heb. 11:8; Gen. 13:8-19; Rom. 4:12; Gal. 3:27-29; 1 Pet. 2:21). Amen. Brethren, were not most of us worshipping God ignorantly, as Paul, ere we were connected to the truth as it is in Jesus? How many we know now who are trying to patch up so to speak, the teaching of men with the gospel of Christ.

Dear Editor, please bear with us again, and accept thanks for past favors.

Yours in hope of life. R. A. Humphreys.

A WORLD REPUBLIC

We notice that through the statements of some of our statesmen and writers that in time there will be one universal republic. They advocate this as remedy for the settlement of world wars. They claim that this will unite all governments on the earth and will therefore establish universal peace. We do not wish to go into detailed argument in regard to what republics have accomplished but will call attention to our own government. Have we filled the purpose for which our constitution was framed and adopted? The purpose that our forefathers had in their minds was a grand one, viz., in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for common defense, promote general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America. Have we, isolated as we have been, as to territory, and are, accomplished the above purpose? Have we been able in the years of our existence to impress upon other nations the superiority of our government over theirs? This is for each of our readers to judge. We have made a wonderful advancement in many respects. But have we been able to preserve our government from the hands of willful and determined men? If so, why have we permitted such men to place the price of food products so far above a normal price?

When congress has failed, a call is sounded to the people to cultivate war gardens. How nobly they are responding! It requires no "selective draft" to get them to join the army of producers. No nobler spirit could be shown than that of our people cultivating to save the world from hunger and starvation. Are republics the best form of governments? Is our government stronger than a monarchy? The oftener the unit is divided the weaker it becomes. Our government is made up of executive, legislative and judicial departments. Each possesses a different function. From my standpoint this renders us more or less weak. This form of government permits designing men to prevent the object of our people.

An aristocracy under the rule of a just ruler will give us the better form of government. If rulers of aristocracies would act upon the principle that they receive their power from the people, all would be well. I know that I am touching a responsive chord in American readers when I express myself as above. I think the reason is we have always been ruled by human governments.

Human governments originated when Cain built a city. Do you think that from such a source a perfect government could be evolved? I am not offering my criticisms against human governments, because I can see no good in them. Paul says they are ordained of God. They have and will serve a purpose of Jehovah. They can never bring universal peace on earth. I have my thoughts firmly fixed on the purpose for which God created the earth and man. I can see when the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ (Rev. 11:15). This war was based upon the determination that Germany should become a universal empire. Four universal empires have existed on this earth, and the prophet Daniel says, chapter 2, that in the days of these kingdoms, represented by the ten toes of the image, God will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms and it shall stand forever. In the seventh chapter and twenty-seventh verse he tells us where it shall be, and to whom it will be given. He states that it will be under the whole heavens and that it shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, and that it shall stand forever, and that all dominions and rulers, shall serve him.

In this Scripture there is not the slightest hint that republics will become universal on the earth. It is everywhere taught from Genesis to Revelation that Jehovah will in the near future send his Son from heaven to restore all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began (Acts 3:20,21). In the first chapter of Genesis God reveals to us his purpose when he said to the man whom he had created, have dominion over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. Dominion meant to rule, but he lost this privilege through disobedience. The woman was promised a seed that would bruise the serpent's head. This seed is to destroy sin and fill the earth with the glory of God (Isa 11:1-9; Heb. 2:14). In Jer. 23:5 we learn that a King shall reign and prosper and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. Isa. 9:6,7, says, that the child born and the son given, the Prince of Peace, shall sit upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and justice from henceforth even forever. In the Lord's prayer (Matt. 6), Jesus taught his disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done, in the earth as now in heaven." It is the kingdom of God that will bring universal peace in the earth and not a republic. Human governments can never serve God's purpose, as the flesh has ever been too weak in governmental affairs. It was the human element in the Jewish theocracy that caused a failure in that semi-divine government. Had they obeyed Jehovah he would have made them a holy nation (Exod. 19:5,6). His purpose will be accomplished when Israel is restored to their ancient home, Palestine, and submit to the rule of Jehovah's Son, Jesus the Christ (Ezek. 20:33-38). I am aware that when I ask and am granted a place in your excellent paper I am in opposition to almost the entire religious world. We invite criticism if given in a right spirit. Our object is not controversy but to know the truth and the whole truth.

Submitted in a Christian spirit.—D. C. Robinson, Evangelist of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith, in "The Salem News," May 28th, 1917.

"A lighted lamp," writes Mr. Cheyne, "is a very small thing: it burns calmly and without noise, yet it giveth light to all that are in the house." And so there is a quiet influence which, like the flame of scented lamp, fills many a home with light and fragrance. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

A GIRL'S ESSAY ON BOYS

Boys are men that have not got as big as their papas, and girls are women that will be ladies by and by. Man was made before women. When God looked at Adam he said to himself, "Well, I think I can do better than that if I try again," and he made Eve. God liked Eve so much better than Adam that there have been more women than men ever since. Boys are a trouble. They wear out everything but soap. If I had my way half the world would be girls and the rest dolls. My papa is so nice that I think he must have been a little girl when he was a little boy. Man was made and on the seventh day he rested. Women was then made and she has never rested since.—Sent by Brother Knapp.

"THE WYSE SAYIN'S O' SOLOMON"

The above is the title of a version of the Proverbs in braid Scotch by Rev. T. Whyte Paterson. English readers will be able to recognize such a verse as "Pride gangs afore a dunnerin' doon-come, an' a vauntie speerit afore a sossin tummle." But to give some idea of the genius of "braid Scots" we will quote Proverbs 21:6-9, in Mr. Paterson's rendering:

6. Gear that's gotten by joukrie-pawkrie is like reek [illegible] Wha hunt for't are [illegible] the [illegible] o' death.

7. The wicked, by their [illegible], [illegible] Because they dinna care a whistle whether a thing's richt or wrang.

8. It's an [illegible] gate that's ta'en by the man wha [illegible]; but the man wha [illegible] guid, [illegible]

9. Better tak' ye're tuin' on the riggin' o' the house, than [illegible] a fykie, flytin' woman. [illegible]

Golden Text: Matt. 11:28-30

Somewhere, someway, sometime each day, let us turn aside and stop and pray that God will use us in making known to sinful man his way of salvation.

The Fool's Prayer

The royal feast was done; the king
Sought some new sport to banish care,
And to his jester cried: "Sir fool,
Kneel now, and make for us a prayer!"

The jester doffed his cap and bells,
And stood the mocking court before;
They could not see the bitter smile
Behind the painted grin he wore.

He bowed his head and bent his knee
Upon the monarch's silken stool;
His pleading voice arose; "O Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!

"No pity, Lord, could change the heart
From red with wrong to white as wool:
The rod must heal the sin: but, Lord,
Be merciful to me a fool!

"'Tis not by guilt the onward sweep
Of truth and right, O Lord, we stay:
'Tis by our follies that so long
We hold the earth from heaven away.

"These clumsy feet, still in the mire,
Go crashing blossoms without end;
These hard, well-meaning hands we thrust
Among the heart strings of a friend.

"The ill-timed truth we might have kept,
Who knows how sharp is pierced and stung?
The word we did not have the sense to say,
Who knows how grandly it had rung?

"Our faults no tenderness should ask,
The chastening stripes must cleanse them all;
But for our blunders, oh, in shame,
Before the eyes of heaven we fall.

"Earth bears no balsam for mistakes;
Men crown the knave and scourge the fool
That did his will: but thou, O Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

The room was hushed, in silence rose
The king, and sought his garden cool,
And walked apart, and murmured low,
"Be merciful to me, a fool!"—E. R. Sill.

Our Hero: Joffre or Christ?

In addition to the $265,000.00 spent by the corporation, fully one half of the 5,000,000 individual citizens of the great city of New York were equally extravagant in their expenditure of time, money, and strength in entertaining a man famous as a warrior—a profession that wounds, maims, cripples, kills: a profession that has made untold thousands of orphans, that has turned happy wives into mourning widows; that has turned happy men into hardened brutes; that has impoverished countries; that has annihilated families, broken up homes and made broken down, old men of the flower of our youth: and this man who has assisted in establishing this condition, we count as a hero and do him homage!

Another man, a Prince, a real hero, who lived some 1900 years ago, and through whose living was inaugurated whatever good there now is in the world, who never shed blood, but on the contrary restored sight to the blind, gave health to those who were sick, made the lame to walk, restored reason to those who were bereft of it, fed the poor and needy; and in place of making widows and orphans, restored to Jarius his daughter, to the widow of Nain her son, and to Martha and Mary their brother; who was in all things obedient to his Father, and in the end gave up his life, that we through faith might partake of his obedience, righteousness and perfection and thus live with him and his Father throughout eternity in the kingdom of God.

This is a word picture of Jesus the Christ the Son of God. All he did was done willingly and in obedience to the Father who planned it all in and through love. Knowing this we would ask, how much of our time, how much of our money, how much of our strength, are we expending in making known to sinful men the love of God as exemplified in the person of Jesus our Lord? "As for me and my house we shall serve the Lord."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

LIFE'S JOURNEY

Time is fleeting, rolling on,
  Spring time comes, and soon is gone;
Youth is joyous, childhood gay,
  Yet happy hours soon pass away.

Youth soon gone, then strenuous life;
  Hope and sorrow 'mid worldly strife.
All must tread the wine press here,
  Some with gladness, some with fear.

Yet still we look for better things,
  The hope from which true pleasure springs;
The glad fruition, 'tis on the way,
  The never-ending, happy days.

This life is but a little span,
  Given by God to mortal man;
Improve it well while then you may;
  'Tis ever fleeting; can not stay.

But if perchance we reach that goal,
  Beyond the tide and shifting shoal;
All will be well at Christ's right hand,
  When we all reach the promised land.

"BE THOU FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH"

By Geo. B. Alldridge

This morning in the absence of the regular teacher in the kindergarten class the writer was requested to take charge of it. The dear little tads are preparing for "Children's Day," so we listened to their lessons as each in turn rehearsed them. The first dealt with the creation of man and the death of Abel, followed by a bright little fellow who told the story of the flood; then the story of Abraham and Lot was recited, and the story of the offering of Isaac that touched my heart strings as it was simply told as a child knows the story.

Next in line was our dear pastor's boy, Russell. He recited the story of Moses from his birth until Moses ascended Mount Pisgah there to die. We noticed that he laid particular emphasis upon the scene where Moses struck the rock twice; and looking into my face his large full innocent eyes looked straight into mine, I thought full of sympathy and indignation, as he exclaimed, "For that God said he should not enter into the promised land."

Beloved, dear Russell's story has left a deep impression upon my heart and mind. I recall Heb. 11:24-26: "By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharoah's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season: esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward." And then like a flash Heb. 3:16-19 quietly passed through my mind: "For some, when they had heard, did provoke; howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses. But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcases fell in the wilderness? And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not? So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief."

Beloved, the struggle towards the the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus is a man's game; it is no place for a coward or a slacker. When we measure our lives described in Heb. 11, to my mind they throw a light as small as a wax taper, compared to their brilliant lives like a Mazda-nitrogen incandescent lamp that dazzles our eyes like a sun as we behold them. Beloved, honestly at times I tremble with fear as I review the lives of Moses and his brother Aaron, God's first High Priest over his chosen people Israel. Both were denied entrance into the land of Canaan. They had braved the wrath of Pharaoh, renounced their worldly expectations, perilled their lives, led the hosts of Israel for forty years through the wilderness, for the sole purpose of reaching the promised land, and the eyes of Moses, the sweetest character of all time except Jesus, were only to be once gladdened by the sight. What Moses had endured in those forty years, all to secure one object—entrance into the good land of promise; but he died with that object unreached, though spread out in all its tempting loveliness before him.

No wonder our little tad, Russell, laid emphasis upon this scene. When Moses became angry, when the people clamored for water, daring to carry out the commands of the Lord in a petulant spirit, assembling the people hastily, without sanctifying them for the great miracle about to be performed, addressing them roughly and claiming the credit of the miracle, though perhaps unintentionally saying, "Must we bring water out of the rock?" and smiting in his vexation the rock twice, instead of once, as he had been commanded, and thereby injuring the type—Moses by this one act displeased the Lord who denied him entrance into the promised land. In whatever relation we behold Moses, like his great antitype Jesus, the sublimity and suggestiveness of his character is pronounced always noble by nature, the greatest of all missions, his greatness in the manner it was accomplished; but above and over all he maintains the ascendency over his passions and feelings, so that the record is: "Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth." When God said. "Now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them: and I will make of thee a great nation." Read Exodus 32:1-35. Moses in my judgment. except Jesus, stands out the noblest man that ever lived. Read verse 32: "Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—and if not, blot me. I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written."

Yet this man. the noblest of all, failed. Beloved, come with me; let us stand apart, amid a scene of beauty and quietness. Moses has just assembled the children of Israel now for the last time; it is a last farewell, but he is about to bless them in return for all their wrong to him. He cast his eyes over the leaders before him, and over the vast host, while a thousand contending emotions struggled for the mastery in his bosom. The past with its toils and sufferings rose up before him, and how could he part with his children—murmuring and ungrateful though they had been—whom he had bourne on his brave heart for more than forty years? Self-collected and calm he stood before them and gave them his last blessing.

Beloved, he made no complaints—never spoke of his hardships in their behalf, made no allusion to his anguish in leaving them on the verge of the Promised Land, the object for which he had toiled so long. He did not refer to his death. In the magnanimity of his great heart, forgetful of himself or else not daring to trust his feelings in an allusion to his fate, he closed his sublime address in the following touching language: "The eternal God is the refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms; and so he shall thrust out the enemy before thee; Israel then shall dwell in safety alone. Happy art thou, O Israel, who is like unto thee, O people, saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency!"

No wonder he ascended the mountain side, his great heart of love breaking as his steps became slower as he drew near the summit. The people burst forth into weeping. Beloved, I think sometimes that Moses, like his antitype Jesus, was alone with God, that he died of a broken heart. Who can tell what passed through his mind as God miraculously spread before him all the land of Canaan? I think he saw the future, the babe born in the manger at Bethlehem, as the Son of God crying as he bowed his blessed head, "It is finished." He saw Jerusalem going down in its fall and rising again in power and glory, when he with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the saints shall sit down with the great King in his glory. Beloved, "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who, for the glory that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of God. For consider him that endured such condition of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds."

Beloved, let us "follow peace with all, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled. Lest there be any fornication, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright. For ye know how that afterwards, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears."

Beloved, let us be like Moses—faithful unto death, forgetting ourselves and giving a hand to the other fellow; for in helping others we help ourselves. This is the law of love and sacrifice. James Whitcomb Riley expresses my thought very nicely:

When a man ain't got a cent,
  And he's feeling kind of blue,
And the clouds hang dark and heavy
  An' won't let the sunshine through,
It's a great thing, O my brother,
  For a fellow just to lay
His hand upon your shoulder.
  In a friendly sort of way.

It makes a man feel curious,
  It makes the tear-drops start;
An' you sort of feel a flutter
  In the region of your heart.
You can look up and meet his eyes;
  You don't know what to say
When his hand is on your shoulder
  In a friendly sort of way.

Oh, the world's a curious compound,
  With its honey and it's gall,
With its cares and bitter crosses
  But a good world after all.
An' a good God must have made it
  Least ways, that is what I say
When a hand is on my shoulder
  In a friendly sort o 'way.

BAPTISM

On the evening of June 3rd, the Church of God at Brooklyn met for the purpose of witnessing Miss Irene Forman and Miss Mildred Lois Donaldson put on the all saving name of Jesus, their Lord, in the waters of baptism. The announcement of their desire was not a surprise, for each had been fully tutored by pious mothers. We pray the eternal Father will watch over them, guiding them, teaching them, preserving them, and that when Christ shall come they, with us, will enter into his rest. A. D. Donaldson.

THE CHRISTIAN AND WAR

Is It Too Late?

No! It is not too late for us Christians to consider our relation to this war question.

Yes! It is too late for the Pacifists; for their weapons, being merely political, have failed, as everything human is bound to fail.

Yes! And the Socialists have failed too, having repeatedly scorned and rejected true Christian standards for those of a stupid and godless materialism. True, we did admire their devotion and zeal for peace. For the last two tragic years their burning enthusiaism (in America at least) has put us poor sleepy (though "professed") followers of the Prince of Peace to shame! But they are now bidden to "forever hold their peace," and that is the only brand of "peace" they are allowed to hold on to; for whatever is not built on "Christ the Solid Rock" is left to the fate of "sinking sand."

But what about us? Yes, we Christians, who have been preaching this gospel of love, joy and peace so loud and so long? Now that it has come to practicing what we preach, and the fiery test will be applied—are we willing to go through with Jesus? Are we ready to "go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach" (Heb. 13:13)?

Should a Christian Fight?

Let us examine carefully and prayerfully the principles of our holy faith, which principles we but yesterday rattled off so glibly, but which now mean so much! The subject is so vast, and the space allowed so small that I shall confine myself to answering some of the popular objections to Christian Non-resistance. However be it clearly understood that the matter is treated from the Christian standpoint only, and addressed only to Christians; the arguments being based solely on the authority of God's Holy Word.

Question: "If war is wrong for the Christian, why did God himself in the Old Testament lead Israel into battle and into victory against their enemies?"

Answer: The Jews were then living in the age of law and judgment; whilst we dwell in the dispensation of grace and mercy! Right here is where there is an appalling amount of thick ignorance among God's own people, resulting in this everlasting muddling up of Old Testament and New Testament teaching of law and grace, of judgment and mercy, of war and peace—all through failing to "rightly divide the word of truth." We find recorded in the 17th verse of the 1st chapter of John's gospel that "the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." God ordered Israel to wipe out in direct judgment the morally rotten Canaanites; but find me in the New Testament where Christ ever sent his followers on such a mission? On the contrary he sent them out to save men—not to butcher them like cattle. Again, Jehovah openly declared himself on Israel's side, by startling miracles, both at Jericho and with Gideon, as well as at many other times and places. What nation now in the bloody mess can produce such proofs of its being in the right, or of God being on its side?

No! As far as the Christian is concerned, the "eye for an eye" system has given place to the "Turn to him the other cheek also" of Matt. 5:39-44. The reader is urged here to compare the following passages in order to realize the wide difference existing between Israel and the Church of Christ:

ISRAEL	CHURCH
Difference in Conduct
Deut. 7:1,2	Matt. 5:38-44
Difference in Worship
Lev. 17.8,9	Matt. 18:20

Question: "Oh, it is all very well in theory; but suppose a brute in human form attacked your wife and children. Would you stand by and allow it?" And having fired this broadside the patriot awaits the answer with an air of triumphant finality, while I am supposed to rush blindly into the favorite trap. But praise God, he who is in the habit of receiving "tips" from heaven soon gets wise to such tricks; and now for the Answer: In the first place the illustration does not fit the case at all, for the murderous individual tries to assault my family of his own free will, whereas in this war poor harmless people are driven like cattle and quite against their will by godless governments into butchering each other. A more fitting picture of the situation would be found in a Spanish-American cock-fight, where the benighted birds are at their owner's pleasure—these latter together with the "neutral" spectators reaping all the profits!

In the second place, to substitute facts for wild supposition, thousands of humble Christian homes have never yet been broken into by a criminal of any sort: God protecting his own according to their faith; for they put their trust in him rather than in the police.

Thirdly. If it should come to actual violence, Matthew 5 and Romans 12 would still remain true, and God's Word would still have to be obeyed (cf. the case of the Three Hebrew Children, Daniel 3:16-23).

Of course I have not included the many religious persecutions which down the ages have been the inevitable accompaniment of every new and powerful movement; and yet these very persecutions have set the seal of God's approval in the most striking way on the doctrine of Christian Non-resistance. Those early Non-resisters, mind you, were the same martyrs, of whom, in these days of inherited religion, the boast is so often heard, that "their blood was the seed of the church!" Their sublime endurance under the most exquisite sufferings should not only draw tears from stones, but silence forever our contemptible excuses for crawling cowardice! "And he said to me, These are they which come out of great tribulation * * * therefore are they before the throne of God * * * They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more * * * For the Lamb shall lead them unto living fountains of waters" (Rev. 7: 14-17).—Weekly Evangel.

THE COMING OF JESUS AND THE RESURRECTION

Article No. 1

The two incidents in the above title are co-ordinate. The true followers of Jesus are looking forward anxiously to these events. They assure us eternal life and a position in the kingdom of God. In my outline on the Kingdom of God and co-ordinate incidents I gave several Scriptures as preparatory texts. Paul in writing to Timothy admonished him in the following language: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." If all students of the Scripture would heed the above and study diligently, there would be less schisms in the world.

The above incidents are among the most important to the Christian. Without the coming of Jesus and the resurrection there could be no further existence. The doctrine of the soul's immortality is of Egyptian origin, and had its beginning in the garden of Eden expressed in the following language: "Thou shalt not surely die." The serpent announced it to the woman, and it has been believed since. Man from his own estimate, is indestructible, whereas the Scriptures teach that when his breath goeth forth his thoughts perish, and that the dead know not anything. It requires God's power through the resurrection to change these conditions. The Father hath life in himself, and hath given the son to have life in himself. This life is only obtainable through the Son, who is the resurrection and the life. It is also stated that Jesus brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. This gospel, Paul says, "is the power of God unto salvation unto everyone that believes it." For the above statements we will seek now the proofs. The proofs are so numerous that it requires some effort on our part to select those most instructive. During his last days Jesus began to impress upon the minds of his apostles that he would leave them. In John 14th chapter we learn that they were troubled. To comfort them he announced that he was going to prepare a place for them. He said: "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." The promise here stated needs no comment.

First—He was going away to prepare a place for them.

Second—He will come again.

Third—He will receive them unto himself.

Fourth—That where he will be his followers will be also.

When this promise was made Jesus was on the earth. He went to the Father and when he comes again he will be on the earth to awaken the dead and change the living. I challenge our opponents to produce a Scripture that will take him from the earth. In Acts 1:11 we have the testimony of two angels, that this same Jesus that is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven. If such a promise were made to you concerning a dear friend who was leaving you there would be but one thought in your mind, and that would be that he will surely come. So we believe and pray, "Come, Lord Jesus; come quickly." For we know that he will bring his reward of eternal life. In Thess. 4:13-18 Paul states very clearly that the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. The above were comforting words to the believers in Jesus the Christ. In the above Scripture we have the proof of the spirit through Paul that Jesus will come again and then the resurrection will take place. In 1 Cor. 15:23 we have this proof: "Every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming." This statement was made to show the Corinthian brethren that the resurrection of Jesus assured the resurrection of those asleep in him. We fall asleep of a night with a hope that we will wake in the morning. We have no assurance that we will. How different is our falling asleep in Jesus! The order is Christ first, then those who are Christ's at his coming.

It is stated that the coming of Jesus is promised more than three hundred times in the New Testament. And yet a large per cent of nominal church members are either wholly ignorant of the scriptural proofs or radically opposed to the doctrine. Others have it interwoven with heretical doctrines that nullify all the scriptural promises. When Paul wrote to the Philippian church he assured them he was looking for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ from heaven, who he said, "shall change our vile bodies, that they may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." This change therefore depends upon his coming. This Scripture blends his coming with the change from mortality to immortality.

We have tried to select those scriptural proofs that require but little effort to understand. We have one more proof that we wish to offer which will be found in the Collossian letter (3:4), and reads as follows. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Now if the doctrine as preached by the nominal churches be true, why did Paul write that when Christ does appear that we shall appear with him in glory? The generally accepted doctrine is that the dead are conscious at all times with Christ, or as some teach, are in a place called paradise and conscious, awaiting a judgment. Truly, as one divine writer has said, "Man was made upright, but he has sought out many inventions." These are what Jesus called "traditions." Accept Paul's instructions to Timothy (2 Tim. 2:15) and all these proofs will be clear.

THE LIVING WORD

By S. Roxana Wince

No. 6

In our last lesson we saw Athalia, the murderess, slain and her little seven year old grandson set upon the throne of Judah.

But was the living word there still after the wicked, though brief reigns of Jehoram, Ahaziah and Athaliah? It certainly was, for Joash, or Jehoash, as he is called in Kings "did right in the sight of the Lord all his days wherein Jehoida instructed him," and there is no standard of right and wrong in the world from which we can be instructed save that living word. The breaking down of the house of Baal, his altars and his images and the slaying of Mattan the priest of Baal, by the people; the mention made by Joash of the collection that the Levites were required to bring in out of Judah and Jerusalem according to the commandment of Moses the servant of the Lord; the giving of this money by the people that broken places in the house of the Lord might be mended, and spoons and vessels of gold and silver be made to offer withal, to replace those that the sons of Athalia had bestowed upon Baalim; and the offering of burnt offerings continuously all the days of Jehoiada, all go to prove that the book of the law of the Lord still held its place.

But when the wise instructor Jehoiada died, aged one hundred and thirty years, and was buried in the city of David among the kings (an honor not accorded in full to Joash when he came to die) then Joash missing his great teacher, and too weak-minded to stand against the flattering obeisance of the princes of Judah, hearkened to their request that they might be released from attending the temple services and instead worship God in the high places at home, their intention being to serve groves and idols, and give up keeping the commandments of the sacred book, though all of them had rejoiced with the people when the collection was called for and had kept giving till there was enough to set the house of the Lord in his state.

What was the trouble with them, we wonder? Perhaps they thought the journey to Jerusalem was too long to travel over so often, the cost too great, and besides, it was such hard work to do everything the law of God required. If they served idols they could do just as they pleased, and have so many pleasures that were now denied them. It is so easy to go wrong; it takes backbone to go right, and Joash sanctioned their course, and not only sanctioned it, but was so angry with Zachariah, the son of Jehoida, who, when moved by the spirit of God said, "Why transgress ye the commandments of the Lord, that ye cannot prosper?" that he had him stoned to death, though he owed his very life, his crown, his long, peaceful reign—everything he had under God, to Jehoiada and Jehoshebeath.

But the prophetic prayer of the prophet-priest had swift answer. The Lord did "look upon it and require it." War came just as it did in the days of the judges, and as it always does when God's own chosen people give up the imperishable book to serve Baal. Palace and temple were despoiled of their treasures to stay its coming but all in vain. And though the company of Syrians was small that came against Judah, the great Judean host was utterly defeated, and Joash, a helpless sufferer, confined to his bed, was murdered by his own servants "for the blood of the son of Jehoiada."

But I will try hereafter, not to go quite so much into detail, though as far as we have gone it has seemed necessary, that we might have a clearly defined idea of the nature of the seemingly overwhelming forces that the people, the book and the king must overcome before they can come into their own.

Idolatry, that is the distinguishing mark of every soldier in the armies that oppose the people and the book. The people of Israel were set in the world to keep the book, and to fight its battles through flood and flame to the bitter end. Whenever this God-appointed task was shirked and the worship of the Lord was set aside for the worship of idols, then God, to turn them back to the way of peace and joy, met them with the sword, with defeat, with cruel bondage, with poverty so dire, that not a sword could be forged, not a plowshare sharpened in all the land of Judah. It seemed to be the only way to teach them where to look for deliverance. But how many times, how many precepts, how many prophets, how many scourgings it took to keep even a few of them loyal to the living word that they and it might not perish, and all hope for the world die out! How stiff-necked, how slow of heart to believe they were!

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the preeds of this fund.

EDITORIAL

We offer congratulations to Brother and Sister Tabor for a son born to them Tuesday morning, June 19th.

In the day's mail comes a letter informing us of the death of Sister Louisa Corbaley. We take this means to call attention to the communication in this issue.

We are sorry that The Restitution of June 12th was folded wrong, and as a consequence was stapled wrong. If readers will remove the staples with a knife and reverse the pages, then put the staples back, the paging will be correct.

JOURNEY JOTTINGS

On Tuesday, June 12th, the Editor left Cleveland for Salem, O. In due time we arrived there and went to the home of Brother and Sister Wm. Coy, where we were "at home" during our stay in the city. Brother and Sister Coy are among "the excellent of the earth," and what added to the pleasure of our sojourn with them was the company of their bright and interesting boys, one of whom is already an intelligent, obedient believer, and a second ought to be. In the afternoon we wended our way to the home of Brother and Sister D. C. Robison, the evangelists, known in many parts of the United States, as they have traveled very extensively. Where they are unknown personally Brother Robison is known by his writings, as he is a regular contributor to The Restitution. We regret to report that his indisposition, mentioned before in our pages, continues. We pray that the approach of summer may be friendly to his recovery, not only for his own sake but also for the sake of the truth, as Salem badly needs his competent ministerial ability.

Tea over, a meal decidedly of a "southern" type, which Sister Robison had prepared to humor us, and which was much appreciated, we betook ourselves to the church which is next door to Brother Robison's, and where we met a good sized audience for Salem. Meetings were held on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, and the attendance and interest quite satisfied the brethren and sisters. The fact is there are several cases of interest there which promise obedience soon. We had most edifying visits with Brother and Siser Buckman and their son, Carey; Brother and Sister Owen Pottorf, including Sister Ella Knowles, who lives with them; Sister John F. Moore, who, we regret to say, is sick abed; and Brother and Sister Townsend and a Mr. Hart, who lives with them. Mr. Hart is one of the interested friends of whom we have spoken. He has learned and accepted all the truth except baptism. We sat up till one o'clock in the morning discussing the mode of baptism. It is to be hoped that a man so near the kingdom of God as Mr. Hart will not long "halt between two opinions" (1 Kings 18:21) on a question so easily settled by an appeal to the oracles of God.

Saturday morning we said good bye to the people of God in Salem, and we were off for Canton, O. Arriving there we went to "The Repository," a paper published there, where Brother W. C. Heacock is employed as cashier. Our call "surprised" Brother Heacock, as he did not know we were in the city. He was having trouble with his eyes, but was able to work; and he sent us to his home so we could unload our grip and have dinner. Sister Heacock took us "in," and after dinner, in company with Brother Heacock as guide, we started upon the work we had come to Canton to do. Sister Moses had moved from Cleveland to Canton, and we soon found her. Then there was a Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Rader, a young married couple who wanted to be taught the truth preparatory to baptism, and we found them. Sunday morning came and a little company assembled at the home of Brother Heacock— Sister Moses and her husband; Mr. and Mrs. Rader; Brother and Sister Heacock and ourselves. We had a lesson designed to perfect Mr. and Mrs. Rader in an understanding of the kingdom of God; and this was followed by the breaking of bread when four of us partook of the Lord's supper. It was a great pleasure to Brother and Sister Heacock to find that they can now have a little weekly meeting to keep the feast of the Lord's passover. Tuesday came and duties at home required our attention; so we had to say good bye again. We shall never say good bye in Eden—thank God.

COMMUNICATIONS

"They shall make known unto you all things which are done here" (Col. 4:9).

Dear Restitution:

I am in arrears on the subscription to our beloved paper; and send many thanks for continuance of same to my address. Circumstances have intervened to hinder earlier renewing.

The words of cheer our beloved paper heralds to its anxious readers are sublime; strengthening our faith-bound hearts in the soon coming Master and King, who is so soon to be glorified in his saints. May our Father strengthen your care worn hands in dispnesing the strenuous work in the effort to give us the best that human minds can produce, to keep us in the narrow way till Jesus comes to reign.

Bless his holy name. Yours in the most holy faith, R. M. Reynolds.

Mr. Robert G. Huggins:

Dear Sir: As Mrs. Duggins is not home, who wrote about Mrs. Corbaley, I am taking the liberty of writing in her place, to let you know that Mrs. Louisa Corbaley has passed away.

The end came peacefully and without pain after being bedfast for about two months. She reached the age of 84 years, 2 months and 15 days.

Please print this so no money will be sent her as she does not need it now.

Yours respectfully, Mrs. H. Hobbs, Bangor, Cal

Remarks

During the month of May quite an interest has developed at some points. Brother Dixon of Kennard is now rejoicing in hope. This Brother said he heard me preach twenty-two or twenty-three years ago, and at that time tell that we were approaching a world war; and now, he said it is here just as you predicted. Who can doubt the truth of the statement, in the face of the fact that the whole orthodox world has been preaching no more, but that all troubles would be settled peacefully by council of nations and that the world was getting better. We have told the opposite tale; now who has told the truth? In whom should the people put the most confidence? Why not be honest like Brother Dixon and be convinced by the facts?

Here I would like to say a few words with reference to the cry of peace, but am so pressed for time at this writing that I must defer it until later, and if the Lord wills shall have something to say on that subject. The time has come when it is quite possible that the preaching of the gospel to the world is a secondary matter. It is still a duty, but the most important thing is for the bride to get her clothes ready to slip on at a moment's warning, for the wedding day is approaching.

Nevertheless the real day and hour of that event has not been announced. We read of many engagements where it is said the wedding will take place in the spring, or early fall, and many like statements, without stating the day because that is left to a later time. Just so we are expecting Jesus to set the day for the wedding; and the bride should be ready, when the announcement comes, to put on her garments. Let us be on the watch for great events.

Almus Adams.

OBITUARY

Peter G. Woalf

Brother Woalf prominent farmer and pioneer of Clarke County, Washington, died June 3rd, 1917, at his home near Lake Shore, at the age of seventy-one years.

Brother Woalf came to this county in 1881 from Clarke County, Iowa. He was born in Jackson Co., Ohio, and lived there until 1854 when he moved to Iowa. Brother Woalf was a successful farmer and a good citizen, and did much toward developing the County, clearing away the heavy timber to make his home where he reared his family. In the year 1863 he married Miss Margaret E. Harsh who survives him.

He is survived by two sons, seven daughters, twenty-four grandchildren and six greatgrandchildren. The sons are, J. W. Woalf of Felida and J. E. Woalf of Vancouver, Wash. The daughters are, Mrs. Ida Melrvin of Tacoma; Mrs. H. A. Knapp of Camar; Mrs. W. J. Byran of Seattle; Mrs. Douglas Capler; Mrs. W. H. McFarland of Vancouver; Mrs. Frank Carman of Felida. He leaves also three brothers, J. B. and M. Woalf of Felida: T. G. Woalf of Fairview, Oregon; and one sister, Mrs. J. C. Nargent of Felida, Wash.

Brother Woalf learned the truth under the preaching of J. M. Stephenson in Iowa when a boy and became associated with the church of God at Felida, Wash., under the ministry of W. A. Prosser some thirty years ago. It was partly through him that Brother Prosser came into the Felida neighborhood.

Six grandsons acted as pall-bearers and six granddaughters as honary pall-bearers carrying the flowers. Services were conducted by the writer and we laid Brother Woalf away in the cemetery seven miles north of Vancouver to await the soon coming of the Master.

A. W. Darby.

THE ONLY WAY

One of the greatest difficulties we have to contend with in presenting the truth to unbelievers is the fact that most people believe that if they live a clean and moral life they will be saved. We continually hear the remark: "Oh, as long as I do what is right I shall have as good a chance as anyone."

You will notice that this class look upon the future as a lottery, and are far from having the spirit that Peter had when he said, "Give diligence to make your calling and election sure" (2 Pet. 1:10). Again, the saying, "as long as I do what is right," is very vague. How do they know what is right if they have not studied God's word? These same people consider it necessary to understand and obey the laws of their country, because if they do not they know they will be punished; and yet they treat with contempt God's laws, which are far above and more important than man's laws. The only standard of right doing that we can rely on with perfect confidence is the Bible, which is God's true and unalterable word, and contains the only reliable information on the subject of salvation. Therefore any one who depends upon his own definitions of right and wrong, is travelling upon the broad way to destruction. Jesus in the sermon on the Mount says: "Enter ye in at the straight gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat; because straight is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it" (Matt. 7:13,14).

These worldly people who look upon their own right doing as sufficient for salvation, do not realize what they are losing by not reading God's word. Paul tells us, "Not that we are sufficient of ourselves, to think anything as of ourselves, but our sufficiency is of God" (2 Cor. 3:5). Does this look as if our self-made standards of right will amount to anything before God? The Lord says in Isaiah, "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts" (Isa. 55:8,9). And again, the same prophet tells us: "All nations before him are as nothing, and they are counted to him less than nothing and vanity' (Isa. 40:17). Surely this will prove to anyone who has a desire for salvation, that a knowledge of God's law is absolutely essential, and can only be obtained through that source. It is difficult to get people to recognize their own impotence, and put themselves in subjection to God's will, but we must remember that if we are to reap a reward we must also do some sowing; and in these last days it is very necessary that we should do our utmost to spread the truth. "For the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not" (Luke 12:40). And so let us remember the Master's words: "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work" (John 9:4).

There is another class of people who claim to be Christians that are still more difficult to approach; these are the ones who profess to know God and who are all the time preaching the serpent's lie that has been so prevalent ever since Adam sinned. It is very remarkable how they cling to error. There are over two hundred so-called Christian creeds, and each one claims to be right, but they are all groping about in the dark. The prophet says: "For behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people" (Isa. 6:2), and so prophecy is being fulfilled before our eyes. The churches of Christendom are preaching today "Patriotism to the Republic of the U. S.," instead of "Patriotism to the Kingdom of God." The fact is, the religious world does not understand what the kingdom of God is and so naturally they do not preach it. They are striving for something that they cannot clearly define. Unless any one has a clear idea of what they want to attain they will never gain much. There is only one way to obtain eternal life, but their ways are too numerous to mention. Jesus said: "Verily I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber" (John 10:1). And again he says: "Strive to enter in at the straight gate, for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in and shall not be able" (Luke 13:24). This is absolute proof that there is "only one way" to gain salvation, and that is by understanding and following God's commands; and the only way to obtain that knowledge is to read His Book, for without his guidance we can do nothing. Christ said, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him" (John 6:44). So let us try and spread abroad this glorious gospel of the kingdom. "For in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee" (1 Tim. 4:16).

A. E. Griffiths.

A man's character is frequently treated like a grate—blackened all over first to come out the brighter afterwards.

THOUGHTS ON SECOND PSALM

"Why do the heathen (nations) rage?" Rage results from opposition to either individual or national designs. The present international slaughter is truly the raging of the nations, though we opine not the raging spoken of in this Psalm. Like Matthew when he says, "Then was fulfilled that spoken by the prophet." Events remind us of a certain prophetic utterance, though not primarily the event referred to. This second Psalm will doutless have its fulfillment when the events of chapter 14 of Revelation are being enacted; when the Lamb stands on Mount Zion, and with him the one hundred and forty-four thousand redeemed ones, soon to be manifested as the Lion of the tribe of Judah. When the Jews shall have returned to the land of their fathers, and acquired wealth, the Gog power, with his confederates will invade Palestine and succeed in capturing and sacking the city of Jerusalem. Then it is that the Lord with his chosen ones will appear on the scene, for it is written: "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east." Then the Lord will fight against that host with an overflowing rain, great hailstones, fire and brimstone, and with pestilence; for a burning fever will consume their tongues in their mouth, and their flesh while they stand on their feet, and burn out their eyes. Also a maddening pain will cause every man's sword to be turned against his brother. And as the above plagues on the men so will it be on the beasts, causing them to trample down their riders. Judah also shall fight. The result being that five-sixths of that great army will be destroyed. The remainder will retreat, doubtless pursued and harassed by the Jews. When the pursuit ceases, and they have time to canvass the situation they will rage to think that they have been so signally defeated by such insignificant opponents.

Proclamation will have gone forth—the angel flying in mid-heaven—the heaven ruling power that has just been enthroned on Mount Zion, and the heaven of the nations not yet yielding obedience to the new power Jesus and the saints, calling on the nations to submit; and offering amnesty and peace to such as will comply with the terms, unconditional surrender (Rev. 14: 1,6,7; Psa. 2:10-12). This is too humiliating to their pride. They meditate a vain thing. They call a council of the nations form a coalition, muster an army, and set themselves against the Lord and against his anointed for the purpose of breaking their bands asunder and resist every attempt to subdue, or be reconciled to his righteous rule. The Lord will smile at their endeavours, for he knows that the Father has set him on his holy hill of Zion, and at his request the nations will be given to him for an inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for a possession, to be ruled with the iron hand of justice, or be dashed in pieces like a potter's vessel.

Now is the opportunity to exercise wisdom. Those who receive instruction serve with fear, and rejoice with trembling, putting their trust in him, will be blessed. When all nations shall have been subdued, and come under the benign rule, and render willing and grateful service to the Lord, then will the curse that had been laid on the earth on account of sin, be removed. The seasons will be propitious; the earth will yield her increase; correct hygiene will prolong life; good-will among men and beasts will promote happiness; worship in spirit and in truth will be accepted of Deity; and the knowledge and fear of the Lord will fill the earth even as the waters cover the seas, and all men shall be blessed in him, and all nations shall call him blessed, and daily shall he be praised. With what longing desire, with what burning zeal should we pray, "Even so, come Lord Jesus; come quickly."

S. T. Blessing.

HOLLOW GLADNESS

The prodigal fed the swine but went hungry himself. Samson made sport for the Philistines, but his own soul was in bitterness and anguish. A man who was seeking medical advice for the relief of settled melancholy, being ordered to visit the play-house and amuse himself with the performances of a certain actor whose words kept everybody in a roar, mournfully replied that he was that very actor himself!

What hosts of empty, weary, aching hearts are hidden beneath costly robes, gay adornings, and fair faces.

"Underneath the sunniest smile
There lurks the saddest heart."

People who cannot deceive themselves often think to deceive others by the semblance of joy, and they sometimes succeed; but an anointed eye can see the skeleton grinning above the feasts, and the ear gifted with spiritual discernment can detect the hollow mockery of that laughter of fools, which is "like the crackling of thorns under a pot."

Hypocritical mirth, to a sensitive and discerning mind, is full of horror and ghastliness; and when the forces of nature, which, if honestly employed, might help to build up the stricken soul and heal its wounds, are exhausted in an empty and pretentious parade of carelessness, indifference and mirth, the foundations of vitality are sapped, the inward anguish of the wounded spirit is only intensified and finally health and strength give way, and the poor victim of hidden grief and hypocritical gladness dies as a fool dieth.

Solomon said of laughter "It is mad," and much of the mirth of the godless and worldly is an insane recklessness which seeks to hide real anguish under the mockery of pretentious mirth. Let us be honest in our joys as well as in our sorrows. Let us put away sham, and hypocrisy, and hollowness, and live a real life. Let no smirking smile tell a lying tale of simulated happiness, but let our lives be true and faithful, as in the sight of him who searcheth the hearts and trieth the reins of the children of men.—Common People.

ANTI-CHRIST

In the holy writings we find Anti-christ as in Dan. 7:8 a horn on the head of the fourth beast; showing that he is a phase, or a part of the Roman empire. He has his rise after, and among the ten horns that the empire was divided into by the invasion of the Goths and the Vandals in the fifth century of our era. The reader will notice that after the rise of this horn, that he monopolizes the business of the empire to the end. Daniel says, verse 11: "I beheld then because of the great words which the horn spake: I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body given to the burning flame." We are not informed how soon after the division of the empire into the ten kingdoms that the Anti-christ arose, but about A. D. 610 Phocus, the emperor, acknowledged the bishop of Rome as the head of the Christian churches, and soon after that, if not before, he plucked up by the aid of the emperor, three of the first horns by the roots (verse 8). That this horn is the Anti-christ we learn by verses 21 and 22: "I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." If this persecutor of the saints is not Anti-christ, who is he?

The three horns that he plucked up were three of the ten, that were Arian in faith and therefore obnoxious to Anti-christ. It will be seen that this horn makes war on all opposition to his own power, for the purpose of exalting himself. This is evident by the "great words" that he speaks. Paul notices this power prophetically in 2 Thess. 2:4: "Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. And now ye know what withholdeth that he may be revealed in his time." See Dan. 7:8. "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let (or hinder) until he be taken out of the way." Paganism was in the way, but when that was removed, then the papacy soon showed his exalting disposition.

The duration of Anti-christ's reign is made plain in the Bible. Dan. 7:25 gives it as "a time times and the dividing of time." On the principle of a day for a year in symbolic prophecy, it is 1260 years. The 70 weeks of Dan. 9:24 proves that the day-year interpretation is correct. The same period and the same power is referred to in Rev. 13:5 where he was to continue forty-two months. There is no time left for a future Anti-christ.

Geo. Francis.

"I never jump at conclusions," said the preacher. "No," remarked the elderly member of the congregation, who is very frank, "I have noticed that from your sermons; you reach a conclusion very slowly."

AN EXHORTATION AT THE BREAKING OF BREAD SERVICE

"There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit."

The phrase "in Christ" is of frequent occurrence in the Scriptures, and conveys to our mind an impression of a state or condition of profound importance. Out of Christ, God is a consuming fire to the workers of iniquity.

To be "in Christ" is to be in a condition of perfect security. Hence we read in Isaiah: "A man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." And in view of this, taken in connection with the judgments coming on the ungodly world, how important the entreaty: "Come my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee, hide thyself as it were for a moment until the indignation be overpast; for behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall dissolve her blood and shall no more cover her slain."

Remember, too that the children of Israel were safe from the destroying angel while within their dwellings, whose door-posts were sprinkled by the blood of the Pascal Lamb.

SECRET COMING OF CHRIST
AN INVENTION OF N. H. BARBER

The theory that Christ came secretly in October, 1874, is not original with C. T. Russell. The writer is old enough to remember reading after one N. H. Barber in about 1870 A. D. I believe, who lived in Rochester, N. Y., who taught that Christ would come in October, 1874. When the time passed, as one of his followers told the writer, while at a campmeeting at Springfield, Mass., in 1875, that Mr. Barber was right as to the ending of 2300 years Daniel 8:14, in October, 1874 A. D. But that he was mistaken only in the manner of his coming, which was to be as a thief, secretly to steal away his saints. And, so far as I am informed, that was the beginning of the secret of the rapture theory. I said to my informant: "Do you call my Christ a rogue, sir?" He said: "Well, the Bible says he was to come as a thief." I said: "Yes, he was to come unexpectedly as a thief; but not to steal as a thief." - J. A. Cargile in "Present Truth Messenger."

Many a can-not is a simple will-not!

"May both races forgive us," said the California philosopher "yet, if the lords of Karma grant us our will, we shall in our next incarnation be half Irish and half Hebrew. For the Irishman is happy as long as he has a dollar, and the Hebrew always has it."

Golden Text: 1 Peter 2:9

Friends, in this world of hurry,
And work, and sudden end,
If a thought comes quick of doing
A kindness to a friend,
Do it that very moment!
Don't put it off—don't wait;
What's the use of doing a kindness
If you do it a day too late?—Charles Kingsley.

Youth has charm; manhood shows energy; but it is in age we expect to find dignity

Our late Brother John D. Hodge, the leading member of the Church of God, N. J., whose age was over eighty years, possessed the charm of youth, for he was beloved by everyone with whom he came in contact. He had the energy of manhood, for he went to business every day, doing his work ably and well; each Sunday found him at his place in church, where his clear and active mind was reflected in his well thoughtout exhortations; his willingness and capacity for labor was displayed by him presiding at the organ and always assisting in whatever other work presented itself. The real dignity of age shown from him, for while he never forgot that he was a son of the Most High, and as such, an heir of the kingdom, he always remembered that he was a sinner saved by grace, and so through kindness of heart and gentleness of spirit tried to show others the redeeming love of God in the person of Jesus Christ our Lord.

In the light of the above we beg to ask, when is youth? and when is age?

Brother Hodge when asked the cause of his youthfulness replied, "I never allow my mind to dwell on the things of the past, for I live in the present for the future."

The Early Church

What were the characteristics of the early church, as noted in our today's golden text that made the members peculiar? and should these characteristics mark the church of today?

1. They were followers and disciples of Jesus Christ as an intimate, personal Savior.

2. They were called Christians. The church was simply spoken of as "the church" or "the churches of Christ" or the "church of God."

3. The ordinance of baptism was administered upon repentant believers as an initiative rite.

4. They met together on the first day of the week for "breaking of bread, exhortation and prayer."

5. They believed from the heart all things that God had said unto them through the medium of the prophets, his Son Jesus and the apostles.

6. They believed that "Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God."

7. They also believed that his kingdom was to be established on this earth, and for the purpose of establishing this kingdom "he would appear a second time, without sin unto salvation."

8. Believing he would come, they constantly watched for him, so living that he would not be ashamed of them.

9. They gave as the Lord had prospered them, and believed that he loved a cheerful giver.

10. They were a missionary people, going everywhere speaking of "the way" and preaching "the word."

11. They parted of their goods and gave to those who had not.

12. The result: "They praised God and had favor with all the people, and the Lord added daily to the church."

Question: What would be the result today, if all church going people did as above?

Tomorrow

"Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof" (Matt. 6:34).

I have nothing to do with tomorrow,
The Creator will make it his care;
Should he fill it with trouble or sorrow,
He will help me to suffer and bear.

I have nothing to do with tomorrow,
Its burdens then why should I share?
Its grace and its strength I can't borrow,
Then why should I borrow its care?

Our Weekly Puzzle

My whole is an article that grows in the field, used as food for man and beast; cooked by itself, beheaded; again beheaded shows the object of cooking; when again beheaded shows a preposition; again beheaded we have a beverage.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. JULY 3, 1917 NUMBER 25

THE TIME IS AT HAND

What though thy sons be sleeping,
Beneath the earth's cold sod;
Yet cease thy wail and weeping,
Church of the living God.

What though on earth thou drinkest
The cup of shame and grief;
'Tis nearer than thou thinkest,
The hour of thy relief.

The Lord on high has risen,
The first born from the dead;
And soon from death's dark prison
The captives shall be led.

Then hush thy tones of sadness,
Thy sackcloth cast aside;
Prepare to meet with gladness
Him raised and glorified.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE TABERNACLE

No. 1

Note.—Much of the following article consists of excerpts from a volume called "Shadow and Substance," by W. H. Walker, of Pittsburg, Pa., to whose high literary ability and scriptural insight we are indebted for many helpful and beautiful suggestions.

"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16,17).

By the passage just quoted we see that no part of the Scriptures can be neglected without our losing something which we need to the perfecting of ourselves for the Christian's battle of life; and we should have the same respect for one part of the revealed will of God, or for any manner of teaching in accordance with that word, as for any other.

We have the best reason for studying the books of Moses in the fact that Jesus himself commanded all to "search the Scriptures"—not search some of the Scriptures, but all the Scriptures. "And beginning at Moses and the prophets, he expounded unto them the things concerning himself" (Luke 24:27).

About one fourth of the book called Leviticus is devoted to the tabernacle services, priesthood or worship, while in Exodus there are several chapters in detail of its construction and ordering of the worship. In the New Testament, the epistle to the Hebrews is a divinely inspired commentary upon these things. Without knowledge of the books of Moses this exceedingly rich and profound exposition of divine truth would be almost meaningless, while with its inspired help, we find every personage, institution and part of the tabernacle illuminated with new light, and Christ in sacred symbolism standing out of the dim past as never before realized.

In all ages divine revelation has been progressive in its nature. At first, man was only able to take in a very partial revelation of God, and the great God of all the earth makes his capacity for receiving the limitation or measure of this revelation of himself. He spoke at sundry times and in divers manners as man was able to comprehend. God was preparing a way for the fuller revelation that he had in store in the fulness of time.

When God spoke to Moses it was from the midst of the cloud and smoke of Sinai. When Moses asked of God, "I beseech thee, show me thy glory," God answered him by putting him into the cleft of the rock and allowing him to see only his back parts (Exod. 33:18-23). This is the only view the law could give of God; with his face away from man, for man had broken God's law, thus becoming a transgressor, subject to the wrath of God—the penalty being death. So when God took up his abode among his people Israel, he hid himself behind the vail in the holiest of all in the tabernacle, "the Holy Spirit thus signifying that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest" (Heb. 9:8).

God has now in effect, come out to man in the person of Christ, and we are invited to behold his glory in the face of Jesus Christ, and even to enter into the holiest of all by faith in our great high priest, by whose sacrifice and mediation we are purged from our sins and so may worship the Father in spirit and in truth. The tabernacle helps us to understand many passages in the New Testament which would otherwise convey little or no meaning. The figures used by the Holy Spirit to convey the fuller truth to our minds have their origin in the Old Testament symbolism of the tabernacle. In its revelation we find those principles of righteousness and grace, according to which intercourse could be yet maintained with a sinful and rebellious people.

The voice of God from the Mount was so terrible that the people requested that they might not hear it again only through a Mediator (Exod. 20:19). God then retired into the sacred enclosure of the tabernacle—a testimony on the one hand of the sin of man, and on the other, of the rich grace of God. Though man had become unfit for God, yet he was disposed to help him up again to the level where he might approach God on the principle of grace, based on perfect righteousness. Thus, around the thick darkness and gloom of Sinai, these premonitions--these foreshadowings of grace--were permitted to shine forth to a rebellious people. In the very place where the offence abounded, grace did much more abound, and shadows of good things to come were to be seen (Rom. 5:21).

The pattern of the tabernacle was given to Moses by God—nothing was left for the wisdom of Moses to supply. "See thou make it according to the pattern shown thee in the Mount," is the command no less than five times recorded, and seven times the record says, "Moses did according to the commandments of the Lord," that is, in reference to the setting up of the tabernacle.

We must remember that these things were patterns of things in the heavens (Heb. 8:5), and were shadows of good things to come; therefore a minuteness of detail and great care were necessary. The pattern must agree with the things pointed to, or a change in the things themselves is implied.

In Exod. 25:1-8 we have a record of God's command to build: "Speak unto the children of Israel that they bring me an offering; of every man that giveth willingly with his heart ye shall take an offering." Then are specified the matials required. God required that the offerings for the building of the tabernacle should be given voluntarily by the people--they were not taxed for its cost or for its maintenance afterward---according to their means as the measure of the requirement. How quickly and how willingly they responded, so that Moses had to ask them to stay their gifts when enough, and more than enough had been given. What an example of open handed, large hearted liberality we find in this conduct of Israel. Sometimes we are inclined to feel a little self-satisfied and something akin to pride for what we call our advanced light and greater privileges, but lest we forget that the proportion of those blessings is the measure of responsibility, let us each ask ourselves the question, "Have I yielded to God a corresponding consecration of myself and all I possess?" There are some Christians who give one-tenth of all they have to God and thus satisfy themselves like Jacob of old. There are many more perhaps that do not give that much, but leaving them out of the question for the present we say, But what about the nine-tenths? Is the answer Christ-like that says in effect, "Oh, that is for ourselves?" The idea that this belongs to me, and that belongs to God, needs to be gotten rid of by all who profess his name and hope in his coming.

Trusting that the time already occupied has not been unprofitably spent, I will pass from general to particular truths concerning the tabernacle. The tabernacle was a tent--that being the meaning of the Hebrew word. All Israel were dwelling in tents in the wilderness, and Jehovah came down to their condition. This seems to be the first suggestion of "Immanuel" or God with us—the title given Jesus by inspiration through the prophet Isaiah (7:14). Moses in Exod. 15 had spoken of preparing an habitation for God. That tabernacle was the dwelling place of Jehovah and not the dwelling place of the people.

The tabernacle was a sanctuary. See Exod. 25:8,9; 29:45: "And let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them. According to all that I show thee, after the pattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it. And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God."

It was a holy place for a holy God and a holy people. It was set apart for sacred purposes and its courts could only be traversed by holy feet. It was the place of worship for Israel. Its outer court, holy place and most holy place, represent the different degrees of nearness to God in the progressive life of this people and each person individually as well, showing again the progressive nature of God's revelation of himself and his plan of salvation.

The Levites entered the court only, the priests the holy place, and the high priest the most holy place once a year, and that not without the shedding of blood. But thanks be to God for his abundant mercy and grace that through the blood of Jesus Christ the great High Priest and Mediator of the New Covenant, we have liberty at all times to enter into the holiest of all, and may there worship in spirit and truth.

As a sanctuary it must be reverenced (Lev 19:30).

As a sanctuary it became a sacred shelter or refuge (Psa. 61:1-4). David says: "Hear my cry, O God; attend unto my prayer. From the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed; lead me to the rock that is higher than I. For thou hast been a shelter for me, and a strong tower from the enemy. I will abide in thy tabernacle forever. I will trust in the covert of thy wings.' In many other of David's Psalms we find its beauty and strength extolled—reference to it as a place to learn God's ways—a place of praise and a place of help.

Honest Money.—A bankrupt and disgraced promoter of fraudulent schemes; during the days of his seeming prosperity and while he was mak- lavish displays of great wealth, presented the famous cathedral of St. Paul, in London, with a communion service of solid gold which cost $125,000. Since then it has come to be known that this man was a shameless fraud, and that his money was filched from his dupes by cunning schemes. The trustees of the cathedral have, with a commendable sense of honor, returned the full cost of the communion service received by them to the scoundrel's creditors; in that way they have kept their hands clean and stainless. It would be a good thing if every Christian business man would thus hold himself clear of every possible connection with dishonest money.

TWO EXTREMES REFUTED

No. 14

Other Objections Answered

One very friendly critic, and one whose honesty I cannot doubt, offers several objections to what we have previously written, and gives a few texts in an effort to disprove our position. He says: "Paul plainly states that as in Adam, or through the disobedience of Adam, all die, even so by or through the obedience of Christ, all shall be made alive" (1 Cor. 15:22). While to us Paul does not plainly state what this objector says he does, yet he does say, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." But does "all" men mean the aggregate of the human race in this passage? Will every individual of the human race die? Let Paul answer: "Behold I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed; in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we (who do not die) shall be changed" (1 Cor. 15:51,52). "We which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air," etc. (1 Thess. 4:15-17). Does Paul contradict himself? If not, the word "all" here is used in a limited sense: for all do not die, and as those who do not die will not be made alive, all will not be made alive in an unlimited use of the word. But how do I know that some will not die? Because God says so; then because God says some of the dead will not live again, I know that not only those that do not die will not be made alive; but those also; and that fact is positive proof that the word "all" is here used in a limited sense.

Again, this critic overlooks the fact that the word "in" is used instead of by, or through, as he puts it; and he never can show a single passage that states any one but Christians are in Christ, and that makes the last clause of our text refer to them, and them only, as does all other parts of this chapter. The resurrection of the righteous is the only resurrection alluded to in First Corinthians fifteen, and is a resurrection to incorruptibility and immortality.

We are then referred to Rom. 14:10,11: "But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at naught thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For it is written, As I live saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." Our critic then asks, "How shall we give account of ourselves, and the tongue confess, and the knee bow, if we are not resurrected?" Now let us notice the word "we." Who is represented in this epistle by that pronoun "we"? Perhaps that will throw some light on the text. "We are slanderously reported" (3:8). "We conclude that a man is justified by faith" (3:28). "Shall we continue in sin" (6:1)? "We are buried with him in baptism" (6:4). "We should also walk in newness of life" (6:4). We have been planted in the likeness of his death. "We shall be in the likeness of his resurrection" (6:5). "If we be dead with Christ." "We shall also live with him" (6:8). Now come to our chapter: "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. For whether we live we live unto the Lord; and whether we die we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore or die, we are the Lord's." Follow now the word "us" through this epistle, and you will find it used to represent baptized believers, as the word "we," and shows who Paul is speaking of. Now when we speak of sinners he calls them "they" and "them" (ch. 1). Then the "we" who are mentioned by Paul are the people to whom he is writing and himself, and no person with whom I am acquainted doubts that that class will be manifested before the judgment seat of Christ, and every one of us (the church, the Lord's people) shall give account of himself to God." "Let us (does the us here refer to the ignorant dead?) therefore not judge one another any more."

But will not every knee bow before Jehovah, and every tongue confess him? So says our dear correspondent, and they cannot minus a resurrection, therefore he thinks all will be raised. Paul states Jesus "must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet, and the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Then other enemies besides death are to be destroyed, and if we can find who they are we can see what is to be put under his feet. Mal. 4:1-3 says all the wicked are to be destroyed, and Paul says they that have sinned without law shall perish without law; and Obadiah says of the heathen, "they shall be as though they had not been;" and that includes enough this far. Now who are those that are to bow and confess? "And every creature which is in heaven, and on earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb for ever and ever" (Rev. 5:13). Now does the "every creature" who renders this praise include the wicked who are to be destroyed, the heathen who are to be as though they had not been, and those who are to perish without law? If not, then "ever" is used again in a limited sense, and does not include every individual of the human race, and if it includes the wicked, and heathen, and ignorant, then they are not destroyed, and God has spoken many foolish things, or words without meaning. But God says of the horse, chariot and army, no doubt of the Egyptians who perished in the Red Sea: "They shall lie down together, they shall not rise; they are extinct, they are quenched as tow" (Isa. 43:17). The word "extinct" means exterminated, or being no longer in existence (Stand. Dic.). Then the dead heathen are no longer in existence, and, hence their knees are not any longer knees, nor do their tongues exist any more; and as they "shall not rise" they never will exist again, and the "every tongue" and "every knee," can only allude to those that are responsible, just as the "every creature" in Revelations alludes to the glorified throng, after all sinners have ceased to be creatures, and millions of the lower creatures as well have become extinct, and perhaps none of them will ever say anything like what the "every creature" here is represented as saying, but only glorified human beings or creatures will be the speakers, with the angels perhaps; and that shows clearly the limited use of the word "every." God says of ignorant professors, "But these speak evil of the things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves. Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core. These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about with winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever" (Jude 10-13). But some are so afraid that our ignorant religious neighbors will not have another opportunity that we will not quote further; but with Jude leave them in "the blackness of darkness for ever," and give the fair chance advocates an opportunity to get them in the light, against the "thus saith the Lord." They must excuse us for believing God rather than them.

THE COMING OF CHRIST

W. B. Townsend

"And when he had spoken these things, while they yet beheld, he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven, as he went up, behold two men stood by them in white apparel, which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Jesus' disciples were assured by the angels that he would return to earth again in person, as he had left the earth. Jesus himself said in John 14, "I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." In Matt. 25:31: "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory."

The Bible is full of proof that Jesus is coming to this earth again, but when is he coming, and for what purpose? Jesus says, "The day or the hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels in heaven, but my Father only." He has given us signs whereby we may know approximately, for he says, "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." And Paul, in the 5th chapter of 1st Thess. says: "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you; for yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, peace and safety, then cometh sudden destruction upon them; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." It is those that are not looking for him that will be overtaken as a thief. Beloved, we know by the condition of things at the present day, that the Lord may appear at any time. But of more importance than the time, is the duty of keeping ourselves unspotted from the world, to be accepted of him when he comes.

For what purpose is he coming? We will have to go to the Scriptures for an answer, for we can find it nowhere else. Paul says in Heb. 9:28: "Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." We see by this statement that only those who look for him will receive salvation. In John, 5th chapter, we read: "For as the Father has life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of Man. Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth, they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." And Paul in Phil 3:20,21 says: "For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." And Matt. 16:27: "For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with the angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works." This is positive proof that we do not receive our reward at death, as the majority of people teach. He is coming to see that God's will is done in the earth as it is in heaven, which we know is far from being done now. In Num. 14:21 God said to Moses: "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Zech. 14:9: "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth; in that day there shall be one Lord, and his name one." The 72nd Psalm beautifully describes the condition of things in the coming age: "In his days shall the righteous flourish, and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the rivers unto the ends of the earth." May the time soon come, is my earnest prayer.

A comic song may be on the tongue when there is a funeral dirge in the soul.

DEATH

Death is extinction or cessation of life; a total and permanent cessation of all the vital functions. Death is not life; neither is it a spiritual birth, neither is it a separation of life from death; for in death all life is extinct, put out, no longer existing. We are amused at Cruden's effort to explain what death signifies:

1st. The separation of the soul from the body, and he quotes Gen. 25:11 to prove it: "And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed his son Isaac." Does Cruden claim that Abraham was the body, and Isaac the soul? There are two souls there, one is dead, the other alive. Believe Scripture instead of Cruden. He claims this is a temporal death, pertaining to time, especially to this life or world. Paul says the things which are seen, are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal (2 Cor. 4:18).

2nd. He calls it a spiritual death, and quotes Luke 1:79.

3rd. He calls this the eternal death (Rev. 2:11). To all these kinds of death, Adam made himself and his posterity liable by transgressing the commandment of God in eating the forbidden fruit. For his transgression God said to Adam, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground: for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19). God here declares that Adam shall return to the place that he was taken from, which was the ground. Does he return alive? No. The return to dust places him back in the state he was in before God formed him in his own likeness. And the Scriptures declare that such are dead. "They shall lie down alike in the dust, and worms shall cover them. He shall be brought to the grave and remain in the tomb" (Job. 21:26,32). "Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to dust (Psa. 104:29). "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish" (Psa. 146:4; Eccl. 3:19,20; 12:7). "In death there is no remembrance of thee" (Psa. 6:5). So if death ends all, then when our life's course is run we are forgotten forever. But does death end all life? Yes; all of this present life. Is there any that will live again? Yes: "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord" (Rev. 14:13). Who is it that dies in the Lord? All that are baptized into Christ. Who are baptized into Christ? All those who believe and obey the gospel message that Paul preached. Job asked the question: "If a man die shall he live again?" If he dies in the Lord, yes; if he dies in Adam, no. Those that die in the Lord, how do they come to live again? By a resurrection. "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead" (1 Cor. 15:21,22). This is a recreation of the man that returned to dust. He was a flesh-and-blood man, and if not responsible to the law of the gospel, he will remain in the congregation of the dead (Prov. 21:16). "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God" (1 Cor. 15:50). The ones led by the spirit of God are the sons of God. And as Christ was raised to a spiritual life and can never die, so all those that are Christ's will be raised to a life that never ends. Then death hath no more dominion over them. Search the Scriptures; learn the way of life; and quickly be baptized into Christ; and though we die, we have the promise of living again.

ZIONISTS GIVE $473,000 FOR PALESTINE FUND

Brandeis Urging U. S. Support is Given Ovation

Baltimore, June 24.—A total of $473,000 was pledged tonight at the twentieth annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists toward a fund of $1,000,000 to equip an industrial army to go to Palestine and prepare the way for its occupation by Zionists after the war.

Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the United States supreme court pledged $10,000, while Mrs. Joseph Fels of Philadelphia pledged $20,000. San Francisco Zionists guaranteed $35,000 and Ohio members $35,000.

A great ovation to Justice Brandeis as he came upon the stage of the convention hall featured the opening session. The cheering continued ten minutes.

Rabbi Stephen A. Wise exhorted the convention in the name of Justice Brandeis to serve the country "with all your hearts, minds, and strength."

Over 1,000 delegates registered.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In speaking of the opinions recently expressed by an "advanced" woman, to the effect that wedding rings are "relics of barbarism when women were men's chattels, Rev. E. A. Cutler, of Milwaukee, Wis. said: "This might be true of a ring in the nose but not of a ring on the finger. Objection to the wedding ring is another phase of the revolt against the divine institution of marriage in certain quarters." Wedding rings are symbols of love and sacrifice and men should wear them, too, he said.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

EDITORIAL

By removal from Geneva, Ohio we have gained Brother and Sister Harry Stroud, and Sister Viola, their daughter.

Two brethren Miller, from Hagerstown Md., have found employment in Cleveland, and we understand that their mother, who is also in the truth, will soon join them.

Brother and Sister Townsend, Sister Ella Knowles, and Mr. Hart, an interested friend, of Salem, Ohio, and Brother B. F. Smith, of Monroeville, Ohio, were visitors June 24th. We are always glad to have brethren and sisters visit us who are sound in the faith.

Sunday, June 24th, after brief comments on the Bible lesson for the day, which was 1 Sam. 15 chapter, and after most beautiful and inspiring selections were rendered by the choir and by Sister H. H. Hawkins and Sister Helen Pate, Mrs. Alice Smith, formerly Baptist, wife of Brother B. F. Smith, was baptized. Sister Smith has a large acquaintance among the brethren and sisters, and they will doubtless receive this report of her obedience to the truth with appreciation and gratitude.

Dating June 1st, S. M. Tobey requests contributors to write articles on being born of God.

We lose this week the company of Sister Murray, her son and daughter, Raymond and Dorothy, and also Brother Gardy, by removal to Unionville, Ohio.

Brother Donaldson's copy for "The Young People's Page" was tardy in coming this week, and had to be abridged considerably to get it in this issue. He certainly has given the young people an attractive page this week, as he always does; but to correct any possible misunderstanding in regard to it, and to forestall and neutralize probable criticism by hyper-critics, we wish to say that in an effort to attract the attention of the young, our Brother has no thought or intention of hiding the kingdom of God behind the flag and patriotism of the United States. "That which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God" (Luke 16:15). Yet we may take the flag, politics, patriotism, and many other things which they "highly esteem," and use them as stepping stones to higher and better things. "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee." This is not a flag to kindle national pride and patriotism, and to minister to racial prejudice and hatred (Gal. 3:28). And God has given us this flag to be "displayed because of the truth" (Psa. 60:4). We are aliens and strangers to "the kingdoms of this world" (Rev. 11:15); we are "pilgrims on the earth" (Heb. 11:13). We fear God and he has given us "a banner," the flag of the commonwealth of Israel, the kingdom of God. This is our flag; and we love it more dearly than the world loves theirs, and we are ready to "display" it at every opportunity. If the reader cares to read further remarks on this subject, he may peruse another editorial in this number entitled "The Rage and Meditation of Sinners."

THE RAGE AND MEDITATION OF SINNERS

Psalm 2:1

Having now the historical and prophetical scope of the psalms in mind, we are ready to "rightly divide" (2 Tim. 2:15) them by textual review. "Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" This passage is a monograph of sinners. Who they are is expressed by the words "heathen" and "the people"; and the particular "motions of sins" (Rom. 7:5) of which they were guilty, by the words "rage" and imagine." The thoughts expressed in a sentence cannot be properly comprehended unless we understand all the words used in it. In order therefore to give the reader a "perfect understanding of all things" (Luke 1:3) contained in this text, we invite him to consider

1. The persons meant by "heathen" and "people."

This consideration is an important one, for the reason that usage has stamped upon the word "heathen" a meaning quite different from its original sense. With us a heathen is the most ignorant, the lowest and basest of men; and we always think of them as living in China, or somewhere else, always a long distance from home. But the Hebrew word goi and its corresponding Greek word ethnos (Acts [illegible]:25), translated "heathen," mean "a nation" (2 Cor. 1:26; Gal. 1:16; 3:8). In Matt. 6:7, we have hoi ethnikoi, "those belonging to the nations." Distasteful as it may be to enthusiastic politicians, the word "heathen" is national rather than individual in its meaning. Individually, "the people imagine a vain thing"; nationally, "the heathen (nation, goi) raged." The thought here is, the Lord and his Anointed were opposed by the people as individuals, and by the heathen as nations. Hostility was expressed both individually and nationally. The nation was as guilty of the Lord's death as were the people who composed the nation. How sad it is, what a necrosis it is to every heart throbbing with the love of God shed abroad in it by the Holy Spirit, to see professed brethren of Jesus, the One the world hated and killed, loving the world so much (Jas. 4:4) they are at the polls on election day, pragmatic politicians! Trying to love Jesus and the world at the same time (Luke 16:15)! Trying to "stand in" with two masters! Denouncing individual sinners, shunning the "appearance of evil" so far as immoral impurities go, and yet identified with all this evil in its organized and governmental form! O Consistency, you precious bijou, where are you?

Having noticed the individual and national range of transgression, we must now observe the

2. Manner of their sin.

The word "rage" is from the Hebrew word ragash, and means "to assemble" (Young) Chemah, another Hebrew word translated "rage," means "to have heat, fury, poison." Dangerous waves of the sea are said to be "raging waves" (Jude 13). Nebuchadnezzar when provoked to wrath, performed deeds of cruelty "in rage and fury" (Dan. 3:13). It was when Naaman became "wroth" that he "went away in a rage" (2 Kings 5:11,12). It is when men become full of "heat, fury and wrath" that they burst out in a "rage" of anger. The word "imagine" is from the word hagah, which means "to meditate, utter, mutter." The Greek word logismos, translated "imaginations" in 2 Cor. 5:10, means "reasonings." So when "the people" reasoned and "meditated deceits all the day long" (Psa. 38:12) "against the Lord, and against his Anointed" (Psa. 2:2). "the heathen" (nation) "tumultuously assembled (Psa. 2:1, see margin), and took counsel together (vs. 2). The result was that by "putting their heads together," they succeeded in devising a diabolical plot in the wisdom which is "earthly, sensual, devilish" (Jas. 3:25), and serpentine (Gen. 3:1). With the "heat, fury and poison" of the serpent, they bit the promised seed in the heel (Gen. 3:15)– only inflicting a temporary wound. Within three days God liberated their victim from the power and dominion of death, because he was an "Holy One" (Acts 2:27). "Death has no more dominion over him" (Rom. 6:9); sin cannot "sting" him to death any more (1 Cor. 15:56). He has bruised the serpent on the head, so far as he is personally concerned. Before long he will come and take "the earth for his inheritance" (Psa. 2:8), bind the serpent power a thousand years (Rev. 20), and then give it the fatal blow of extermination. "The God of peace shall bruise satan under your feet shortly" (Rom. 16:20).

COMMUNICATION

"They shall make known unto you all things which are done here" (Col. 4:9).

Dear Restitution:

Will some kind brother or sister please inform me through the columns of this paper how I may purchase an illustrated book of Bible stories for children?

Respectfully, A Sister.

THE TEMPLE OF THE LIVING GOD

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy, for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are" (1 Cor. 3:16,17). Again: "Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge: for some with conscience of the idol unto this hour, eat it as a thing offered unto an idol; and their conscience being weak is defiled" (1 Cor. 8:7).

These verses were suggested to me when it came to my knowledge through personal observation, that some of the brethren of our faith were addicted to the cigarette habit. This ought not to be, for every man who has named the name of Christ, "purifieth himself, even as he is pure."

The use of tobacco in whatever form is unclean and harmful, but how much more harmful it becomes when it is made up into the cigarette, for one of the ingredients of which it is composed, viz., copperas, acts directly on the nerve cells and, in time, destroys self-control. There is no one so ignorant but who is familiar with the dangers lurking in this pernicious habit, as it leads to graver and far more serious evils. Can we picture for a moment our Life Giver and Redeemer going about seeking the lost with a cigarette in his mouth?

If we have been thorough and close students of God's word, if we are true followers of the lowly Nazarene, there would be no question in our minds as to what our attitude should be regarding this and other forms of vice, for how is the world to differentiate between the true and false disciples of Christ, if we bear no earmarks of his discipline and purpose concerning us. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Mark 7:21). We are enjoined to crucify our fleshly lusts and desires (it is the battle with the foes from within which is most difficult to win) so that we may build and perfect character while it is day, for the night soon cometh when no man can work. It is not so much a change of character as nature which we will have at our Lord's appearing, so it behooves us to grow in perfection and grace now, that we may be prepared and worthy to assume the duties assigned us in the future age.

Should there be any doubt as to what he would have us to do on this score? Nay, verily; for we are to be doers of the word, and not hearers only (James 1:22). Self-indulgences, coupled with the allurements of the world, should have no part in our lives; they are destructive and not constructive forces, and lead us away from God. We are free, bought with a price, and these things gender to bondage (1 Cor. 6:19,20). No specific declaration in God's word forbidding these indulgences? Search for these admonitions, for they serve as guides toward the goal to which we are pressing.

Let us as children of the light put on the whole armor of God, so as to overcome these tendencies, bring into subjection the inclinations of the heart and mind, and honor him in all our ways. It is only to the overcomers that eternal life is promised and the blessings of the kingdom bestowed (Rev. 2:7). We must cleanse ourselves, so as to be a fitting abode for the Holy Spirit, ever keeping in mind our high calling in Christ Jesus. "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts, and see if there be any wicked way in me; and lead me in the way everlasting" (Psa. 139:23). May we have no idols to separate us from the love of God as it is in Christ Jesus, but be ready to meet him, when he comes, with our lamps well trimmed and burning. You know there were five wise and five foolish virgins.

Minnie McIlrath.

A PRAYER

Our Father and our God, God and Father of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ: In coming to thee with our prayers and thanksgivings, we acknowledge that all things were created by thee, and that in thee do all things exist: the worlds were framed by thee, and by thy power are they upbuilt upheld and preserved. We thank thee for the many blessings thou hast showered upon us, the sons of men. We thank thee for life, that we can praise thee and do thee homage. We thank thee for health, so we may have strength to work in thy vineyard, honoring thy holy name. We thank thee for clear and sound minds, so we can exercise faith in thy promises and hope in their fulfillment. We thank thee for food and shelter and raiment, so that our bodies may be strengthened and our health preserved, that we may follow in thy way more perfectly. We thank thee for love, that essence of thyself, with which thou doth draw men unto thee, and that we must cultivate, show and use, so the world may see we belong to thee and are thine.

We thank thee that we live in a country, the constitution of which guarantees liberty of life and happiness and freedom to worship thee according to our conscience; and we pray that our conscience may constantly be kept attuned to thy will. We thank thee for the gift of thy love, Jesus the Christ, thine only begotten Son, whom thou didst send to us as a propitiation for our sins. We thank thee that we do believe in him as our sin-bearer, our advocate, our High Priest, our Righteousness, our Salvation and our Redemption; and that in him we have liberty of access unto thee and freedom from sin and the results of sin. We thank thee for our church fellowship, that constantly keeps us in mind of this liberty and freedom, and we pray our hearts may be softened and our minds made more receptive, so we may more fully understand and appreciate what this great liberty and freedom mean to us. We thank thee for the ordinance of baptism, which shows our Lord's obedience unto thee, in that he died, was buried, and was raised again to die no more. And we pray, taking Jesus as our example, that to us it may mean our death to the world and its allurements, being buried, rising to "stand fast in that liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free.

We thank thee for the institution of the Lord's supper; for it vividly brings to our minds the broken body and the shed blood of him who became a prisoner of death, that we, through faith in him, might enjoy liberty and freedom throughout eternity. We thank thee for the promise of the soon return of our Lord, for the purpose of establishing thy kingdom on earth; for we know that under his rule and guidance this liberty and freedom shall be exemplified in its fulness; for purity and righteousness shall abound, and thy love shall be dominant. We pray thee that those of our number who are absent through sickness, may have the comfort of thy spiritual presence, realizing that when the new order of things is instituted they shall be free from pain and suffering; and Father should any be absent through indifference or carelessness, we pray thee that their hearts may be touched by thy spirit of grace, so they may realize and appreciate the liberty and freedom that thou, in thy love hath offered them, in the person of Christ Jesus our Lord. And Father, of those who know not thee, who do not believe in Jesus as thy Son, the Anointed, we pray we may be instruments in thy hand of leading many such to a saving faith in thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord and Redeemer. "For where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty;" and if "thy Son shall make them free, they shall be free indeed." These things we ask in the name of Jesus Christ, to thy glory. Amen.

OBITUARIES

George W. Smith

George W. Smith was born in Vermillion County, Indiana, December 9, 1838. He was the son of James W. and Eliza (Pugh) Smith, and the oldest of a family of eight children. He died June 11, 1917, at his home, aged seventy-eight years, six months, and two days. On February 22, 1862 he enlisted in company K, Indiana Volunteers, and served until the close of the war, lacking only a few days of being out four years.

April 9, 1867, he married Julia A. Jones, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Jones. The marriage took place in Warren County, but they went to housekeeping in Vermillion County, Illinois, upon a farm he had previously purchased. In 1876 they returned to Warren County where they lived until 1903, when they moved to Howard County, near Greentown, where they lived until the time of his death.

Those that survive him are his wife, two children, Ashley R. Smith, of Greentown, Howard County, Ind., and Nettie Smith Evans, of Williamsport, Ind.; three grandchildren, and one brother, Marion Smith, of New Richmond, Ind. Besides these he leaves many friends and business associates.

He had a deep sense of honor, and his ideas of right were firm and of the highest order. He had been a member of the Church of God of Warren County for many years, and lived a faithful Christian life.

Nettie S. Evans.

A short service was held at his home in Howard County and the remains then conveyed to Williamsport by motor car where the regular funeral services were held at the home of his daughter, at 10 o'clock, June 15, 1917. The house was filled with the relatives, brethren, and friends to whom we spoke words of comfort from Rev. 1:18. Many beautiful floral offerings were given in testimony of the high esteem in which Brother Smith was held by those that knew him best. The funeral procession then proceeded to West Lebanon where he was tenderly laid to rest to await the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and his resurrection. For he spoke back from heaven through the beloved apostle John saying, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." And when he comes and uses these keys Brother Smith will be delivered from both the place and the condition of the dead into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

The deceased had been very successful in the acquisition of property in his long business career. He owned some 2900 acres of the best land in Indiana, besides being the largest stockholder in the Williamsport State Bank. He was a large stockholder and president of the First National Bank at Swayzee, Ind., and the possessor of much other property. But this accumulation of property did not turn his head away from the path of rectitude and integrity, nor shake his loyalty to his family and friends, nor seduce him to infidelity to Bible teachings--all of which is the best evidence of his high and substantial character and faith in God.

Robert Sandford Sullivan

Robert Sandford Sullivan was born near Thomasville, North Carolina, January 4, 1846. He departed this life at his home in Attica, Kansas, May 28, 1917, aged seventy-one years, four months, and twenty-four days.

In the year 1870 he moved with his family to Lawrence County, Missouri, living there ten years. He then moved to Harper County, Kansas, locating on a homestead near where the city of Attica now stands. Here he engaged in farming until about the year 1896, when he moved into the city of Attica to engage in the furniture and undertaking business, retiring from same only a few years ago, owing to ill health.

He was married to Martha Younts December 25, 1866. To this union were born seven children, only two of whom are now living; to wit, T. H. Sullivan and Mrs. R. O. Williamson, both residing at Attica, Kansas. He is also survived by his wife, Mrs. Martha Sullivan, two brothers H. L. Sullivan and David Sullivan, of Sturges Ky., and three grandchildren, Ray Clifford Sullivan, Blanche Sullivan, and Donald Williamson, all of Attica, Kansas.

In early manhood he became a member of the church of God. He was taught the precious faith through the teachings of Brother A. F. Servis, who has been asleep for some years. Brother Sullivan and his wife were baptized by Brother James Butt about the year 1875, while living in Lawrence County Missouri. From that time they have been strong in the faith and conscientious supporters of the kingdom. He and the writer were the first ones to introduce in his community the doctrine of the kingdom of God and the coming of the Lord Jesus. The first meeting of any kind held in the new settlement were held by our people. He has ever lived faithful to the truth, not missing a communion meeting since 1883 to the time of his death. At our last meeting, held on the night of April 5th this year, he said that he thought it would not be long until the Lord would return. He was a firm believer in the mortality of man. He believed that the Lord Jesus the Christ will soon come to raise the righteous dead, to change the righteous living, clothing them with immortality and making them partakers of the divine nature. He believed they are to become the sons of God on the divine plane and be joint heirs with him; that they will sit with him on his throne, the dominion of which shall be from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

He died as he had lived, a worthy citizen, a faithful friend, a loving father and husband, a Christian man full of the faith once delivered unto the fathers. Let us of the faith of this community and the brethenr elsewhere so live that we may be ready to meet Brother Sullivan in that bright morn where there will be no more death, neither sorrow nor sighing, where all tears shall have been wiped away, and the whole earth filled with the knowledge and goodness of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

BAPTISMAL SERVICE

At our regular services at Hillisburg Sunday morning, June 17th, Brother Charles H. Lewis requested baptism. Upon his confession of faith we went to the water nearby and immersed him in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. Brother Lewis lives at Colfax, Ind. He and his wife, Alga Lewis, will put their membership into the Hillisburg church. May the Lord bless these good people in this manifestation of an active Christian life. May they achieve all their anticipations of development in their association with the church, and be able to receive the crown of life in the soon coming kingdom.

PROPHECY FULFILLED

"For thus saith the Lord God of Israel unto me: Take the wine cup of this fury at my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it. And they shall drink, and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them. And if they refuse to take the cup at thine hand to drink, then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, ye shall certainly drink" (Jer. 25:15; 16:28).

See if you cannot see an accurate fulfilment of it in the attitude of the U. S. toward the war. First, it was said that it would have nothing to do with it. It determined to stand aloof from the conflict. Jeremiah said that some of the nations would say, "We will not drink of the wine cup of wrath." But God said that they should drink of it So although the U. S. seemed so determined to keep out of the struggle in the beginning they are now in it and drinking of the wine cup of God's wrath. It is just following in the line of events as outlined in the word of God.

Fertilizer Shortage Hits Germans Hard

If all conditions continue favorably Germany can hope for barely a medium harvest owing to the lack of fertilizers, particularly nitrates. "And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth. They shall not be lamented, neither gathered or buried" (Jer. 25:33). We have read where the people were not allowed to lament for their dead, but were forced to appear cheerful "They shall not be buried." Have we not all read how impossible to bury the great number of killed, and so they are placed in great heaps and burned. "They shall be dung (a fertilizer) upon the ground." Listen to this: Refiners on the German-Belgian frontier are now rendering the fats and oils out of the corpses for lubricating purposes, and are shipping the balance of the bones and waste home for fertilizers.—Selected by Flora A. Wood.

HALF UNITED STATES ARE CHURCH MEMBERS

The church population of the United States is only half the total population, according to the figures prepared this year by Dr. H. K. Carroll, religious statistician. His grand total of membership in all the churches of the United States is 40,016,789. "When to this total is added the number of children in the families of church members but not yet enrolled, it is easy to believe that the church population of the country is well over fifty millions," and the total population is now about one hundred millions. The ten largest denominational groups, in order of membership, are:

1.	Roman Catholic	14,330,370
2.	Methodist	7,608,284
3.	Baptist	6,534,132
4.	Lutheran	2,454,334
5.	Presbyterian	2,171,601
6.	Disciples	1,337,450
7.	Protestant Episcopal	1.078,435
8.	Congregational	790,483
9.	Reformed	514,543
10.	United Brethren	366,877

Besides these leading denominations there are some which hardly sound like church names, but they stand for actually existing religious "bodies" nevertheless: Church of God in Jesus Christ, Six-Principle Baptists, Old Two-Seed-in-the-Spirit Predestinarian, Church of God and Saints of Christ, United Zion's Children, Defenseless, Christadelphians, Christian Workers for Friendship, Zion United Apostolic, Church of the New Jerusalem. Hepziba Faith Association, Friends of the Temple, Social Brethren, Church Transcendent.

The Star Spangled Banner

Oh! say can you see by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose stripes and bright stars, thro' the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming;
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there!
Oh! say, does that star spangled banner still wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

On the shore dimly seen thro' the mist of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected, now shines in the stream:
Oh! say, does that star spangled banner yet wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

Be the Information Bureau in Your Own Home

Parents, how do you expect your children to learn rapidly if you become irritated when they ask you questions and turn them off by saying: "Oh, don't bother me. You are too young to know about such things, and you would not understand if I told you."

This is, in effect, an invitation to your child to go to some other source for information.

The natural curiosity of childhood, young womanhood and manhood, unsatisfied in the right way, causes limitless trouble and sorrow today.

The father and the mother should be looked upon as the ever-ready fountain of knowledge, reliable and dependable at all times.

When a child must go to another source outside of the home for enlightenment and information on matters sacred to them, the parents have lost the strongest tie of protection which they can draw around them.

When the boy can always ask father, and the girl can always ask mother, and be sure of a sympathetic answer, the way is already paved for good, clean young people.

Be truthful; if you cannot answer the question put to you, parents, say frankly that you will look the matter up at once and try to meet their requests.

Companionship of the parents is two-thirds in keeping the children off the streets, and the partners in knowledge make a stronger bond than any other.—Selected by Brother J. E. Hogarth.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy: twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 6 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each. or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

OUR FATHER

2 Cor. 6:18

No longer orphans here on earth,
A promise comes from afar;
It shines in brightness 'way beyond
The brightness of a star.

"I'll be a Father unto thee"—
Almighty power is there:
"My sons and daughters," saith the Lord,
"My glory bright shall share."

The time is now, yea, now the day,
Adoption's hour is here.
Look up and claim what is thine own,
And pray, "Our Father dear."

And ask forgiveness, full and free,
Ask Christ to dwell within:
Thy heart's own temple, pure and bright
And cleansed from every sin;

And then a child of God you'll be.
And "Father, Father mine."
Will be your cry, and he will hear,
And cause his face to shine.—Sel.

PERFECTION

A Sermon by Brother Geo. B. Alldridge, Delivered in Cleveland, O., June 17, 1917.

Text: Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrines of Christ, let us go on unto perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrines of baptisms, and laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment. And this will we do, if God permit" (Heb. 6:1-3).

1. Principles of the doctrine of Christ.
2. The foundation of repentance from dead works.
3. Faith toward God.
4. Doctrine of baptism.
5. Laying on of hands.
6. Resurrection of the dead.
7. Eternal judgment.

Paul tells us that those who in the school of Christ have acquired this knowledge, results in possessing these five ingredients, that if exercised make us exact copies of God's dear Son, or a perfection of character:

1. Our minds enlightened.
2. Tasted of the heavenly gift.
3. Partakers of the Holy Spirit.
4. Tasted the good word of God.
5. The powers of the world to come.

Paul reasons that any who, after this wonderful experience, returns back again into the world, will never return, and in the end must suffer the second death.

Notice his argument in verses seven and eight taken from an horticultural figure or illustration: "For the earth, which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God. But that which beareth thorns and briers is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burned." Now listen: forget me and imagine you hear Paul addressing you in verses 9-12: "But beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation, though we must speak; for God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints and do minister. And we desire that every one of you do shew the same diligence to the full assurances of hope unto the end; and that ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises."

Our dear Lord in the days of his flesh here upon earth, living and experiencing the joys and sorrows of our daily life, was continually seeking to impress upon the minds of his disciples the secret of his wonderful life. Over and over again he reiterates the fact that, "I and my Father are one," and as proof of this to the unbelieving Jews, his argument was: "If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not, but if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works; that ye may know and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him."

This sweet and blessed relationship Jesus sought to instill in the hearts of his disciples, now exists also between him and us. It is remarkable how fully the Lord has covered the whole range of illustration in describing the oneness subsisting between himself and his consecrated followers. He gives us an illustration from the mineral kingdom, saying that we are living stones built together upon him as the foundation and capstone, to be the temple of our God. From the animal kingdom our Lord drew illustration of this oneness likening himself to the good shepherd, and his true folowers to the sheep under his care, one with him in fellowship. From the family relationship he drew an illustration of the true husband and true wife, and their complete, thorough union of heart and of every interest. From the family again he drew another illustration representing the Creator as the Father, himself as the elder son, and all of us his faithful followers, his brethren. From the human body we have another illustration, Jesus himself being the head over the church, which is his body, for, as Paul declares, "We are members in particular" of the body of Christ. Once more: from the vegetable kingdom he drew the lesson we wish now to impart: I am the vine of which my true disciples are the branches.

His own words are: "I am the vine ye are the branches. He that abideth in me and I in him the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing" (John 15:5).

The vine to Jesus was at this moment, just prior to his death, especially significant. Probably he recalled to mind Isa. 60:21: "The people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land forever, the branch of my planting, the work of hands that I may be glorified." You remember Jesus in this same connection, verse 8, said, "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." Jesus had just quit the upper room, the traitor had gone to do his work of betraying his Lord. On his way to the garden of Gethsemane his journey probably led past the golden gate of the temple. Josephus tells us that the temple gate way was adorned with a golden wreath of vines, each grape cluster a man's stature in length, the leaves and buds were wrought in gleaming, reddish gold, but its clusters of yellow gold and its grape stones of precious stones. It was one of the wonders of the sacred pile, that supreme monument of Herodian architecture, and Tacitus records that it excited the admiration of the Romans when they invaded Jerusalem under Titus, and they supposed that, seeing this emblem, the temple was sacred to the God Bacchus. How significant and powerful this emblem becomes when correctly understood!

The blazing torch in the uplifted hand of the statue of liberty suggests "Liberty enlightening the world," so this emblem on what Christ called "his Father's house of prayer," surely suggests "Fruitbearing" as the climax of our lives who are the temples of the living God. Jesus says, "I am the true vine." Then there must be a false vine. Paul tells us the kind of fruit that grows on the true vine. He says it consists of love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, faith meekness, temperance. What is the fruits of the false vine or vine of the earth? The true vine is nourished from heaven; the false from the earth. The false vine delights to boast in its fine cathedrals, its stately temples, its Billy Sunday tabernacles, its solemn chapels, orphanages, hospitals, etc.; it delights to boast of its political power, the honor it receives from men, its wealth and social standing. It is great and influential in the world, but it says by which it is nourished and sustained it has the spirit of the world. It has grown wonderfully, has over three hundred branches, claiming over four hundred millions of clusters of grapes, and today boasts it will conquer the world.

But listen: "And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire; and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe. And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and cast it into the great wine press of the wrath of God, and the wine press was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the wine press even unto the horse bridles by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs" (Rev. 14:18-20) This pretty near describes the length of the celebrated "Hindenberg Line"—about 200 miles!

Beloved, it is a blessed thing to understand and preach the doctrine of Christ, for he himself has said: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God or I speak of myself" (John 7:17). And Paul to Titus wrote: "But speak thou the things which become sound doctrine" (Titus 2:1). Doctrine prepares the soil of our hearts so that it may be cultivated in bringing forth the fruits of the spirit. I realize keenly that Paul is in earnest when he declares that "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel, which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain" (1 Cor. 15:1,2). But it seems to me that now we are upon the eve of our Lord's return. He is about to garner his fruit, his wheat. There is a period in the life of the fruit or wheat when it just seems to bask in the sunlight and ripen, one becoming mellow and sweet, the other yellow and fragrant. Are we not now arrived at that period in our Christian experience when the sunshine of God's love is just putting the finishing touches, so to speak, of our character, just mellowing us, just putting on the yellow, golden tint that suggests the soon breaking forth into the divine nature? If so, then beloved, meditate much upon John 15: 1-10. Read these verses carefully; they tell us the secret of fruitfulness, viz., just abiding in Christ. A branch lives and flourishes only as it grows on the stem, sharing its life and drinking in its sap. If it be severed from the stem, it may retain its greenness for awhile, but it is cut off from the source of life, and it presently withers, and so "apart from Christ," the glorious sun of righteousness, we can do nothing. We must keep in vital union with him by constant faith and fellowship, fed by his love and daily, and hourly refreshed by the grace of his Holy Spirit, as a branch is refreshed by the dew and the rain.

Again, beloved. Oh, the joy that comes as a result of union with Christ! Listen: "These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." Beloved, we are to be just like a living branch, rejoicing in the sunshine and soft summer breeze. And while, beloved, the New Testament is full of joy, yet it warns us over and over that sorrow and suffering is our portion this side of the kingdom. It is the dear Father's way of pruning the fruit bearing branch that it might bear more fruit.

Jesus was made perfect through suffering. Yes, joy filled his own dear heart amid all the griefs of his earthly pilgrimage. His life was the most painful man ever lived, yet it was the sweetest, purest, happiest, and the most peaceful; and as we catch and drink in his serene triumphant spirit, we have learned the secret of his life and victory over sin.

In conclusion, beloved, the secret of it all lies in these words, "He went about doing good" (Acts 10:38). "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth, but I have called you friends, for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you. Ye have no chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you that you should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain, that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father, in my name, he may give it you These things I command you that ye love one another."

Let us learn to love one another as Jesus loves us. This means self sacrifice. Indulgence in selfishness ends in misery. To know and love Christ means we are his friends, obeying the Father as he did in all things; means doing God's will. Ultimately he will give us a place in his kingdom if we obey him.

When the world's a-goin' crooked,
  Or it looks that way to you,
Somehow seems to be a tangle
  To most everything you do:
When you start out of a morning
  With your luck a-running wrong,
The birds along your pathway
  Have a harshness in their song,
And the grass, though soft as velvet,
  You will sort o' stumble through;
Such times if you want things better,
  Beloved, its mostly up to you.

'Tain't hard smiling with the sunshine,
  But its during stormy spells
When our weary feet are slippin'
  That the stuff that's in us tells;
No, you won't have flowers allu's,
  For the paths you travel through.
Still, if you would have things better
  Beloved, its mostly up to you.

There is so much bad in the best of us,
  And so much good in the worst of us;
That it hardly behooves any of us
  To speak ill of the rest of us.

Some liberalists, under the cry of liberality, crucify such as differ from them in cold blood!

THE JUDGMENT OF THE SAINTS AND THE INDIGNATION

Article No. 2

The object of these articles is to assist those who have no time to search the proofs from the Scriptures. The incidents are arranged in a logical order. The preparatory text of this article will be found in 2 Tim. 3:16,17 and reads as follows. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." If anything else had been needed to make the man of God perfect and thoroughly furnished unto all good works, the apostle should have so written. The word of God is sufficient, and if studied with the purpose in heart to know his will, we will be wise and shall understand God's purpose regarding the earth and man. Let us accept the text as God-inspired, and not man-made.

The co-ordinate incidents in this article introduce us to a very important subject and logically follow the coming of Christ and the resurrection. We are surprised at the number of proofs at our command to prove the statement. Very little has been written as to what will take place after the raising of the dead and the changing of those living. Paul in writing to the Thessalonian church says, that the saints raised, and those who have been changed, will be caught up together in the air, and ever be with him. The question is, Where will Jesus and the saints go after they have met the Lord in the air? We think the Scriptures are very clear on this subject. We are informed 2 Cor. 5:10 that we (the saints) must appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad. The language of this text proves that their judgment is for the distribution of rewards, and not for condemnation. The rewards are determined in the mind of the Judge before he leaves the presence of the Father, as Jesus says, "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be" (Rev. 22:12). Now if these rewards are to be determined after he has erected his judgment seat, he could not bring them with him. This judgment must take place on the earth. So permit us to give the testimony of the prophet Isa. 26:19-21, which reads as follows: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead. Come my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast."

This text suggests a hiding in chambers. His people are taken to these chambers after the earth has cast out her dead, which evidently means the resurrection. The indignation period occupies the same period as does the judgment of the saints. The prophet in verse 21 states that the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity. The rewards that the Lord distributes to his saints will be positions in his kingdom. "He hath made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10).

We shall now give further proof of the subject under consideration. In 2 Tim. 4:1 we read: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick (living) and dead, at his appearing and kingdom." It is evident that the judgment here spoken of must be for those who were raised and those changed. This judgment must take place when Jesus comes, and that he is the Judge is also true If the saints are to be judged to determine whether they are worthy of a crown, Paul must have made a false statement when he wrote, "There is a crown of righteousness laid up for me; for I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." The apostle earned the right to this hope while living This same hope was extended to those who love his appearing When we obey the gospel we have entered the narrow way which constitutes our "trial period." To the overcomer I will grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. In Rom. 14:10 the apostle states again, as he did in 2 Cor. 5:10, that we shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For this reason he admonishes the brethren not to judge each other, nor set at nought thy brother. This judgment is to condemn, and should not be done. There is one consoling thought in these Scriptures and that is, that Jesus will protect us from the trials and troubles of the indignation period. During this period we will receive the reward that we have earned through our labors for the kingdom of God. Little has been written until recently of the trouble that is to come upon the earth. Jesus in Matt. 24:21 said that, there shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time; no, nor ever shall be. Those who are acquainted with the history of the Jewish people at this time know to what extent they suffered. Josephus records the horror and the suffering at the seige of Jerusalem by the Roman army. This punishment was meted out to the Jewish nation because of their sins and iniquities. During this period the Lord protected those who were his. They were directed to flee from Judea into the mountains The Scriptures as plainly teach of the coming trouble as they did of the times of the destruction of Jerusalem and the dispersion of her people. In Dan. 12:1 the prophet states that at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people: and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book Daniel's people were destroyed and dispersed at the destruction of Jerusalem; at the time spoken of above they shall be delivered.

The poet has truly written that "coming events cast their shadows before." It surely does not require a prophet's eye to see what is coming upon all nations. There is yet in the near future a crisis far more terrible than any that has ever taken place. It will be the last, as the Lord will direct the forces that will deliver Jerusalem and the Holy Land from the enemies of the Son of God, the Lord Jesus the Christ.

We shall call your attention to but a few more texts on this subject. The readers of this article are requested to read carefully Joel 3:9-18. Can you not see that we are living in the very times described by the prophet ? Never in the history of the world have men been engaged in the manufacture of war implements as today. Truly are men beating their plowshares into swords, and pruning hooks into spears. The spirit of war has a strong hold upon the people in this era. A careful reading of the last three chapters of the prophet Zechariah will enable the reader to see some of the trouble coming upon us. The indignation period will end where it did when Jehovah punished the Jews for their iniquities. The coming trouble and tribulation will come upon the nations of the earth. If you read carefully you can see that the armies of the nations are at this time unconsciously moving toward Jerusalem in fulfillment of Zechariah 14:1,2. Then what ? The Lord shall be king over all the earth. Dear ones, let not your heart be troubled, for as sure as you are faithful the crown is yours. We are in the time of the end. The Lord is coming soon.

THE LIVING WORD

No. 7

By S. Roxana Wince

Have you read the 13th chapter of 2 Kings? It is certain from what is said therein, that Jehoahaz and Joash his son knew something of the Lord and that deliverance can come only from him. They knew that the Lord was angry with Israel, because they had done evil in his sight, or at least Jehoahaz did, when he and his people were given into the hands of the same Syrian kings that a little later came against Judah; for "Jehoahaz besought the Lord, and the Lord hearkened unto him: for he saw the oppression of Israel . . . . And the Lord sent them a savior, but not in the days of Jehoahaz for it was Joash his son, who became their deliverer, the same Joash who wept over the face of Elisha when he was sick, who shot the symbolic arrows from the window, and who smote upon the ground at the command of Elisha.

Three times he smote upon the ground, and three times he beat Benhadad, son of Hazael king of Syria For "The Lord was gracious unto Israel, and had compassion on them and had respect unto them, because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and would not destroy them, neither cast them from his presence as yet And Joash recovered the cities of Israel that Benhadad had taken.

And now we must go back to Judah. Their next king was Amaziah, the son of Joash. He stood for a time on the side of the book, but after being victorious over the Edomites in the valley of Salt, he brought home their gods and set them up to be his gods, only to find, as all other of the idol worshipping kings of Judah had found, that gods of wood and stone cannot save. He was murdered at Lachish by some of his own people.

Uzziah son of Amaziah, came next to the throne when only 16 years of age, and reigned 52 years. "And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord . . . . And he sought God in the days of Zechariah, who had understanding in the visions of God, and as long as he sought the Lord God made him to prosper." Yes, to prosper for God helped him in his wars with the Philistines, the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and he became a great and mighty king; and all because of that strange, magical, unchanging book.

But he too fell, not into the sin of idolatry, but from pride, for knowing that the kings of pagan countries also held the office of High Priest as well, and were counted incapable of error and were adored (for how could he help knowing these things with the constant communication that was going on in those days between his own country and Babylon and Egypt ?), essayed to take the Aaronic priesthood as the rightful adjunct of the crown, was stricken with leprosy, and while the earth was quivering in the throes of a mighty earthquake was hurried out of the temple by "Azariah the chief priest and all the priests," and being thereafter cut off from the house of the Lord as a leper, had to live in a house by himself to the day of his death.

Stanley says Uzziah followed the precedents set by David and Solomon, when, according to Josephus, he entered the temple clothed in priestly attire, intending to offer incense on the golden altar. David and Solomon did enter the holy place, but not it seems to offer incense but burnt offerings and these most likely in the God-ordained way through the proper officials. I may be mistaken in my thoughts as to what constituted Uzziah's guilt, but it was certainly connected with the attempt to offer incense, judging from the instantaneous punishment inflicted, and the awful earthquake that rocked the temple, opened its roof, let in the light, set the people fleeing, and rolled great masses of earth from the mountain side down to the spring of Enrogel.

"As long as he sought the Lord, God made him to prosper," are words in the story: draw your own conclusions.

FAIR CHANCE

What kind of a chance did you say? "A Fair Chance." Why, bless you do you not have a fair chance? What do you mean? "Well, there are some who have not learned the truth perfectly; have not had it explained so clearly that they understand it as they should; and we believe that God in some way will provide a way for them to become so instructed in the truth that they will be saved." What! going to give them a better chance than you have had; pray tell us how this is to be done? "Well, we believe that those who are partly converted to the truth will be raised in the next age and finish their education and be saved." That would be fine would it not? But look here: has God promised to do that? Would that be a fair chance? Are you going to make God a respecter of persons?

Now let us examine God's word and see if we can find such doctrine taught. If we cannot, it is the word of man, and a very dangerous doctrine to follow. There is no respect of persons with God. "For as many as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law, shall be judged by the law." "God judgeth according to every man's work in this life" (Acts 10:34; Rom. 2:11; Gal. 2:6; Eph. 6:9; Col. 3:25; 1 Pet. 1:17). The one that has learned some of the truth, has had the Bible, so he could search the Scriptures for himself, as Jesus commanded (John 5:39-47). Those in Thessalonica searched the Scriptures daily to see if Paul taught the truth (Acts 17:11). The parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus teaches this same scriptural truth that one must study and search for himself. Abraham said, "They have Moses and the prophets: let them hear them. If they hear not Moses and the prophets neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead" (Luke 16:27-31)

We see by the law of God delivered to Ezekiel that no one can deliver but their own souls by their righteousness (Ezek. 14:14-20). Noah preached to the antideluvians one hundred years and they would not accept and were lost. Did they have a fair chance or must they be raised again? Also Sodom and Gomorrah. We find no Scripture saying anyone shall have any chance other than the one they have in this life. If raised again, what condition are they raised in? Are they raised as children or full grown men; and are they promised a different schooling from the present? No. The command is, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel . . . . He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; he that believeth not, shall be condemned."

Do not bank your hope of eternal life on God doing something he never promised? This doctrine of "Fair Chance" necessitates a resurrection that God has not promised, and it is a very unfair chance for those that have obeyed. They are entitled to only one resurrection, while those that will not learn the truth can have two resurrections! Whenever one goes outside of God's word and teaches for truth something not written there, they are adding to God's word and will lose eternal life for presumption.

EDITORIAL

July 1 a large delegation of our young brethren and sisters went to Monroeville, Ohio, and visited Brother and Sister B. F. Smith. This visit has become an annual affair. A report of the meeting may be expected next week.

During the week we had a pleasant visit from Brother John W. Lea, of Philadelphia, Pa., Editor of "The Faith." This Brother taught us proof reading when we became Editor of The Restitution, and we have known him favorably in other ways for several years.

Sunday, July 1, the following friends and students of the truth were baptized into Christ: Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Rader, and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Jones. Brother Rader was formerly Methodist and Sister Rader is the daughter of Brother and Sister John Grief, of Unionville, Ohio. They are residents of Canton, Ohio, and will meet with the believers there. Brother Jones is the brother in the flesh to Sisters Titman, Tabor, Larkin and Thomson. Sister Jones has had some difficulty in bringing her mind into subjection to God's truth, but now finds happiness in submission to his will.

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL

No. VII

Fear has no place in working out our salvation: love must do it all; and perfect love casts out all fear. Only those who accept the gospel which is the foundation of love in humble gratitude, will ever be benefited by it. Those who accept because it is their only chance, must lack largely, if not altogether, this saving spirit of gratitude and love.—Alta King.

EDITOR'S REPLY

Fear, Equally with Love, Has a Place in the Gospel of God

"Fear has no place in working out our salvation: love must do it all." Undoubtedly this is the most erroneous statement the writer has yet made, as it is also probably the most unscriptural. "This day," said God to Israel in Deut. 2:25, "this day will I begin to put the dread of thee and the fear of thee upon the nations under the whole heaven, who shall hear report of thee, and shall tremble, and be in anguish because of thee." God is the author of the "dread," "fear," and "anguish" in this verse. "And the fame of David went out into all lands: and the Lord brought the fear of him upon all nations" (1 Chron. 14:17). The large place of fear in the plan of God and its saving, essential nature in "working out our salvation," may be seen in the subjoined propositions which, we ask the reader to note, are amply sustained by explicit and reiterated declarations of Holy Scripture:

I Having no fear of God is an earmark of the wicked. This characteristic of sinners God reprobates; but some mistaken people encourage it by preaching a gospel which has "no place" in it for fear. They talk incessantly of another chance. "Those who accept because it is their only chance." Do you see what this implies? But now to the Scriptures about the wicked which declare they lack the fear of God:

"He forsaketh the fear of the Almighty" (Job 6:14).

"Yea, thou casteth off fear, and restrainest prayer before God" (Job 15: 4).

"Their houses are safe from fear, neither is the rod of God upon them" (Job 21: 9).

"He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted: neither turneth he back at the sword" (Job 39:22).

"The transgression of the wicked saith within my heart, that there is no fear of God before his eyes" (Psa.36:1).

"There is none righteous . . . .THERE IS NO FEAR OF GOD BEFORE THEIR EYES" (Rom. 3:10,18).

II The fear of God is an earmark of the righteous. Instead of fear "having no place in working out our salvation," the very reverse is affirmed in the following unmistakable utterances of the Divine Oracles:

"Come, ye children, hearken unto me: I will teach you the fear of the Lord" (Psa. 34:11).

"In thy fear will I worship toward thy holy temple" (Psa. 5:7).

"Stablish thy word to thy servant, who is devoted to thy fear" (Psa. 119:38).

"Sanctify the Lord of hosts himself; and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread (Isa. 8:13).

"If I be a father, where is mine honor, and if a master, where is my fear? saith the Lord of hosts. . . ." (Mal. 1:6).

"Serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear, for our God is a consuming fire" (Heb. 12:28,29).

"Pass the time of your sojourning here in fear" (1 Pet. (1 17).

"The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death" (Prov. 14:27).

"By the fear of the Lord men depart from evil" (Prov. 16:6).

"The fear of the Lord tendeth to life: and he that hath it shall abide satisfied; and he shall not be visited with evil" (Prov. 19:23).

"By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches, and honor, and life" (Prov. 22:4).

"Let not thine heart envy sinners: but be thou in the fear of the Lord all the day long" (Prov. 23.17).

"Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling" (Psa. 2:11).

"By faith Noah, being warned of God . . . . moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; . . . . condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith" (Heb. 11.7).

"Others save with fear" (Jude 23).

"WORK OUT YOUR OWN SALVATION WITH FEAR AND TREMBLING" (Phil. 2:12).

"Fear has no place in working out our salvation" ([illegible] Hope).

Dear Restitution:

I am enclosing one dollar and fifty cents for The Restitution. My husband's father takes it, and we have always read his paper. But now he has moved some distance away and we don't get to read his paper any more, so we cannot do without it in our home. My husband belongs to your church, and I am sorry to say I do not belong. I wish I did. We never see any one here that belongs to your church. If we were able I would send for a preacher to come and preach for us. But we are poor folks and not able to do that unless we could hear of one near to us. But I like to read the little paper and hope I will get it [illegible].

Fannie Hull.

Brother Huggins:

I herewith send you an article clipped from "Chicago Herald," June 23d, first edition, which which is quite interesting as well as encouraging to us who are looking to the regathering of God's ancient people to their old home land, where all of the old prophets, ancient worthies, Christ and his apostles, have lived and died and have prophesied concerning it. I am very much interested in the articles in the good old Restitution, although all the writers are new to me save that of dear old Sister Wince.

Yours in hope of life eternal through Jesus our only Life-giver. D. P. L. Clem.

WILSON TO FIGHT TO INAUGURATE JEWISH REPUBLIC

Morgenthau Commission Will Study Desires of the Residents of Palestine

Washington, June 22.—President Wilson is giving serious consideration to the Zionists recommendation that one of the war aims of the United States shall be the establishment of a Jewish republic, with Jerusalem as the capital.

Ostensibly the commission, consisting of Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, Major Felix Frankfurter, U. S. A., and E. W. Lewin-Epstein, connected with the Zionist movement, is en route to Egypt and Palestine for the purpose of aiding suffering Jews, and especially those numbering about 1 000, who are naturalized American citizens.

Small Part of Duty

This, however, will be only a small part of the duty of Mr. Morgenthau and his associates. As a matter of fact, they have been instructed to make a thorough investigation of the situation of the Jews in Palestine and neighboring sections of Turkey, and to follow carefully the campaign against the Turks and Germans which the British are conducting.

The reports the commission will make will be of the utmost value to the President in guiding him as to the character of terms he will fix as conditions for the settlement of the war. Every nation is concerned about the Jewish question and is anxious, once and for all, to free Jerusalem from Turkish misrule.

Drive From Two Sides

A British military expedition now is operating toward the city where Christ suffered, and it is expected that within a comparatively short time it will be rescued from Turkish control. Two British expeditions are moving against Turkey from the east, one passing through Mesopotamia and the other from Egypt along the eastern shore of the Mediterranean.

Eventually if they compass it, these expeditions will meet; but that is long time in the future, in view of the desperate resistance theTurks, aided by the Germans are making.

It is important, of course, that the military campaign which the British from the south and the Russians from the north are carrying on shall have success, since that would have a tremendous bearing upon the end of the war.

Seek Desires of Jews

With this ultimate result, however, the Morgenthau commission will have no concern. It will be their business to aid the Jews in every way they can; to see that those who are suffering shall get the supplies which American men-of-war were forced to unload at Alexandria, Egypt, and enjoy the benefit of the $10,000,000 relief fund which had been collected in the United States, and finally, to ascertain the desires of the Jewish people with reference to their future political condition.

It is apparent to the President and others in Washington that a Jewish state could not stand alone. It will have to possess the moral and perhaps political support of a strong nation or nations if it is to live.

U. S. Would Give Guarantee

It was suggested recently from London that control of Palestine, once it has been wrested from the Turks, shall be turned over to the United States. This nation, it was pointed out, is free from any entanglements in the near East, and it could be depended upon to pursue a thoroughly unselfish policy in connection with the administration of the territory.

The President and his cabinet, from all reports, have no intention of taking possession of territory so far from the new world. In view of this determination the plan has been advanced that the Jews be permitted to form a republic, the independence and territorial integrity of which shall be guaranteed by the United States and Great Britain, and if Russia, France and Italy so desire, by them also.

It is a reflection upon the paucity of human ideas that this guarantee proposal should be advocated; for Belgium enjoyed similar guarantees and they were ruthlessly violated by Germany. In this case, however, attention is drawn to the fact that the signers of the agreement will be nations who are fighting to uphold the principle of the sanctity of treaties and that there is no likelihood that they would violate their pledged word, however great might be the temptation. Selected by D. I. P. Clem.

We are also plainly told that the world looks on at Christ's second coming. Matt. 24:30: "Then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory." Notice the exegetical jugglery of Mr. Russell on this point: "His coming invisible, gradually the world will come to recognize his presence" (Vol. 2, page 102, "Studies in the Scriptures"). "For as the lightning shineth, bright shining, gradual dawning of the truth of his invisible presence" (Ibid).

Evidently the author of "Millennial Dawn" does not know much about a flash of lightning. An old colored man said, "De only think what makes lightnin' go slow am a black gum tree." The grain of this tree is like winding stairs.—Sel.

OBITUARY

Sarah J. Rupe

Sarah J. Rupe was born August 9, 1850, near Argos, Indiana, and died June 26, 1917, at her home in Argos, at the age of 66 years, 9 months, and 17 days. She was the daughter of Daniel and Jane Wallace-Ripley, pioneers of this community. She united in marriage with George W. Grace in 1869, and became the mother of one daughter, Margaret Elizabeth. Her husband died Sept. 30, 1871. She was married to William A. Rupe Dec. 27, 1874, and to them were born three children, Edwin A., Zora M., and Inez B. Zora M. died in infancy and her husband on June 4, 1893. Her other children, four grand-children, one brother, Henry Ripley, of the state of Washington, one sister, Eva Shlotes, of Angela, Montana, and many other relatives, survive her.

Soon after the death of her first husband, Sister Rupe united with the Church of God at old Antioch in the year 1872. After her second marriage she moved to Argos in March, 1875, and put her membership in with the Church of God here, August 20, 1893, where she remained a member till the time of her death.

The writer's personal acquaintance with Sister Rupe reaches back to his earliest recollections. She was of a joyous, happy disposition, and looked upon the sunny side of the constantly changing scenes of life, always a kind, considerate neighbor and helpful to her friends. She was a devoted wife and mother, and poured out the energies of her life upon the family altar. With a high sense of honor and integrity she stood firm upon her convictions of right and wrong. She had her full share of mortal sorrows, but took them patiently and cheerfully. In her later years she was stricken with disease and blindness, but this did not prevent her being a constant student of the Bible through the ministration of her daughter, Inez, who was her faithful companion in study as well as caretaker of her bodily needs. Worn with suffering, sad from the uneven struggle, all endured as the chastening of the Lord, she fell asleep in Jesus to peaceful rest.

Funeral services were held from the residence at 2 o'clock June 23, 1917. The home was filled with relatives and friends to pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of the departed one. Many floral offerings testified to their love and respect. We spoke words of hope and comfort from Romans 5. Then Sister Rupe was laid to rest in Maple Grove cemetery to await the awakening voice of Jesus when he comes.

FOR THOSE WHO WOULD AID THE PASTOR

Pray for him. He needs your prayers. Make this a part of your daily program.

Co-operate with him. His business is to work with you and not for you. To co-operate means more than to oppose. It means activity.

If you need him, let him know. He is not omniscient. Do not take special precaution to conceal your need in order that you may accuse him of inattention or neglect of duty.

If you know of any sickness in the neighborhood, let him know. He has no other way to find out.

Do not lay claim to all his time and attention. There are others.

If some new family moves into the community and you would like to have the pastor call on them, say so.

Get the church and the kingdom on your heart. Consider what you can put into the church as well as what you can get out of it. The church is not kept for your convenience, but as organization by which you can help save those who have ears to hear.

Be a "booster." A booster is worth a hundred croakers. In fact, the persistent kicker, so far as church usefulness is concerned, is just one less than none.

Love the church. It is the world's greatest institution. Christ began it.

Believe in your own church. It is just what you make it. Pray that you may be worth something to it.

Reverence the church. It is not a secular institution. It is not a centre for social amusement. It is the house of God. Use it as such.

Attend the church. There is no inspiration in preaching to empty seats. See that your pew is filled at every service.

Guard your tongue. Your neighbors are reading your life. A cruel or unkind word may drive somebody from your church. You may not mean any harm. But, you are responsible for the consequences of your words as well as the motive. Do not offend. Listen to Christ. "Woe unto the man by whom offense cometh."

Contribute to the church. The preacher cannot work on earth and take his meals in heaven. Church expenses must be met. Are you doing your share?

If you have any contention with anybody, get it straightened out. If you try and they refuse you will exonerate yourself. If you refuse, it will be chalked up against you in the judgment. This is a blue-penciled crime. What will you do about it then?

Go to your pastor and say, "I do not know how much I can do, but I am willing to do what I can. Count on me. Use me."

Avoid any display of class distinction in your church association. Measured by Christ's standard, goodness is greatness. There is so little difference between the highest and lowest that we have nothing to boast about. Safeguard the interests of your church along this line.

Do not speak lightly of any one's social standing or intellectual training. Unavoidable poverty is no disgrace. The inclination to ignore those below your own rank is the most obvious symptom of empty-headedness.

Learn to hide your aches and distresses under a pleasant smile. Few people care much about your tooth-ache or rheumatism. God can do more with some troubles than the preacher. Try him. Use your pastor when you need him.—Selected by Brother Titman.

BAPTISMAL SERVICE

At our services at the Eagle Creek Church of God Sunday evening, June 24, three good ground hearers received the gospel seed of the kingdom of God, and consented to obey that form of doctrine once delivered to us by being baptized to symbolize their faith in the fundamental fact of Christianity, that Christ died and was buried and rose again. Accordingly we repaired to the waters of Eagle Creek Monday morning at 9 o'clock and inducted Sisters Anna Matilda Pearson, her daughter, Adele C. Pearson, and Nora Cochenour into the household of faith by baptism.

May the blessings of heaven rest upon these worthy members of the church of God. May the ministration of the spirit of the gospel of peace work mightily in their lives, to the pulling down of all the strongholds of the enemy, and result in their final perfection of both soul and body in the kingdom of God.

D. E. VanVactor.

"BROAD-MINDED" RELIGION REBUKED

There are "broad-minded men" who show a curious inconsistency in their methods of reasoning about religion and about secular affairs. "The Lutheran Church Work and Observer" (Harrisburg) finds them properly detected and put to the blush by a writer in "The Atlantic Monthly." These men generally boast of their "liberality and breadth of view" in matters of religion, and are fond of saying that in their judgment "one church is as good as another." The religious paper pays its tribute to the good offices of its literary brother, finding it "refreshing to see the broad-minded man so sharply rebuked in a journal that is valued generally for its high literary standing rather than for its religious teaching." These are the paragraphs quoted:

"Of all persons who hinder the progress of religious thought, possibly the most effective is the man who is broad-minded without being deep-minded. It takes an exceptionally gifted man, one of unusual intellectual powers and mentality rarely disciplined, to be "broad" without spiritual deterioration. It has been well said that one's religion is like a river. When a river breaks over its well-established and ancient banks, unless it is a stream remarkably deep, it will quickly degenerate into an odorous and malarial swamp. Obviously the best thing to do with ordinary rivers is to keep them within their ancient bounds. An extraordinary religious soul may break over the banks and hew out new channels successfully. The ordinary man, breaking over the former restraints in an intense desire to be "broad," usually accomplishes nothing except his own spiritual stagnation and the annoyance of his neighbors.

"For a spiritual genius like Philip Brooks, to take only one example, one can have nothing but admiration; for in breaking over the bounds of conventional religion he did not abandon them. He appreciated their value and sought merely to breaden the old channel. But it is a very different feeling that one observes the genial gentleman who enlives an after-dinner smoke with the smiling and patronizing remark to the clergyman present, 'Well, I'm broad-minded enough to know that one church is as good as another.' Of course he is broad—swamp-broad, and covered with a rich intellectual scum which prevents him knowing what arrant nonsense he is uttering. He knows that one cigar is not as good as another: that one bar is not the equal of every other bar; that Henry James and Robert Chambers are not equal as novelists, that Beethoven and Irving Berlin are not occupants of the same musical plane. He has very definite opinions as to the moral superiority of either Germany or England, and even the comparativeness righteousness and usefulness of Mr. Bryan and Mr. Roosevelt. And yet there he sits, pitying his poor clergyman for being a narrow-minded ass, and saying, 'One church, one religion, one philosophy is as good as another.'"—Literary Digest.

MAKING FOR OURSELVES SOULS

Luke 21:19

In the King James Version this reads, "In your patience possess ye your souls." The Revision has it, "In your patience ye shall win your souls"; and the Emphatic Diaglott, literal translation, "In the patient endurance of you, preserve the lives of you."

Dr. L. F. Brooke, an eminent Unitarian, believes that this refers to character building, what we might term the growth of a divine life within, from the divine begettal. Something may be said in favor of such an idea, but the question is, what did Jesus intend his disciples to understand? Just before this he had said, "Not a hair of your head shall perish." But this did not mean that they would be exempt from death, for in verse 16 Jesus tells them that some of them would be put to death. It means then, generally considered, that some day they would possess their lives, or souls, which they had lost by persecution. In other words, if they lost their lives in his service they would find them.

But the general idea of Dr. Brooke may be accepted as far as the words go. The question of a resurrection, making for themselves souls, was for them to answer. "He that endureth to the end shall be saved." He shall receive back the life he lost. The key text is, "To those who by patient continuence in well doing, seek for glory, honor and immortality, he will render eternal life."

Reader, are you making for yourself a soul? If so, Jesus is building a mansion for you, and where he is you will be, and your soul will be where you are. I am certain.—N. B. Webber.

THE CARNAL VERSUS THE SPIRITUAL

A Study in Contrasts

"And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ" (1 Cor. 3: 1).

I The Carnal Man is marked by seven features—
1. He is carnally minded (Rom. 8: 5, 6).
2. He is carnally limited (1 Cor. 3:1).
3. He is carnally weak (1 Cor. 3: 2).
4. He is carnally bound, enslaved (Rom. 7:14).
5. He is carnally disposed (1 Cor. 3: 3, 4).
6. He is carnally opposed to God (Rom. 8: 7).
7. He is carnally doomed (Gal. 6: 8).

II The Spiritual Man—
1. He is spiritually born (John 3: 6).
2. He is spiritually led and taught (1 Cor. 2: 10-12; Rom. 8: 14).
3. He is spiritually minded (Rom. 8: 5, 6).
4. He is spiritually renewed (Eph. 4: 23).
5. He is spiritually sealed (Eph. 1: 13).
6. He is spiritually filled (Eph. 5: 18).
7. He is spiritually freed (Rom. 8: 2).

CHARACTER

D. C. Robison

Good character is above all things else. Good character is the finest essential of man. Character is what a man is—the sum total of himself.

Your character can not be essentially injured except by your own acts. You can not dream yourself into a character. You must hammer and forge one. Thoughts, words, looks, actions form the alphabet by which you may spell character.

To form character is to form grooves into which are to flow the purposes of our lives. Character is made up of small duties faithfully performed, of self-denials, of self-sacrifices, of kindly acts of love and duty. Add character to knowledge and we have invincible power.

We must not hope to be mowers,
And gather the ripe, golden ears
Until we have first been sowers,
And watered the furrows with tears.

Alice Cary.

There are at present nearly 40 000 war widows in England. This number already far exceeds estimates made at the beginning of the conflict, the highest of which was about 30,000. Provisions have been made by the government for supplying each of these women with a pension.

Chicken breeders on the east coast of England have been compelled to abandon their efforts to raise chickens owing to the constant jar from heavy guns on the continent which kills the chicks before they are hatched.

Some think they are doing the work God has appointed for Christians when they try to destroy the worldly amusements which sap so much life from the people in these days. But Christ did nothing of this kind, nor has he directed his followers to do so.

Call men into the new life of Christ and all these things will drop from their lives as the old leaves drop from the tree when the new sap rises within it. If all worldly amusements were swept away and Christ did not take possession of the heart, some other evil would occupy it.—Selected by Sister Grace Lawrence.

Relief in Rhyme

When matters go askew sometimes,
I find much help in making rhymes.
For instance, when I darkly "grope,"
It helps a lot to think of "hope."
And when the night is black as "ink"
It helps to think that dawn in "pink."
When scenes are steeped in "misery"
I like to think of "charity."

"Glad" rhymes with "sad," and "light" with "night," While "plight and "spite" suggest "delight."
And as for "jeer," and sneer and "fear,"
My rhyming scheme leads on to "cheer."

Just try it when your days are "blue,"
Your rhymes may show the skies are too."—John Kendrick Bangs.

Vacation Days

You, dear reader, have the advantage over me, for at least you know my name and address, but I even do not know that much concerning you. At times I wonder how many of you there are. I know of three: the proof reader in the office, who reads the page as a matter of duty; Sister Donaldson who reads the page as a proof of wifely interest; and Sister Lawrence who sent us that nice little article on the left—the only letter we have received concerning the page since it has been our privilege to conduct it.

Now that school has closed and we are "on vacation," I want you to take your Bible and read the one hundredth Psalm, and with that Psalm in your minds study nature. If on a farm watch the cattle, the sheep, the chickens, the crops; if in the city study your little garden; watch the trees the grass, such animals as you can; and no matter where you are study the sky—the stars, the sun, the moon. Then write your impressions—in school we call it "a composition"—don't we? using not over 150 words, and kindly mail it to me not later than August 25. If this is too much, will you write your name, address and date of birth on a post card, and mail that. Everything will be acknowledged and some of the better letters will be published. You see I feel lonely and want a larger circle of friends. Don't you want to be my friend?

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 6 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

RESTLESS HEART, DON'T WORRY SO

Dear restless heart, be still!—
  Don't fret and worry so;
God has a thousand ways
  His love and help to show;
Just trust and trust and trust
  Until his will you know.

Dear, restless heart, be still!—
  For peace is God's own smile,
His love can every wrong
  And sorrow reconcile.
Just love and love and love
  And calmly wait awhile.

Dear, restless heart, be brave!—
  Don't moan and sorrow so;
Just hope and hope and hope
  Until you braver grow.
He hath a meaning kind
  In the chilly winds that blow.

Dear, restless heart, repose!—
  Rest on his heart an hour.
His heart is strength and life,
  His heart is bloom and flower.
Just rest and rest and rest
  Within his tender power.

Dear, restless heart, be still!—
  Don't toil and hurry so;
God is the silent One,
  Forever calm and slow.
Just wait and wait and wait
  And work with him below.

Dear, restless heart, be still!—
  Don't struggle to be free,
God's life is in your life;
  From him you may not flee.
Just pray and pray and pray
  Till you have faith to see.

THE NATURE AND WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT OF GOD

R. H. Judd.

Much serious controversy has resulted owing to diversity of opinion and belief respecting the nature and work of the Holy Spirit. If numbers alone could decide the question there would be no need to further discuss the matter, as unquestionably the majority of church worshippers acknowledge the Holy spirit to be the third person of the Trinity. Fortunately men and women are beginning to realize that numbers on one side or another do not always guarantee truth: indeed, they not infrequently indicate the reverse, especially in such cases where a determined minority are in opposition.

To the writer, and doubtless to many others, the very fact that any doubt at all exists regarding the personality of the Holy Spirit is in itself a very considerable argument against the popular view. No doubt has ever been entertained, or any controversy raised among professing Christians concerning the personality of God the Father, or the Lord Jesus Christ. The logical force of such a comparison must surely appeal to the thoughtful mind.

Another point, almost equally impressive, is the fact that in the sacred Scriptures expressions are frequently used in connection with the Holy Spirit which are entirely incompatible with, and antagonistic to personality, which are never made use of respecting God the Father or Jesus Christ our Lord. The conclusion therefore is self-evident and does not require stating..

With the request that the observations above referred to be carefully and critically considered, we now pass on to an examination of the subject as accounted for in Holy Writ. We firmly believe such a study to be effective must be based on well recognized principles—principles which are in no way self-contradictory, or in any way inconsistent with correct language and common-sense.

As we proceed in our study of each mention of the subject in Scripture, we shall find numerous instances where the living existence of both Father and Son are especially stated and confirmed by actual demonstration. No equivalent, from beginning to end of Scripture, can be found regarding the Holy Spirit.

No more fair way to find out the meaning attached by any author to a particular word can be adopted than to examine every use made of it throughout his work; and it will readily be acknowledged, for very obvious reasons, that his first use of the word is a fair index to every subsequent use; moreover, the first use will be in its primary and most important sense.

It will be generally agreed that the following terms all have reference to the same Spirit of God and that those who contend for the personality of the Spirit believe that each of these have direct reference to him and to no other:

"The Spirit of God" (Gen. 1:2; Matt. 12:28).
"The Holy Spirit of God" (Eph. 4:30; John 14:26).
"The Holy Spirit" (Matt. 3:11; Luke 1:35).
"The Spirit of the Lord" (2 Kings 2:16; 2 Cor. 3:17).
"The Spirit" (Neh. 9:30; 1 Tim. 4:1).
"My Spirit" (Gen. 6:3; Joel 2:28).
"Thy Spirit" (Job. 26:13; 34:14).
"The Spirit of truth" (John 14:17; 1 John 4:6).
"The power of the Highest" (Luke 1:35).

Special attention is called to the fact that these various expressions by which the Spirit is known, are not names. In the strict sense the Holy Spirit has no name, and this is a most striking contrast to the numerous and appropriate names of God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ. Bible history attaches much importance to names, and especially among the Hebrews names carried a wealth of meaning. Even the stars, God says, he "called by name," and the Christian is promised a new name. We all love the sentence. "I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine" (Isa. 43:1).

The study of this subject has generally been exclusively confined to the New Testament, and even then has been spasmodic in nature, taking passages here and there out of their connection, and thus unavoidably, if not intentionally, obtaining an erroneous construction. Perhaps another reason why teachers of the orthodox faith (so-called) have confined themselves to the New Testament is the reluctance to admit that the Holy Spirit was a force in human affairs before the promise by Christ of another comforter. They are, however, frequently compelled to recognize the fact somewhat indirectly.

Genesis 1:2

The Authorized Version commences the word with a capital "S." This is corrected in the Revised Version, and is an exceedingly clear instance of how translation may be not translation only, but a commentary also. Being Trinitarian in majority they naturally read into the translation their Trinitarian view by using the capital letter. So clear, however, is the error that the Revisers, who also were Trinitarians, altered it in spite of the consequent exposure of a cherished belief.

Genesis 6:3

This verse is unquestionably generally supposed to apply to the Holy Spirit as a personality. We shall have cause to consider it from another point of view when we come to the New Testament. In the meantime, we have ample evidence of the intended meaning of the term in the verse itself. The margin of the Revised Version gives "rule in" or "abide in" instead if "strive with." The Variorium Bible gives "dwell (or sojourn) in." If we translate the verse "my spirit shall not always abide in man," we have a statement in harmony with other Scriptures, for it is a plain indication that the Almighty will not suffer evil men to be immortal, but will deprive them of the "Spirit of life" (Job 34:14; Psa. 104:30), after reducing their days to the limit of one hundred and twenty years. That such a rendering is correct is the testimony of Dr. Olhauser and Dr. A. Kulmer. In the Septuagint the passage is rendered, "My breath must not continue in these men to this age.' The Peshito, the Chaldee Targum, and Vulgate versions confirm this.

Genesis 41:38

Few of even orthodox believers would accredit this heathen monarch with any knowledge of the "Spirit of God" in the sense regarded by them. That such is not the sense is again plainly intimated by the Revisers in substituting a small "s" for a capital one. The verse following declares it was God, and not a separate personal spirit, who "showed" Joseph "all this." Has not the reader noticed other similar passages of Scripture, where mention being made of the "Spirit" the action is attributed to God. If the "Spirit of God" is the third person in the Trinity co-equal and co-eternal, is such treatment considered? Most emphatically no! Surely those who contend the Holy Spirit is an indwelling person must contend the same for Gen. 41:38. If they do this, they must admit the Holy Spirit pre-existed the time of Christ, and worked along the same lines as the promised advocate which Christ said was to come as "another" comforter. Thus there would be two Spirits occupying the same office.

Exodus 31:3

Here we have a most interesting use of the term "Spirit of God." How mundane many Christians would consider the mechanical arts with which Bezaleel was endowed! They would be too spiritual to be troubled about such things. God filled Bezaleel with his spirit not for service in heaven, but for service on the earth, which God "formed to be inhabited." In Exodus 28:3; 35:35, "filled with wisdom of heart" is given as equivalent to "filled with the Spirit of God," evidently showing that godly characteristics are manifested through Bezaleel in preponderance of daily duties in unison with its natural abilities so amply satisfied by the wonders of the world in which he lived.

"Filled with the Spirit of Wisdom"

We can scarcely pass by such an expression as filled with the Spirit of wisdom" without noticing several similar expressions used in Scripture, and of which more particular notice will be taken in due course.

"Spirit of jealousy" came upon him (Num. 5:14).

"Spirit of grace" poured on house of David (Zech. 12:10).

"Spirit of knowledge, counsel, might, and fear of the Lord" (Isa. 11:2).

"Lying Spirit" (1 Kings 22:23).

"Spirit of bondage" (Rom. 8:15).

"Spirit of slumber" (Rom. 11:8).

"Spirit of truth" (John 14:17; 16:26; 1 John 4:6).

"Spirit of error" (1 John 4:6).

"Spirit of promise" (Eph. 1:13).

Are each of the above separate spirits? I do not know of any who would so contend, yet I would have you take particular notice that the phraseology used in connection with these is identical to that used of the "Holy Spirit" and "Spirit of God," viz: "Come upon," "pour," "rest upon," "given," "sealed with," etc., so that "things which are equal to the same thing are equal to one another." If one is a person the others must be also.

The book of Leviticus has no mention of the Spirit of God.

Numbers 11:16,17

The next allusion to it is in Num. 11:16,17 where God says, "I will take the spirit which is upon thee, and put it upon them." Clearly the "Spirit of God" (or Holy Spirit) is indicated here. Can the Spirit of God be a personality if it can be given to, or severally "rest upon" seventy persons at once? Assuredly not. Evidently also Moses continued to retain a portion, for he bore the burden of government with the seventy elders.

THE GREAT WAR AND THE COMING KING

A great war is raging, the worst the world has ever seen, with an intense fiendishness on one side at least, sparing neither man, woman nor child, which appears to them to stand in their way of success. With crowns and thrones being toppled into the dust heap, with the world in the greatest condition of unrest, surely we ought to find something in prophecy that would let us know something about it, and yet many devout believers seem to be in a maze to find anything about it in the grand old book. This has been greatly caused in some quarters at least by some so-called great expounders of prophecy claiming knowledge to themselves beyond their day, and settling prophecy as fulfilled: some of which is just being enacted now. In those days of the past when the supposed great ones had settled everything, if anyone dared to differ from them he was denounced as a heretic and put out of the synagogue. Many of such cases occurred.

I will give here just one instance of this kind of blundering by a supposed great authority. Isaiah 18:1 in the Hebrew reads: "Ho to the land shadowing with wings which is beyond the waters of Ethiopia!" This shadowing with wings was set down by him to mean the sails of the British ships that were to convey the Jews back to Palestine. Another writer wrote a large pamphlet proving to his own satisfaction at least that the wings referred to were the steam engines in the British ships, as if sails or steam engines shadowed over Great Britain! But anyone who will go there now will have no difficulty in learning what the passage means if he will just use his eyes and look upwards, he will see the "wings" above him frequently, both friend and foe. Up till June 1914, the world was crying "peace, peace." The preachers were preaching that it was their mission to bring round a millennium of peace, and many of them believed that they were fast accomplishing it. Andrew Carnegie, the man with the millions, built a palace at The Hague; and many beside him fondly imagined that all the jarring nations would go there and arbitrate their differences. But now the tremendous storm has come and Andrew Carnegie is reported to be "in his dotage, and wails to his wife daily, 'Has the war ended yet? My great dream is gone. I would give all I have to shorten the war by a week.'"

Many other people's dreams have gone to pieces over this beside Carnegie's. The British politicians were caught dreaming, when this war broke upon them, and many valuable lives were lost before they had time to waken up, but they had plenty of warning before it came. The leading soldiers knew it was coming. Lord Roberts for years warned the government of its coming, but they slept and dreamed on till the Kaiser got in some of his fine planned work. In 1859 in Rowalpindee on the foot hills of the Himalaya mountains Sir Colin Campbell came to bid my regiment goodbye (the 93 Highlanders) before he returned to Britain. He was our commander-in-chief during the mutiny. Among other things he said: "Men, I expect a great European war, and I will have you all home to fight with me." I was watching for that great European war till it came upon the world. I am also looking and waiting for a greater event than that. I started to look many years ago for the coming of the great King, who is going to take all governments into his own hands and bring peace on earth and justice to all. I had learned before '59 that the orthodox preachers were not preaching the second coming of Christ, which I found the Bible taught, and then I read my Bible under a good deal of persecution. The soldiers were brave and ready for any fight, but they were a most ungodly lot; and if one persisted in reading his Bible, he had to stand the taunts and jeers of a crowd. The only physical violence that ever I received from them was a book thrown at my head, but many of the early Christians had to suffer much greater trials.

Revelation 16 is a vivid description of this war. Possibly all of it is not being fulfilled now, but much of it is. The great trouble in the proper understanding of this chapter to many believers arises from a number of causes. In the first place, it is written by an orientalist to an oriental people, much of it in highly figurative language, and the only way to understand it is to study carefully the other prophets, especially Ezekiel and Daniel, and keep oneself posted as far as possible in history. Another great difficulty concerning the understanding of this chapter to some believers who have cordially accepted the explanations of some of the great men of the past, who have made almost the whole of it fulfilled a hundred years ago. The French Revolution and the Napoleonic wars were, according to certain expositors, a fulfilment of John's prophecy. When that was given and accepted by man, this terrible calamity was yet in the womb of the future, but the French Revolution was not a patch to this thing. The angels are now pouring out the vials of God's wrath upon the earth such as was never done to the same extent before, and why is this being done? The nations have corrupted God's word and shed the blood of the saints and prophets, and God is punishing them for their iniquity. The Scriptures are plain enough and are now translated into many languages, and any one who will take the trouble to read them prayerfully and carefully, throwing away man-made doctrines, can see that the clergy of all denominations are not teaching religion as taught by Jesus Christ and his apostles. It took me between three and four years to thoroughly convince myself of that fact, but after a study of them night and day I saw no way to avoid the fact.

Well, God has at length brought this grievous calamity on the world because they will not follow the plain teaching of his word! The sea is sometimes used for peoples and nations. See Rev. 13. Surely if there has been any time in the world's history, when the actual sea and rivers have run with blood it has been since the war started. The fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun. What does that mean? I was puzzled for a time what that meant, but now it is a common saying in regard to nations and rulers that they have taken their place or have lost their place in the sun. This verse then means the angel is pouring out God's wrath upon many of the rulers of the world and they are falling from their thrones, and some more of them will go yet before this war is finished. The fifth angel's vial will be poured out shortly upon the seat of the beast which sits in Rome. For they have blasphemed the name of the God of heaven, and repented not of their deeds. The sixth angel has been pouring out his vial for a long time now upon the Euphrates or the Turkish power, which has desolated God's land, persecuted and destroyed his people, and the day of God's vengeance is now coming upon them, and they will not only be driven out of Europe 'bag and baggage,' but their power will be wiped from the face of the earth sooner or later, that the way may be prepared for the land shadowing with wings to bring God's scattered and peeled people to their own land and to get conditions ready for the coming of the great King as described in Zechariah 12th and 14th chapters. Many events have yet to occur before these two chapters can be fulfilled, and God's people must be slow in making announcements that Christ is coming to the world to take to himself his great power and reign on Mount Zion at a certain time, for great mischief has been done in the past by supposed great men setting dates for his coming. In 1864 I intended to go to New Zealand, but I was assured by one who was supposed to be a great authority that Christ would be here before I could get there! And small prophets have been setting dates ever since. Let us work on in the Master's service, and if we do so, whether we are asleep or awake when he comes, he will find us and give us our reward. "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

WHAT IS THE DUTY OF AN ISOLATED BROTHER OR SISTER IN REGARD TO THE LORD'S SUPPER

This question is asked of me, and I will answer to the best of my ability through The Restitution, so all can read the answer.

We read where "two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them (Matt. 18:20). And we are commanded to not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but to exhort one another and so much the more as ye see the day approaching (Heb. 10:25). Well, the day is approaching: what shall we do? We can exhort one another by correspondence; but we cannot assemble together. We think this applies to organized churches. Again, Jesus said, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day" (John 6:53-54). Our duty seems very plain, where there are two or three, but there seems to be no provision made for one. Is it a sin for one to live isolated? It would almost seem that it was, as one cannot partake of the sacrament, as Christ and his disciples did, and that is our pattern (Matt. 26:26; Mark 14:22; Luke 22:19). The broken bread, and wine, represents Christ's flesh and blood. Perhaps it takes the place of manna that God fed the children of Israel on in the wilderness. For Moses said unto them, "This is the bread which the Lord hath given you to eat." And every one had to gather according to his eating: so each individual in order to live was responsible for his own life by his own acts (Exod. 16:15-21). And if they overdid the gathering, they sinned in the sight of God (verse 20), just as much as the one that eateth and drinketh unworthily (1 Cor. 11:25-31).

Now we, like the Israelites, are in the "wilderness of sin," and must eat of the bread of life in order to live eternally; and as the Israelite ate his own gathering, so we I think can fulfill the sacramental law by partaking of it alone, just as we are commanded to pray alone "in secret," and God will reward us openly (Matt. 6:6). If the partaking of the sacrament is essential to obtain eternal life then we isolated ones must partake alone with Christ. "He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks. "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit" (Rom. 14:17-23). So in regard to the Lord's supper I would say: "Let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind" (Rom. 14:5). "If any man serve me him will my Father honor" (John 12:26). If the isolated brother or sister is fully persuaded that it is a "Christian duty" to partake of the Lord's supper at certain times, then it is right to partake alone and it would be a sin not to. "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. 10:31).

PROVE IT

"Bring ye the whole tithe into the store-house, that there may be food in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of Hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Let us prove the Lord and see if he will not faithfully keep his promise to "open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing." A blessing that will not only fill your store-house with gear, but your hearts and lives with grain. Some of the greatest blessings of this life are not merely material ones.

A man in a western mining town once addressing an audience asked them to contribute to a worthy charity, and he closed his appeal by saying in the blunt, western manner that his hearers could so well understand: "The Good Book says 'he that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord.' Now, if you like the security, come down with the dust."

Let us lend freely to the Lord, thereby laying up treasures for ourselves in the world to which we all are hastening and feeling assured of being blessed an hundred fold in the present life.

Let us share our abundance or our little, not with the selfish hope of personal gain but because our hearts are filled with thankfulness and with love that greatest motive in heaven and earth

Because it is but a proper expression of love and gratitude to God for all the blessings we have received from him. Jesus said: "Freely ye have received, freely give."

1. I should give cheerfully, "not grudgingly or of necessity; for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." I should be glad of opportunities to give. I should cultivate a love of giving, so that it will become a pleasure to me. It is thus that I shall come to have the spirit of Christ.

2. I should give prayerfully, asking the blessing of God upon my offerings.

3. I should give systematically. This is implied in the rule requiring me to consecrate a fixed portion of my income to the Lord. I should not leave my giving to be governed by impulse or convenience.

4. I should give intelligently. Having set aside a fixed portion of my income for the Lord's treasury, I should inform myself with regard to the relative claims of the different objects which will come before me.

Giving thus cheerfully, modestly, prayerfully, systematically and intelligently to the cause of Christ, I may confidently look for his blessing upon my gifts, my business and upon my soul, if the gifts are made in the spirit of love and for the honor and glory of him who is good and whose mercy endureth forever. Selected by Auntie Wince.

FAITH

Eph. 3:17: "That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith, that ye being rooted and grounded in love . . . ."

The first thing we must know is what the faith is. Paul in Heb. 11:1 says: "Now faith is the substance of the things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Third verse: "Through faith we know that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of the things which do appear. By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain. By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death. By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet prepared an ark to the saving of his house. By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed, and he went out not knowing whither he went."

This is the faith of Abraham, and also the faith of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. We are a chosen people; we have been called out of darkness into his marvellous light to see the beauty of his only begotten Son which he has given us that through him we might have everlasting life. What a peculiar people we must be! The called of God! What a calling! Let us continue steadfast in his love unto the end and great shall be our reward. If we are only ready to meet Jesus at his appearing!

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

EDITORIAL

During the week we have lost by death Sister Jane McKinley. Funeral services were held in the Church of God July 5th.

The Young People's Society of Cleveland have lost two of its members by the removal of Brother and Sister Everett Murray to Unionville. They have only left us temporarily, but we miss them nevertheless.

Our visitors have been Brother Earl, of Barberton, Brother and Sister Fankhonuer, and Brother and Sister John Grief, of Unionville, O.; Brother and Sister Lent and Sister Bauk, of Fonthill, Ont., Canada.

JESUS KEPT IN VIEW

"Looking unto Jesus . . . Consider him (Heb 12:2,3).

Both expressions make Jesus the object of especial attention, but each from a distinct point of view. The former represents the contestant as withdrawing his gaze from everything but the great Forerunner, who is seated at the goal as Judge. His career, his victory, is the animating consideration. The latter expression conceives the contestant as having concentrated his gaze upon the great Exemplar before him, and as now considering the great difference between the way this Chief Leader made his race, and the easier conditions under which the follower is making his; as a fretful passenger in a palace car might "consider" Fremont's exploration of the route. It means to make a comparison.

So we have—

1. The exclusive Beholding.
2. The comparative Considering.

COMMUNICATION

"They shall make known unto you all things which are done here" (Col. 4:9).

Dear Sir:

Find enclosed twenty-five cents, for which please send me six each of the "Bible Lessons on First Principles," respectively, "Introduction" and The Word of God in Three-fold Aspect." I became interested from reading The Restitution given me by Mr. J. Conaway.

Thanking you, Mrs. H. Loveless.

BAPTISM

Russell P. Emigh, upon confession of faith, was baptized in Yellow River, near Burr Oak, Ind., June 29, 1917. The readers of this paper will remember that Brother Emigh is the young man that changed our daughter Venus' name from VanVactor to Emigh about a year ago. He credits Venus with his conversion, and we are glad to say Amen. Brother and Sister Emigh live in Kankakee, Ill., where we have no church organization.

We wish for Russell a constant and full growth in the Christian life until he shall come to the full stature of a man in Christ Jesus, who is our head in all things, and be a faithful servant in the work of the Lord, and thus be worthy to receive a faithful servant's reward when Jesus comes.

D. E. VanVactor.

CONFERENCE NOTICE

The annual Conference of the church of God of Indiana will be held at Roll, August 9 to 12. May all who can possibly attend this meeting do so. Let each church send in a report of its year's work, also send one or more delegates to represent them in conference session.

Good speakers will be present, and a good profitable meeting is anticipated. Time is short; remember the date.

A RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSY IN JAPAN

Ever since Buddhism was first introduced into Japan from China and India in the sixth century a struggle has been in progress between it and the Shinto religion. Shintoism which literally means the "way of the gods" is fundamentally a system of ancestral worship. The gorgeous ritual and the exalted moral code of Buddhism proved extremely attractive to the people. The Shintoists who embodied the native Japanese beliefs were forced to put their ritual into written form. Despite all they could do, however, the influence of Buddhism was so strong that the native religion fell into decadence for a time and Buddhist priests came to serve in most of the Shinto temples.

About the year 1700 a revival of "pure Shinto" occurred and in the revolution of 1868 Buddhism was finally disestablished and Shintoism was made the only state religion. Large numbers of Buddhist temples were turned over to the Shintoists after having been divested of their Buddhist ornaments. The majority of the people are Buddhist believers and as a consequence Buddhism later revived somewhat.

Shintoism has remained the state religion, much to the dissatisfaction of the Buddhist leaders who were made even more discontented when, at the coronation of Emperor Yoshihito some time ago, their representatives were not recognized to the same extent as the Shintoists

A delegation of Buddhists recently submitted to the government a series of resolutions, previously adopted by the sects of the empire, declaring that since the constitution fully guarantees freedom of religious thought, the official attitude toward Buddhism shows a lack of sympathy. The government was urged to enact a new religious law and was asked to bar Shinto priests from conducting religious services, the resolutions contending that Shintoism is nothing more than a system of rites.

The resolutions also asked that the officials who treated Buddhist representatives disrespectfully at the coronation ceremonies be held responsible and that the right to be elected members of legislative assemblies throughout the empire be extended to Buddhist priests. The presentation of the petition to the government has renewed and intensified the long-standing controversy between the two religions.

A GREAT CLOUD OF WITNESSES

Gleanings by Flora A. Wood

"This (Jesus) is my beloved Son" (Jehovah).

"I came forth from the Father" (Jesus).

"Thou (Jesus) art . . . . the Son of the living God" (Peter).

"Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God. Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father" (John).

"And he (Paul) preached Christ . . . . that he is the Son of God" (Acts 9:20).

A stream cannot rise above its fountain-head, sinful flesh and a carnal mind never have and never can beget a perfect and sinless being" (S. H. Thomas).

"It was not unto the angels he said, 'I will be unto him a Father, and he shall be unto me a Son.' Thus we see Jesus was made better than the angels, because he is God's own Son by begettal" (Almira Brooks). "That God ordained that like should produce like, and the law of generation and marriage, no one wants to deny. The human race, if left to itself, must follow out these laws, but God is not bound by them. If God is able to do a thing it is right for him to do it, for God is not able to do that which is not right. If God raised up children from the stones, he could count them as Abraham's seed. That God did set aside the law of natural generation in the case of Christ is proved by the following Scripture: 'It (the seed of the woman) shall bruise thy (the serpent's) head.' You will notice that it is to be the seed of the woman. 'But when the fullness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman' (Gal. 4:4). God did not adopt a son of Joseph and send him. God sent his own Son" (James A. Patrick).

"And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and (zaroh) her seed; he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel' (Gen. 3:15). Notice here how God has reversed his otherwise invariable order of Jewish genealogy, the Hebrew zaroh being the term for "her seed." If otherwise it would be zaroam, 'their seed,' or more properly zaroi, 'his seed.' Again, this term zaroh, 'her seed,' is the only time mentioned here in the Old Testament. In all other instances it is always and under all circumstances zorai, 'his seed.' That in itself is sufficient to prove to any one who understands the Hebrew language that the coming one, who is to bruise the head of satan, is to be miraculously born, and that he is to come from zaroh, 'her seed' only" (Philippe Spievacque)

"If we tore out of our Bibles those pages which speak of Jesus as the divine Son of God, we would have very little left but the covers" (Flora A. Wood).

"Woe unto them that put darkness for light, and light for darkness" (Isaiah).

"If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book. And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life" (Jesus).

The German government endeavours to keep German soldiers at the front as well as those in hospitals well supplied with good reading material. Large travelling libraries go about from place to place supplying the men with novels by the best authors, periodicals and technical works. More than 100,000 volumes of choice books have been sent to German prisoners in Russia, it is said.

NORTHWEST CONFERENCE REPORT

The Northwest Conference of the Church of God convened at Felida, Wash., June 21st to 24th. Quite a number of the brethren came from a distance. The opening address on Thursday evening was given by Brother Darby, of Corvallis. Friday morning Brother Smith, also from Corvallis, spoke for us. In the afternoon a social meeting was held. In the evening Brother Darby spoke on faith.

Saturday morning, business meeting and in the afternoon old Brother Prosser spoke to us on, "I am coming again—Jesus." Brother Darby spoke to us again in the evening.

Sunday morning Brother Prosser spoke again He was able to speak only twice, but how we enjoyed his sermons on the blessed promises. It was a blessing just to have him with us. In the afternoon we went down to the river and Brother Darby baptized Elwood Caples and Pearl Wolfe. There are three and perhaps more to be baptized later. After the baptizing we had communion. In the evening Brother Darby preached on the prophecies that are being fulfilled. At our business meeting a committee of three was appointed on "Resolutions" and they gave the following

Resolutions

We, your committee, submit for your consideration the following: Be it resolved, that we express our sympathy to the family of Brother J. B. Wolfe in the loss of a beloved wife and mother. Again it is resolved, we tender sympathy to Sister P. G. Wolfe and family in their recent bereavement through the death of a loving husband and father.

And it is further resolved, we tender sympathy to the family of Brother Frank L. Benson in their recent bereavement through the death of Brother Frank L. Benson. We feel the church of God has suffered a great loss in his death, but we believe when Christ comes we shall all meet in his kingdom.

And we also wish to express our most sincere appreciation of the kindness of the church and friends in Felida and thanks for their kindness and generous hospitality during this meeting, and to Brother Darby for his faithful discharge of duty and untiring effort for the good of the cause.

And resolved, that we are thankful that our dear Brother Prosser has been spared to meet with us once more.

Letter from Sister Libbie Palmer

Dear Sister Eva and All the Dear Ones in conference Assembled, Greetings:

Finding at last that we could not go, I must write and bid you all good cheer. You cannot know how hard it is to give up meeting you again, for it is the one brightest spot in all the year that I look forward to, for there is no tie on earth that binds closer than our common fellowship. And now when all the world is mourning under this dark cloud of war we can only pray, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." I cannot look for any peace or rest for the world without him. It seems to me that Daniel could not better describe this awful time than he did by saying, "Then will Michael stand up." Surely we cannot see the end of these things. We can only wait and pray and try to be ready. Whatever may come we have a sure promise that if we are hiding in him, "it shall not come nigh thee." So we can only trust and wait for the final great gathering together in a glorious reunion in the kingdom of God.

I send greeting to you all, and especially to dear old Brother Prosser, if he should be there. I shall be with you in spirit in every session of the meeting. Christian love to you all.

LIBERTY BONDS

At this time when the most stupendous drama in the history of the world is being enacted, and which will lead up to the closing scene of this present era, our attention is arrested by the vast loans which are being made by this country to the warring nations, the issuance of liberty bonds, and the universal response in the purchase of same on the part of the people.

We, the people of the Most High, have been investing in liberty bonds from time to time, for lo, these many years. As one by one take on the name of Christ, they become holders of liberty bonds, without money and without price, which requires in return their loyal allegiance to the King of kings and Lord of lords. The investment yields three hundred fold, not only in this age, but in the age to come, and are the only bonds ever issued which make men free indeed.

We, as an enlightened people, should not invest in these so-called liberty bonds just put on the market, for in so doing we become a party to the fearful carnage that is devastating this beautiful earth which God has given to the children of men. It takes courage, brothers and sisters, to live close to God today, and to do his will, keeping our garments unspotted from the world. It is always so easy to go with the crowd. Let us keep in mind the tremendous sacrifice on the part of him by whose acts we were made free, and not become entangled again in the yoke of bondage.

We are singularly blessed in that we are being permitted to see the ripening and fulfilment of God's plan in this, the close of the Gentile age. His spirit is still in the world, hovering over his children, and will not be withdrawn until the Bride is taken away. Then the cry shall go forth, "Woe, woe, to the inhabiters of the earth by reason of the other voices of the trumpets which are yet to sound!"

Minnie McIlrath.

WOMEN IN ENGLISH CHURCHES

While in the past two years the cause of woman suffrage has made material advance in England as a result of conditions arising from the war, and while the opposition to women as competitors of men in various trades and occupations has disappeared in large measure, the established church still refuses them as being equal to men.

Some time ago a national mission—a series of revival services—was decided on and it was proposed to emphasize in this mission "the equality of men and women in the sight of God—equality in privilege, equality in calling, equality in opportunity in service." This proposal was at once denounced by the high church wing of the church as "pestilential heresy" and as "mischievous nonsense" that would make "the church a laughingstock throughout Christendom."

Women were forbidden to speak in the churches under any circumstances by most of the bishops, but the bishop of London decided that they might address congregations so long as they did not speak from the pulpit, the lectern or the chancel steps. Because of this concession the high churchmen threatened to strike and refuse to have any part in the mission, so the bishop of London had to retract. Another bishop who was disposed to permit women to take some part in the work announced somewhat sarcastically: "I have therefore decided that during the mission I shall not sanction any woman telling her sisters of the Savior's love in any church in the diocese."

It is said that the sentiment in England opposed to allowing women to speak in churches is akin to that at the bottom of the opposition to their entering the various professions and trades, that is, the men fear that the women would take some of the positions from them or crowd some of them out entirely. It is predicted that the time is not far distant, however, when women will be allowed to preach in England, just as they are now permitted to practice law and medicine and to hold various positions formerly monopolized by men. In this country where the ministry is more or less open to women, no harmful crowding out of the male preachers has been perceptible nor has the average quality of the ministry been lowered in the least.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY FOR TRUTH

"For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness; because that which may be known of God is manifest to them; for God hath showed it to them" (Rom. 1:18,19).

There is no reason why any human being of ordinary intelligence should refuse to acknowledge God, and accept the truth as taught in his holy word. "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness." This Scripture is very plain, and no man living would willingly incur the wrath of God, yet so long as we refuse to accept this great gift of eternal life, that is promised us if we repent and believe on him, just so long we are grieving and dishonoring God and in danger of incurring his just wrath. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation ?"

One may not have the excuse that he has no opportunity, or cannot understand the word of God, for his power and glory is manifested all around us in many ways. We can look about us and see the wonderful creation, the trees, plants, flowers, grain, and all products of the earth which minister to life. We look at the heavens and see more of God's handiwork in the sun moon and stars, made and kept in their places to give light to the earth. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." We know that this Omnipotent Being is the ruler of the universe. How beautiful the awe-inspiring words, "Be still and know that I am God!" He has shown us these things so there may be no reasonable excuse for us to ignore his precious and exceeding great promises. "Because that which may be known of God is manifest to them; for God hath showed it unto them. For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead" (Rom. 1:20). All who go carelessly through life continually "putting off" the saving of their souls, and ignoring God's express commands, are taking fearful chances. The most lowly and ignorant of the human creation may acknowledge and serve him: they cannot help but see his abounding love and mercy in the unmerited blessings and privileges given us. "Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

To all unsaved ones, I would say, do not wait. The time draws near when Christ will come for his chosen ones. I pray God we may all be found ready and worthy to be clothed in that heavenly garb, pure and shining, clean and white. "Blessed are they that are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb."

Jennie McNee.

Self-Respect

Think well of thyself. We should respect ourselves as we would have others respect us. Self-respect is the noblest garment with which a man may clothe himself. Self-respect will be found at the root of all the virtues—cleanliness, sobriety, chastity, morality, religion.

Young men! Let the nobleness of your minds impel you to its improvements. You are too strong to be defeated save by yourself. Let not a craven heart or a love of ease rob you of the inestimable benefit of self-culture, and you shall reap a harvest more valuable than gold or jewels.

D. C. Robison.

"A ROOT OUT OF A DRY GROUND"

Writing in "The Christian" on Isaiah 53:2, Dr. Stuart Holden says:

"There is nothing more striking in this, the most wonderful of all chapters of Messianic prophecy, than the suggestion of unlikeliness which Isaiah here expresses. When Christ comes, it shall not be as a plant which springs from well-watered soil, whose life can be thus accounted for naturally, but, as one for whom some supernatural explanation must be sought. This is just the Hebrew way of saying that Christ cannot be explained on human grounds: that he is himself the greatest miracle of all: and that only the divine character of the seed can account for such a plant. There is nothing in his surroundings, in the obscurity of his earthly origin, in the lowliness of his early associations, or in the poverty of his racial inheritance to account for his wisdom, his words, or his width of vision. It is not surprising that in the day when prophecy was fulfilled in himself, the men who knew him best should say, 'Whence hath this man such knowledge?' 'Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?'

"Looking at his work in the lives of men today, we see him still 'as a root out of a dry ground.' For we see purity emerging as it were out of impurity, humility growing in the soil of pride, generosity flourishing from selfishness, and the new life springing up in strength and beauty out of the dry ground of the old. This word is fulfilled afresh in each one who humbly confesses 'that Christ liveth in me.' And how is is the confidence of those who go forth to sow the good seed upon the highway. For Christ takes root in the unlikeliest ground, and in the veriest desert the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley will bloom."

STRAUSS SEES JEWISH NATION WHEN WAR ENDS

New York, July 5.—A Jewish nation with modern cities, a free government and a population of two million will be established in Palestine after the war, in the opinion of Nathan Strauss, philanthropist. He looks for an exodus of Jews from the United States and other countries.

"We will establish a government along whatever lines the allies suggest," said Strauss. "There is no selfishness about it. The Bible says we will have our own country back and the allies are winning it back. They must decide what is best."

He indicates, however, that a republican form of government under a protectorate of the powers would be best. "Given half a chance we will make it the Paradise of the earth," he added. "It will be up-to-date in every particular. Palestine will support 2,000,000 people, and it has only 600,000 now. Educationally and religiously it will be the promised land of the whole world."—The Cleveland Press, July 5.

More Costly than Gold.—The expression "worth their weight in gold" is a familiar one. It used to be an accepted fact that gold was the most valuable of the precious metals, but now that has ceased to be true. There has recently appeared, under warrant of the highest scientific authority, a statement of values based upon the commercial prices of various rare metals. A pound avoirdupois of gold is put in this statement as worth $300; but chromium is worth $490 a pound, and palladium is worth $560. Uranium is worth $980, and osmium is worth $1,000 a pound. Barium costs $1,900 a pound; rhodium, $2,500; and arium, $3,600. Indium costs $4,400; thorium, $8,300; and rubidium, $9,500 a pound. All these figures seem small, however, when compared to the value of gallium, which according to the scientific standard, is worth $68,000 a pound. So it is shown that even in the metallic world there are many things more precious than gold. In the intellectual and spiritual world there are a great many things that gold will not buy. It can not purchase a good conscience, or contentment, or any of those rare and beautiful virtues which are to be found only in the treasure-house of the soul. Gold is a good servant, but a poor god.

A VACATION TRIP

Let us suppose a railway to have been built between the earth and Centarus, said the lecturer. By a consideration of this railway's workings we can get some idea of the enormous distance that intervenes between the constellation Centarus and us—that being the "nearest" to our solar system.

Suppose that I should decide to take a trip on this new aerial line to the nearest fixed star. I ask the ticket agent what the fare is, and he answers:

"The fare is very low, sir. It is only a cent each hundred miles."

"And what, at that rate, will the through ticket one way cost?" I ask.

"It will cost just $2,750,000,000," he answers. I pay for my ticket, and board the train. We set off at a tremendous rate. "How fast", I ask the brakeman, "are we going?"

"Sixty miles an hour, sir," says he, "and its a through train. There are no stops."

We'll soon be there, then, won't we?" I resume.

"We'll make good time, sir," says the brakeman.

"And when will we arrive?"

"In just 48,663,000 years."

The minister was shaking hands with a new member of his congregation, a girl fresh from Sweden, and said, cordially, "I would like to know your address, so I can call on you."

"Oh," said the girl, innocently, "I haf a man."

The Halt

"Wait a little," said the robin,
"For the song I have to sing."
"Wait a little," said the rosebud,
"For a bit of blossoming."
"I know the world is busy,
But the sunshine and the smile
Shouldn't wholly be forgotten,
Let us wait a little while."

Wait a little on the beauty,
Wait a little on the song,
They will leave you better fitted
For the tasks that need the strong.
Life holds nothing for the laggard;
But the road is many a mile,
And there's hope and strength in halting
Only just a little while.
—Washington Star.

Wait a little, and the trouble
That this world is passing through,
Will be shattered by the presence
Of our Lord, the Savior true.
He who is God's great annointed
And was here on earth before,
Will come again, and that shortly—
And "peace on earth" he will restore. A. D. D.

Importance of Small Things

I am thankful that I have learned, not only to see that I ought to say, but to feel what it is truly to say, "good is the will of the Lord" in little things as well as in great things. Many who seek to be enabled, and are in measure enabled, to say this in great things, have yet to learn what it is to say it in little things; and in consequence, they are often heard complaining of what in little matters God appoints for them, in a way that contradicts the faith that "all things work together for good to them that love God," and that, therefore, there is a good in all things, to be extracted from each thing as it comes, by receiving it in the light of love. Love to God, that love which receives God himself as the portion of the soul in every cup, its sweetest ingredient, whatever other sweet ingredients may be in it, is as essential to the right understanding of what God does in providence as the faith that he is love in what he does.—John McLeod Campbell.

"The fool no wisdom ever learned
But it in him to folly turned."—Alger.

Eulogium on Love

If I create wealth beyond the dreams of past ages and increase not love, my heat is the flush of fever and my success will deal death.

Though I have foresight to locate the fountain of riches, and powers to pre-empt them, and skill to tap them, and have no loving vision for humanity, I am blind.

Though I give my profits to the poor, and make princely endowments to those who toil for me, if I have no human fellowship of love with them, my life is barren and doomed.

Love is just and kind. Love is not greedy nor coveteous. Love exploits no one; it takes no unearned gain; it gives more than it gets. Love does not break down the lives of others to make wealth for itself: it takes wealth to build the life of all. Love seeks solidarity; it tolerates no divisions; it prefers equal work-mates: it share its efficiency. Love enriches all men, educates all men, gladdens all men.

The values created by love never fail; but whether there are class privileges, they shall fail; whether there are millions gathered they shall be scattered; and whether there are vested rights, they shall be abolished. For in the past strong men lorded it in lust and strove for their own power and pride, but in the future, when the perfect hath come, the strong shall serve the common good.

Before the sun of Christ brought in the dawn, men competed, and forced tribute from meekness; but when the full day shall come, they will work as mates in love.

For now we see in the fog of selfishness, darkly: but then in the love of Christ, clearly: now we see our fragmentary ends, but then we shall see the destinies of the race as God would have us see them. But now abideth honor, justice and love, these three; but the greatest of these is love.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

BE STRONG

"Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of good courage . . . . for the Lord thy God is with thee" (Josh. 1:9)

"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the consummation of the age" (Matt. 28:20, R. V.)

Tired? Well, what of that?
Didst fancy life was spent on beds of ease,
Fluttering the rose leaves scattered by the breeze?
Come! rouse thee, work while it is called today;
Laggard, arise—go forth upon the way!

Lonely? Yes, what of that?
Some must be lonely; 'tis not given to all
To feel a heart responsive rise and fall,
To blend another life into its own; work on!
Work may be done in loneliness.

Dark? True, and what of that?
Didst fondly dream the sun would never set?
Dost fear to lose thy way? Take courage yet;
Thy steps will guided be, and guided right.

Hard? Ah, and what of that?
Didst fancy life one summer holiday,
With lessons none to learn, and naught but play?
Go, get thee to thy task; conquer or die!
It must be learned—learn it then, patiently.

No help? Nay, 'tis not so!
Though human help be far, thy God is nigh;
Who feeds the ravens, hears his children cry;
He's near thee, wheresoe'er thy foot-steps roam;
And he will guide thee, light thee, bring thee home.
Aye, doubt him not, the victory is won.—Selected by H. E. Russell.

AN INCURABLE GRUMBLER

Mrs. Higgins was an incurable grumbler. The minister thought he had found something about which she could not complain; the old lady's crop of potatoes was certainly the finest for miles around. "Ah, you must be well pleased," he said, beaming as he met her. "Every one's saying how splendid your potatoes are this year." The old lady glowed at him as she answered: "They're not so poor. But where's the bad ones for the pigs?"

Enthusiasm is as good a thing in religion as fire in a cook stove.

Wear a smile—it is cooler in summer and warmer in winter.

PULPIT ECHOES

DOCTRINAL AND PRACTICAL ASPECTS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

A Sermon Delivered by Robt. G. Huggins in Cleveland, Ohio, June 24th, 1917, and Reported for "The Restitution" by George B. Alldridge

The great central theme of the Bible is the kingdom of God. This to be correctly understood, must be reviewed firstly in its doctrinal aspects, and secondly in its practical aspects.

Doctrinal Aspects of the Kingdom of God

To Jesus the doctrine of the kingdom of God was always paramount. We read in Luke 8:1: "And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. and the twelve were with him." Notice the subject matter of the gospel of the kingdom was "glad tidings." The disciples of our Lord, as recorded in Luke 9:1,2,6 closely followed him in also making this the chief theme of their preaching and life's vocation. Paul in Gal. 1:6-8 realized the great importance of preaching the gospel of the kingdom; in fact, he distinctly states this to be the "gospel of Christ," and the only gospel he knew. accursing any man, or even angels that preached any other. Its importance and significance Paul further shows in Rom. 1:16 to be "the power of God unto salvation." Without its knowledge and obedience to its requirements none can be saved.

Practical Aspects of the Kingdom of God

The practical aspects of the gospel of the kingdom, when reviewed from several Scriptures, are startling and remarkable. From many Scriptures we learn that it is

I. A Divine Political Government to be Set up on the Ruins of Present Governments

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed. and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever" (Dan. 2:44). Isa. 9:6,7 tells us exactly the nature, location and the executive of this remarkable government, that will, as these Scriptures prove, be established upon the ruins of all the present governments of the earth. Jehovah says: "I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen" (Heb. nations) (Hag. 2:22).

"And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven saying. The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever" (Rev. 11:15). "The kingdoms of this world" mean every nation, none are exempt; all must come under the reign of our Lord and his Christ. "I saw in the night vision and, behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of Days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom shall not be destroyed" (Dan. 7:13, 14. 18, 22, 27).

God has a purpose for placing his Son as head over this kingdom that he will set up, viz., "For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet" (1 Cor 15:25). Today there are many rulers, kings and governments; but "The Lord shall be king over all the earth; in that day shall there be one Lord. and his name one" (Zech. 14:9). The second Psalm points out unequivocally that every nation ultimately, however obscure or distant they may be, will be compelled to acknowledge Christ as their king. "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen (i. e. nations) for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Please notice the following remarkable language: "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron: thou shalt break them in pieces like a potter's vessel" (Psa. 2:8,9). How will this be accomplished ? God proposes to utilize the present reigning kings, presidents, etc., to bring this about. David declares in Psa. 110:5 that, "The Lord at thy right hand shall strike through kings in the day of his wrath." "When God arises to judgment, to save all the meek of the earth, surely the wrath of man shall praise thee: the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain." Listen: "He shall cut off the spirit (life) of princes; he is terrible to the kings of the earth" (Psa. 76:6, 9, 10, 12).

David in prophecy says, "Thou didst cause judgment to be heard from heaven: the earth feared and was still" (Psa. 76:8). Now notice how John, the revelator, on the Isle of Patmos centuries after David wrote this, in speaking of the very day in which we now live says: "And I saw heaven opened and behold, a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war . . . . Out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And he hath on his vesture, and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS" (Rev. 19:11.13, 15.16).

This clearly reveals to the unbiased mind the fact that the kingdom of God is a divine political government, set up, established and maintained here upon earth, occupying the same area and territory previously occupied by the governments, nations and peoples of our own time and generation. God intends to take this world by conquest in the person of his Son. The present rulers and governments are usurpers. By the medium of Christ and the saints, operating through the nations hostile to each other, God will subjugate all his enemies.

II. The Kingdom of God will Subjugate "All Enemies." Human Governments are the First Enemy it Smites

We wish to rivet your attention especially to Dan. 2:44. Please notice that the first evil the kingdom of God first subjugates and destroys is the earthly kingdoms: "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." Paul recognizes an enemy that will continue to exist as such until the end of the thousand years reign: "Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father: when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority, and power. For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death" (1 Cor. 15:24-26). Instead of the present nominal churches calling themselves "Christians," now represented in all the nations involved in war, "winning the world for Jesus" and establishing the kingdom of God, we find from God's word that

III. All Earthly Governments will be Arrayed Against Christ at His Coming; They will Resist Him and His Government with Arms and Treat Him as an Invader

"Why do the heathen (nations) rage, and the people imagine a vain thing ?" Notice how David answers his own question: "The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord, and against his Anointed saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us. He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision, then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure" (Psa. 2:1-5). Why do they wish to cast away the cords and bands that bind them ? Because the saints are to "execute vengeance upon the nations, and punishments upon the people, to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute upon them the judgments written: this honor have all the saints" (Psa. 149:7-9). Now read Rev. 17:12-18. The beast is pagan Rome. The ten horns or kingdoms emanate from this power. The woman or great city is papal Rome or the papacy. All Bible students are agreed as to the meaning of these symbols.

IV. All Nations Disciplined; Papal Nations Annihilated

Daniel in his night vision saw all this and vividly describes it (Dan. 7:7, 12, 26). The little or eleventh horn is the papacy or papal power. All nations have become drunk with the golden cup in her hand full of abomination and the filthiness of her fornication (Rev. 17:1-7). Paul in 2 Thess. 2:1-12 warned the church that this mystery of iniquity was beginning to corrupt the church even in his day. Open your Bible and read Zech. 14:2-13, and ask yourself if God is not now fulfilling these prophecies ? "All nations" are being gathered, even our own, The United States of America ! The papacy for 1600 years has ursurped the kingdom of God, the pope being God's vicegerent or representative. We who are of the church of God are neither inclined to be pro-German or pro-Ally, but are surely sympathetic with all that is pro-phetic. Current events are rapidly fulfilling prophecy. The first nations to go down into oblivion are the papal nations. The question is asked, "Is this gathering of the nations the great battle of Armageddon ? We answer, Yes ! The Diaglott version renders the word "battle" as "the great war of God Almighty" (Rev. 10:13-16). Armageddon involves the whole arena in which this great struggle exists.

Read Rev. 18:2-19, 20, 24; compare the description with present events. What nations are now suffering the most ? Belgium, the papacy's most loyal and faithful daughter, is exhausted; France, her oldest daughter, is "bled white;" Austria-Hungary is on the verge of exhaustion and revolution; Italy fares no better; Spain at any moment may plunge into the vortex. The finances at the Vatican are in a bad way because "Peter's Pence" no longer flows into its treasury. Belguim was the chief supporter, France next, and our own land, third. What does this mean ? It means that The United States, with these as a papal nation, is doomed. Brethren, God has spoken; his word has gone forth, and it will not return unto him void (Isa. 55:11). Germany invaded Belgium, France and Poland; she is still occupying these countries. Turkey, whom every Bible student knows is the river Euphrates (Rev. 16:12), is fast drying up. Yet she scourged Armenia, a papal country. Russia is in a terrible plight, and the end is not yet. I wonder if we cannot recognize the U-boat atrocities in Rev. 18:17. Verses 9-15 surely embrace the cardinals, bishops, priests, and clergymen of the various protestant bodies. The great battle of Waterloo was fought a little more than a century ago just a short distance from Brussels. Today history is repeating itself only on a more extensive and gigantic scale.

V. Death is the Last Enemy, and War the Last Sin

The world's great Waterloo is near; Christ will be victorious. First, Turkey must go down, followed by the papal kingdoms, and the papacy itself; then the protestant nations: America, Great Britain and Germany. These are all beastly powers and as such go down into hadean oblivion, never to rise again (Rev.19:17-21). Then follows the reign of Christ for a thousand years, when peace and happiness shall reign. At the end of this period men will again organize themselves to make war. This is the great sin of humanity. Under the leadership of Gog and Magog they go up as numerous as the sand of the sea to compass about the camp of the saints and the beloved city, but God intervenes and destroys them all (Rev. 20:719). "To gather them together to battle" (Rev. 20:8) means "to gather them together to war" (Diaglott translation). Thus the last enemy is death, and the last sin is war. Then follows the last judgment, and the final scene of death and hell being cast into the lake of fire—the second death. Then God will make wars to cease unto the ends of the earth(Psa. 46:6-11). The great tragedy of sin that introduced death at the beginning of human history (Rom. 5:12; 6:23), will have wrought out God's purpose. Sin and death will then be destroyed and a new race immortalized and perfected in God's image, will enter the new heaven and the new earth, now pure, holy and blessed with the presence of God himself, who will be all in all and blest for ever more.

PROPHECY CONVERTED INTO HISTORY

Brother Huggins:

By request from several of the brethren I am sending you a paper I read at our Avery meeting, June 24th. If you are short of copy it may do to fill in with. My object has been to present the truth in a way that might arouse interest concerning Christ's return, the resurrection of the dead, the change of the living who are worthy, and the permanent establishment of the kingdom of God in the earth. Events are transpiring in our day which, according to Jesus' own words, point unmistakably to the fulfilment of all these things before the passing of the present generation. This suggested to me the heading for my paper:

SOME EVENTS THE HISTORIANS OF THE NEXT GENERATION WILL WRITE ABOUT

Thrones and Kingdoms Weakened and Fell

A number of important events, marking a new epoch in the history of the world, happened at the close of the last generation. As a result of the great conflict of nations which began in August, 1914, perilous times soon began to be felt in all the nations of the earth. After desperate fighting for almost three years a cry for peace could be heard on every hand. Important events came thick and fast until all nations became involved in the conflict. The cry for peace was still heard, but no honorable peace could be established. Conditions grew worse and worse. Thrones and kingdom which had stood for centuries weakened, tottered and fell. The wealth of the nations and the best of their manhood were poured into the struggle in the vain hope of bringing about a forced peace. The wholesale destruction of food stuffs, together with shortage of crops in various places, soon brought about world famine conditions. Pestilence spread and earthquakes destroyed cities in different quarters of the earth.

A Peace Conference Gave Palestine Back to the Jews

A peace conference was finally called and a league of nations formed to maintain peace. Some of the nations entered the conference rather reluctantly, and an undercurrent of distrust seemed to exist in the negotiations of terms. In the meantime the Jews of the world convened a congress to reorganize themselves into a Jewish nation, and to take concerted action on making demands on other nations for their rights. For over nineteen hundred years they had been scattered among the nations of the earth as corn is sifted in a sieve, and they now saw the opportunity and the necessity of demanding of the powers that Palestine, the land of their fathers, be given back to them that they might re-establish the kingdom of Israel. Through the influence of England and the United States this was granted them. The Jews of the world became awakened, a nation was born in a day, and by the aid of England over a million Jews returned to Palestine in less than a year. Almost all so-called religious denominations favored their return to their homeland in the hope of sending missionaries among them to convert them to Christianity before the Creator of the earth should decide that it had served its period of usefulness as the abode of man and revoke the sacred promise made to Abraham giving him and his seed an everlasting inheritance in the earth.

The Church of God and Its Peculiarities

There was one religious sect, however, that did not believe that the Jews would ever accept an immaterial sky-kingdom set up in their heart, instead of a literal kingdom which their prophets had taught them would some day be restored to them when their Messiah should come; not a new kingdom but the restoration of the one overturned in the days of Zedekiah, the wicked prince of Israel. The Jews as a nation had rejected Jesus as their king for many centuries in spite of the fact that he had told them that he had come but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. He had also confessed before Pilate that he was born into the world to be king of the Jews. The most astonishing fact of all is that the orthodox churches, during the dispensation of Gentile times, completely ignored the many plain statements of all the prophets that Christ was to reign over the house of Israel and bring into subjection all the Gentile nations left on the earth when he returned. God had also plainly promised Abraham that in him and his seed should all the families of the earth be blessed, and the apostles made it plain that Christ was the seed referred to. The only plausible explanaton that can be given for the strange doctrines that crept in back in that age is that man has always been dissatisfied with God's plans and has insisted upon fixing up something he liked better. It began to look then as if the Creator of man and the earth had a great plan, seeing the end from the beginning, and that we are now living in the period when he will manifest his power and cause his will to be done in earth as it is done in heaven. God, too, had promised that the meek should inherit the earth, which had never been done until the present time; he had promised also that a king should reign in righteousness and princes rule in judgment; and we understand now that Christ is the king and the princes are the subordinate ruling power in his kingdom. Those who believed this gospel or good news were known as members of the Church of God, and were looked upon as a peculiar people. They dwelt together as brethren, and believed that the Bible was God's word sent to mankind to be understood. In many places they met as often as twice a week to study the Bible, endeavouring to show themselves approved unto God, workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth, and to talk of their hope. They even went so far as to teach that the apostle James believed what he taught as recorded in the Acts of the Apostles that God was taking from the Gentiles a people for his name, and after this he would return and build again the tabernacle of David that was fallen down, that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom his name be called.

Russia Breaks the Peace Pact of the Allies

The Jews had gotten control of much of the wealth in the nations where they had been, and now with their energy and means were laying plans to rebuild the temple on Mt. Moriah. Without warning the peace pact was broken by Russia, Germany and other allied powers, and it seemed that man's efforts to maintain peace were an utter failure. Russia had plenty of men, but her money was exhausted. England and America had formed a protectorate over Palestine so that the Jews had no military protection over their own, dwelling in unwalled villages. So Russia had an evil thought and decided to swoop down and take them with their wealth. At this juncture God intervened in behalf of his chosen people, their enemies were destroyed on the mountains of Israel, Christ and the saints returned to Jerusalem and were accepted as their long-looked-for Messiah.

Open Graves Found; Friends Missed

Some years prior to this a strange phenomenon happened at various places on the earth which the world was puzzled to explain. Here and there men and women had suddenly disappeared, and even an open grave was now and then found as if the dead had been raised. These open graves were so scarce, however, that it did not cause much of a sensation. Almost all the finely kept cemeteries, with their massive marble monuments, were undisturbed. The most startling thing was that open graves were found in places that had long been forgotten as a burying ground. The sublime fact had been overlooked that God had promised that a book of remembrance would be kept by the recording angel, a true record [illegible] in the Lamb's book of life, and preserved where moth or rust doth not corrupt, or where thieves break through and steal. It was overlooked, too, that it was to be the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom to the little flock. The heathen philosophers, prior to the dispensation of Gentile times, had taught that man had an entity within him that was a part of God and of a never dying nature which was the real man, and at death bid good-by to the body that was placed in the grave, and went to a spirit-world, either to enjoy eternal happiness or suffer conscious and never ending pain in a literal fire that God had made for disobedient mankind. A few who were asked to sanction this error were unable to understand why God did not warn Adam and Eve of such a place, if it existed. Instead, death was pronounced upon them in the event of transgression. This false doctrine was also taught by papal Rome, and toward the close of the Gentile times almost all the protestant churches springing from the papacy, had taught it. Hence it was hard to convince those who had accepted this doctrine that a resurrection of the dead had really taken place, and that these bodies that were laid in the grave were changed from corruption to incorruption, from mortality to immortality, and came forth triumphant over death and the grave. Much weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth is reported from different quarters where many who thought they had a right to the marriage feast were cast into outer darkness.

Jerusalem the Queen City of the World

Jerusalem which, peculiarily located as it is in the geographical centre of all the land surface of the earth, is fast becoming a great world metropolis. People in all lands make yearly pilgrimages to worship the Lord of hosts, and can now understand what Jesus meant centuries ago when he said we were not to swear by Jerusalem because it is the city of the great king. It is now openly declared that faithful Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and David with all the patriarchs, the apostles which Christ appointed to declare to the world the good news concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and the faithful from all nations who believed this mesage, which was called the gospel, are now with Christ at Jerusalem, and share with him the ruling of the nations. The resurrected saints partake of Christ's nature and go and come in a mysterious manner to the world. It is now an accepted fact that the birth of the spirit is not at conversion but at the resurrection, as Jesus tried to teach Nicodemus long years ago. The saints appear unexpectedly at intervals before the executives of the various nations and declare the law which must now go forth from Zion. Some of the nations have submitted and others are suffering drought, pestilence, and destruction as a result of their stubbornness in yielding. The law as given is absolutely just and righteous. Trial by jury and the taking of all testimony is done away with, for the saints judge by quick understanding, and none of the guilty escape or the innocent condemned. The nations of the earth that have long so much desired peace begin to realize that the grand age has come, and are beating their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. Christ declares that he will reign until all enemies shall be put under him, and that the last enemy to be destroyed is death. When this is accomplished, all sin eliminated, and the curse removed, and a knowledge of the glory of the Lord fills the whole earth, "God himself" has promised to come and dwell with his people. The inhabitants of Jerusalem send out many reports of how those who are fortunate enough to be with Christ in his kingdom are continuously singing songs of rejoicing that he gave himself a ransom that they might have life, and have it more abundantly. Those who have seen Jesus say that he is the same humble Savior that stooped to wash his disciples' feet and preached glad tiding to the poor of the world, rich in faith, but possessors of all things.

THE INDIANA CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENT

The business meetings will be held on Friday and Saturday, Aug. 10th and 11th at 2 P. M. The Berean business meeting convenes Friday at 3 P. M.

Floyd A. Stilson, President.

How solitary was Jesus intellectually, morally and socially! None understood his purpose; none cared for his ideal morality; no one sympathized with him in his efforts to make the world better. But how this tended to his general self-development, and how in particular it increased his moral strength! The man will never be worth much who is always on good terms with everybody, who is continually courted and petted by everyone with whom he comes in contact. Lovely as Christ was socially, he often courted physical solitudes as well, passed many a night on the slopes of the Mount of Olives. We lose ourselves in the company of our fellows, but we find ourselves when we are alone. A man learns in solitude something of his own capabilities. Christ's isolation, socially and physically, made him calmly and divinely self reliant. How strong he was!—From Brother Joblin's scrapbook.

"The time will come," thundered a suffragist orator, "when women will get a man's wages!"

"Yes," sadly muttered a man on the rear seat of the car, "next Saturday night."

Courage, next to honor, is the greatest quality of the mind.

EDITORIAL

Remember that July 31st is a fifth Tuesday, and no Restitution will be published. The next paper will bear the date of August 7th.

We have gained one by the removal of Sister Miller, the mother of our twin brethren Miller, who comes to us from Maryland.

Our visitors this week were Brother and Sister Ernest Blyth, of Columbus, Ohio, and Sister Lottie Young, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

We call attention to this rule which governs exemption from military duty for religious reasons: "That you are a member of any well-organized religious sect or organization founded and existent May 16, 1917, and whose existing creed or principles forbid its members to participate in war in any form and whose religious convictions are against war or participation therein in accordance with the creed or principles of said religious organization." Those subject to draft should present the board with a copy of The Restitution dated May 15, 1917, where Brother A. L. Corbaley gives the text of a petition which our brethren used for exemption during the Civil War. It will be found on page 223.

COMMUNICATIONS

"They shall make known unto you all things which are done here" (Col. 4:9).

Dear Restitution:

Hurlburt's Bible Stories, $1.50, Revell and Company, Chicago, Illinois. This is the best illustrated collection of Bible stories that I am acquainted with. The Crisis advertises "Grandfather's Bible Stories" at $1.00, but I do not know as to its merit.

S. Roxana Wince.

Dear Editor:

I take the opportunity to write a few lines to The Restitution. I obtained a copy of your paper a few weeks ago. I subscribed for it for six months. I find some of the writers understand Bible truths as I see them especially in the opposition to bloodshed and war. Our prayers and thanks to God are that we keep in the strait and narrow path of life, which is Christ. When we spiritually understand and discern God's word we keep ourselves unspotted from the world. There is quite a difference in God's dealing with his people under the law and under grace. I feel as if I were almost alone in this part of the country, but as the apostle Paul said in Col. 2.5, that he was absent in the flesh but with them in the spirit, so it is with us, if we understand the spirit's teaching the same. This is my first attempt to write for any paper.

I remain, J. A. Hamilton.

"FEAR NOT, FOR I AM WITH THEE"

Gen. 26:24

"Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest" (Josh. 1:9).

"Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." Fear is nothing but temporary insanity. All persons are surrounded by a personal atmosphere which is subject to all sorts of influences, and it may be revelation to remember that incessant and excited worry harms the object of regard and penetrates its atmosphere with evil influences. Quit it!

The universe is our kind benefactor, if we are in harmony with it, and the only home we will ever know. It is the wretchedest spleen to criticise it, and the worst folly to doubt it. Man is a goal, a triumph, an instrument and as person indispensible to all life. Shall such material demonstrate fear or worry?

Kindly read 1 John 4:18; 1 Thess. 5:8,9; Isa. 35:3,4. We are not appointed for wrath. The nations resisting Christ are receiving just recompense; and shall we go to God's stamping ground, or shall we fear and worry about being forced to go there by man? We are a holy people, a chosen few, representatives of Almighty God. Let us not worry about our lot, but trust in his Omnipotence.

> "The fear-thought of cool reason,
> Keeping watch above its own,
> Guards, clear of eye, and firm of hand, and sure of aim,
> A providence serene. Hold fast to that!
> What will you? Poison the other's soul
> With gasping worry-breath?
> Litter the other's way with refuse-thoughts
> Created in your trouble-mill of dread?
> Fill skies of life with clouds and smoke and fog
> Bred of distress insane?
> And, by swift occult procedure, make harm sure
> By mad excess of love in panic?
> Forbear! Such fear's the common foe > of lover and of loved.
> Lo, that which notes the swing of worlds,
> Breathes none the faster if a comet, loosed
> In space, threats self and systems;
> But ineffably calm, wills law,
> And, power projecting, guards and guides,
> Lord of its summer seas and worlds a-sail.
> Imitate!"

Does the Infinite Breather who breathes stars and intelligences into being, fear, worry, entertain disturbance in the interest of human beings? And does not the Infinite hold our welfare in absolute regard? If we are true children how can we have fear or worry-troubles during this distressing period?

Suggestion rules the universe, and self-suggestion, the people. Cultivate absolute courage and employ the will by vigorously stating: "I am determined to have absolute confidence in my Creator; no ill will befall me or mine." As your faith so be it.

A Brother Co-operative, Sterling E. Russell.

RULES GOVERNING EXEMPTION FROM MILITARY DRAFT

Following are the rules which must be observed by brethren who have registered and who desire to obtain exemption from military and naval duty. They are printed so that such of our readers as desire exemption may proceed legally and intelligently about the matter.

Seven Days to File Claims of Exemption or Discharge

(Except for industrial or agricultural reasons.)

(A) No claim of discharge on account of the industry in which you are engaged can be decided by a local board.

(B) Whether you file a claim of exemption or not, you must present yourself for physical examination on the day named in the notice.

From the day notice that you are called is mailed and posted you have seven days in which you may file a claim of exemption or discharge. [illegible] wish to file such a claim:

The form for filing this claim is simple. If you

(A) Go to the board and get Form 110 for exemption or Form 121 for discharge. If the board has not the printed forms ask to consult the form pamphlet and copy the form shown there.

(B) Fill out the proper form and file it with the board.

(C) Do this within seven days of the posting and mailing of notice to you to present yourself.

Another person can file a claim in your behalf but must use different form in filing the claim.

Ten Days After Filing Claim to File Proof

Your claim of exemption or discharge must be filed within seven days of the day on which notice to you that you are called was posted and mailed. But after you have filed your claim for exemption or discharge you have ten days within which to file proof.

The method of proving claims is very simple, but it is rather exact. If you follow the rules given below you will have done what is required of you.

First—Go to the local board and consult the regulations to find out the form number of the affidavits that you must submit for your particular claim.

Second—Ask the board for the blank affidavits that are necessary in presenting your proof; if the board has not the forms, ask to consult the pamphlet of forms.

Third—Have the affidavits properly accomplished and return them to the board within the time limit assigned you—ten days from the filing of your claim.

Remember:

(A) You must submit your proof in the prescribed form and the board has no authority to exempt or discharge you unless you submit all the affidavits required by regulations.

(B) There will be no argument before the board and no proof other than the prescribed affidavits unless the board calls for other proof which it will do in only a limited number of cases.

When Claims Are Decided

Every claim for discharge or exemption will be decided by the local board within three days after your affidavits have been filed.

Certificate of Exemption or Discharge

If your claim is allowed a certificate of exemption or discharge will be issued to you.

Remember:

(A) This certificate may be recalled at any time.

(B) If it is temporary or conditional, it becomes of no effect when the time or the condition named is fulfilled.

(C) You have been drawn for military service and when the condition that has postponed your posting to the colors ceases you may be recalled at any time.

(D) Remember that your case may still be appealed to the district board by the government and on this appeal your certificate may be withdrawn at once. When so withdrawn you stand precisely as though you had been selected for military service by the local board.

Adverse Decisions on Claim

If your claim is disallowed by the local board your name will be certified and sent by the local board to the district board as one who has been called for military service and not exempted or discharged. Within two days thereafter, if practicable, a list of those so certified to the district board will be given to the press with a request for publication, will be posted in the offices of the local board accessible to the public view, and notice will be mailed to the address on your registration card.

Therefore, if you have filed a claim for exemption and proof in support thereof, watch the notices in the office of the local board, beginning about five days after you have filed your proof to see what disposition was made of your case and make arrangements for the prompt receipt of mail.

How to Claim Appeals to District Boards

Claims of appeal may be made by a person within ten days after the day when notice has been posted and mailed that such person's name has been certified to the district board as one who has been called for service and not exempted or discharged.

Therefore if you desire to appeal—

1—Go to the local board and get or copy form 153 or 151 for filing your claim of appeal.

2—Get or copy also form 151 or 152 for notifying the district board of appeal.

3 File your claim of appeal (153 or 151) with the local board.

4—Send your notice of appeal (form 151 or 152) to the district board

5 Do this within ten days from the day when notice that your name was certified to the district board was posted and mailed.

Remember:

You can only appeal the final order of the board exempting or discharging or refusing to exempt or discharge you. You cannot appeal other orders or action of the local board.

Proving Your Appeal

You have five days after the district board receives your notice that you have filed a claim of appeal in which to file evidence additional to that filed by you in the local board, but all such evidence must consist of affidavits.

Decisions of Appeal

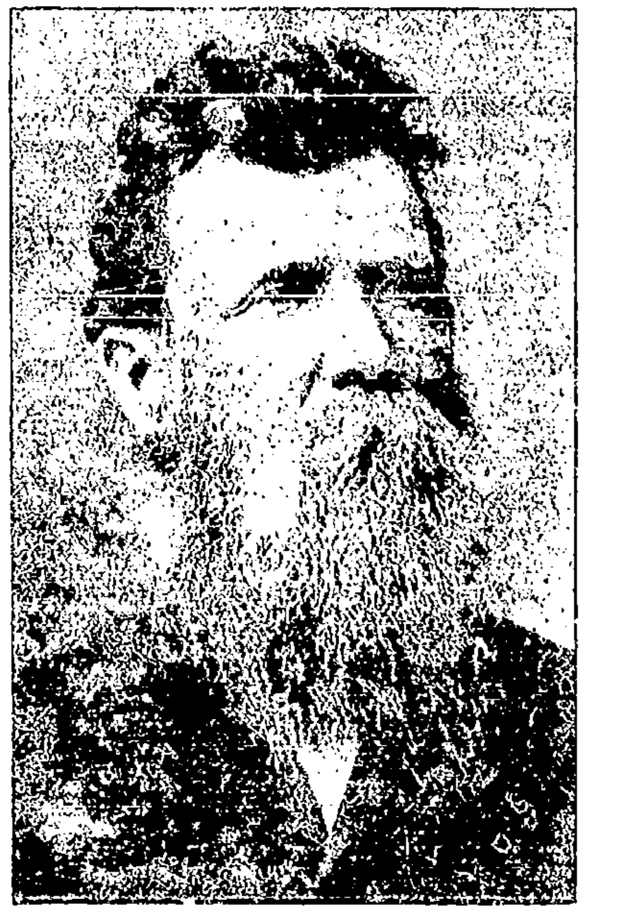
The decision of your appeal must be made within five days of the closing of proof, and you will be notified by mail of the action of the board on your appeal.

OBITUARIES

R. J. Whitaker

R. J. Whitaker fell asleep in Christ March 2, 1917. He had been in bad health for seven years; he was also blind. On Friday he fell asleep to wait till the Lord comes to awake him. He was a member of the church of God at Clear Creek, N. C., and was baptized by Enoch Anderson, father of J. H. Anderson. He was 76 years old. He had been in the true faith for 39 years, and loved the truth. We laid him away in the Knobbs Cemetery to rest till Jesus comes. May he soon come! I was Brother Whitaker's daughter-in-law. I want The Restitution to send me the paper. I cannot pay for it now, but if the Lord wills I hope to pay for it sometime. I am not a member of the Church of God, but if I ever have a chance I will become a member. There is no one in the faith here except myself and husband. We read The Restitution and the Bible and stick to them. We joined the Baptist church before we got the paper and before we knew the truth. I have given samples of the paper to others and it has done them good. We live at McDade, Tex., and if any one in the faith ever comes this way, stop and see us.

Mrs. D. C. Whitaker.



Samuel T. Hook

At his home on the farm five miles east of Elkhart, Ind., Samuel T. Hook went to rest on June 30, 1917, after an illness of only four days. Years ago my father and mother took up the faith and were baptized by Eld. J. S. Hatch at New Palestine, Ind. Father died as he had lived, firm in the belief that to sleep in Jesus was blessed sleep. We took him back home and buried him on the shady slope of the hill overlooking the stream where he was baptized, where he awaits the resurrection. My father would have been 75 years of age had he lived to Sept. [illegible], 1917, and he and my mother, who still lives, would have had 53 years of life together. Two children survive him, a son and daughter, Frank M. Hook and Mrs. Glenn Hook Daily. They have been faithful subscribers and loyal readers of The Restitution ever since coming into the faith. Many are gone on who knew them, but some few still remain whose hearts will ache with us in our loneliness.

His daughter, Mrs. Glenn Hook Daily.

A. Logan Thompson

Amanda Logan Thompson was born in Rush County, Indiana, September 6, 1830, and died at her home, 516 North Centre St., Plymouth, Indiana, at 1:50 Saturday morning, July 7, 1917, aged 86 years, 10 months, and 1 day.

She was the daughter of Thomas and Mary Logan, and came to Marshall County with her parents, leaving her home in the south part of the state the day she was six years old, and arriving twelve days later near where the Wolf Creek mills were afterwards located. Her father was the first physician to practice medicine in that part of the County. The lot of her life was thus early cast in the wilderness, and in her long, industrious and influential career she contributed her full share in the wonderful transformation that civilization has wrought, both in the material and moral development of our County.

On February 14, 1850 she was married to W. D. Thompson. The wedding was one of the important events among the early white settlers, and absorbed so much of the attention of the neighborhood that the school room where she had formerly been a pupil was without attendance that day, and the teacher having nothing to do, composed a fitting poem descriptive of the event. Into the new household thus established came seven children, and the mother's life has been crowded full of the hopes and fears, the achievements and failures, the joys and sorrows that attend such a busy life. The husband died August 27. 1[illegible]9. Besides this her life was saddened by the loss of four of her children, and most of her old time relatives. She leaves one sister, Rachel [illegible], of Tiosa, three children, Pheebe C. Wiley, Eva L. Underwood, of Plymouth, and Bert C. Thompson, of South Bend. Also four grandchildren, five great-grand-children, and many other relatives.

On May 4, 1916, Sister Thompson fell at her home and fractured her right hip, and has been confined to her bed ever since in a helpless condition resulting in long continued suffering.

Sister Thompson was one of the members of the early establishment of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith in northern Indiana, and lived an earnest, peaceful, devoted life of consecration to the teachings of the gospel. She rendered signal service in the vineyard of her Master by ministering to the temporal wants of itinerant ministers and visiting brethren, in opening the doors of her home and bestowing its free hospitality and entertainment to all comers throughout the long years of her active life. Thus she fought a good fight, she has kept the faith, she has finished her course, and there is laid up for her a crown of life that the righteous Judge will give to her in that day when he comes to crown his own.

Funeral services were held at the residence at 2 o'clock Tuesday, July 10, 1917. The home was filled with the relatives, brethren, friends and neighbors who testified of their love for Sister Thompson by the gift of many beautiful flowers. We spoke words of comfort from Matt. 5 and 6, reviewing the Lord's prayer which Sister Thompson had dwelt upon in her last days. Burial was made in Oak Hill where she sleeps in Jesus to await the coming morn of resurrection

SHREWD ASTROLOGER

Louis XI of France one day sent for an astrologer who had predicted many deaths accurately.

"You, sir," said the king, "you who can foretell everything, pray when shall you die?"

"I?" the astrologer answered coolly. "Why, I, sir, shall die just three days before your majesty."

This reply so alarmed the king that he ordered him to be lodged in one of the finest palaces and well taken care of.

"ANY IN HEAVEN TOO"

Little Mary was sitting with her uncle George one afternoon. Uncle had told her to keep quiet, as he had some accounts to look over; so Mary busied herself with a picture book. For an hour all was still; then Mary heard her uncle say, "There! I have quite a nice little sum laid up against a time of need."

"What are you talking about, Uncle George?" asked Mary.

"About my treasures, little girl, that I have laid up."

"Up in heaven?" asked Mary, who had heard her father that morning read about laying up treasures in heaven.

"Oh, no, Mary; my treasures are all on earth—some in banks and some in other places," answered Uncle George.

"But haven't you any in heaven, too?" asked Mary.

"Well. I don't believe I have," said Uncle George thoughtfully. "But run away to your mother now, for I am going out."

Uncle George went out and was gone a good while, but all the time he was thinking that after all, perhaps he was not so well off if he had no treasures laid up in heaven to be ready for him when he left this world and his money behind him. He was so impressed with the thought that he wisely determined to lay up treasures in heaven. He did so. Little Mary never knew until years after that it was her childish question that started Uncle George on a generous, active, Christian life.—Zion's Herald.

THE INDEPENDENT YOUNG WOMAN

How many men are there today toiling night and day in order that they may, when they die, leave their daughters safe from want, and in comfortable circumstances? The best way to leave their daughters safe is to give them knowledge of business and affairs that will enable them to take care of themselves. Give them knowledge of a profession or occupation, so that they will be able to take care of their money, if they have any; to earn it, if they have not. This is better than to leave the daughter a princely fortune, and make her a mark in the community for every eager, grasping, selfish prodigal to reach out to attain. Better have her able to fight the battle of life for herself, and to so live that the world will be better for her life.

Has any woman ever attained such greatness that, at the mention of her name, we think of the books she wrote before we think of the woman she was.

Want of care does more harm than want of knowledge.

A REAL HELPMEET

A teacher of a certain school class who had been telling her children mythological tales was amazed to find what confidence the children were beginning to put in the stories. Realizing the harm that would come if the children were allowed to continue in their belief in such characters, she sought to discourage them by a simple application of logic. She said:

"Who was Atlas?"

A youngster immediately arose and said he was the man who held the world on his shoulders.

This was a good chance to tear down the belief in such stories and the teacher sought to reason with the boy.

"If Atlas held the world on his shoulder, who supported Atlas?"

This question stumped the children, when finally a red-headed youngster, who took little interest in the stories told, answered:

"His wife."

AS OTHERS SEE US

A local preacher, who was in the habit of taking his wife with him to his preaching appointments, said on arrival at the chapel in a country town: "My dear, you go in there; you will be all right. I must go round to the vestry."

In the vestibule the wife was met by a kind-hearted steward, who, after giving her a hearty welcome and a hymn-book, conducted her to a comfortable seat. At the close of the service the same kind-hearted steward gave her a hearty shake of the hand, adding how pleased he would be to see her at the service each Sunday. Then, whispering, he said, "But let me tell you, we don't get a duffer like this in the pulpit every Sunday."

That don't happen at all.

Study and you will know. Know and you will love. Love and you will give.

Every day is a fresh beginning

Something New

There is something new in the world today,
Something fresh with a brightening ray,
Something sweeter than all we've known,
In the beautiful days that have come and flown—
For so life needs in its pride and power
Something new in the world each hour.
There is something new for us all to see,
Something new for us all to be,
Something wiser and grander, too,
Something more lovely for life to do—
For so it hungers and so do we
For something new in our grief and glee.
There is something new each day that breaks,
Something nobler to help us find
A cleaner heart and a happier mind—
For so life feeds on the dreams that glow
With something new for the world to know.—Baltimore Sun.

Yes; there is always something new, and to keep abreast of the times we are supposed to notice the new things and adopt them as they come our way. No man can be successful in business and conduct it in the same manner that his grandfather did. The world moves; light turns into darkness and after a space, light again appears.

We now have the glorious summer time, but in a few short weeks dull autumn will be here to be followed by cold bleak winter, then beautiful spring; and on top of spring the bright, warm rays of summer again. There is no stop; there is no standing still. Nature teaches us that we must keep moving, that we must have our face turned toward the sun and walk with a firm, solid step. Still there is one thing we cannot improve, we cannot alter, we cannot change, and that is

The Foundation of Our Faith and Hope

In Malachi we read, "I am the Lord (God): I change not." In James we have these words: "The Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." And in Hebrews, in reference to our Savior, the apostle Paul tells us that "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and today, and forever." So we see both the Father and the Son are the same today as in the days of old, and their promises are as faithful and as sure. We can not embrace new doctrines, we must remain true to the old. In regard to Christianity we cannot improve on the foundation. We can build on it: we can grow in knowledge and grace; in fact we must build; we must grow; but unless our building and our growth is in accordance with the old book our work is in vain. So friends, in regard to this one thing let us be old-fashioned, even though the world does mock and laugh. "O praise the Lord, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people. For his merciful kindness is great toward us, and the truth of the Lord endureth forever, praise ye the Lord."

God never hurries, and is never late.

Steeled Souls

We are entitled to respect just in proportion as we do our work without grumbling and in a spirit of real devotion. Most of the work of carrying on the world is necessarily hard and dull and routine in character; and for it the world needs men and women who can steel their souls against weariness and monotony, and press forward with good cheer.

Success not a Surprise

One man in a million wakes up like Lord Byron, to "find himself famous." But the majority of famous men are not taken unawares by fame. On the wall of their mind hangs their own vision of what they ought to be. They are not surprised by success when it comes; because they have seen it coming, and planned out its coming in their dream.

Aim High

Be original, think clear, work hard, be practical, but not to the extent that sentiment is crowded out; be persistent and always keep, at least one step ahead of the "other fellow," and your success is assured.

Hard? yes, its hard, but if you desire success—as the world calls success—there is no other way.

Our Weekly Puzzle

Fill in the blank spaces with a word of five letters, each time using the same letters but differently transposed.

Sin . . . . . many pleadings and tries hard to have us poor . . . . . of mortals follow where it leads, but no sooner how many . . . . . we are tempted let us . . . . . it with . . . . . from God's holy word, thus crushing its power.

Answer to puzzle in last issue:

M-ask, M-aid, M-end, M-ace, M-ail, M-ember, M-ink, M-ire, M-oat, M-ode, M-old, M-oral.

If at any time this life of ours grows feeble, or low, or lonely, I know no other remedy than to return to its Eternal Source, to God himself; and through him all the means of grace become again living and true; and through him all his creatures become again near and dear and accessible.—Elizabeth Rundle Charles.

We always have someone else to blame for our failures, but never forget to give ourselves full credit for our success.

Our next issue will be especially for the younger children.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

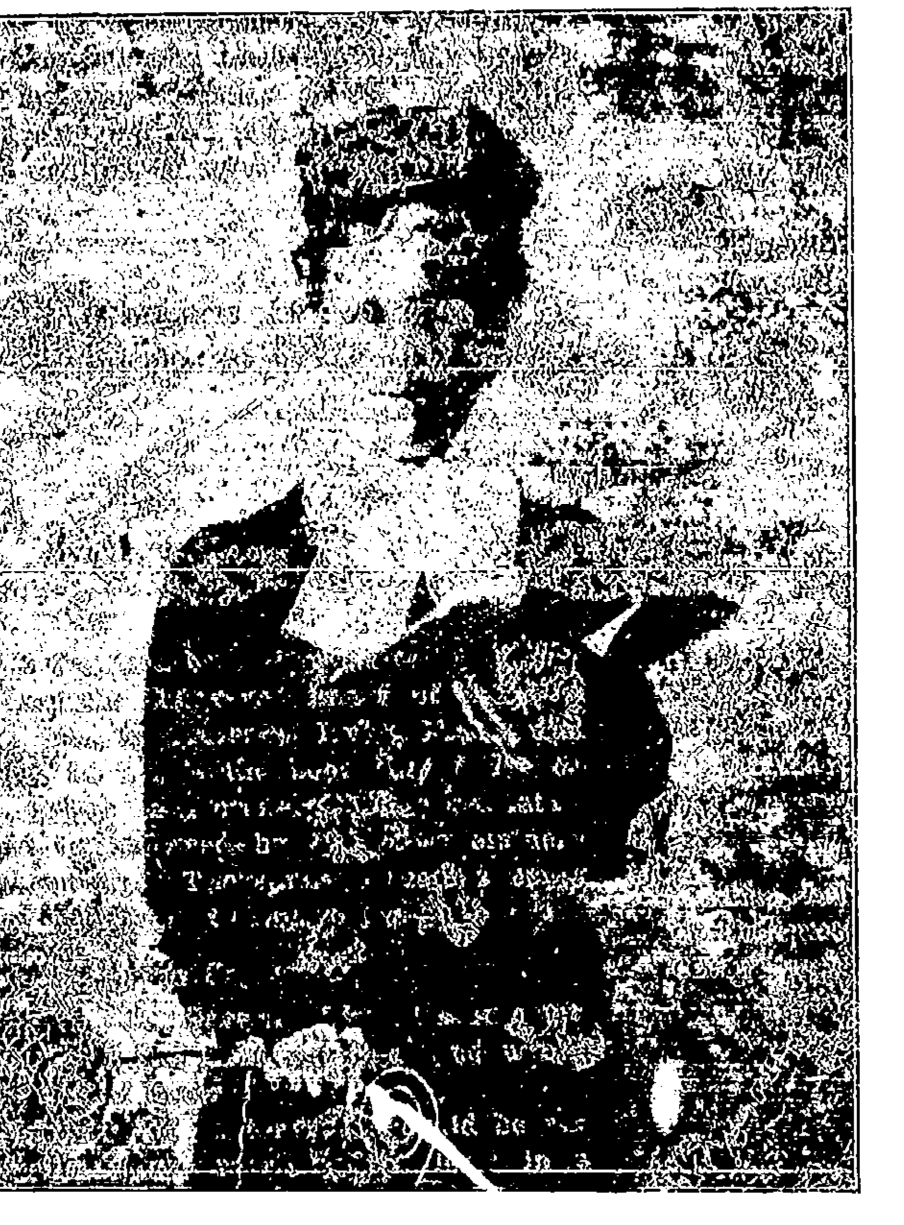
VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O, AUGUST 7, 1917 NUMBER 29

IS THIS WAR AN EVIDENCE THAT THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST IS IMMINENT?

A Sermon by Maud Hembree

The German Emperor said in 1904, "We demand our place in the sun"; but his sun will set in obscure darkness, declared Pastor Maud Hembree yesterday morning in a sermon to her flock at the Megiddo Church in Thurston Road. She took for her topic, "Is This War an Evidence That the Second Coming of Christ Is Imminent?" From the signs which she read in the Scriptures, she argued that the hour is nigh for the reappearance of the Messiah; that he will set up an earthly kingdom with its seat in the ancient city of Jerusalem; that the nations will arise against him; that Armageddon will be fought; and that all the earth will bow to the rule of the Prince of Peace.

Our theme this morning said she, is that question which lurks in the breasts of thousands: Will Christ himself return from heaven to establish a real kingdom on this earth, whose officers shall be peace and exactors of righteousness, and does the present war and time of trouble prove that his coming draws nigh?



Maud Hembree, Pastor, Rochester, N. Y.

Both the Bible and history prove, she continued, that God once had a real kingdom on the earth, governed by Saul, David, Solomon, and its other rulers. the land of Palestine its dominion, with Jerusalem as its capital city. This kingdom lasted 4[illegible] years, when, because of the wickedness of some of its rulers and subjects, it was finally overthrown, first partially, by the king of Assyria; then led into captivity by the king of Babylon; and at last destroyed by the Romans in A. D. 70 to 73. Of this kingdom God speaks in Ezekiel 21:27, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it him."

How long was the kingdom of David to remain in ruins? "Until he comes whose right it is." Was it a real kingdom that was overthrown? It certainly was. Who is the one whose right it is? And when he comes will God give it to him? Listen to the answer in Luke 1:31-33: "The angel said to Mary, Thou shalt bring forth a Son; and shalt call his name Jesus; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Hence the kingdom to be given to Jesus will be a real kingdom.

Prediction Not Yet Fulfilled

The spiritual reign of Christ in the heart, or the reign of Christ by his truth in the heart of his people, we do not deny, but forty such reigns will not fulfill the prediction the angel made to Mary. We ask: Did God give unto Jesus the throne of his father David when he was on earth, or has it been given to him yet? You are forced to answer, No

The disciples were not deceived as to the nature of the kingdom; but at first they erred in thinking that it would be established at his first coming. When, as recorded in Luke 19:11-13, as they neared Jerusalem they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear, what did Jesus say to them? Did he tell them that he was going to heaven and they should follow him there? No; but he said: "A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return. And he called his ten servants, and said unto them, Occupy till I come." He taught as plainly as truth could be taught that he was the nobleman going into a far country, and his followers were to occupy until he came to set up his kingdom.

How He Will Come

How will Jesus come again? Let him answer (Matt. 25:31): "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Did Christ come in his glory the first time? Could this refer to the truth in the hearts of men? What folly! Jesus not only preached the kingdom of God before his death, but continued to proclaim it to his disciples after his resurrection. They did not yet realize that Jesus was to leave them, and they said, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" Only one thing was uppermost in their mind, a desire that the kingdom of God should instantly appear. When he was taken up and a cloud received him out of sight . . . . they looked steadfastly toward heaven," evidently struck with wonderment at the unexpected occurrence. Angels appeared upon the scene: "two men stood by them in white apparel and said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." This same Jesus shall come again, was the comfort given; and all who believe this divine record will say amen.

Disciples' Central Doctrine

From that day forward this became the disciples' hope, the central doctrine around which all their teaching revolved. Jesus told them that they would understand the times and seasons of his coming after the Holy Spirit should come upon them, and when endued with power from on high, Peter exhorted them to repentance and proclaimed the gladsome truth that, he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Peter now understood that Christ would only remain in heaven until the time for the setting up of the kingdom as foretold by all the prophets. The apostle James testified to the same truth in Acts 15:14-16: "God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name." When did God visit the Gentiles? It was after Christ's resurrection. Now, listen to the next verse: "After this I will return and build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down." Christ could not return at his first coming, and would not return until after a people had been taken out from the Gentiles.

Long Night of Darkness

The apostle Paul also gives wonderful evidence on this subject in 2 Thess. 2:1-3. He told his brethren that the coming of the Lord Jesus should not occur in their day, and would not come until after there was a falling away from the truth; a long night of darkness was to set in, and mankind be turned away from these glorious truths to fables before the Son of Man would appear. How strikingly this truth proclaimed by Paul over 1,800 years ago has been fulfilled and verified on the pages of history! It is only necessary to read the history of millennarianism to know that the second coming of Christ was the hope of the Christian of the first centuries, but as the historian states, "It was the Alexandrian theology that superseded them; that is to say, Neo-Platonic mysticism triumphed over the early Christian hope of the future." Yes, the pagan doctrines of Plato, who taught that man had an immortal soul and went to heaven at death, triumphed over the true Bible hope that all future life depends upon a resurrection from the dead at the second coming of Christ.

Augustine, who lived in the fifth century, was the first to fully formulate the creed into which was incorporated the doctrine that the church was the kingdom and would accomplish the work without the coming of Christ. While mankind has been turned away from the glorious truths of revelation, God has preserved the Bible and we still can have the true hope that was the theme of all the inspired writers.

As Paul told us, the Jews rejected Christ's first coming and the Gentiles refuse to believe in his second appearing; but to be accepted we must believe both. Jesus said to the Jews, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." What nation is this? Listen to Jesus' answer in Luke 12:32: "Fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." It will only be a little flock, a peculiar people, a holy nation zealous of good works, taken out of Jew and Gentile, that will be ready at the coming of the Master.

To Begin at Old Jerusalem

We are often asked, "What will Christ do when he comes?" Do? Jesus will do when he returns to the earth what every right-minded man and woman would have him do. He will set up on earth a righteous government which, beginning at Jerusalem, rebuilt and proclaimed as the metropolis of the world, will spread and continue to spread until the whole earth will be brought into subjection to righteous laws, which in a few years will cause joy and gladness, peace and plenty to fill the earth. When we pray, "Thy kingdom come," it means for God's will to "be done on earth as it is in heaven." That glorious age will be brought about by Jesus.

The reign of Christ, our future King, is the only remedy for the redemption of this fair planet from the evils that now prevail. When he comes, "the Lion of the tribe of Judah," to vest in himself the authority now exercised by all the kings, rulers and parliaments of the world; when he sends forth to all the world, "Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come;" when he lays hold with unsparing hand upon the trusts and vested interests which obstruct the path of general progress; when he rebukes strong nations afar off and forces them to lay down their arms and learn war no more; when he shivers to atoms the false ideas and superstitions that like a pall have blinded men and women to the truths of divine revelation; when he sweeps from the face of the earth the tangled web of existing institutions which shelter vice and misery, and deals with strong hand the swift and powerful awards of unerring justice; when sentence against an evil work is executed speedily; when he binds the devil which is sin and all sinners and sets up a new, divine arrangement of things, then, and not till then, will mankind see their folly and come from the ends of the earth and say, "Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity and things wherein there is no profit" (Jer. 16:19).

When he comes the nations of the earth will not willingly submit to his rule. The kings of the earth and their armies will go out to war against the coming King (Rev. 19:19). Then shall occur the great battle of Armageddon. Jesus will prevail and the millennium will begin. While no man knows the day or hour that Christ will appear, we can know the times and seasons, and what is happening in our day is evidence that the coming of the Lord is nigh at hand. When Jesus in Luke 21:24 foretold the desolation of Jerusalem, he said, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." He carried us down the stream of time past the Jewish age, which ended at the destruction of Jerusalem, A. D. 70 to 73, down to the closing years of our Gentile age.

What Suns Have Set

What did he say would happen then to tell us the nature of the age in which we live? "And there shall be signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity." You will not see Jupiter, Mars or Saturn shaking in their orbits; you can look at the physical sun and moon and see no signs of decay; but in the political heavens, to which Jesus refers, you can witness a terrible shaking. The lights of Belgium, Servia, Montenegro and Roumania have almost gone out. The ruler of Russia, one sun in the political heavens, has gone down; another of lesser light in the realm of Greece has been obscured. The German Emperor said in 1904, "We demand our place in the sun; but his sun will set in obscure darkness. The Bible contains much evidence to prove that it was the lights in the political heavens Jesus referred to, and their wonderful fulfilment in our day proves that the God of heaven inspired Jesus to foretell things to come. Jesus continued: "Men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken." Are not men's hearts failing them for fear? Can you deny the fact that this prophecy is fulfilled as never before, with seventeen nations of the earth engaged in a deadly conflict, and no prospect of peace in the near future?

Day Is at Hand

What did Jesus foretell next? Listen! "Then shall they see the Son of Man coming with power and great glory." What will be nigh at hand when they see these things come to pass? "When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

The prophet Joel also foretells the condition of things at the present: that the Gentiles will be preparing for war, waking up their mighty men, beating their plowshares into swords and pruning hooks into spears; and then tells that when this comes to pass, "The day of the Lord is near." In 1870, when Germany and France were at war, all nations were not in the conflict. When Russia and Japan engaged in strife, all nations were not beating their plowshares into swords. When Spain and the United States went out to war, men's hearts were not failing them for fear. Our hope in the second coming of Christ to right this world's wrongs is not Utopian, not vain and imaginary; but it is a sure and certain hope, built on evidence sure and solid. It is built on history, and above all it is built on the Bible, the most wonderful of all books.—The Rochester Herald. Sent by Esther Ingham.

THE WORD OF GOD

As a divine word, it regenerates the soul (I Pet. 1:23).

As a nourishing word, it promotes growth (I Pet. 2:2).

As a sanctifying word, it separates (John 17:14-17).

As a purifying word, it cleanses (Eph. 5:26).

As authority, it demands obedience (James 1:23-25).

As a powerful word, it penetrates (Heb. 4:13, 14).

As a glorifying word, it illuminates (2 Cor. 4:4-6).

As a triumphant word, it creates a song (Col. 3:16).

As a course of study, is sends out skilled workmen (2 Tim. 2:15).

As an unerring word, it is a safe guide (2 Pet. 1:19).

As a written word, it produces faith (John 20:31).

As a spiritual weapon, it is the sword (Eph. 6:17).

As a perfecting word, it disciplines (2 Tim. 3:16,17).

As a present word, it is in the heart (Rom. 10:8).

As a righteous word, it judges (John 12:48).

As a medicinal word, it heals the body (Psa. 107:20; John 4:50).

As an eternal word, it abides (1 Pet. 1:23-25).

TESTIMONIES CONCERNING WAR

Quotations Gathered from Various Sources

by Linden J. Carter

"War is hell" (General Sherman).

"I cannot fight, for the spirit of war is slain within me" (George Fox).

"War is as contrary to the spirit of Christianity as murder" (Dr. Adam Clarke).

"God is forgotten in war; every principle of Christianity is trampled upon" (Sydney Smith).

"I have just visited the battlefields of France. I stood, as it were, at the door of hell. I saw myriads marching into the furnace. I saw some coming out of it, scorched and mutilated" (David Lloyd George).

"Massacres of boys! That indeed is the essence of modern war, the killing off the young. It is the destruction of the human inheritance, it is the spending of all the life and material of the future upon present-day hate and greed" (Mr. Britling, in H. G. Wells' "Mr. Britling Sees it Through").

"It is supposed that sixteen billions of mankind have perished in wars since the beginning—about twelve times the present population of the globe . . . . It is evident that war is one of the chief hindrances to the cause of Christ throughout the world" (Rev. E. P. Marvin).

"War is the greatest crime of the human race. It is not in my philosophy that if the murder of one man makes a villian, murder of thousands makes a hero. A standng army means waste, depression, moral decay. A nation cannot be moving toward peace while definitely preparing for war" (General Sherwood, who fought in forty-two battles in the Civil War)

"In war the worldling denies the one kind of tie in killing his fellow-creature; the Christian denies two kinds--he kills his fellow-creature and his fellow-Christian. War is thus shown to be at least twice as evil for the Christian as for the worldling. But if we take into account the incalculable difference between the temporal and the eternal, then the participation in these hatred-breeding, life-destroying, infidel-making scenes of carnage is infinitely worse in the converted man than in the unconverted" (A. S. Booth-Clibborn).

"Life is of God. To take is as to give it. is his prerogative. Man has no right to do so save where immediately delegated to the work by the express command of the Most High. In this dispensation of grace, God never delegates this right to man. Those, then who are his, must decline to have any complicity with war, raise their protest against punishment which takes life, refuse to have profit or pleasure at the cost of human life, and so live in communion with him, that anger shall be destroyed within, save as it moves in the power of his infinite love against evil in every form" (Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, D. D., in "The Ten Commandments").

"All swords that ever flashed from scabbards have not aided Christ a single grain. Mohammedans' religion might be sustained by scimeters, but Christians' religion must be sustained by love. The great crime of war can never promote the religion of peace. The battle, and the garment rolled in blood, are not a fitting prelude to 'peace on earth: good will to men.' And I do firmly hold, that the slaughter of men, that bayonets, and swords and guns, have never yet been, and never can be, promoters of the gospel. The gospel will proceed without them, but never through them. . . . Hush thy tramp, O war; put away thy gaudy trappings and thy blood-stained drapery, if thou thinkest that the cannon with the cross upon it is really sanctified, and if thou imaginest that the banner hath become holy, thou dreamest a lie. God wanteth not thee to help his cause. It is not by armies, nor by power, but by spirit, saith the Lord'" (Charles H. Spurgeon).

"I think it was Dr. Franklin who indulged his fancy to paint the horrors of war. He represents an old angel taking a young one with him to visit the earth. The first scene to which he introduces him was a naval combat. 'The massive ships, mounted with cannon and filled with human beings, sailed round each other; each discharging and receiving volleys of bullets, grapeshot, cannon balls and bomb-shells, till the decks were covered with the slain and the sea was red with their blood, and the shrieks of the dying rent the air. The young angel turned to his senior and said: 'You have made a mistake. This cannot be earth, it is surely hell; and these must be devils not men.' 'No,' replied the elder angel, 'this is earth, and these are men. Devils have more sense!'" (Rev. E. P. Marvin).

Ez for war, I call it murder, -
  There you hev it plain and flat;
I don't want to go no furder
  Than my Testyment for that;
God hez sed so plump and fairly,
  It's ez long ez it is broad,
An' you've gut to git up airly
  Ef you want to take in God.

'Taint your eppylets an' feathers
  Make the thing a grain more right;
'Taint afollerin' your bell-wethers
  Will excuse ye in his sight;
Ef you take a sword and dror it,
  An' go stick a feller thru,
Guv'ment ain't no answer for it,
  God'll send the bill to you.

A FEW THOUGHTS ON SPIRITUAL FOOD

I have been quite impressed by a paragraph which I quote from a report of Brother Almus Adams: "The time has come when it is quite possible that the preaching of the gospel to the world is a secondary matter. It is still a duty, but the most important thing is for the bride to get her clothes ready to slip on at a moment's notice."

Dear brothers and sisters, I have been thinking for some time that what we need is more spiritual teaching, for I verily believe that all will agree with me that we, as a people, have put more stress on our knowledge of the Bible than in the deeper spiritual teachings of the book. Not that I would decry knowledge, for it is greatly to be desired.

We say that we are expecting our Master very soon, but do our daily lives always attest to this fact? Are we willing to empty our lives of everything which is not in accord with our perfect example? Do we realize what this really means? Can we grasp the teachings of Paul in Rom. 8, that we are to live, not after the flesh, but after the spirit? Can we say with Paul that "we glory in tribulation, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the holy spirit which is given unto us." Have we been crucified to the world, or do we still try to hold on to the world and Christ too? "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

Dear brothers and sisters, let us turn the searchlight into our hearts and pray with the Psalmist, "Cleanse thou me from secret faults;" and, "Create in me a clean heart, O, God; and renew a right (or constant, margin) spirit within me. For thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it; thou delightest not in burnt offerings. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and contrite heart, O, God, thou wilt not dispise."

Do you not see, dear ones, that the work which should mostly concern us at the present time has to do with our hearts? Christ says, "The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge you in the last day."

We would do well, then, to pay the more earnest heed to the words spoken by our blessed Master. "Therefore be not anxious, saying, What shall we eat, and what shall we drink, or with what shall we be clothed; for all the nations require these things, and your heavenly Father knows that ye have need of these things. But seek you first his righteousness and kingdom, and all these things shall be superadded to you. Be not anxious, then, about the morrow, for the morrow shall claim anxiety for itself: sufficient for each day is its own trouble" (Diaglott).

How many of us try to live up to this teaching? Do we not think more of what we are going to eat and wear than we do of putting on the robes of righteousness with which the bride must be arrayed? But one will say, "But we have to think of our work." But which do we put first? Upon arising in the morning which is first in our thoughts, how soon can we get out to the field, or to work on that new dress; or how best can I live this day that I may be approved of my Master? "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

What of the treasure hid in the field and the pearl of great price? Think you, they were found without seaching? And what did the man when he had found them? Did he sit down and let them stay where they were? No! he went and sold all that he had, and bought that field. I tell you, brothers and sisters, this which we are seeking is worth all or nothing. May the Lord help us make our garments pure and spotless.

Grace Lawrence.

SEVEN POINTS OF CONTACT BETWEEN MAN AND HIS MAKER

Text: John 14:23; Gen. 2:7.

Introduction: Originally, God and man walked together. Man became estranged from God. Since then, God has been seeking and finding men in all the walks of life.

Note the following points of contact:

1. The Ear. "Incline your ear and come unto me, hear, and your soul shall life" (Isa. 55:3).
2. The Intellect. "Think on these things" (Phil. 4:8).
3. The Affection. "Thou shalt love the Lord . . . with all thy heart." "We love him because he first loved us" (Matt. 22:37; 1 John 4:19).
4. The Emotion. "Thou shalt love the Lord . . . with all thy soul." "Be zealous" (Matt. 22:37; Rev. 3:19).
5. The Conscience. "Their conscience bearing witness and their thoughts . . . accusing or excusing one another." "If our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart . . . . If our heart condemn us not then have we confidence toward God" (Rom. 2:15; 1 John 3:20,21).
6. The Will. "If any man will do his will he shall know of the teaching" (John 7:17, R. V.).
7. The Holy Spirit. "He shall reprove the world of sin." "He shall testify of me" (John 16:8; 15:26).—The World's Crisis.

NATIONAL BEREAN NOTICE

The fourth Annual Conference of the National Berean Society of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith will convene at Oregon, Illinois, Aug. 15,16, 1917. Let each society send a delegate and then let each member of the society come too, to see if the delegate does as he has been instructed.

This conference comes between the Illinois Bible School and the State Conference. As the Bible School begins on August 7, come as near that date as possible and enjoy two weeks of Christian growth and fellowship.

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL

No. VIII

Fear has no place in working out our salvation: love must do it all; and perfect love casts out all fear. Only those who accept the gospel, which is the foundation of love, in humble gratitude, will ever be benefited by it. Those who accept because it is their only chance, must lack very largely, if not altogether, this saving spirit of gratitude.—Alta King.

EDITOR'S REPLY

Gratitude is Both a Theological and Ethical Question

"Those who accept (the gospel) because it is their last chance, must lack largely, if not altogether, this saving spirit of gratitude." This statement by our correspondent raises the question of how gratitude is produced and, as is usual with apologists of the Larger Hope, answers the enquiry wrongly, and by unconscious duplicity obscures a vital and fundamental part of religious truth with decided immoral muendoes. As the matters involved touch both theological and ethical issues at the very heart they deserve considerate attention.

Facts About Gratitude Which are Generally Accepted

Permit us then to state some facts about gratitude to which all normal minds assent. The will of man is influenced by motives and by affection. Acts of the will which are produced by pure affection are called "disinterested acts." Probably not one of our readers who has attained his majority but has, at some time in his life, felt affection for another, so that it was more gratifying to please the object of his affection than to please himself. Love for another always influences the will to do those things which please the object loved. The acts which are performed by love are called "disinterested acts," and are so called because they are not done with selfish ends in view; they are performed solely to please and gratify the desires of another. Now when the affection is fixed upon an object the will is made one with the will of the object loved and adored; and when that object is regarded as supreme, to obey his will and obtain his commendation becomes a spontaneous volition of the soul, and it becomes superlatively happy in service.

The Highest Enjoyment Consists in Giving and Receiving Affection

Logic kindly takes us by the hand and walks with us as we proceed in our perambulations. When an object whose character engages the heart presents itself to our notice, then the affection flows out to it like a river to the sea. A bond of sympathy and love is at once established between the hearts of the two persons. The things which affect the one then affect the other, in the proportion of the mutual affection. One meets the desires and obeys the will of the other from choice. The soul's highest enjoyment and happiness consists in giving and receiving affection. When the intellectual and mental faculties perceive in the object loved perfections of the highest kind, together with affection of the purest character for those that love him, the conscience sanctions the affection of the heart, confirms the decision of the mind, and ratifies the obedience of the will—in a word, all the moral powers of the soul unite in harmonious and happy obedience, and the soul is lost in gratitude, love and praise.

How and What Generates Affection and Love

What generates gratitude in the heart thus becomes perfectly clear. Constituted as we are, we must feel, want and need mercy before we can feel any love for him who supplies our want and bestows upon us mercy. In the degree of our need is measured the degree of gratitude for him who supplies our need. If the wind blows our hat off on the street, and a boy recovers and gives it back to us, our gratitude is slight and may be adaquately expressed either with a dime tip or merely with a "thank you;" but if our boat capsizes and a man rescues us from the throes of drowning, our gratitude is unbounded in extent and perpetual in duration. Just in proportion therefore as the soul feels its danger, its misery, its lost and guilty condition, in that proportion exactly will it exercise love and gratitude to the being who gives favor and deliverance. Then if the sinner's need is small, if his danger is but slight, the words "salvation" and "Savior" are both robbed of their meaning, and the sinner himself is stripped of his capacity to love, adore, and praise God. Do you ask why? Because deep gratitude cannot be generated in the heart by giving an incidental favor. The greater the kindness and self denial of a benefactor in our behalf, if we stand in grave need, the stronger and warmer will be the affection which his goodness will produce in the recipient of his favor. From these obvious remarks the following propositions result:

The Facts About Gratitude Stated in Propositions

1. The sinner must feel that he is evil, sinful, and lost, as the pre-requisite condition, upon which alone he can love a deliverer.

2. The degree of kindness, self-denial, and sacrifice in a benefactor, temporal or spiritual, graduates the degree of affection and gratitude that will be awakened for him.

3. Therefore if a sinner does not feel that he is sinful and sees that he is lost, he cannot be saved; and if he were saved, he could feel no gratitude in his heart towards his Savior. Neither the sacrifice of Christ nor the love of God, nor anything else in the universe can generate love in his heart so long as he has no sense of need.

We Must Feel the Want to Exercise the Love

Larger Hope apologists excel the world in prating about love; but see now what havoc they make of the subject in view of the foregoing propositions of undeniable truth. By every form of address conceivable the word of God inculcates the idea that we must feel the want in order to exercise the love. "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden." "If any man thirst, let him come." "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." To our dire need now add the gift of God's only begotten Son, who died in agony on the cross saying, "It is finished." When the sinner couples the sacrifice of Christ to his need, love springs up in his heart. No human being can exercise full faith in these two truths and not love the Savior. Right here, however, when the sinner is about to love the Savor, and is about to see why he should love him, Larger Hope appears graceful, bowing, and smiling and says: "Those who accept the gospel because it is their last chance, must lack largely, if not altogether, the saving spirit of gratitude." To detect the poison in this sweet morsel, and to see the duplicity hidden in it, reduce it to home-spun English as follows:

The Larger Hope Theory Stated in Home-spun English

1. Those who accept the gospel because it is their "last chance" are "scared into it." Understand, then, that you must accept the gospel because this is not your "last chance."

2. Those who accept the gospel because it is their last chance must "lack largely" all gratitude.

3. Those who accept the gospel because it is their last chance must lack "altogether" the sense of love and gratitude.

4. Therefore, sinner friend, in order that you may accept the gospel in love and gratitude, you must know and verily believe that your chance to be saved now is not your "last chance;" that you are a nice good fellow, having considerable "merit;" that you are not "lost," only misplaced; that you have a "right" to another chance; that your present condition is a misfortune and not a crime; and that since you are not in a very bad predicament anyway, you should accept the gospel with a devout spirit of gratitude, because you have nothing much to be grateful for!

COMMUNICATIONS

"They shall make known unto you all things which are done here" (Col. 4:9).

To the Dear Household of faith:

I want to express my heartfelt thanks for the dear Restitution, which has so kindly been sent to me for some time. I feel assured that the dear Lord will bless those that contribute to the Helping Fund, as well as the Editor and helpers. Things are developing so rapid that our Lord's return must be very near at hand. May the Lord help us to be ready. From your aged sister in much love, Mrs. M. J. Craton.

Dear Old Restitution and its Many Readers, Greeting:

I am still among the living but not very robust any more as I am 71 years old. But I am still strong in the faith, looking for our Redeemer and Savior. As we are living in perilous times it stands us in hand to ever keep our eyes Zionward. Oh this terrible war! At its end we can see a dim light that will shine brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. The world is drifting along in darkness and not taking heed to that light. When the Bridegroom shuts the door then they will want to go in; but it will be too late. Everything is being preached today but the gospel, but in the last days deceivers are to get worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. Talk to the people and they do not seem to understand where we are (and seem to care less); they are all alive on the war question but do not seem to know what it means. It means a whole lot to those that are watching the signs of the times. Brothers and sister in Christ, let us be ever mindful of him that said, "I will never leave nor forsake you." Hoping he will soon come, is my prayer. Jesse Harold.

OBITUARY

Catherine Elizabeth Tribby was born in Oxford N. Y., Aug. 24, 1849. She passed away Friday, July 13, 1917, age 68 years, 10 months, and 19 days.

In the year 1876 she was married to Samuel Tribby. They were among the early pioneers of the state of Minnesota. For twelve years she has made her home with her daughter and husband Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Ireland, in Moorefield, and later in Curtis. She was the faithful mother of three children. One little son died in infancy, one daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Snyder, preceded her mother in death two years and three months ago. This leaves only one daughter, Mrs. L. N. Ireland.

Her circle of friends was large both in Curtis and elsewhere. She passed away in the fervent hope of eternal life. She was not only a Christian by profession but those nearest her testify that her Christian life was consistent and steadfast, thus bringing the sunlight of comfort and a hope that lessens the sorrow of parting and causes the beloved friends to look forward to a time not far distant when the sad goodby will be forgotten in the glad good morning.

O how sweet it will be
In that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain;
With songs on our lips
And with harps in our hands
To meet one another again.

The funeral services took place from the Methodist Church in Curtis, Neb., Saturday afternoon, July 14th, at 4 o'clock, being conducted by Chas. M. McCorkle pastor of that church. Interment in the Curtis Cemetery.—Sent by Sister A. F. Schultz.

An elderly Philadelphia lady, a church member, active in good works, but quite conservative, went to San Francisco to visit relatives and see the fair. A few days before Billy Sunday began his revival there, a niece asked her:

"Aunty, you saw Billy Sunday in Philadelphia last winter, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"He starts here next Sunday," said the girl. "I suppose I ought to go, oughtn't I?"

"Why, yes," said the old lady. "You ought to hear him, certainly—but it does not seem a nice thing to do on the Sabbath."

Take heart with the day and begin again.

Bereans

The National Berean Conference comes between the Illinois Bible School, Aug. 7-15, and the Illinois Conference, 17-19. Make your plans to attend all these. Those from west and north can attend the Waterloo, Iowa, Conference on their way home, as it follows the Illinois Conference immediately.

Oregon, Illinois, is on the C. B. & Q. Those from the north can come direct on the St Paul branch. Junctions for the C. B. & Q. are at Dubuque, Iowa, and Rochelle Illinois. The best route from the east and south is through Chicago. The C. B. & Q. leaves the Union Station. Can transfer from any other station to it by Parmelee Bus. Trains leave Chicago at 10:10 A. M., 4:35 P. M. and 6:30 P. M. Fare from Chicago, $2.38 one way. Take the taxi at Oregon for the "Little Stone Church."

There is nothing which so refines the face and mind as the constant presence of good thoughts.

If you are going to be carried over the rough places you might as well not be able to walk at all.

PUT UP THY SWORD

By E. W. Dyer

Shortly after the outbreak of the great war, so said a recent periodical, a young Austrian reservist who was called to the colors refused to respond. When asked why, he answered, "I am a Christian now, and cannot conscientiously take up arms against my fellew-men." Upon being told that he must go or be shot he calmly replied, "I will die then;I cannot, will not fight." Many have severely criticised him and others of like character, but I believe he did right.

Brethren, is it right for a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus to fight? Can we fight if we have his Spirit in our hearts? Read 1 Pet. 2:21-24: "For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps; who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously; by whose stripes ye were healed."

Has Jesus ever led anyone to the battle-field? If so we fail to find anything concerning it in the Guide Book. Does he command his followers to fight? No! Quite to the contrary he said, "Put up thy sword." Again, Jesus answered, "My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews; but now is my kingdom not from hence" (John 18:36). If there is any kingdom which we as Christians should defend, it is Christ's; and it seem that if ever there was a time in its history when it needed defending it was when Jesus the prospective King, was about to be taken prisoner by his enemies and put to death. But when Peter drew his sword and cut off Malchus' ear Jesus said, "Put up thy sword into the sheath." Had he been a believer in resisting with arms, quite probably he would have said, "That's right Peter; cut off the other ear!" No! That is not the Christ spirit. Our gentle, holy Savior who "was brought as a lamb to the slaughter and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he open not his mouth," commands us not to fight.

We have a warfare, but not a carnal one: "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds" (2 Cor. 10:4). We are to fight sin, but with spiritual weapons, such as prayer, the sword of the spirit, a holy life, and the word of our testimony.

"We are ambassadors for Christ" (2 Cor. 5:20). Webster gives the following definition of ambassador or embassador, which words may be used interchangeably; "A minister of the highest rank, employed by one prince or state, at the court of another . . . . representing the power and dignity of his sovereign." As Christians we are employed by the heavenly government to represent the power and dignity of our great Sovereign, Jesus Christ, at the courts of earthly princes and states. What did Paul say was the duty of Christ's ambassador? "He has committed unto us the word of reconciliation" (2 Cor. 5:19), and, "As though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." What a high calling! What an honor to bestow on mortal man! Jesus represents God to the Christian and we represent Jesus to the world, and beseech them in Christ's stead to be reconciled to God. Can we fill the sacred position, and faithfully discharge the duties devolving upon us as Christ's ambassadors if we take up arms against our fellow-men? Imagine America's ambassador to England going about with a sword slashing, maiming and killing subjects of King George! What kind of an impression would this give the English people of America? Is it not just about as inconsistent for Christ's ambassador to participate in the carnage of carnal warfare?

We—all of Christ's followers on earth of whatever race, color, or earthly nationality—go to make up one great nation. We are called out from this world to be a separate people, a nation among nations. Read what Peter had to say about this: "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthod, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light" (1 Pet. 2:9). It seems to me it would be an absolute impossibility for one to show forth the praises of the meek and lowly Jesus while on the field of battle fighting or in any way promoting carnal warfare.

Suppose I, a follower of Christ, shoot a man who also claims Jesus for his Savior. Am I not taking the life of a member of the body of Christ? I would be murdering my brother! Could I do that if I really loved him? No. The thought of it makes one shudder. Yet, there are, on fields of battle today, Methodist arrayed against Methodist, Baptist against Baptist, Salvationist against Salvationist; and those of other communions against their brothers, slaying each other! Jesus said, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (John 13:35). We are also commanded by Jesus to love our enemies (Matt. 5:44).

If I love my enemy I shall have no desire to kill him. To kill a man who has not yet made his peace with God would end probation for him. Had he been allowed to live a little longer, perhaps he would have come under the influence of the gospel and have yielded himself to Christ. It is possible that that soul would have been saved for eternal life; but I sent him into a Christless grave. Would that be following in Christ's steps?

We say we believe Jesus will soon return to earth to set up his kingdom and give his people an inheritance, incorruptible, undefiled, which will not fade away. Are we living up to our profession? If not, can we reasonably expect worldly people to believe we are sincere? How must we live to be in readiness for Christ's coming? Without "spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; . . . holy and without blemish" (Eph. 5:27). "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares" (Luke 21:34). "Watch ye therefore and pray always." "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord" (James 5:7). "Be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless" (2 Pet. 3:14). "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord" (Heb. 12:14).—The World's Crisis.

ALWAYS THANKFUL

The father of a family being absent at dinner, the mother called on little five-year-old Ernest to ask the blessing. Folding his hands and bending his head, he said:

"Dear Lord, sometimes we have more and sometimes less, but we're very thankful."

GOD IS NOT DEAD

At one time I was sorely vexed and tried by my own sinfulness, by the wickedness of the world, and by the dangers which beset the church.

One morning I saw my wife dressed in mourning. Surprised, I asked her who had died. She replied, "Do you not know? God in heaven is dead."

I said to her, "How can you talk such nonsense, Katie? How can God die? He is immortal, and will live for all eternity."

"Is that really true?" she asked. "Of course," I said, still not perceiving what she was aiming at, "how can you doubt it? As surely as there is a God in heaven, so sure is it that he can never die."

"And yet," she said, "though you do not doubt, you are still so hopeless and discouraged." Then I observed what a wise woman my wife was, and mastered my sadness.—Martin Luther.

WHEN EAGER TO CRITICISE

When you are eager to criticise, just stop a moment and put yourself soberly in the place of the man you wish to criticise, reflect on his difficulties, and on what you are sure must be his good intentions. Reflect also on your own vast ignorance of the facts he has to deal with. You will be surprised to find how much tamer your tongue grews.- Auntie Wince.

An engine of one-cat power running all the time is more effective than one of forty horse-power standing idle.

Who cares to meet the man who has never made a mistake for that infallible individual has likely never made anything else.

Today we dedicate this page to those of whom Jesus said,

"Allow the little children to come to me, and do not prevent them; for of such is the kingdom of God."

The Child's Prayer

Into her chamber went
A little maid one day,
And by a chair she knelt
And thus began to pray:
"Jesus, my eyes I close—
Thy form I cannot see;
If thou art near me, Lord,
I pray thee speak to me."
A still, small voice she heard within her soul:
"What is it, child? I hear thee—tell me all."

"I pray thee, Lord," she said,
"That thou will condescend
To tarry in my heart
And ever be my friend.
The path of life is dark—
I would not go astray;
Oh, let me have thy hand
To lead me in the way."
"Fear not—I will not leave thee child alone."
She thought she felt a soft hand press her own.

"They tell me, Lord, that all
The living pass away—
The aged soon must die,
And even children may.
Oh, let my parents live
Till I a woman grow;
For if they die, what can
A little orphan do?"
"Fear not my child—whatever ills may come,
I'll not forsake thee till I bring thee home."

Her little prayer was said,
And from her chamber now
She passed forth, with the light
Of heaven upon her brow.
"Mother I've seen the Lord;
His hand in mine I felt,
And, oh, I heard him say,
As by my chair I knelt,
'Fear not, my child—whatever ills may come,
I'll not forsake thee till I bring thee home.'"

—Hodges Reed.

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not; nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

Are you good or are you bad? Do you know how to tell? Do you do whatever your mother tells you to and exactly on the moment? If you do you are good, if you do not you are bad. Goodness is to obey, badness is to disobey. We all respect goodness. Your father and your mother are good. Every one respects them, don't they? Are you respected? Be good and command the confidence, respect and love of all.

Thoughts About Children

A child's nature is trustful, loving, dependent.

A child thinks his father the greatest, handsomest and most powerful man that ever lived. He goes to him with all his troubles; he carries to him his every joy; he looks upon him as a counsellor, protector, guide and friend.

He does not believe there is anything his father can not do; his word is beyond question; the highest authority is "father said so."

Do we—children of a larger growth—see any lesson in this, as to our love, trust in, and dependence on our heavenly Father?

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. AUGUST 14, 1917 NUMBER 30

"HE LEADETH ME"

In pastures green? Not alway; sometimes he
Who knoweth best in kindness leadeth me
In weary ways, where heavy shadows be.

Out of the sunshine warm and bright;
Out of the sunshine into darkest night,
I oft would faint with sorrow and affright.

Only for this: I know he holds my hand;
So, whether in green or desert land,
I trust; although I may not understand.

And by still waters? No, not always so;
Oftimes the heavy tempests round me blow,
And o'er my soul the waves and billows go.

But when the storm beats fiercest and I cry
Aloud for help, the Master standeth by
And whispers to my soul, "Lo, it is I."

Above, the tempest wild I hear him say:
'Beyond the darkness lies the perfect day:
In every path of thine I lead the way."

So, whether in the hilltops high and fair
I dwell, or in the sunless valleys where
The shadows lie, what matter? He is there.

And, more than this, where'er the pathway leads,
He gives no helpless broken reed,
But his own hand, sufficient for my need.

So, where he leads me I can safely go,
And in the blest hereafter I shall know
Why in his wisdom he hath led me so.—Selected by Sister McIlrath.

TO WHOM SHALL I RENDER OBEDIENCE

"A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people" (Acts 3:22,23).

The context shows clearly that this prophet is Jesus the Christ and makes it a duty upon us to hear, i. e. take heed to all that he says or teaches, for he says, "The word that I have spoken shall judge him (that rejecteth me) in the last day." To judge here means to condemn, and makes Jesus declare that rejectors of him are condemned by his teaching, and if by that, the proof is conclusive that one can be condemned after having kept the law of Moses by rejecting the teaching of Jesus. This prophet commands his disciples, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and the Son, and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Notice, he does not teach them to observe all things commanded by Moses; but "all things which I have commanded you," and that clinches the nail so surely driven by Moses. Both Moses and Jesus enjoin upon us the obligation of obeying the commands of Jesus.

Commission of Christ to Teach the Gospel and Obey His Commands

The gospel is what is to be taught to the nations. "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Here we have it clearly commanded to preach the gospel. Why did Jesus command his followers to teach the gospel? Was it not becase he wished them to do exactly what he commanded? Most certainly it was. His command was not to go and preach the philosophy of the heathen, nor the gods of the Greeks, but the gospel; and should I start out teaching those things under this commission every one would object by saying the commission only enjoins the preaching of the gospel of Christ, and the things he commands, and that I have no right to add the teachings of heathenism.

Along comes one and says we must preach the law, and have people keep the sabbath. Why so? Does the commission say any more about the law and sabbath than it does about the teachings of the heathen philosophers? If the fact that the one not mentioned nullifies it, the other must also nullify or the rule will not work both ways, and is a poor one. Then from the last commission of Jesus there is no command to keep the law or the sabbath, and if it is obligatory upon the followers of Christ we certainly ought to have had it mentioned here.

The Gospel is Not the Law

But is it necessary for us to keep any part of the law? Let Jesus answer: "Therefore, he that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them (not doeth something else), I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock." This very clearly shows that those who hear and do what Jesus teaches are safe from all evil and will never be destroyed as those who hear and do not; and proves clearly that the hearer of Jesus and the doer of his word is building upon the only safe foundation, and that leaves out anything else as necessary to our salvation. He that heareth and doeth this is safe, hence this is enough. Again, "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him" (John 14:21). Whom is it that the Father and Son will love ? Notice, it is not he that keepeth the sabbath or law but my commandments, says Jesus. Is this true ? If so Jesus' commandments are all the commandments necessary for his followers to keep.

Again, "If a man love me he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him" (John 14:23). What more would we wish ? The Father and Son both abiding with those who keep not the law but Jesus' commands. Jesus never commanded anyone to keep the law and sabbath, but on the contrary commanded the man who was cured of his infirmity, to arise, take up his bed and walk on the sabbath day, when the law clearly stated that people should carry no burdens then, by which he showed his lordship over that day. Again, "The Jews sought the more to kill him, because he had not only broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father" (John 5: 18). Who here says Jesus had broken the sabbath ? John, the beloved disciple. Did he tell the truth ? If not then God inspired John to write a falsehood and say Jesus did a thing he did not do which leaves the Bible with inspired errors in it.

Listen again, "At that time Jesus went on the sabbath day through the corn; and his disciples were an hungered, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat. But when the pharisees saw it, they said unto him. Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the sabbath day. But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungered, and they that were with him; how he entered into the house of God, and did eat the shew bread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them that were with him, but only for the priests? Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath and are blameless ? But I say unto you, that in this place is one greater than the temple. But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless. For the Son of Man is Lord even of the sabbath day." Here Jesus admits that his disciples were violating the law, as did David and the priests, but declared them to be guiltless, and the reason of their innocence is because he is Lord of that day and could change or rule it to suit himself and the convenience of his disciples. Lord means ruler, and Jesus had rulership over that day, and we have seen that he commanded one to carry a burden, and condemned not his disciples for gathering food.

Disciples of Christ Now Under Grace

Now we know that all the sayings of the law are spoken to those under the law that every mouth might be stopped, and the while world might be subject to the judgment of God" (Rom. 3:19). Christians, or the disciples of Christ, are not under the law (Rom. 6:14,15). Hence the law does not speak to them. As the law does not speak to Christians, and Jesus must be heard by them in all things whatsoever he saith unto them, they have a right to carry beds or gather grain upon that day, and all the twisting of Sabbatarians cannot get around the fact. Paul tells us, "For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, Cursed is every one who continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them" (Gal. 3:10). To whom was Paul writing ? The churches of Galatia, Christians. What does he tell them ? "For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse." As many of whom ? Christians, the people to whom he is writing, of course. Do you, my Christian friend, wish to be under the curse ? If not do not do the works of the law; for as many as are of these works are under the curse. The sabbath is one of the works, hence trying to keep it will bring the curse to him who does it.

One under the law is bound to keep it all. and none of the fathers could do that (Acts 15:10). The law was a heavy yoke, but Christ's yoke is easy. Speaking to Israel God says, "I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast days, her new moons, and her sabbaths, and her solemn feasts" (Hos. 2:11). When does her mirth cease if not during the time of Jacob's trouble which is during the Christian dispensation, and Sabbatarians admit we now do not have to keep the feast days, new moons, and solemn feasts, as they are all done away with. Then why contend for sabbath keeping when all the rest of the verse is so literally fulfilled in this dispensation ? If the sabbath does not cease now when will it, or did old Hosea prophesy a false prophecy ? But Paul tells us of the fulfilment of this prophecy, "Let no man judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath" (Col. 2:16). We leave off the word "days" because there is no Greek word for that word, and we will not add to the original Scriptures. Here the feasts, new moons, holy days, and sabbath are all mentioned as being no longer binding because the hand-writing of ordinances (Gr. Dogmas, which is defined, laws) that was against us, and contrary to us, was taken out of the way being nailed to the cross (verse 14).

Passing Away of Ordinances Included the Sabbath

The hand writing of laws was taken away, and that did away with the sabbath, and all other holy days of Israel. But we are sometimes told that sabbath here refers to the ceremonial sabbaths, and not the seventh day. But upon what authority ? None, but the assertion of him who says that the feast days are mentioned first, and nothing left but the weekly sabbath. Again it is said the word "sabbath" is a translation of the Greek word sabbaton, which is plural, thus giving room to refer it to the feast days; but in a tract recently handed out by some Sabbatarians this statement is quoted: "And they rested on the sabbath according to the commandment," and used by the writer to prove that the disciples of Jesus kept the sabbath. The word "sabbath" here is from the identical Greek word as in Colossians, and, in this instance they admit that it refers to the weekly day of rest. Many other texts also can be given where the word sabbaton is used where the weekly day of rest is spoken of without doubt, and there is not one reason why Paul is not speaking of it.

Two-Law Theory Absurd

One not under the law is not spoken to by the law, and hence the law in which the sabbath is commanded does not speak to Christians, and therefore not commanded to Christians. But some tell us there are two laws, one ceremonial, and one moral: one written on stones, one in a book; one the law of Moses, and one the law of God. Where does God tell us such things ? Was not the law of ten commandments written on stones and also in the book ? If not written in the book how did it get there ? Is it not there now ? Who put it there ? But that which was written on stones was done away with. 2 Cor. 3:7 reads, "Which was to be done away." Verse 11 says, "was done away," while verse 3 says, "abolished." Then the two-law theory is of no use, for that written on stones was done away and abolished, and as the sabbath law was there it shared the same fate, and we prove again Paul correct in his statement concerning the sabbath.

But that which was written on stones was called the covenant (Deut. 4:13): "And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments: and wrote them upon tables of stone" (Deut. 4:23; Exod. 34: 27, 28; 2 Kings 8:9,21). This covenant was made at Sinai, and Paul declared "gendereth bondage," and was to be "cast out" (Gal. 4:22-31), waxed old, and in Paul's day was ready to vanish away (Heb. 8:7-13). The reader is requested to turn and read the references given. This old covenant contained the ten commandments and the sabbath was given in them. As this was done away with, cast out, waxed old, and vanished we must conclude that the sabbath went with it.

TRUTH VERSUS FABLES

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2:8).

We Are Entirely Dependent Upon God

The above text from the Scriptures is a very simple statement, recorded in clear and intelligible language, and yet the world at large does not understand it. Have all the good people professing to be Christians, who we meet in our daily lives, read that text I wonder, and paused to think what it means ? It flatly contradicts the idea that man is of a dual nature. It proves undeniably that he is entirely dependent upon God for everything, and refutes any theory of anything immortal in his make-up. But the people of the world are too much occupied with their own pursuits and pleasures to give time to study God's word and seek salvation: they prefer the creeds of their own particular denominations to seeking for themselves out of his word. They are like the pharisees of old of whom Jesus said, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up. Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch" (Matt. 14:13,14).

We Must Seek God the Way He Directs Us

It is a sad and mournful thing to see the thousands on every side who are striving to enter into life by a way that has been pointed out by man, instead of seeking of God for themselves; for it is one of his prerogatives that we must seek him, not he seek us. Jesus says: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you" (Matt. 7:7). This is a definite promise, and God never breaks a promise; neither does Jesus promise anything that will not be fulfilled. Therefore the remedy for the world's blindness is to follow Christ's injunction, "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me" (John 5:39).

Our Salvation is Conditioned upon Both Grace and Faith

Referring again to our text it says, "By grace are we saved through faith." So we have to depend upon the grace or favor of God, and we cannot obtain that without faith. This has a restricting influence on salvation. Our faith must be established before God will recognize us. Now what do we have to have faith in ? Here is where the majority of people go astray. A short time ago the writer asked a minister what he understood by the gospel. He replied, "The death and resurrection of Christ." This is an example of the prevailing ignorance of the Bible. In Luke 9:2 we read that Jesus sent his disciples out to preach the kingdom of God, which is repeatedly referred to as the "gospel of the kingdom" (Matt. 4:23; 9: 35; 24:14; Mark 1:14; Luke 8:1). The 10th verse records their return, so they had now preached the gospel, and yet in the 44th and 45th verses it distinctly says that they did not understand what Jesus meant when he spoke of his death and resurrection. Mark 9.31,32 also records the same statement, so if the definition of the gospel by my minister acquaintance was correct, the disciples were preaching something they did not understand and, in fact, knew nothing about! Such a ridiculous statement to emanate from a professed minister of the gospel is too absurd for contemplation; but such is the ignorance of the world.

An Immortal, Man Cannot be Saved

But this view of the gospel cannot be wondered at when we seek knowledge from a star of such magnitude as Canon Liddon, one of the shining lights of the church of England. He says man is "a spiritual being," and I notice he uses this expression interchangeably with "immortal being." If that is so why was it necessary for Christ to die to save mankind, for if man is spiritual or immortal he cannot die (spiritually anyway), therefore does not require saving; and furthermore, if man is spiritual, why should Christ have had to die a physical death, to save a man from a spiritual death ? It is simply chaos: the deeper you search into these orthodox creeds the deeper into the mire you sink till you are lost in oblivion.

A "Declaration" of "The Things" of Faith

Casting aside these hare-brained conjectures, let us turn to the word of God, and we soon find in simple language the faith that is required of us is in "The things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12), which is a condensed "declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us" (Luke 1:1).

If we believe, therefore, this gospel of the kingdom, which was preached to Abraham (Gal. 3:8), and afterward to Moses and the children of Israel (Exod. 6:6-8), and still later to David (2 Sam. 7:12), and lastly by Jesus and the apostles, then if we obey God's commands, and become his children by adoption (Gal. 4:4-7) through baptism (Col. 2:12), we become eligible to receive his favor, as spoken of in our text, but not unless we have complied with all these conditions.

Hopeless Condition of Unbelievers

Paul said to the Ephesian brethren, referring to the period before their baptism, "At that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world" (Eph. 2:12). Can any one imagine a more helpless condition than to be without hope and a stranger from God; and yet that is the exact condition the world is in today, though the professing Christians would indignantly deny such an accusation. The word of God is irrefutable; it has stood all the past centuries, and will stand till the end. Beloved, how much we ought to praise God who has revealed to us his glorious light, for Peter says: "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light" (1 Pet. 2: 9). What a contrast this condition is to the one brought about by believing the fables which Paul prophesies in 2 Tim. 4:3,4. How true his words were, for shortly after his day the Catholic Church, the great apostasy, dominated the religious world, the teachings of which afterwards drifted into the different denominations and creeds of today through the Reformation, and so Paul's prediction is fulfilled, just the same as all other inspired writings have been or will be.

"Not of Yourselves"

The last part of the text reads, "And that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." Here we are reminded again of our weakness and our utter dependence on God. So many people think they have a right to eternal life and to prove it quote, "That unto me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear" (Isa. 45:22). They distort the Scriptures by taking a few words of a verse to support their own pet theory, without any respect toward what the inspired writer is teaching. It is perfectly true that every knee shall bow to him in that day Isaiah is speaking of, for the wicked will have been eliminated. The 20th verse says, "Assemble yourselves and come; draw near together, ye that are escaped of the nations." So according to that some have been destroyed, or there could not have been any referred to as "escaped." The Bible teaches from beginning to end that only the righteous shall be saved, but the wicked shall be destroyed. "For behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch" (Mal. 4:1). That does not look like everyone will bow the knee when a portion of them shall be burnt up root and branch, does it ? As far as I can understand language it means extinction for those who have disobeyed God's commands. Surely this will prove to all that salvation is conditional. We all know that man fell through sin, but God in his goodness has offered to raise him up again if he will abide by his plans and arrangements. Man being the offender must of necessity accept the terms offered him by the offended, if he wishes to obtain pardon; consequently salvation is conditional, and is only offered to those who are willing to accept God's terms and comply with them. The fact that eternal life is a gift of God (Rom. 6:23) is ample proof that we are dependent on him for it. This doctrine of universal salvation, which people are so prone to believe, is simply a phantasy of man's brain and is not taught in the Bible, and all who believe it are living in a fool's paradise, which will melt away like a dream when the sun of righteousness shall rise with healing in his wings.

Perilous Times Require Earnestness in the Truth

Beloved, let us be earnest in all we do. We are living in perilous times, and if we are faithful unto him whose name we have taken, we shall surely be persecuted, for we are told in Acts 14: 22 "that we must through much tribulation enter the kingdom of God." Let us then be prepared for these trials and abound in the work of the Lord, and not only strive to live closer to God, but let us do our utmost to induce others to study and accept this great salvation. It is man's haughty spirit that keeps him from God, so let those beautiful words of our Master sink deep in our hearts: "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls" (Matt. 11:29).

A. E. Griffiths.

THE COURAGE OF A GOOD CONSCIENCE

In the face of the sacrifice which is now confronting our beloved country, it is essential to maintain a common ground of fellowship upon which differences of view and of feeling can unite in working for the one great end of advancing the world's good.

Patriotism at this time is assumed to express itself above all else in the one quality of courage, and many of those who have volunteered for military service believe that they are offering their lives for their country. The millions who have registered know that sacrifice of life is a possible issue of this service. Their courage is hailed as the chief capital of the nation in its extremity.

In considering this situation it is well to remember that the courage of the "silent masses" of humanity not so directly involved in the conflict should be fairly appraised and no injustice be done to those who express themselves in terms which do not agree with the ordinary patriotic standards. The limited class who cannot in good conscience respond to their country's call with any form of military service may yet be found to be equipped with courage of the highest order.

The religious bodies whose membership has been exempted by the Government from active military service appreciate this regard for conscientious scruples and desire to take no advantage of this action of shielding themselves from any dangerous service or sacrifice which may express their sense of duty to the cause of humanity.

In the conflict in Europe, some of the most perilous work in mine-sweeping in the English Channel has been voluntarily assumed by men of this class, often called by the rather vague term, "pacifists." Their valor in the face of danger has been inspired by the desire to save life. Their efforts have been commended as equal in courage to any of those manifested on the battlefield.

The ambulance work of non-combatants who have declined to carry any weapons of defense, has also won the highest recognition from the President of France and from the King of Italy. More than two thousand of this class have been engaged in ambulance work and in efforts to rebuild the desolated villages and the country-side in northern France. They have not been daunted by the perils of bursting shells or lurking fevers. We cannot as good citizens safely ignore them in the claim that courage in this crisis shall be accepted as the measure of a man.

The supreme example of courage in the history of the world as recalled by the words, "Even Christ pleased not himself," shines forth as a perfect expression in this extremity. He made this sacrifice of life holy that we might know how to make ours holy. He gave courage a new content and an infinite value. He made it sacrificial. In that path we are called to walk and it may lead us in divergent ways, but as our eye is upon him, we shall at least be preserved from reproaching one another.

SUNDAY'S REVISED FIGURES

The final figures announced by the William A. Sunday Evangelistic Association as covering the New York converts fall somewhat short of the newspaper computation. The New York World declares:

"The men and women trail-hitters who signed cards giving their names, addresses, and a definite pledge to lead a better life numbered, the association's tally shows, 65,915.

"This figure is considerably below the count made by the newspapers—with a comptometer—of every person who went forward and took Billy's hand. That total was 98,948, but it included—as was expected by Billy and his associates—a great number who went up the trail out of curiosity, or as a stunt, or just to get a good look at the soulsaver. It included also many who, in the confusion, were not reached by the secretaries who distributed cards. The 65,915 were the serious, sincere persons who really sought to be made better."—The Literary Digest.

We think it is quite possible that many more "stunts" could be deducted from the 65,915, without any injustice to Billy Sunday. Probably it is true that 65,915 "took Billy's hand" for one reason or another; but that one of them was taught the "things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12) we deny outright.

It is a good thing to be rich and a good thing to be strong but it is a better thing to be loved of many friends.

One stitch at a time taken patiently and the pattern will come out all right.

Show courtesy to others, my boy, not because they are gentlemen, but because you are one.

Knowledge is power.

Brother J. S. Lyon, formerly of Alabama, was a very welcome and interesting visitor of Sunday July 29th. Fifteen years ago he visited the Cleveland church and is still rejoicing in the hope.

Will the brother or sister who sent a one dollar bill from Toronto, Canada, please send their name and address to The Restitution office. The money was sent with the request for tracts, but through an oversight the name was not given.

MATTHEW 10:28

> "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."

Among the prominent misunderstood texts of Scripture that cause good, honest people to err, Matthew 10:28 holds a conspicuous place. This text is relied on by those who believe in the immortality of the spirit to prove this doctrine. When the text is fairly examined this will be seen to be a wonderful mistake. In the first place, the word psuche from which the word soul is here rendered, is never rendered spirit; and in the second place, there is nothing in the text to prove that the soul is immortal, but the opposite is plainly indicated. Let us get the quotation just as it is in the Bible: "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."

The Soul Destructible, Not Immortal

The first thing that I shall call your attention to is that it is plainly stated that God can "destroy" the soul here mentioned. Anything that can be destroyed is not immortal, hence the soul here mentioned is not immortal. But one may object that it is said that man cannot destroy the soul, but that God only has the power to do this. It makes no difference what power it takes to destroy it, if it can be destroyed, it is not immortal. To take the position that the soul is the offspring of God, and that mortal man for that reason cannot destroy it, but that God can, is fatalism of the worst sort. If one mortal being can destroy another mortal being then all mortal beings can be killed or destroyed. This all will admit. Now it follows that if one immortal being can be destroyed or killed, then all can, for all partake of the same nature. This we are logically forced to admit. Notice, a mortal father can kill or destroy his child; so can the child kill, or destroy the father, because they both have the same nature. Now it follows that if God, the immortal Father, can destroy one of his children, the child could destroy or kill the Father; for according to the theory they are both of the same nature. Now if one is ever destroyed the time might come when the other would be destroyed. Such a position as this is ridiculous; still it is just the logical conclusions of the position so often taken on Matt. 10:28.

Having noticed the absurdity of the common position taken on this Scripture, i. e., that it teaches the immortality of the soul or spirit, I shall now give what I consider a correct exegesis od this text.

Psuche and Zoe Life

The Greek word psuche here rendered soul has a variety of meanings. Its primary meaning is anything possessing animal life. Its secondary meaning is animal life, and I am sure that it is used in that sense here. There is another Greek word translated life in the New Testament, and that is zoe. This word commonly represents the future, eternal life of the overcomer; but not always, however. The Christian and sinner each have psuche, or animal life here. The Christian has zoe life in promise here, and will get it in fact in the world to come by a resurrection from the dead (Mark 10:28-30; Luke 18:28-30; Dan. 12:2). The sinner does not have the zoe, or eternal life either by promise in this life or the life to come; for zoe life depends on a belief in Jesus Christ (John 3:16). The sinner will be resurrected not to zoe, or eternal life; but to psuche, or animal life. Man can destroy psuche, or animal life in this age, but the power to do this in the resurrection age belongs to God alone.

Now with these facts before us that the word in Matt. 10:28 rendered soul simply means animal life, that the sinner will be resurrected to psuche, or animal life; that God only will have the power to destroy this psuche, or animal life in the future age, I think that we can understand this passage. The admonition is not to fear those who can kill the body now but cannot destroy the future life; for man will be resurrected and this would amount to little: but rather fear God who can and will, if we spend our lives in wickedness, destroy both body and future psuche or animal life of the wicked in hell. I am sure this is the meaning of this text.

Another point of note is the Greek word from which the word "hell" is rendered. It comes from gehenna, a place indicative of the future destruction of the wicked, and not their preservation.

TESTIMONY OF THE TABERNACLE

No. 2

The tabernacle was a figure of the wilderness life of God's redeemed people, which gave place in due time to another condition typified by the more perfect and enduring temple, glorious alike within and without. It is likewise a type of him who fulfilled all types. He had no fixed abiding place, no where to lay his head, yet was filled with the Holy Spirit without measure. And now victorious over death he, like the glorious temple, is glorified and abideth forever.

The chief interest to us of the tabernacle comes from its typical character. It was a part, and a very prominent part, of a typical system. There was a typical sanctuary, a typical service, a typical priesthood; a typical victim was slain, and typical sacrifices were offered by priests who were themselves types of the Lord—our great high priest. It was typical of Christ, of the church, of the individual believer.

First.—"The Word was made flesh and tabernacled among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth" (1John 1:18). As God was in the tabernacle, so God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them (2 Cor. 5:19-21).

Second.—It was typical of the church: the church is now the dwelling place of God (see Eph. 2:22) though like the tabernacle, not outwardly glorious in this present age.

Third.—It is typical of the individual Christian, because the believer is now the temple of God, who by his spirit dwells in his body (1 Cor. 3:16,17; 6:19; 2 Cor. 6:16). As God was in Christ so now is he in the Christian. It was likewise typical of the eternal state when the tabernacle of God shall be with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and he shall be their God (Rev. 21:3).

To begin a description of the tabernacle is a task not easily performed, for to describe its appearance would convey no idea of its details. We will begin with the court however, since we would naturally come to that first in approaching it. It is described in detail in Exod. 27:9-17, which all should read. The length of the court shall be an hundred cubits, and the breadth fifty cubits everywhere, and the height five cubits of fine twined linen, and their sockets of brass.

The cubit was about a foot and a half of our measure, or about 19½ inches in length, to be exact. This makes the court of the tabernacle about 162½ feet in length by about 80 in breadth, and in form a perfect rectangle. It was formed of 60 pillars, 20 being on the south and 20 on the north sides; 10 on the west and 10 on the east sides. On the west end of this court stood the tabernacle, the door or entrance being on the east end.

These 60 pillars were about eight feet high and the same distance apart. They were about half the height of the boards of the tabernacle, and were called "brazen pillars," from being made either of brass or of wood covered with brass. They stood upright in position, and were ornamented with a piece of silver at the top. The pillars sustained the curtains, being themselves kept in place and prevented from falling inward or outward by cords and pins. There is considerable that might be said of the lessons suggested by the pillars and their fastenings, but I must pass on to consider other parts.

The next thing to notice about the court is the curtains or hangings. These were of fine twined linen and suggest thoughts of righteousness. Thus righteousness and purity encircled the habitation of God, excluding everything impure or defiling, and emphasizing the fact that there is an inside and an outside with a clearly defined line of separation between them. The only way in was through the gate or door-way, suggesting Christ, who said, "I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved" (John 10:9). The curtains were suspended from silver fillets, and were transparent, so that the people outside could see what was going on in the court into which they could not enter.

The gate of the court was composed of a curtain suspended from four pillars. It was never to be drawn, but looped up in the centre, so that the moment that the worshipper stood at the gate he might see the tabernacle. So the sinner who comes to God through Christ, the Door, may see the end of his journey from the beginning. The material and colors of the gate were the same as the vail, but there were no figures of Cherubim upon it. The colors of blue, scarlet, and purple, of this entrance had each a peculiar meaning or suggestiveness. Blue is the heavenly color, reminding us that the Lord from heaven brought life and immortality to light and through him we partake of a heavenly calling that our citizenship or allegiance is registered there; that we are like the patriarchs and prophets of old mentioned in 11th chapter of Hebrews—looking for an heavenly country. The scarlet reminds us of the object of his coming in the flesh shedding his blood for the remission of our sins. And the purple proclaims his royalty the son of David, the King of kings and Lord of lords.

The gate was always toward the east, or sun rising, reminding us of the need of spiritual light in order that we may enter the court. There was but one gate, so there is but one Savior — one way to God, and that by him.

Its width was particularly noticable, being 30 feet wide, but very low in proportion. In this it was the reverse of the door of the tabernacle, which was both narrow and high. As we stand at the wide open gate of the court we are reminded of those words of Paul in the 3rd chapter of Ephesians. He prayed that they might be able fully to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length, depth and height, and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that they might be filled with all the fullness of God. Notice the order in which the Apostle speaks of the love of Christ: it is first its breadth, though most frequently quoted as though it were the other way, length and breadth. The Apostle begins with the breadth of love—just where it is needed to embrace the sinner who comes to the gate which is Christ, and entering that way the sinner can begin to learn its length, depth and height.

The court, which I have endeavoured in my feeble way to outline, rather than to describe, was not the place to abide, but a place through which to pass into the sacred presence of God, who dwelt between the Cherubim over the Ark in the tabernacle. Upon entering the court through the gate, the first object we meet is the brazen altar, which stands facing the gate. It is made of wood, but covered with strong brass plates to protect it from the fire. It is about 7½ feet square and 4½ feet high. While there is much of interest in this altar, I must pass it by, and likewise the brazen laver, which stands between the tabernacle and the altar. The purpose of the laver is described in Exod. 30:17-21, but there is no description of it, nor its size. There are some beautiful suggestions in this laver and its uses, but time will not permit to go into them here. You may look up an inspired comment upon it for yourselves however, in the 13th chapter of John.

JESUS AND THE SAINTS AT JERUSALEM AND THE ARMAGEDDON

Article No. 3

"No prophecy of Scripture is of private interpretation" (2 Pet. 1:20,21).

The careful student of the Scriptures can glean many blessed truths from the Bible that others have never gained. We sometimes think that if Bible students would make the same effort to inform themselves in scriptural truths as they do in gaining temporal things, we would have many more well-informed Christian men and women. To understand God's purpose we must not only study diligently but we must meditate daily and hourly on his plan of salvation. In the language of one of the Bible writers, we must be always ready to give a reason for the hope within us, with meekness.

Our preparatory text for this article may be found in 2 Pet. 1:20,21, and reads as follows: "No prophecy of Scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." Men who claim to see visions and to receive impressions direct from heaven can have no use for our preparatory text. This is in harmony with Paul when he wrote to Timothy, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God." The purpose of God is the golden thread that may be traced from Genesis to Revelation. The gospel of the kingdom is the sun that sheds light through every Bible truth; without it the Scriptures would be a blank book. We hear persons say: "I cannot understand the Bible. To me it is a sealed book." No wonder! You permit others to study and interpret Scripture for you whereas the apostle writes that no prophecy of Scripture has any private interpretation.

With the above statements we will take up our subject. In our second article we spoke of the judgment of the saints. In Isa. 26:21 we read: "The Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquities." Jude writes: "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly," etc. This text informs us that Jesus will come with his saints. The judgment has been completed and an unconquerable army is on its way to Jerusalem. From whence do they come, and where do they go? Let the Scriptures tell.

Our first proof may be found in Deut. 33:2: "The Lord came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; he shineth forth from Mount Paran, and he came with ten thousand of his saints: from his right hand went a fiery law for them." Habakkuk in the third chapter and third verse said: "God came from Teman (marginal, the south) and the Holy One from Mount Paran. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise. His brightness was as the light; he had horns coming out of his hands: (marg. bright beams out of his sides), and there was the hiding of his power. Before him went the pestilence, and burning coals went forth at his feet." If you are faithful, dear brothers and sisters, you will be among this happy throng. These Scriptures reveal to us the location of the judgment seat of Jesus the Christ. The prophets said that they came from Sinai. The prophet Isaiah had a vision in which he saw this vast army coming from the south. Isa. 63:1-3: "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I, that speak in righteousness, mighty to save." Isaiah saw this vison as he dwelt in Jerusalem.

In Psa. 24 we are permitted to behold this army of Jesus and his saints as they arrive at Jerusalem. We request the reader to study carefully this whole psalm. The Lord demands a surrender of the city, which is in possession of the enemy. The demand is: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in." The demand comes, "Who is the King of glory?" The answer is, "The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle. Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in." This is the second demand for the surrender of the city. Again they ask, "Who is this King of glory?" The answer came, "The Lord of hosts; he is the King of glory." To those who are looking for the Lord who will judge the saints, this is a bright picture.

In the first and second verses of Zechariah 14 we learn that all nations have been gathered against Jerusalem to battle. We learn further in this chapter that the Lord will go and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. "And his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east." The prophet also speaks of an earthquake which will change the surface of that country. Those surrounding Jerusalem will flee to the valley of the mountains. A further reading of this chapter reveals to us the punishment that will come upon the enemies of the Lord. He will smite them with a plague. Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, their tongues shall consume away in their mouths, the enemies of the Lord will be in a tumult and will destroy each other. Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem. This is the Armageddon or the great battle of Almighty God. This victory will give Jesus and the saints possession of the city of Jerusalem and the land of Canaan. This will be the punishment of the flower of our land as they are in seige around Jerusalem. We have been accustomed to view things afar off and are continually saying, "This may be a thousand years hence. It can not come in your day nor mine." He that hath eyes that see must realize that the armies now in the field are unconsciously marching to their defeat. England will soon have an army in Palestine, and no doubt will soon capture Jerusalem from the Turk. The allied powers seem to be falling apart. The conditions in Russia are very uncertain; the appearances now are that a general peace compact will soon be entered into between the allied and central powers. Then we will enter that period when men will cry peace, peace, when there is no peace. At this time the Lord will come and take his saints into their secret chambers. The nations will be left to themselves. It will be a time of a renewed preparation for the last great battle or the Armageddon. How long this period will last we are not able to say. Some think about forty years, others think about the time that Moses was in organizing Israel into a government. Of one thing we may be sure, that events will not drag. We are living in an age of electricity. This is a time for those who have become Christ's to be watchful and prayerful.

THE LIVING WORD

No. 8

By S. Roxane Wince

Jotham, the son of Uzziah did right in the sight of the Lord, though the people did corruptly. He prevailed over his enemies and waxed "mighty because he prepared his ways before the Lord his God." So we are sure the blessed book was his daily counsellor in all the affairs of life. But not so was it with his son Ahaz, "for he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also molten images for Baalim, burnt incense in the valley of the son of Hinnom, and burnt his children in the fire after the abominations of the heathen whom the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel," and was defeated in his wars with the Syrians, with the Israelites, with the Edomites and with the Philistines, and distressed by the Assyrians, and yet continued sacrificing to the gods that had ruined him, never once turning or obeying the Lord.

Who could have been his teacher? We are not told; surely not his father, but some recreant Levite, or idolatrous noble, for his wife was Abi, or Abijah, the daughter of Zechariah, surmised to have been the favorite prophet of king Uzziah, and she was in all likelihood a God-fearing woman, for her son Hezekiah became one of the most illustrious of the kings of Judah, beginning a deep and thorough work of reform on the very first day of the first month of the sacred year. The Lord's house had been closed by Ahaz. Hezekiah had it re-opened, the doors mended, the priests and Levites sanctified, the vessels replaced before the altar, the ritual service of song and sacrifice restored and the passover kept, as it had not been kept since the days of Joshua; a multitude coming from the northern kingdom to take part in the great festival.

And he did one thing that none of Israel's or Judah's kings before him had ventured to do: he took away the high places of Bethel where Jacob had seen the mountain-ladder, symbol of Israel's kingdom; Mizpah, where Samuel had made sacrifice, and prayed for the gathered host of Israel, in time of distress; Moriah, where Abraham offered the provided lamb in place of his son; and so many more places where God had once condescended to hear and answer his people, because they had all been desecrated by idol worship.

But was not Hezekiah's conversion due to some influence outside of his own family? Mr Stanley, who wrote the history of the Jewish church, thinks so. He makes it due to the prophecies of Mica the Morasthite, who suddenly appeared in an assembly where the king was present, and with biting sarcasm denounced the sins of nobles, priests, and prophets, and warned them of swiftly coming judgment if they did not repent. And so Hezekiah wisely heeded.

And it all came about. Hezekiah's faith was renewed, the fountains were stopped, the broken wall was mended the people were told to be strong and courageous and not to be afraid nor dismayed, for the king or Assyria nor for all the multitude with him, "for" said Hezekiah, "there be more with us than be with him." "With him is an arm of flesh, but with us is the Lord our God to help us and to fight our battles. And the people rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah, king of Judah."

And the Lord did defend the city, he did help, he did fight the battle for Judah.

"For the angel of death spread his wings o'er the blast
And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed,
And the eyes of the sleepers waxed deadly and chill
And their hearts but once heaved and forever grew still."

One hundred and eighty-five thousand corpses lay there, when Sennacherib and a few surviving soldiers arose in the morning. What a triumph of faith it was! What a victory for the living word! For "no Assyrian host ever again crossed the Jordan."

Memory Verses: Micah 6:8; Titus 2:13,14

Golden Text: 2 Peter 3:18

From time to time we will have a sort of a
Sunday School Lesson and today we will open the matter with the subject of Knowledge

Kindly read with me the second chapter of First John, and ask either father or mother the meaning of any words or verses you do not fully understand.

To secure knowledge we must have a teacher, one who knows more than we do; also one who is willing and able to impart unto others that which he knows. So we shall go to God, the fountain head, and read what he hath revealed unto us by his spirit, through his Son and his apostles. Kindly read these passages carefully.

Christ commands us to have knowledge, for he tells us to search the Scriptures, and learn things concerning himself (John 5:37-40).

Knowledge is necessary, for our faith must have a foundation (Rom. 10:1-3).

Even love, to be perfect, must be backed by knowledge (Phil. 1:8-11).

Jesus Christ is the key to all knowledge (Luke 11:52).

Jesus blest Peter for knowing a certain fact that we must know and proclaim (Matt. 16:15-17).

What will happen to those "who know not God" (2 Thess. 1:7-10)?

Eternal life is to know God, and Jesus his Son (John 17:3).

Paul was told "to know the will of God" so he could tell it to others. If we are wise will we not have the same knowledge and make the same use of it (Acts 22:7-15)?

What We Are to Know (1 Cor. 2:1,2).

We are to know that Christ is our head (1 Cor. 11:1-3).

We are to know and understand the love of Christ (Eph. 3:14-19).

We are to know that of ourselves we are nothing but Christ is all in all (Rom.7: 14-19).

God hath made revelation; it is for us to search out and get knowledge (1 Cor.2:9-16).

A good thing to know (Rom. 8:28).

We are to know our hope and inheritance (Eph. 1:16-19).

We are to know that Jesus is the Christ (Phil. 2:8-11).

Of itself knowledge simply maketh proud; we are to use our knowledge in God's service (1 Cor. 8:1-3).

Great as knowledge is, it is worthless without love (1 Cor. 13:8-13).

In the future our knowledge will be perfect (1 John 3:1-3).

Finally read 2 Tim. 1:12,13.

The Word "Gospel" in John 3:16

We often hear that the verse known as John 3:16 contains the whole gospel. Were you ever able to find the word "gospel" in it? It is there. Read the verse carefully and note what word you can spell with the capital letters printed therein.

"God so loved the world, that he gave his Only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not Perish, but have Everlasting Life."

My Sunday School

Brooklyn is known as "the city of churches," but to my mind it could better be called "the city of Sunday schools," for the largest number of schools is situated here as well as the largest schools. Yet the writer never attended a Sunday School as such for when he was a schoolboy the church of God at Brooklyn did not conduct a Sunday of Bible School, and his parents were so very careful of his up bringing they would not permit him to attend a Sunday School where known error was taught. So father often said, "What is the use of having the children spend time in learning something that we know to be wrong, and then we, and they spending more time in unlearning it, and then perhaps not succeeding? It is far better to take the time at first and teach them rightly." So father "took the time." He was the teacher; we were the scholars. Vividly do I remember our little class: father at the head of the table, a large, open Bible in front of him, we each seated at our places with small Bibles. No leaflets: not anything except the clear word of God "that liveth and abideth forever"—each member of the class reading in rotation a verse till the chapter was finished; then after a short prayer, in which father asked that the efforts put forth might be blessed, father would explain verse by verse; often word by word; at times illustrating the point by some little story, or by drawing a word picture of some incident in his own life, or again in ours; a quotation; and so on: always backed by a companion Scripture which one of us would be asked to find and read.

Father, always patient, never took anything as a trouble, never considered anything as a sacrifice. His mode of teaching made the hour, to us a pleasing diversion, never a task. His one idea was to raise his family in the fear and nurture of the Lord, to make them loyal, honest and true. The Sunday lesson was followed by nightly family worship where Scripture was read and explained: memory verses recited; and prayer with thanksgiving offered; but above all, father was a lesson in himself. His very life was an example; for he was manly, honest, honorable, upright and consistent. His every word and deed showed him to be a son of God.

Did it pay father for the time spent, the effort made? Allow me to state, without pride or boasting, that all of father's children, together with their wives and husbands, their children and children's children are active members of the household of faith, living in peace and at peace, honored and respected. Do you think it paid?

The above is written in father's name, but to mother the same credit is due, for she also was a part of the class, and in father's absence always took the lead.

Success has its price, and you can pay it if you will.

Make yourself generally useful.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. AUGUST 21, 1917 NUMBER 31

OPPORTUNITY!

Master of human distress am I!
Fame, love and fortune on my footsteps wait,
Cities and fields I walk, I penetrate
Deserts and seas remote, and passing by
Hood and mart and palace, soon or late
I knock unbidden at every gate!
If sleeping wake, if feasting rise before
I turn away. It is the hour of fate,
And they who follow me reach every state
Mortals desire, and conquer every foe
Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate,
Condemned to failure, penury and woe,
Seek me in vain and uselessly implore,
I answer not, and I return no more!

KNOWN, BUT NOT UNDERSTOOD

By B. B. Sutcliffe

Text: "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose" (Rom. 8:28).

There are things we know but do not understand. This is true in the natural as well as the spiritual world. We do not understand how we fall asleep nor how we wake up, but we know we do both On the spiritual plane we do not understand how all the experiences we meet can work together for good, but we know they do. There would be no need of this text if things went always as we desired or if we always understood why they go as they do. But the text gives us a hint what the Christian has before him.

A Certain Prospect

The prospect is that certain experiences which will be hard to bear will be met with on life's journey. There will be many things which will cut and hurt and which seem altogether unnecessary and as though it were impossible for them to work for good. Think of John the Baptist locked up in prison. He was a man accustomed from his youth to the great outdoors; the mountains and the plains—the rivers and brooks—the broad noonday sky and sparkling starry heavens were natural to him. He had given his life to God and thousands hung on his words. Suddenly he is thrown into prison for his faithfulness to the Lord. But the Lord was at hand. The Lord with power to speak a word and blind eyes saw and deaf ears heard. And even the bars and doors of the grave were broken and opened. Surely such a one with such power could open mere prison doors and set the prisoner free. But though he knew John was in prison because of faithfulness to himself, he gave no sign, nor went to the relief of the imprisoned one. John could not understand, but he could know that this awful experience would work together with all his other experiences for good. Think of Daniel—faithful, true, sincere, a man of prayer and godliness, yet because of the very fact that he was what he was, he must needs go to the lion's den. He, too, could not understand but he could know "that all things work together for good." So in the path of the Christian there lie strange, mysterious experiences that seem to make the soul stagger and the spirit grow faint. There come occurrances which, looked at by sight, seem to be anything but good but seem so evil that they cannot be made to work together for good. They call the Christian to implicit trust in God's purpose and absolute confidence in his ways. In all his experiences he is to walk by faith—not understanding perhaps but knowing that, in spite of appearances, all things work together for good. But while the believer has this prospect, he also has

A Certain Promise

When Peter came to things he did not understand in the dealing of the Lord, he, naturally, wanted to understand. Instead of explaining, the Lord simply said: "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt understand hereafter." This promise each Christian may take to himself, knowing that some blessed day all questions will be answered and he will understand how as well as "know that all things work together for good." We cannot think of John the Baptist or Daniel or Stephen or any of the heroes of faith, who have met trying and bitter experiences which they could not understad, even now finding fault and saying to the Lord: "Thou shouldst have done it differently, O Lord." The Christian may not understand in the present time why the Lord permits the hurt but he knows that all things work together for good and some day he will understand the need for the hard things and how they have worked together for good. And while he faces this prospect and rests in this promise he has

A Certain Provision

A provision the Lord has made to meet every experience. Irrespective of how deep the hurt he permits or how bitter the cup he presents he makes provision that will keep the heart in perfect peace. The command to the Christian reads:

"Be anxious (or worried) for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God, and the peace of God which passeth understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus." He cares for us and desires with longing that we should cast all our care upon him. He will comfort, he will sustain, he will uphold, so that in the midst of hard and bitter experiences which cannot be understood, the Christian looks forward to the day when he will understand, while he may enjoy in the meantime the peace that passeth all understanding.—Selected by Brother Finlayson.

SOMETHING FROM PALESTINE

Contributed by J. F. Gelletly

I have just finished reading a book entitled, "With the Turks in Palestine," by one Alexander Aaronsohn—a Jew; and I thought that The Restitution readers would be interested in some extracts that I might quote as we are all intensely interested in the subject on which he writes—the Holy Land.

According to his account he was born at Zicron Jacob, a little village "lying just south of Mount Carmel." His parents were pioneers from Roumania who with others founded a Zionist colony there. Aa a young man he came to the United States and took service in the governmental department of agriculture, taking out his first naturalization papers here.

Returning, however, to Palestine on a photographing expedition without completing the process of naturalization, he was caught in the draft for the war and enlisted in the Turkish army. The book is a narrative of his hard experiences there and interesting throughout. He ultimately escaped to tell the tale and give us other information and expressions, some of which I quote.

Palestine a Country of Perpetual Sacrifices

While Belguim is bleeding and hoping; while Poland suffers and dreams of liberation, while Serbia is waiting for redemption, there is a little country the soul of which is torn to pieces, a little country so remote that her ardent sighs cannot be heard. It is the country of perpetual sacrifice, a land of promise never to be attained; the country that gave the world its symbols of soul and spirit—Palestine.

No war correspondents, no Red Cross or relief committees have gone to Palestine because no actual fighting has taken place there, yet hundreds of thousands are suffering the worst agonies of soul and spirit. Those who have devoted their lives to show the world that Palestine can again be made a land flowing with milk and honey, those who have dreamed of reviving the spirit of the prophets and the great teachers are hanged and persecuted and exiled. Their dreams shattered; their holy places profaned.

Cut off from the world with no bread to sustain the starving body, the heavy boots of the barbarian soldiery trampling their very soul, the dreamers of Palestine refuse to surrender; and amid the clash of guns and swords they are battling for the spirit with the weapons of the spirit. The time has not come yet to write the record of these battles nor even to attempt to render justice to the sublime heroes of Palestine. This book is merely the story of some of the personal experiences of one who has done less and suffered less than thousands of his comrades.

This of course was written before the British invasion of Palestine. Most remarkable, I think, is his remarks on the German propaganda.

The Road to the Orient Open and Already Easy of Access

To us born and bred in the East as we were, the success of the German propaganda in the Turkish Empire could not come as an overwhelming surprise; but its fullness amazed us. . . . . In order to realize her imperialistic dreams Germany absolutely needed Palestine. It was the key to the whole oriental situation, no mere coincidence brought the Kaiser to Damascus in November, 1898, when he uttered his famous phrase at the tomb of Saladin, "tell the three hundred million Moslems of the world that I am their friend. . ."

The nations of Europe laughed at this visit and its transparent purpose, but it was all part of a scheme which won for the Germans the concessions for the Koria-Bagdad Railway and made them owners of the double valleys of the Euphrates and Tigris. . . . They are practically in control of the Syrian routes. . . . They also control the three Armenian routes of Cappodicia, the Black Sea and the Trans-Caucasian branch. . . . They dominate the Persian route, toward Tauris and Teheran as well and the gulf branch of Zobcer. These railways delivered into German hands the control of Persia, whence the road to India may be made easy.

An Imperialistic Dream has Germanized Palestine

To make the oriental dream a reality the Germans have not relied on their railway concessions alone. Their government has done everything in its power to encourage German colonization in Palestine. Scattered all over the country are German mills that half the time have nothing to grind. German hotels have been opened in places seldom frequented by tourists. German engineers have appeared in force surveying, sounding, noting. All these colonists held gatherings in the Arab villages, where the ignorant natives were told of the greatness of Germany, of her good intentions, and of the evil machinations of the other powers.

Moreover, as if by magic, the whole country became Germanized in all the mosques. Friday prayers were ended with an invocation for the welfare of the Sultan and "Hadji Wilhelm." The significance of this lies in the fact that the little "Hadji" can be properly applied only to a moslem who has made the pilgrimage to Mecca and kissed the sacred stone of the Kaaba. Instant death is the penalty paid by any Christian found within that enclosure; yet Wilhelm II, head of the Lutheran faith, stepped forward as "Hadji Wilhelm."

His pictures were sold everywhere; German officers appeared and it seemed as if a wind of brutal mastery was blowing. The dominant figure in this movement in Palestine was, without a doubt, the German consul at Haifa, Lentweld von Hardegg. He travelled about the country making speeches and distributing pamphlets in Arabic in which is was elaborately proved that Germans are not Christians like the French and English, but that they are descendants of the prophet Mahommed. Passages from the Koran were quoted prophesying the coming of the Kaiser as the Savior of Islam.

LOOKING INTO THE MILLSTONE

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. 24:14).

Before this many false prophets were deceiving many; and because of the abounding iniquity, the love of many shall wax cold. "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." The gospel of the kingdom was the main theme of the Master's teaching; because it is the love of God that leads man to repentance; therefore the wisdom of the Master in giving that subject primacy above all others. The gospel of the kingdom is God's masterpiece in turning men from darkness to light, and to produce in them that quality of mind that he so much desires for their happiness and for his glory. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." The mind is the standard of the man.

When God brought the descendants of Abraham out of Egyptian bondage, he gave a type of the deliverance of all saints through the gospel of his Son. Their minds were strongly given to idolatry; and to teach them the knowledge of the true God, he caused the temple to be built in which his worship was to be celebrated. And in the last chapter of Exodus we read, "So Moses finished the work." "Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle." "And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle" (Exod. 40:33-35). Now let us go to the finishing of the spiritual tabernacle or temple, and learn the lesson taught.

"And after that I looked, and behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened . . . . And the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled" (Rev. 15:5-8). The opening of this temple is before the first vial is poured out. The voice comes from the opened temple, ordering the pouring out of the vials (chap. 16:1). And now when we consider that most of the material that constitutes that temple is in the grave, what becomes of the idea that most of the plagues are in the past ?

In chapter 14:1, the Lamb and the 144,000 are standing on Mount Zion, and they sing the song of redemption; they are redeemed. And at verse 6 the angel appears in the midst of heaven, proclaiming the everlasting gospel to every nation, kindred and tongue, and people, sayin. "The hour of God's judgment is come."

Again: the third angel threatens dire judgments on the worshippers of the beast and his image, "in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb" (verse 10). Therefore the events of chapters 14, 15 and 16 are after the return of Christ. Would any reasonable man affirm that from the time of the French Revolution (when it is claimed the first plague was poured out) that no man could enter the temple, join the ecclesia, until the last plague was poured out ? This is the logical conclusion of popular teaching on the plagues.

There is internal evidence that the plagues are all poured out in rapid order, falling on the last generation of this Gentile age. Under the first vial we read, "And there fell a noisome and grevious sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast," etc. And under the fifth vial, "They blaspheme God, because of their pains and their sores." The inference is that they fall on one generation.

Geo. Francis.

TO SAVE

"Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners" (1 Tim. 1:15). And Christ said, "I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance" (Matt. 9:13; Luke 5:32).

Where is the class on earth he did not come to call ? There is no class. "There is none righteous, no, not one" (Rom. 3.10). Paul declared he was chief of sinners (1 Tim. 1:15). Why ? Because he persecuted the church of God (1 Cor. 15:9; Phil. 3:6). How did he persecute the church ? He made havoc of the church, and entering into every house, he hailed men and women and committed them to prison. When Stephen was stoned it was a part of his persecution that he consented to it, considering it was right.

This stoning of Stephen was in direct opposition to the law that God commanded in Deut. 13: 10. There they were commanded to stone to death those that left the true God, and served other gods. In Stephen's case, he was stoned to death because he served the true God. Paul was very zealous in bringing such to punishment. If there are none righteous then all are sinners. For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. God hath concluded them all in unbelief: "The Scripture hath concluded all under sin" (Rom. 3:9-23; 11:32; Gal. 3:22).

We find all mankind are sinners and Christ came to call them to repentance. Do all repent? No. What change takes place in the one that does repent? He is sorry for the sins he has committed, and now wants to live a sinless life as nearly as he can. Can he obtain that sinless life? Yes. How? By seeking after Jesus until he finds him. Then obeying him by believing his gospel as recorded, and being baptized into his name he becomes a brother of Christ and a son of God by adoption. His name is recorded in the book of life. "When the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout and with the trump of God: the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:16,17).

Who are the dead in Christ? Those that were baptized into Christ (Gal. 3:27). Jesus left the world nearly 2000 years ago. He left his commands here. They are published in a book called the Bible; and if we believe and obey the word as written we will believe and obey our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and will be saved when he comes by a resurrection from among the dead. He is the only one that brings us forth at the resurrection, so come to him. Trust him and be saved.

E. W. Knapp.

FELLOWSHIP

What is meant by this term? Can one church or one individual member of a church refuse to fellowship another and that act have no bearing on the entrance of either church or party into the kingdom of God? If a firm believer in the gospel of the kingdom finds from his or her study of the Scriptures that he or she cannot believe in regard to different subjects not at all essential to salvation, or have exactly the same view as some other believers, should that one be disfellowshipped? Should an one be dechristianized or barred from the truth and considered unfit to partake of the Lord's supper? Especially if this sister or brother is in all repects worthy to be taken into fellowship? Would this have been Christ's way of treating this brother or sister? It is so easy to loose sight of the fact that in judging others we are condemning ourselves. Jesus said, "Judge not that ye may not be judged." "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art who judgest, for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemneth thyself, for thou that judgest doeth the same thing." "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." The disfellowship of a baptized believer in the gospel, by other sisters or brothers in the church, without good reasons for the same, is truly a serious thing. Suppose by any chance the King should say to this sister or brother so treated, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." It is to be deplored that we are so apt to forget the second great commandment. We do not realize that charity (love) is everything in this life. Jesus had too much charity in his heart to cut off any from the truth who believed in him as the Christ. The word was his creed and should be ours. Let us try to encourage love and charity in the body, instead of discord, simply because we cannot all believe just alike on all points.

Jennie McNee.

"HE IS HELPED WHOM GOD HELPS"

William Modie tells of two blind men in Rome who went begging through the streets. One cried: "He is helped whom God helps." The other, with more diplomacy, called out as he went: "He is helped whom the king helps." The emperor, hearing of it, caused a loaf of bread to be filled with pieces of gold and sent to the man who had honored him. The beggar, noticing how heavy the loaf was, thought it indigestible and offered it to the other blind beggar for a few pennies. The latter bought it, found the treasure, and ceased to beg. As the one to whom the bread was given still continued to cry through the city: "He is helped whom the king helps," the emperor summoned him to his presence and asked: "What hast thou done with the loaf that I lately sent thee?" The beggar replied: "I sold it to my friend, because it was heavy and did not seem well risen." Then the emperor said: "Truly he is helped whom God helps," and the blind man was turned away empty-handed.—Sel.

DANGER OF DESPISING THE WORD OF GOD

1. Those who preach another gospel shall be accursed (Gal. 1:9; Deut. 4:2).
2. Those who do not believe the gospel shall be damned (Mark 16:15,16; John 12:48).
3. To those that receive not the love of the truth there shall be sent strong delusions, that they may believe a lie (2 Thess. 2:10-12).
4. There is no escape from judgment for those who neglect the word spoken by the Lord (Heb. 2:2,3; 10:28,29).
5. Any one who attempts to add or to take from the word shall suffer the plagues spoken of therein, and have his part taken away from the Book of Life and the Holy City (Rev. 22.18,19).—Gospel Message.

And so let us be cheerful, without regret for the past, with contentment in the present, and with strong hope for the future.

No one should be above receiving help or above bestowing it.

AN HONORED BEAST

Humble as it seems, the ass was honored above all Bible animals. In the Old Testament, the eyes of Balaam's ass were opened to see the angel in the way, before the Lord permitted Balaam to see him. Next, the Lord permitted the ass to speak. All through this remarkable scene, the beast showed a gentleness and reasonableness far beyond that of the recreant prophet.

In the New Testament the ass received even higher honor. Not only was it permited to be a part of our Lord's triumphal entry, but Jesus himself chose it to carry him from the Mount of Olives to the Temple gate. We may well conjecture that the mother trotted contentedly by the side of her colt in that greatest of all triumphal processions.

The horse has been called the symbol of war and victory;the ass, the symbol of peace and service.—Little Overcomers.

ONLY SAFE ON YOUR KNEES

Principal George Adam Smith tells a tale of how, in his early Alpine-climbing days, he was climbing one of the Swiss Alps on the sheltered side. Though they did not know it, a great wind was blowing, and as they climbed to the topmost crag, the guide, who had been leading the way upwards, stepped back, as was his wont, that the traveller might have his foot first upon the top. Doctor Smith sprang to the top of the peak, and was almost blown back over the edge by the wind. The guide seized him and brought him down to his knees, crying in his ear: "Down! Here, on the summit, you are only safe on your knees." So with the heights of our gladness, when life is splendid, and the world is full of glory, we are only safe upon our knees.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

HOW THE WORD OF GOD SHOULD BE USED

1. Even the king should have a copy (Deut. 17:18-20; 2 Kings 11:12).
2. It should be kept beside us (Deut. 17:19; Rom. 10:8).
3. It should be read all the days of our lives (Deut. 17:19; Acts 17:11).
4. We should keep and do all its precepts (Deut. 17:19; Psa. 119:112).
5. It should be continually in our mouths (Josh. 1:8; Col. 3:16).
6. We should meditate on it (Psa. 1:2; 119:97).
7. We should use it as the Savior did when tempted (Matt. 4:4,7,10).
8. It should be diligently taught to our children (Deut. 4:9,10; 2 Tim. 3:15).

See that the key to success does not rust in the lock.

CONFERENCE NOTICE

The church of God in Nebraska will meet in conference this year at Cambridge, Neb. Aug. 25 to Sept. 2 inclusive. The services will be held in a grove in a large tabernacle tent. Small tents have been rented for sleeping purposes. Meals will be furnished at 25 cents.

Besides the sermons from Brother Adams we expect to have Bible lessons given by various brethren. We also expect to hear some sermons from Brother Hammond, of Avery, Neb., one who, we understand, is new in the faith but is earnest and enthusiastic in the work. All seeking truth are cordially invited to attend.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Are you lonely, sad, disliked? He that would have friends must be friendly himself. Lonely, disliked, shunned people are usually those who, instead of being friendly, going out and winning love and friendship, are standing still waiting for love and friendship to come to them.

Our minds are like farm wagons: when they have but little to carry they make much noise about it, but when heavily loaded they run quietly.

The best reward for work well done, is more work.

Turn a deaf ear to idle talk.

Will and work are sure to win.

EDITORIAL

We know of but one substitute for wisdom and that is silence.

Here is a beautiful acrostic which is a good definition of faith: "Forsaking All, I Take Him."

The word of God talks with us. "Talks with us," understand, and not merely to us (Prov. 6:22). To talk to a person is one-sided, the giving of an address. But to talk with a person implies that the one addressed replies. There is interchange of word and thought (Luke 24:32).

If you desire a sweet hour of communion with God you may compare the following Scriptures in very profitable study: "The Lord thy God . . . . will rejoice over thee with joy: he will be silent in his love" (Zeph. 3:17, margin). "And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, my jewels, in that day when I act" (alternative reading, probably more correct, of Mal. 3:17).

Are you getting tired of waiting for the Lord to come, reader? Some of you have exercised patience and have waited for many years. But to all such we can say for their comfort that Christ too has been patiently waiting as the days and years have rolled by. This astonishing fact about "the patience of Christ" we lose by the Authorized Version's rendering of 2 Thess. 3:5. Do we wait, with longing hearts, for him? He also, with longing heart, waits the day of his coming, "expecting" with fondest desires the hour when his foes shall be put under his feet (Heb. 10:13).

Paul was a musician. We know this from a number of incidental sayings about him in the New Testament. He joined Silas in a duet at midnight that woke up the prisoners (Acts 16:25). Then the apostle himself emphasizes the power of song in two of his epistles. He exhorts the brethren in Colosse to stir each other up with psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs. Paul marched, and he wanted all his brethren to march in the Christian life to music. Paul tells the Ephesian disciples not merely to sing, but to "make melody in their hearts to the Lord." The original word here used means to play on a stringed instrument. The most wonderful of all instruments is the harp of the human heart. It contains multitudes of chorals, marvelous melodies. Like Paul and Silas, let us all learn to sing praises to our God.

A REAL VACATION

By the generosity of our Cleveland brethren and sisters we are privileged to have a midsummer vacation of two weeks each year. We must confess, however, that our previous vacations were only vacations in name, as we always returned home as tired, if not more tired, than when we left. This year we planned to have no vacation at all, or have one different from our former ones. It is safer to stay at home and work than to whirl around the country in pursuit of pleasure. A happy suggestion came from Sister Chas. Fankbonner, of Unionville. She found a large, empty house in the wild woods, surrounded with beautiful woods, apple trees, berries, etc. "There," she said, "is a place where you can have a rest—a real vacation." The proposition looked good to us, and Sister Fankbonner proceeded to rent the place, and Sister Murray and family,Brother and Sister John Grief, and Mr. and Mrs. Day, two interested friends, all joined Brother and Sister Fankbonner in furnishing the house with comfortable essentials. And for the first time in our life we are having a real vacation. By a "real vacation" we do not mean absolute cessation from toil. That would be laziness. And to abandon the work of the truth even temporarily would contravene the words of Christ: "I must work the works of him who sent me, while it is day: for the night cometh when no man can work" (John 9:4). With Sunday evening sermons omitted during our vacation (a gracious concession made by our brethren and sisters), and with Sister Frances Russell, a beloved helper, "ever faithful and ever sure," in charge of The Restitution, we are relieved of all anxiety and "dull care," having nothing on our mind but one sermon a week and the instructing of four friends in gospel truth, Mr. and Mrs. Day, and Mr. and Mrs. Luther. Instead of this being a labor it is a real pleasure.

THE GOSPEL AND SALVATION IN THE COMING AGE

Dear Brother in Christ:

I would like to ask you a favor. Will you please make me clear on this question: Will the gospel be preached in the age to come, and will people be saved by it? I believe there are many others like me who would be interested in the answer to that question. So if you have the space will you please answer through The Restitution. Thanking you, I am, your brother in the one faith,

Russell E. Zeller.

EDITOR'S REPLY

We will try and make it clear to Brother Zeller how we understand the subjects he enquires about. We understand that the gospel will be preached in the next age, and that people will be saved by it then as now; but this concession must be qualified scripturally and reasonably then the same as now. What some of these qualifications and reservations are we shall now briefly indicate.

I. The gospel is not preached to the saints. They heard it in this age, obeyed it, and enjoy full salvation then.

II. The gospel is not preached to the wicked. They are burned up root and branch like a tree thrown into a fiery furnace. They are reduced to ashes and are trampled down under the feet of the righteous, who are now healed by the healing beams from the sun of righteousness (Mal. 4th chapter).

III. The gospel is not preached to the vile and ignorant who have lived and died in past and present ages, for death to them is a finality. They shall no more exist after they die than people who have never existed at all (Obad. 16). They are not raised from the dead, and therefore have no existence in the coming age (Psa. 49th chapter).

IV. The gospel is not preached to the masses of living people at the coming of Christ. These are mostly slain by fire and sword immediately previous and subsequent to, the coming of Jesus (Dan. 12:1: Luke 21:25,26; Jer. 25:30-33; Isa. 30:27, 28; Rev. 19:11-16; Isa. 66:15,16; Psa. 50:3-6; Mal. 4; Psa. 11:6).

V. The gospel is preached to "the residue of men," "the left of the nations," the "remnants," etc. (Isa. 66:19,11; Zech. 14; Acts 15:14-17).

COMMUNICATIONS

"They shall make known unto you all things which are done here" (Col. 4:9).

Dear Brother:

Enclosed you will find $1.50 to pay our back subscription to The Restitution. No one knows how much we thank you for sending the paper to us until we could pay for it. I believe we owe one year back We will try to pay up for another year soon.

Times are much the same here; crops are burned up and the grass is short. We are having the war and famine and pestilence on us now, and hope to see all of Matt. 24 fulfilled ere long. Under it all we are trying to lift up our heads and see through the dark clouds, for we know they alone stand between us. and the dawn of a better day. It is so sad to see the condition of the people and know that darkness covers the earth. and gross darkness the people.

I am also sending 25 cents for some of Brother Joblin's tracts. We are isolated and give all the tracts we can to people who will read them. Thanking you again, I will close. Yours in hope,

Mrs. W. L. Robbins.

Brother Huggins:

Will you please tell me if there is any difference between the belief of the Christadelphians and the church of God. I see by your last paper that Brother Lea, of Philadelphia, had been a friend of yours, and the body of believers in Rochester, N. Y., where he speaks will not fellowship us on account of the nature of Christ, also mortal emergence. There is a body of Christadelphians in Orlando, Fla., but they believe as Brother Lea does, and there is one of the members of our class who wishes very much to be immersed, but we cannot ask a brother from them, knowing they would not fellowship us, and from your paper we cannot see any difference whatever in the way you believe and the way we do; also in all of the tracts we have got from you. We were wondering if there were any of the brethren in Florida that we could ask to come here for the purpose of immersing our friend; we thought perhaps you might be able to tell us. We regret very much being so isolated, especially in these momentous times when we need each other's help so much.

I am enclosing a dollar. Will you please send some of the tracts you have just written that have been advertised in The Restitution lately for the balance. We would like them for distribution among our friends here to try and interest them in the study of the truth. Your sister in the only true faith,

Lillie Gillott.
St. Cloud, Fla.

Editor's Note.—We regret that the facts in the case are correctly stated by Sister Gillott, but we are sure no blame in the matter can be attributed to us, as we have made repeated appeals to the Christadelphians to end needless division, and have entreated and implored them even in tears to live in peace with us until the Lord comes. Fundamentally in accord with us doctrinally and practically, they inconsistently reject us from their communion. We deplore their inconsistent and unscriptural attitude, and think we see signs among some of the thoughtful of their members of a better day approaching. Let us hope so. In any event the responsibility is theirs. Will some of our brethren in Florida or elsewhere in the South please correspond with Sister Gillott.

Remarks

During the month of June we had cause for much rejoicing, although our heart was heavy. On the last day of May we laid away our son who had been suffering all winter with tuberculosis. The many letters of comfort received helped somewhat to bear the burden. But few have escaped this kind of sorrow and they know so well how to sympathize and comfort. How we long for these conditions to pass away, and we do believe the golden age is about to dawn upon this sin-cursed earth.

On June 8th we were all made to rejoice when Clarence andMayrhill Sorensen and Gladys Bates expressed a desire to put on Christ. These three young people have lived only a few rods apart for a good many years and were like brothers and sisters; now they are in the truest sense of the word. Gladys has taken a great interest in the Sunday School for some time, and must be given a great deal of credit for the manner in which she has trained the children for all entertainments such as Easter and Christmas. Brother and Sister Sorensen are two excellent young people, and we are not just handing them bouquets—what we say is literally true. So the church is much better off by their acquisition.

On the tenth we all met at Kennard from far and near with well filled baskets and enjoyed an all-day meeting. Last fall Sister Bessie Jenkins suggested that we meet at Kennard for an all-day service, and this was to be on Thanksgiving, but the nearest we could come to it was Dec. 10th, owing to circumstances. The day was such a success from every point of view she suggested that we make it a feature of this year's work, and several such meetings have been held, and the success and profit in many ways have proven the wisdom of her suggestion, and we are all glad the Lord put it in her heart to make such a suggestion. But Sister Jenkins never makes many unwise efforts: her plans are always fruitful of good. After making the suggestion and it had been so successfully carried out she has been deprived of their benefit until last Sunday when we were made to rejoice when she was again present. Sister Jenkins, by her singing and personality, always makes a meeting better by her being there, and all who know her will bear me out in this. It is too late after people are gone to tell how we appreciate them: do all that while they are here. We can sing their praises after they are gone, but they will not hear them; and we can place flowers on their caskets, but they will not scent their fragrance. People who are always lending a helping hand are appreciated little enough. So those who always have a sore spot and a grouch on top can hardly expect any bouquets here or hereafter.

The churchs of Arlington, Blair, Kennard Omaha and Avery have met in these meetings, and the good fellowship manifested gave a foretaste of the great coming gathering. Many times quite a history is attached to these meetings, and very often, baptisms. For instance: Brother John Mehrens came from over in Iowa and brought his son to be baptized with others. Over twenty years ago at Ainsworth I baptized Mrs. Alta Cole and daughter Mary, who is now Mrs. Mehrens, and now I baptize the son and grandson of this couple. we can never tell where a work begun will end.

While we were enjoying our dinner at the above meeting a message came from home that Mr. Harold Ealy of Moorefield, was in Omaha and desired baptism. Brother Nelsen, in his liberal way, volunteered to go after him so in company with Brother White they drove down twenty miles and got him, making almost record time. While we were waiting we held our afternoon meeting when Mrs. Jessie Ward, daughter of Sister Wright, made the good confession of faith.

Our intehest does not always stop with those who accept the faith: we consider their chances for interesting some one else. The chances for doing a good work after baptism depends entirely upon whether we influence others or whether we allow others to influence us and do the cause harm. Everyone coming into the church have changed their relationship to the world and worldly things, and have certain rights that are or should be sacred to them, and we should never allow those rights to be trampled upon. Our duties to the church should always be first and well done, and then other things considered. Too often people allow themselves to be influenced to make their duties to the church secondary and in so doing lose their influence for good and materially lessen their chance of getting into the kingdom of God.

At the same meeting Mrs. Arthur Johns and son Edward, took a stand for the truth and took on the sin covering name. Sister Johns is an excellent lady with an excellent family and we extend to them hearty welcome into the body.

Also Mr. Peterson and wife, a young couple who have been attending services for some time. Brother Peterson is battling for the truth and is calling for a meeting among his friends that he is trying to influence toward the truth. We trust his efforts will prove successful. Monday morning, before taking the train for home, Oscar Anderson and wife and Clinton Appleby demanded baptism. Brother and Sister Anderson are newly weds and are starting life right. We hope for their association in the kingdom. Brother Appleby is a steady young man and completes the family of Brother J. C. Appleby, except one son.

Brother Metheny and his two sons of Lincoln also came to our Kennard general meeting to be baptized. I baptized their mother years ago at a conference in St. Paul. They have proved faithful and, as the doctor said, the fact that we have not mixed is proof of their devotion. One of the boys is a partner with his father as a physician and surgeon and, as he had enlised in the doctor's department he wanted to be safe before going. He said, "I am not going to fight, but to relieve the suffering." We know these are two splendid young men that we can recommend to the household of faith. May the Lord bless all these and keep them through the hours of trial that is to try all them on earth. With the rest we rejoice that our own son and his wife put on Christ and are ready for the sounding of the trumpet.

On the 24th, at the request of the Avery church, the brothers from Blair, Kennard, Arlington, and Benson and Omaha met with them and the splendid meeting had to be attended to be enjoyed and understood. Words would hardly be adequate to express the pleasure and benefit of the ninety-five grown people, besides many children. The Avery brethren proved that they are royal entertainers. We enjoyed a solo by Sister Krogh and Sister Cronk, and a duet by Sister Banning and sister-in-law. We gave a discourse in the morning and afternoon, with a short address by Brother Hammond that was enjoyed by all. Sister Bray presided at the organ with her usual skill and was a valuable assistance to the many voices that were praising God in song. The meeting will always be an oasis in the desert of life. So the month of June closes with the wish that all months could come and go as it did.

Almus Adams.

OBITUARIES

Frank L. Benson

Frank L. Benson was born in Sweden, July 30, 1870, died at Central Point, Oregon, July 13, 1917. Brother Benson was the oldest of twelve child-Minn. At the age of thirteen he came to Hastings, Minn. In 1900 Brother Benson came to Oregon, locating near Central Point. In 1904 he was married to Miss Ellen Bursell, to whom were born two children, Eula, age eleven, and Rafael, seven. His wife and the two children are living, also both of his parents, six brothers and three sisters. All of his relatives live in Minnesota except two brothers, one a missionary in China and one a farmer near Central Point, Ore.

Brother Benson was a very successful farmer, a good business man, and well liked by his neighbors. I visited at his home last January and our conversation on the signs of the times was of great interest to him. Since then he has been trying to get the scattered brethren of that part of the country together that they might talk of the soon coming of the Lord.

The writer spoke to a large congregation of his neighbors of his faith and hope. Brother Benson became associated with the church of God under the ministry of Wm. Skeels. We laid him away in the cemetery just east of Central Point to await the coming of our blessed Master.

A. M. Darby.

A. J. Fike

Adam Justin Fike was born in Kansas, May 26, 1888, died July 22, 1917. He was a member of the church of God since his boyhood. He is survived by his wife, Mary C. Fike, and by his mother, Mrs. J. M. Fike, and five brothers: Chauncy E., Valentine J., of Portland; Jay V., of Woodburn, Oregon; Freeman C. and V. Morell, of Phoenix, Arizona; and one sister, Mrs. E. O. Dickinson, of Hartford Washington.

Services were conducted by the writer from the Finlay and Son chapel, Portland, Oregon.

A. W. Darby.

George Hervey Himmelright was born December 5, 1855, in Tippecanoe County, Indiana. He was the son of William and Melvina Day Himmelright and one of a family of fifteen children being the sixth one of them to be taken away by death.

He was married to Lucinda Evans, March 17. 1897, and became the father of two daughters, Melvina and Verna. Melvina preceded him in death March 25, 1915.

He united with the church of God, April 1903, under the ministry of Elder A. H. Zilmer, and has been an active member in its affairs ever since, serving as elder for a number of years. Brother Himmelright has lived an upright Christian life of devotion to the cause of the truth and to the church.

He has been afflicted since a light paralytic attack two years ago, and was stricken the second time about 10 o'clock August 1st and died at four o'clock in the afternoon. He was driving the binder in the harvest field when taken and never regained conscienceness. He had lived 61 years, 7 months, and 26 days.

He leaves his companion and one daughter, Verna, six brothers and three sisters, and many other relations. The community loses a good citizen, the church a staunch supporter, and the home a loving father and a devoted husband.

Funeral services were held at the home, Saturday August 4th, 1917, at 2 o'clock, where a large assemblage of relatives and neighbors were in attendance. Many flowers were given in token of love and esteem. We spoke words of comfort from 1 Thess. 4:13 after which the burial was made in Jordan cemetery where our beloved brother awaits the resurrection.

Prepared with a Special Thought Toward The Isolated Ones

Myself and Me

I'm the best pal that ever I had,
I like to be with me;
I like to sit and tell myself
Things confidentially.

I often sit and ask me
If I shouldn't or I should,
And I find that my advice to me
Is always fairly good.

I never got acquainted with Myself till here of late.
And I find myself a bully chum,
I treat me simply great.

I talk with me, and walk with me,
And show me right and wrong,
I never knew how well myself
And me could get along.

I never try to cheat me,
I'm as truthful as can be;
No matter what may come or go,
I'm on the square with me.

Its great to know yourself and have
A pal that's all your own;
To be such company for yourself
You're never left alone.

You'll try to dodge the masses,
And you'll find a crowd's a joke,
If you only treat yourself as well
As you treat the other folk.

I've made a study of myself,
Compared with me the lot;
And I've finally concluded
I'm the best friend that I've got.

Just get together with yourself
And trust yourself with you,
And you'll be astonished how well yourself
Will like you if you do.

Alone, Yet Not Alone

It is night. The full moon is reflected on a large sheet of water on which floats an old fashioned, flat-bottomed boat in which sits a girl, back curved, head bent, sad looking, and melancholy.

This is the description of a picture that hangs on the wall of our dining room. Many of you will recognize it. Some of you may possess it. The name of the picture is "Alone" and it is well named; still, need anyone ever be alone?

When I was a boy, as you now are, I well remember mother teling me that "I never was alone," that God was with me; how that God knew when I did good, and how pleased he was; and how equally he knew when I stooped to do a mean or evil act and how it vexed him; that he constantly watched over me, and if I would only ask him, he would protect me from evil, guide me to righteousness, lead me in the way of peace, and cover me with the shadow of his wings."

As a boy, at times I doubted, but I am a boy no longer, having graduated from the Boys High School to the school of experience, a hard and exact teacher, and I have received some severe knocks. But no longer are there any doubts regarding the loving-kindness and long-suffering of our God; and what a blessed peace we have in the knowledge that in his watchfulness over us, he does protect, guide, lead and cover us in, through and by our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, "who in all points was tempted like as we are, yet without sin."

Personally I am most "alone" when in a crowd; and I am in a crowd most of the time. This morning I could not sleep—it now is 4:45 a. m.—and I came down stairs to have a little confidential talk with my boys and girls, and I sit here all alone, not a soul stirring, the only noise I hear is the chattering of the little birds in the garden and the ticking of the clock. Did I say I am alone? I do not feel lonely. I do not even feel that I am alone. Never in my life did I feel the loving companionship of my God and his Christ more than I do this moment. It is this companionship of God and of his Son that I want you to have and feel; and it is a blessed thought that the more we are alone the more we have God with us; that the further we get from the world and worldly things the closer is our walk with God; and that the more isolated we are from the gross things of this life, the nearer, the closer, the more intimate is our companionship with him of whom Peter wrote, "Cast all your care upon him, for he careth for you."

Can you imagine a greater isolation than a man both blind and poor? We know such a man. He is a member of the church of God at Brooklyn; and he says that daily he thanks God for the loss of his sight, for when his eyes were removed desire and temptation went with them. Our brother is a large powerfully built man, good head, active brain, agreeable talker, pleasing personality. As you look at him your first thought is one of sympathy, but he does not sympathize with himself for his companionship with God has taught him that "in whatever state he is, therewith to be content."

As you grow older you will realize that real happiness consists of embracing your opportunities and being contented with your lot. For if we are alone, if we feel we are isolated it is our own fault. It is because we will it so. It is because we will not allow God to come into our life. God never forsakes us. If we are not intimate with him, if we do not fellowship with him, if we have not his companionship, it is because we have deserted and forsaken him.

Barred

The shade of the man who gouged the poor by selling adulterated food at high prices when he was on earth, stood shivering before the pearly gates.

"I thought I ordered you to go down below." said St. Peter.

"I did," replied the shade. "But satan would not let me in. He said I wasn't the sort of person his friends and boarders cared to associate with."

Space forbids their printing, so kindly look up and read Psalm 121; Romans 8:31-39.

Our Weekly Puzzle

. . . . is the only female in the Scriptures who is mentioned as having any concern in the writing of letters.

I say wisdom is gathered on foot, along country roads. Collect your ideas where you can: from alley, boulevard, office, lecture hall, theatre, dinner table, library, wharf, picture gallery, streetcar, opera-house, curbstone or court-room; but test them on the road. Confronted with the realities of soil and salt water and the character shaped by these, they will look vastly less momentous or vastly more so.

Do you know who this female is?

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost: Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

The Restitution

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O, AUGUST 28, 1917 NUMBER 32

MAN'S MORTALITY

The following beautiful poem is a literary gem. The original is found in an Irish MS., in Trinity College, Dublin. There is reason to believe that the poem was written by one of those primitive Christian bards, in the reign of King Diarmid, about the year 554, and was sung or chanted at the last grand assembly of Kings, Chieftains, and Bards ever held in the famous halls of Tara. The translation is by the learned Dr. O'Donovan.

Like a damask rose you see,
Or like a blossom on a tree,
Or like a dainty flower in May,
Or like the morning to the day,
Or like the sun, or like the shade,
Or like the gourd which Jonah had,
Even such is man, whose thread is spun,
Drawn out and out, and so is done.
  The rose withers, the blossom blasteth,
  The flower fades, the morning hasteth.
  The sun sets, the shadow flies,
  The gourd consumes, the man—he dies.

Like the grass that's newly sprung,
Or like the tale that's new begun.
Or like the bird that's here today,
Or like the pearled dew in May.
Or like an hour, or like a span,
Or like the singing of a swan,*
Even such is man, who lives by breath,
Is here, now there, in life and death.
  The grass withers, the tale is ended,
  The bird is flown, the dew's ascended,
  The hour is short, the span not long,
  The swan's near death, man's life is done.

Like the bubble in the brook,
Or in a glass much like a look,
Or like the shuttle in the weaver's hand,
Or like the writing on the sand,
Or like a thought, or like a dream,
Or like the gliding of the stream,
Even such is man, who lives by breath,
Is here, now there, in life and death.
  The bubble's out, the look's forgot,
  The shuttle's flung, the writing's blot,
  The thought is past, the dream is gone,
  The waters glide, man's life is done.

Like an arrow from the bow,
Or like swift course of water flow,
Or like that time twixt flow and ebb,
Or like the spider's tender web,
Or like a race, or like a goal,
Or like the dealing of a dole,
Even such is man, whose brittle state,
Is always subject unto fate.
  The arrow shot, the flood soon spent,
  The time no time, the web soon rent,
  The race is run, the goal soon won,
  The dole soon dealt, man's life soon done.

Like to the lightning in the sky,
Or like a post that quick doth hie,
Or like a quaver in the song,
Or like a journey three days long,
Or like snow when summer's gone,
Or like a pear, or like a plum,
Even such is man, who heaps up sorrow,
Lives but this day, and dies tomorrow.
  The lightning past, the post must go,
  The song is short, the journey so,
  The pear doth rot, the plum doth fall,
  The snow dissolves, and so must all.

*The poetical legend that the swan sings as it is dying.

THE RESTORATION OF ISRAEL AND THE KINGDOM SET UP

Article No. 4

The strangest thing in the mind of the writer is that so few persons believe and preach that Israel will again possess the land covenanted to our fathers. The proofs are so abundant in the Old and the New Testaments that there should be no divided faith. Many persons believe and preach that Jesus will come again, and others that he will build up and establish his kingdom; but they leave out the gospel of this kingdom, and teach that the saints will rule over saints. The kingdom of God can never be established without the return of the seed of Abraham being a part of that kingdom. Fleshly Israel will be the subjects in that kingdom. Every prophet who has spoken of their dispersion has also spoken of their return. Jehovah has said through the mouth of more than one of the prophets that he will plant them again in their land, and they shall never be plucked up. A gospel preached without Israel restored is not the gospel preached by Jesus and his apostles.

We will proceed to furnish the proofs for our statements regarding this subject. Our preparatory text for this article may be found in John 7:17, and reads as follows: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." This is a very important statement, coming as it does from the mouth of him who spake as never man spake. He spake as one having authority, and not as the scribes. This ought to give added weight to other Scriptures. No alien need expect to know fully of the doctrine until he has done the will of our heavenly Father. We shall only be able to furnish a small per cent of Scriptures in proof of our subject, so numerous are they.

When Jesus had been with his apostles forty days, after his resurrection, and speaking of "the things pertaining to the kingdom of God," they asked this question: "Lord, wilt thou at this time, restore again the kingdom to Israel ?" Note the answer: "It is not for you to know the times, nor the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power." The answer of Jesus clearly admits that they were right in the doctrine of the restoration of the kingdom, but they were not clear as to the times and the seasons in which it was to be restored. The enemies to the doctrine claim that his apostles were ignorant in regard to the nature of the kingdom, and believed it to be a literal kingdom, whereas it was to be a spiritual kingdom. No amount of argument can establish such a doctrine. It is evident that Jesus had not taken the pains to teach them in regard to the times and seasons as he did to teach them that Jehovah would destroy all the kingdoms of this world and give in their place a divine and universal kingdom. Their minds had been so completely filled with the wonderful works done by Jesus that their minds could not retain all the details. The spirit had not yet been given which would "bring all things to their remembrance." It became their teacher after the Pentacostal baptism. From that time on to the death of the apostles there was no division of faith between the restoring of the kingdom to Israel and the times and the seasons. Until the times and the seasons came they were to be his witnesses to the uttermost parts of the world. Their business was to preach the gospel of the kingdom of God, which embraced the setting up and the establishment of the kingdom with Jesus as universal king.

In Ezek. 20:33-39 we have the most positive proof of their gathering from whence they had been scattered. That Israel is yet in dispersion is evident. Go where you may and you see Abraham's children. The following is from the prophet Ezekiel: "As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you. I will bring you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out. And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face. I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant. I will purge out from among you the rebels and them that transgress against me." In this Scripture the Lord God said "as I live" certain events shall take place with Judah and Israel.

1. That he will rule over them.
2. That he will gather them out of the countries wherein they are scattered.
3. That he will plead with them face to face.
5. He will purge out the rebels and them that and bring them into the bond of the covenant.
5. He will purge the rebels and them that transgress against him.

The covenant herein spoken of may be found in Jeremiah 31:31-35. When this is made Israel will be an obedient and God-fearing people. They will be fit subjects for the kingdom of God that will occupy as its territory the land promised to Abraham and his posterity. This will constitute the stone that will smite the image on its feet and grind it to powder. In Ezekiel 37:21-28 the prophet states that the Lord God will take them, the children of Israel, from among the nations, and bring them into their own land. He will make Judah and Israel one nation in their own land. One King shall be King to them all. David my servant shall be their prince forever. They shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt. They shall dwell therein, even they and their children, and their children's children forever. Also the twelve apostles shall occupy twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel (Matt. 19:28). Then as Isaiah and Micah have written, "Out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. He shall judge among the nations and shall rebuke many people. They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruninghooks. Neither shall they learn war any more." The kingdom under the rulership of Jesus, the Son of the living God, will change the thoughts and actions of the inhabitants of this earth.

In Daniel 7:27 we have the kingdom of God as it will exist when the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. Please note that Daniel says "the kingdom, the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom," having developed from the kingdom of Israel into the dominion phase, then into the greatness when it will become universal. This is the kingdom that will be established under the whole heaven, and will be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions (or rulers) shall serve and obey him. When these conditions prevail every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess to God. Then there will nothing harm in all the world. The flesh nature will have been destroyed in man. There will be no wild nor ravenous beast—all will become herbiverous and domesticated. When we pray that his will be done in the earth, we are praying for the kingdom to come.

D. C. Robison.

"Why, Willie," said the Sunday-school teacher in a pained voice, "have you been fighting again ? Didn't you learn in last Sunday's lesson that when you are struck on one cheek you ought to turn the other one to the striker ?"

"Yes'm," agreed Willie; "but he hit me on the nose, and I've only got one."

BAPTISM

By S. Roxana Wince

"The name of the Lord is a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it and are safe."

None of the towers erected by men are places of safety in these awful days of trial and judgment, the new machinery of war walk over them and crush them like straws. And no human name is a safeguard from our relentless foes; the storm beats on all alike. The name of the great Kitchener, made neither its owner nor his companions secure. It was no shelter, no hiding place. But the name of the Lord is. In the shadow of his wings we can trust. His name is indeed a strong tower: a tower so strong that it is invincible; no one can snatch us out of the Father's hand, when once we put ourselves under his protection, and continue trusting in him and doing his will.

But how get into that tower, that safely covering name ? Our text declares that "the righteous runneth into it and are safe." Runneth ? Yes, they are in haste. They scent the danger. They dare not wait for the tomorrows that never come, nor for wider knowledge, maturer age, or gaining of riches. To them "now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation."

"The name of the Lord"—"there is no other name given under heaven among men whereby we can be saved." Not essential that we get into it ? Not essential that we keep the commandments and the statutes of the Lord ? What does Jesus say of those who climb over the wall to get into the fold, instead of going in at the door ? Does he not call them thieves and robbers ?

There is only one door into the fold, only one opening into the strong tower. Be sure, O seeking one, that you find it, and seek not to be saved in your own way, or under cover of your own righteousness, for these things will avail you nothing in the day of wrath. Run into the tower. "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jsus Christ (or into the name), for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38).

We get into the name of Jesus, have it named upon us as our name, only in baptism. It is the name of the household or family, the name of adoption, the name whereby we become sons and heirs of God according to promise. Jesus was baptized to fulfill all righteousness (Matt. 3:15,16; Eph. 4:5).

Faith precedes baptism, because the gospel is first to be preached, listened to, and believed before we can be moulded into his form by a symbolic death, burial and resurrection (Mark 16:15, 16; Acts 15:7,9,11; 16:7,8; Rom. 6; Acts 3:4, 16:31-34; 8:28,36,39), being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation for our sins, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God (Rom. 3:24,25), and are no longer under condemnation (Rom. 8:1). "For he that is dead is freed from sin" (Rom. 7:4), and walking in the new life, becomes God's servant, having his fruits unto holiness, and in the end everlasting life. Is eternal life worth anything ? Then refuse not to "pass under the cloud and through the sea." It is the only way to the Holy Land. We are debarred from all other roads. The death-like flood must be crossed, there is no path around it, and the destroying host are behind us, it is death to go back, it is death to hesitate, for while we hesitate the wall of waters may fall and we be lost forever.

Who of you who read these pleading lines, if yet out of Christ, will refuse to obey? There is not a moment to lose. The Judge is at the door.

CALIFORNIA CONFESENCE PROGRAM

Thursday ,26th

7:30 p. m. Opening Address, O. J. Allard.

In his talk, Brother Allard emphasized the importance of the presence of brotherly love and a spirit of learning to make the meetings successful.

8:00 p. m. Sermon "The Purpose of God in Creation." J. C. Wilson, Phoenix, Ariz.

He made the point that the sin of Adam brought about the awakening of man's conscience, and a knowledge of right and wrong.

Friday 27th

10:00 a. m. Bible lesson, O. J. Allard. This was a lesson comparing the nature of Adam with that of Christ.

11:00 a. m. Sermon. "Dispensational Truth to the World at Different Epochs." J. C. Smith, Burbank, Cal.

He showed the different conditions of the church comparative to the messages to the seven churches.

2:30 p. m. Sermon "The Father's House" (John 14:1-4). J. C. Wilson, Phoenix, Ariz.

He held that the house was the church.

7:30 p. m. Sermon "The Covenants." O. J. Allard.

He showed that we are not under the ten commandment covenant but under the two commandment covenant.

Saturday 28th

9:30 a. m. Business Meeting.

Report of work in California. O. J. Allard.

Brief report of work in Arizona. J. C. Wilson.

1:30 p. m. Business Meeting. Reports of evangelist and Finance Committee.

2:30 p. m. Sermon. J. Tucker, of Placentia, Cal., talked on "Sanctification."

7.30: p. m. Lecture. "Infallible Signs of the World's Speedy End." Dr. J. H. Young, Pomona, Cal. He gave a very scholarly address.

Business Meeting

The secretary gave a full report of the business for the past year showing the collection of $716.00, all of which had been raised by voluntary subscription. Of this amount $207.00 was expended on equipment and $239.70 on incidental expenses, leaving $269.30 balance for ten months work of the evangelist.

Mr. O. J. Allard reported that during his three hundred days spent on the work of the church, he preached 238 sermons and 3 funeral sermons. He baptized 4 people in the faith. There are 6 or 8 who are thinking strongly of baptism.

Mr. J. C. Wilson of Phoenix, Arizona, gave a brief and interesting report of the work done in Salt River Valley in the last four years.

It was decided to have the evangelistic work continued during the next year, and a sum of $575.00 was raised toward this end.

Officials Appointed for the Coming Year

BROTHER TOUCHY

The words sensibility and sensitiveness stand for two different things. A soul full of the former and properly educated, restrained and developed is not only blessed in itself but becomes a blessing to others. A person filled with the latter and branded by friend and foe as a sensitive individual is a torment to himself and a burden, trial and affliction to all who have anything to do with him.

The sensitive man imagines that he has a finely strung nature, that he has an exquisite refinement of spirit, that he has an exalted creation in himself which lifts him far above the common herd, as he calls the mass of mankind, when really he is in an unnatural and abnormal mental and moral condition. He thinks that he is not understood when he is only too well comprehended. He conceives himself to be in sublime moods, when he is an intensely egotistical and selfish man. Fancying that he has reached a high, exalted and superior state of mind, he is nothing but a very "touchy" easily offended man.

Such a person has to be handled with the most delicate care as one would the rarest porcelain and alabaster. He has to be approached as one would draw near a prickly plant. He has to be touched and dealt with as one would a vessel full of scalding water. Or associated with as visitors walk with anxiety and apprehension through a gun-powder magazine.

Sometimes this character is in the home-circle; and we may well pity the household when thus afflicted. Such an one seems determined to be miserable. He or she has been overlooked, slighted, ridiculed, or insulted in some way. They are convinced that the laugh they heard given as they entered the room was at their expense. The whisper in the corner had them for a subject or target. Now then what is the use of living any longer ? Anyhow the least they can do is to retire from the table or fireside, seek some remote part of the dwelling and there brood over their wrongs and nurse their fancied griefs.

In spite of every painstaking effort our vulnerable brother or sister is going to be mortally or immortally wounded about something. Looking out for slights, expecting cuts, these imaginary wrongs fairly abound according to his jaundiced and distorted vision.

So the sermon was aimed at him. The preacher alluded to him. He was not consulted about the meeting. He was not invited to sit on the platform. Even when asked to come up to this exalted station of plank and chairs in lines, he after all that, was placed on a back row of the seats. He was not allowed to sing a solo. He had not finished his testimony when a hymn was raised by somebody in the audience and his words were drowned out, etc., etc.

It is all lost time to try to explain, to promise, to apologize and beg pardon. The fit of wounded vanity, of offended dignity, over the unappreciated merit and overlooked majesty of Brother Touchy is upon him, and has to be worked off by slices and sections if ever removed at all. Like the moon which after being full has a long and steadily lessening and darkening process, and even when it turns again to the light, does so very gradually indeed; so does our deeply wounded and offended brother; he recovers his old time fullness and brightness very slowly. He consents to unbend and smile in gradually widening lines of light, and we are thus taught as he approaches the full stage again. that an august personage has been outraged, and how careful we ought to be in the future lest this important social and ecclesiastical orb should go into a dark period once more, and never perhaps come forth to beam upon us and the world again.

Sometimes Brother Touchy writes a stiff and stately letter to the pastor asking that his name be taken from the church roll. Oftener he absents himself from the house of God. David's place is empty. And it remains vacant for periods ranging from one Sunday to an entire year. In some instances Brother and Sister Touchy do not return until a new pastor is sent to the charge.

When the new preacher arrives they take the front seat, and nearly shake his hand off in congratulations, well wishes, and protestations of friendship when he stands in the chancel after the sermon to be introduced to his new flock.

Of course there are Dr. Gullibles who believe and receive this rush and gush. But they are soon undeceived. The Sunday quickly comes when the sermon is preached which "does up" Brother and Sister Touchy for another month, year, or pastorate. A sudden gloom falls upon them. A strange coldness takes possession of them. An icy manner envelopes them. They have been marked out, struck at, openly slighted, publicly cut, insulted and outraged. Therefore they wished it understood unmistakably, that they are now done finally and forever, with him and her and them, and this and that, and these and those and anybody and everything except their own wounds, bruises, wrongs and manifold grievances.

It is all in vain to expect to heal a man of this malady by telling him how disagreeable he is. That he already knows. It is also lost time to point him to the billion and a half of people in this world who are not trying to slight, wound, slander or otherwise injure him; that they do not know him, and have not even heard of him.

We fear this last piece of information would bring on a fresh attack of the disease of a more aggravated type or form. He, Brother Touchy, would immediately want to know why these people should be so ignorant of his existence, attributes, accomplishments, performances and whereabouts. Was he a nobody and nonentity ?

Evidently the only hope for Brother Touchy is in full salvation, which brings with it the genuine and lasting cure of sensitiveness. The truly holy heart is a lowly heart. The wholly sanctified soul is an humble soul. The man who has had the precious blood of Christ to purify, and the holy loving presence of Jesus to enter and dwell with him, has no inclination or time for the indulgence of the spirit or life we have been describing in this article. He is content to take a low seat at the feast to which he has been bidden. He is not looking for public recognition and honor, and so is not hurt or cast down when they are not rendered to him. He has a strange sweet sense of littleness and unworthiness and when set aside and overlooked feels that he has no just cause to complain. He realizes that but for the grace of God he would be in hell, and so patiently endures the unkind words and ill usage of men.

In a word he has by * * grace moved into the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians and can now abide the shocks, changes and wrongs of time. He has an experience which will not allow him to be puffed up or to be provoked. He now suffers long and is kind. He possesses a blessing from the skies which enables him to bear all things and in every sorrowful and trying circumstance of life—never to fail.—From an unpublished book by Dr. Carradine called "Some of the Brethren."

If a book is dull, that is a matter between itself and its maker; but if it makes me duller than I should otherwise have been, I have a grievance.

DIVINE PARADOXES

A paradox is defined to be a "tenet or proposition contrary to received opinion, and seemingly absurd, but true in fact."

The gospel of Christ is full of paradoxes; for God's thoughts and ways are on a higher plane than human thoughts and ways, and therefore appear impossible and even absurd from the merely human standpoint, just as the statements and actions of an astronomer searching the heavens with a telescope would appear absurd to the wild savages in the heart of Africa. We give a few of these paradoxes:

1. We see unseen things (2 Cor. 4:18).
2. We conquer by yielding (Matt. 5:5; Rom. 12:20,21).
3. We rest under a yoke (Matt. 11:28-30).
4. We reign by serving (Mark 10:42-44).
5. We become great by becoming little (Matt. 18:4).
6. We are exalted by being humbled (Matt. 23:12).
7. We become wise by being foolish (1 Cor. 1:20,21).
8. We become free by becoming slaves (Rom. 6:17-22; Rom. 8:2).
9. We possess all things by having nothing (2 Cor. 6:10).
10. All things are ours, because we are not our own (1 Cor. 3:21; 1 Cor. 6:19).
11. When we are weak then we are strong (2 Cor. 12:10).
12. We triumph by defeat (2 Cor. 12:7-9).
13. Our honor is our shame (Phil 2:5-11; Luke 6:26).
14. We glory in our infirmities (2 Cor. 12:5).
15. We live by dying (John 12:24,25; 2 Cor. 4:10,11).—Selected.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. Those whose circumstances do not permit quest. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

EDITORIAL

"MANY CALLED; FEW CHOSEN"

The Gospel for All; Only Few Accept It

There are many ideas, conceptions and theories in the world which make void the law of God. Numerous expressions have recently forced themselves upon our attention which have a decided tendency to relegate the word of Jehovah to desuetude. Coming from those who claim to be enlightened in the gospel, they are not to be ignored as originating in the habitude of the ignorant. On the contrary, they appear in studied compositions, in discourses that are discantive, and in arguments that are deliberative, bespeaking that those who use them have accepted the dangerous upshot to which they lead.

We refer to such forms of expressions as these: "The gospel is only for the little flock;" "It was not meant for the world;" "In the next age it will be for the world as it is now for the little flock"; etc., etc. By reading Luke 12:32, the only Scripture text referred to, and that one is misapplied—the reader will notice that our Lord says to the "little flock," "It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Not, as some wrest it, that the preaching of the gospel was limited to the little flock, but to them the kingdom is to be given. To preach the kingdom only to the little flock is one idea; to "give them the kingdom" is another idea. The message of the kingdom was preached to all; that only a "little flock" should get the kingdom promised in the message in no way circumscribes the universality of the message in its delivery.

Let us enquire at the oracles of God (Rom. 3:2): Was the gospel preached only to a few, or was it preached to all and accepted by but few? Are the "few" and the "little flock" of the Scripture the ones preached to, or the ones saved by the preaching? The gospel was sent to "all the world"—not a little flock (Matt. 28:18-20; Mark 16:15,16; Luke 24:46,47). "Ye shall be my witnesses," says Jesus to his apostles, "both in Jerusalem and in Judea"—and unto a "little flock"? Just to a few? No: "Unto the uttermost parts of the earth" (Acts 1:8). The commandment to repent is intended for "all men," even for the ignorant Athenians (Acts 17:30). To the Gentiles Paul was sent to open their eyes (Acts 26:18). If modern perverters of the gospel had been with Paul they could have enlightened him wonderfully from their standpoint. They would have said: "Paul, you have the cart before the horse; Jesus did not intend the gospel for anybody but the 'little flock.' Shame on you for introducing it to the ignorant and idolatrous Athenians?" To this calumny Paul would doubtless answer that he was divinely commissioned to go to the Gentiles and "open their eyes" (Acts 26:18). But to this our erratic critics would complacently reply: "Hold on, Paul, you are wrong about that; you must not open their eyes; they are to be opened in the next age; go now to the 'little flock' and preach, and to them only. The gospel is not for the world now; it is only for the few." We think Paul has the best of the argument, and we take our stand with him. We have read in the Book that "many are called, but few are chosen" (Matt. 20:16); only in the books of men destitute of the truth do we find this statement reversed. Dear brethren and sisters, do not be "moved away from the hope of the gospel, which was preached to every creature under heaven" (Col. 1:23). This says "every creature under heaven"; let the sacriligious say to "only a few." God's word says the called are many, the chosen but few (Matt. 20:16); let the presumptuous say "the called are few—only the little flock." "Let God be true, but every man a liar" (Rom. 3:4).

KINGS AND RULERS ARE USUALLY SINNERS

Psalms 2:2

Our Lord's death was desired and sought by a sinful people; but the heads of the governments were especially desirous to invent a pretext to take his life. Herod tried to kill Christ as soon as he was born, for the reason that as "King of the Jews" he was a rival to his throne (Matt. 2:3-17). All government officials were unfriendly to Christ, and sought to take his life, except Pilate, who disliked to condemn the innocent; but when a clique of foul-mouthed politicians clamoured for his life, he become "afraid" (John 19:18); and when they made the threat, "If thou let this man go, thou art not Caesar's friend: whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Caesar" (vs. 12), "that saying" (vs. 13) brought Pilate to time. The reason "that saying" had such a powerful effect upon Pilate was this: he was holding his office under, and subject to, Caesar. He knew that if the people made an accusation to the Roman Emperor, as they had threatened to do, of his friendship to "another King, one Jesus" (Acts 17:7), he would lose his position, if not his head. His unwillingness to give sentence against Christ did not extenuate his sin; rather it aggravated it. Hence Pilate is mentioned by name, as is also Herod, as being one of the "kings of the earth" who fulfilled the prophecy. "The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord" (Acts 4:26,27). The word yatsab, "set," means to station oneself in opposition—a most determined, resolute and defiant attitude (Psa. 36: 4; 2 Sam. 18:13). The Lord's enemies—his worst ones—have been, and are the officials in the kingdoms of this world.

Of the forty-two kings who reigned over Israel and Judah, most of them were either sinners, or what is worse, apostates. If this is true of the officials of God's Theocracy, what about the government authorities in heathen nations? "Time and chance happen" (Eccl. 9:11) to us all in many things, but when it comes to destiny of governments, their kings and rulers, we are within the limitations of a definite Providence. Sometimes God providentially manipulates an individual, if he is uncommonly righteous or wicked, but this is not usual. When organized into a government, however, men's power becomes so great that it is necessary for the finger of God to providentially touch them, in appointing them "times" and "bounds of habitation" (Acts 17:26). To effectually do this, he has to lead "counsellors away spoiled" at one time, and break the "bonds of kings" at another (Job 12:17,18). Therefore promotion to national honor does not come from the votes of the people; it does not come "from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south. But God is the Judge" (Psa. 75:6,7). God is the Maker of the earth, man and beast; and as owner he claims the right to manage affairs as seems good to him (Jer. 27:5). By virtue of the owner's right, "he removeth kings, and setteth up kings" (Dan. 2: 21). Nebuchadnezzar was slow to learn this lesson about God's political prerogative, and some of our brethren are. He was punished "till" he learned and recognized God's superintendence over national affairs (Dan. 4:25-32). Punishment for seven times passed over him before he knew "that the Most High God ruled in the kingdoms of men, and that he appointed over it whomsoever he will" (4:37; 5:21). He sets up or dethrones kings; "the heavens do rule." And while he is the ruler and appointer of all officials, we must remember this fact, that he selects the person best suited to his purposes, without any regard to morality or religion. He not only rules in the kingdoms of men, and giveth it to whom he will, but it is added, "And setteth up over it the basest of men" (Dan. 4:7).

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL

No. IX

Their acceptance is largely selfish. They see in the gospel a means to save "self"; but they do not see the love of God to the world revealed in it, and thus it fails to engender in them the same unselfish love for those who need God's love and mercy as much as they do, but have not as yet been favored with the knowledge of it.—Alta King.

EDITOR'S REPLY

Salvation of "Self" First, Common Sense

As soon as brethren allow the "steadfast" word of God to leak out of them like "leaking vessels," as the Greek of Heb. 2:1,2 reads, they begin to talk voluminously about love and unselfishness—splendid subjects to be sure, when they are not slaughtered in murderous caricature by tolerant and broad-minded errorists. Such people pat themselves on the back and tell how lovely and unselfish they are; and then, forgetful of their high sounding claims, they frown and scowl and wink and blink as they tell how unlovely and selfish and mean and narrow and bigoted we are! They can swallow the world with its boots on, but they cannot, with all their boasted charity, endure those who maintain the flesh-crucifying principles of the truth. We are, in their gracious estimate, "largely selfish." And why? Because we see "in the gospel a means to save 'self.'" Since when did it become "selfish" to look out for yourself? Must we go naked to clothe our neighbors? Must we starve to feed the poor? Must we kill ourselves—for deliberate starvation is pre-meditated suicide—that others may live? You can fling invectives galore, but the "selfish" principle remains undisturbed that we must clothe ourselves before we can help clothe others; we must have good nourishing food ourselves before we can feed others; and we must live ourselves before we can minister to the comfort and happiness of others. These remarks are founded on the rock of common sense and are as true when applied to the spiritual life as they are when spoken of in reference to the temporal life.

Salvation of "Self" First, Scriptural; The Salvation of Others, Second

Instead of the salvation of "self" being "largely selfish," as misrepresented by our correspondent, the truth is exactly the reverse. Speaking personally and "selfishly" Paul says: "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed in pure water. Let us hold fast the confession of our faith without wavering." Having attended thus far to ourselves, his next thought is concerned with others: "And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works" (Heb. 10:22,23). We first save ourselves, then we serve God; we first come to "full assurance of faith" ourselves, then our faith is communicated to others (Rom. 1:17). When this course is daubed and labelled "largely selfish," hostility is shown toward a divine principle of revealed truth expressed in the exhortation and commandment of Paul in 1 Tim. 4:13-16. ". . . . give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine . . . . . meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them . . . . take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." "Save thyself." Do you call this selfishness? Then quarrel with Paul about it. "What must I do to be saved?" (Acts 16:30). Does this question sound selfish? Paul and Silas thought differently about the query and frankly answered it (Acts 16:31). And Peter, when asked by men who saw in the gospel "a means of saving 'self,'" the same question, replied as the representative of all the apostles, "Save yourselves" Acts 2:40)!

The Love of God to the World Realized and Appreciated

Now the salvation of ourselves does not engender in us a bit of selfishness, nor does it lessen our desire for the salvation of others. On the contrary, it is our salvation that opens our eyes to the love of God manifested to the world. As we showed in article VIII, only personal blessing, love and redemption can beget personal gratitude and thankfulness. We were of the world, and yet God found us in the plentitude of his mercy, and we became "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light: which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy" (1 Peter 2:9,10). Where nothing is received there is nothing to be thankful for. We know that before we were chosen of God that we were "not the people of God;" that before we learned and obeyed the gospel, we had "not obtained mercy;" we know this because Peter says so. And if we know this much about ourselves when we were in the world and of the world, we also know that the world is no better off than we were formerly. It is the knowledge of our previous ignorant, alienated state that makes the heart of every brother and sister swell with love to God for granting us "mercy." Humbled before him in perpetual humiliation because of our former lost and miserable condition, our hearts are bursting with "the praise of him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvelous light" of truth, mercy and love.

What Magical New Means Are to be Employed in Making the Ignorant Wise?

Sister King complains because we do not have an "unselfish love for those who need God's love and mercy as much as we do, but have not as yet been favored with the knowledge of it." They do not have a knowledge of the truth, she admits, and she has an "unselfish love" for them. So do we. So does God. Yet in the face of all this "unselfish love" the world is ignorant, and "willingly ignorant," of God's love, mercy, and truth (2 Pet. 3:5). Scoffers abound; they hate the truth and ask, "Where is the promise of his coming?" (vss. 3,4). "Willingly ignorant," they speak against the things which they do not understand (vs. 12). Sister King's "unselfish love" does not open their eyes; we join her as an active participant in love, and still they grope in darkness; and finally, God's "unselfish love" is added to our "unselfish love"—and still they have not been favored with knowledge "as yet"! To unselfish love add "favor," and they are ignorant still. Larger Hope gets its golden facination by assuming and presuming and supposing and allowing and inferring that all must be favored with a knowledge of the truth. Its advocates never lost an opportunity to reason upon this hypothesis. But knowledge is acquired by the employment of means. This is where Larger Hope gets weak in the knees. We want no idealism; away with Utopianism. Facts and truth are what we want. What means do they propose to employ in the age to come, that are not existent and operative now, to teach the ignorant knowledge? Mind you, the means now existent and operative leave the majority of the people ignorant of the gospel. The employment of the means in the age to come that are employed now, would meet with no more success then than now. Mark then our question well: Tell us what new means are to be employed then that are not extant and operative now, whereby all the ignorant shall become wise! More anon.

COMMUNICATION

"They shall make known unto you all things which are done here." (Col. 4:9).

Dear Brother Huggins:

Enclosed please find order to renew my subscription to The Restitution. It expired some time ago, but I have just neglected attending to it. Thank you for sending it on, just the same. It seems that the paper grows better each issue: we just could not keep house without it. My husband enjoys it although he is not of our faith, and I am hoping that it may help him to see our way. With kindest regards to yourself and family, I am,
Your sister in Christ, Bernice Phelps Rogers.

Is this world-war to have as deep an effect as Buddha, as Plato, as Jesus? One does not measure the significance of men by tons or acres, nor that of events by the noise of the concussion. The fine thought may have more lasting import than the death of ten thousand men in battle.

ENGLISHMEN NOT JEWS

It is greatly to be regretted that so many of those who have been led to look for our Lord's personal and pre-millennial return suffer themselves to be switched off from the main line of testimony to some side track, where their witness-bearing is worthless or worse than worthless. But for obvious reasons satan is ever on the alert to corrupt this far-reaching truth, and to obscure this blessed hope by a cloud of false doctrine. Hence he is always seeking to lead his advocate into wholly irrelevant issues, inducing them to link with the second coming * * * * some heresy or vagary, that has no more connection with the Savior's future advent than with the man in the moon. Still it is enough in thousands of instances to disgust sober-minded Christians with the whole subject.

Among the useless speculations that have become associated and identified in the public mind with the pre-millennial faith is the theory that Englishmen belong to the ten lost tribes of Israel. Even if it were true, no conceivable good can be accomplished by discussing, and urging it, and writing books and pamphlets about it, when it only diverts attention from Christ himself, and at best can be but a minor adjunct of his return. The Bible nowhere says that Englishmen are Jews; and if the brethren with whom this is the favorite idea insist that it is proved by unanswerable arguments, they ought to remember that a [illegible] proved by unanswerable arguments to foretell the duration of the present age; and the twenty years ago Mr. Baxter proved by unanswerable arguments that Louis Napoleon was the antichrist. But neither of these views, although maintained with the utmost confidence, and established by unanswerable arguments, remain proved. It often happens that the logic of facts is mightier than the logic of reason.

It seem strange that the English should be pitched upon as Jews, unless it can be shown that not only the ancient Britons, but the Romans, the Picts and the Scots, the Anglos, the Saxons, the Danes, the Normans, and nearly every other nation in Europe are also Jewish. No people on earth, unless it be their descendants in the United States, can boast, if they consider it ground for boasting, of such commingled blood in their veins. It would be absolutely impossible for Englishmen to trace their lineage back generation by generation, as the Jews can do, to a pure and unmixed Jewish origin or Jewish descent. There has been an infusion into their individual life and nationality of something from almost every tribe and principality and kingdom that could reach them during the last eighteen hundred years; and hence the claim that they continue to be Jews is absurd.

But the theory is contrary to the word of God, notwithstanding the forty or more proofs that are given to indentify the English as Jews. For example, that word put into the mouth of Balaam by Jehovah himself says, "Lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations" (Num. 23:9). In what sense can this be understood of Englishmen? They do not dwell alone, but are found all over the earth, mingled

It seems strange that the English should be

England "shall not be reckoned among the nations." It is, and has been for centuries, one of the leading nations; and the utmost stretch of the imagination cannot make it correspond with the description here given of Israel, but which is and has always been literally true of the Jews. Even in their dispersion they have never been confounded with their conquerors as the Saxons were with the Normans.

If however it is urged that these words apply to Israel only when in covenant relation to God, it is sufficient to answer that the predictions of the Holy Spirit concerning the Jews in exile, driven from their land for their sins, cannot at all be made to fit the history and conditions of the English. Thus we read: "They that hate you shall reign over you; and ye shall flee when none pursueth. * * I will break the pride of your power; and I will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass: and your strength shall be spent in vain: for your land shall not yield her increase, neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits * * I will also send wild beasts among you, which shall rob you of your children, and destroy your cattle, and make you few in number" (Lev. 26:17-22). "Thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word among all nations whither the Lord shall lead thee * * The stranger that is within thee shall get up above thee very high; and thou shalt come down very low. He shall lend to thee, and thou shalt not lend to him: he shall be the head, and thou shalt be the tail" (Deut. 28:37-44).

Much more of the same sort might be quoted, and it is obvious that it cannot refer to England. Are Englishmen few in number? Are they despised and oppressed and ridiculed? In the race for national power and renown, have they become the tail? For generations they have been the head of political influence, and the arbiters of the destiny of Europe, and of much of the world beside. With the exception of one of their numerous offspring, the United States, they are the wealthiest people on the earth; and the threatenings of God against Israel surely are not fulfilled in the singular sucessful and powerful career of Great Britain.

"The Lord shall scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the Lord shall lead you" (Deut. 4:27). "Ye shall be left few in number, whereas ye were as the stars of heaven for multitude; because thou wouldst not obey the voice of the Lord thy God * * and among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest; but the Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind" (Deut. 28:62-65). "And they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall scatter them among the nations, and disperse them in the countries. But I will leave a few men of them from the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence" (Ezek. 12:15.16). The predictions, of which these verses are samples, are now fulfilled before the eyes of the world in the strange history of the Jews; but they are unmeaning if written of England.

One would think that the Anglo-Israel brethren must be silent in the light of the following testimony: "The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince * * afterwards shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord their God, and David their king (or as the Targum renders it, 'they shall obey the Messiah the Son of David, their King'); and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days" (Hos. 3:4,5). When did England abide many days without a king and without a prince, except during the brief Protectorate of Oliver Cromwell, who is sorely needed again, not only in England but in many kingdoms and republics?

The Anglo-Saxon-Danish-Norman nation, being uncircumscised, is positively excluded from the national covenant, as God himself declares (Gen. 17:10-14). Hence even if Jews they cannot receive the promised national blessing, but must stand upon Gentile ground. They are either believers in Christ or unbelievers. If the former they are part of the church, in which "there is neither Jew nor Gentile, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female" (Gal. 3:28). If the latter, they are under the curse, and until redeemed with the precious blood shed on the cross, they are "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world" (Eph. 2:12).—James H. Brookes.

MATHEMATICS IN MORALS

"Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive? till seven times?" (Matt. 18:21).

What a beautifully simple rule that would have been! Forgive seven times! How easily the rule could have been applied! The merest tyro could have measured out his moral obligations to a nicety. Forgiveness would have been a matter of careful counting—four times, five times, six times, seven times, and then—! How this little rule would have simplified our moral relationships! How it would have revealed the whole extent of our responsibilities, and shown us just where we were! "How oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?" * * "I say not unto thee, until seven times; but, until seventy times seven." Then the Master will not accept and confirm the simple rule. He rejects it. Not seven times, but seventy times seven!

Forgiveness is not a thing which begins when I have counted one, and may end when I have counted seven. It has no arithmetical boundaries. It reaches away where simple arithmetic wearies itself and is lost. "Till seven times!" That is a simple rule. "Seventy times seven!" That is a great principle. A rule has limits; it begins here, it ends there. A principle is like God's overhanging firmament; its boundaries are horizon lines; but when you go to touch them, and say, "Here the firmament ends," they recede before you—things that can never be grasped. Forgiveness is not a thing to be settled by petty rules, and so no petty rule was given. Instead of a rule, he gave us a principle—"Not seven times, but seventy times seven."—The Christian Herald.

Rules For Success

Attend carefully to whatever you undertake to do.

Be prompt in all things.
Consider well then decide positively.
Dare to do right, fear to do wrong.
Endure trials patiently.
Fight life's battles bravely, manfully.
Go not into the society of the vicious.
Hold integrity sacred.
Injure not another's reputation.
Join hands only with the virtuous.
Keep your mind from evil thoughts.
Lie not under any circumstances.
Make few acquaintances.
Never try to appear what you are not.
Observe good manners.
Pay your debts promptly.
Question not the veracity of a friend.
Respect the counsel of your parents.
Sacrifice money rather than principle.
Touch not, taste not, handle not intoxicating liquors or tobacco.
Use your leisure time for improvement.
Vie with the godly to do good.
Withhold not your sympathy from the poor.
Extend to every one a kindly salutation.
Yield not to discontentment.
Zealously labor for the right, and success is certain.

A Useless Member

"Yes," said Aunt Susan, surveying the bandaged wrist, "the doctor says it's a bad sprain, and the minister says I know now how the church feels in not having the use of all its members. I had sense enough, too, to feel I deserved to have him say it to me.

"I've never thought that just what being a member of the church meant before, though I've been one for thirty-five years. I've never felt obliged to do what the church wanted done. I felt it was a favor, and half the time I let some one else do it instead. When I was through with work at home and with what things I liked to do outside, then I was willing to do something in the church. I guess I've been about as useless a member to the church as the sprained hand is to me.

"There's a lot of things I need to do, but I can't use this member to do them, that's certain. I've been a useless member, and if the rest of the members had been like me the church would have been as paralized as old Cousin Josiah who can't move hand or foot. I'm ashamed of myself, I am, and things are going to be different from now on."—Selected.

Mother Never Was A Boy

Any differences father and mother may have had were totally unknown to us children, for in our presence they always were of one mind and we never heard either contention, controversy or argument. In later years mother confided to us, that at times after chiding us boys for some minor offence and she and father being alone, father would say, "Ma! you're a trifle hard on the boys. A boys nature is to be rough and mischievous. I'm afraid, Ma, you don't fully understand them, you know you never were a boy."

The other day while in conversation with Mr. Flesner—a business associate—he transferred his attention from me to an assistant, a youth of about eighteen, whom he sharply criticized. Some time after the young man was heard to remark, "I wonder if Mr. F. always was as old as he now is, or was he at one time my age?"

We relate these true incidents solely as a foundation on which to rebuild the old adage, "Put yourself in the other fellow's place." We are told to "judge not," also to "think evil of no man," and if we, when in the humor to criticise, will remember that "circumstances alter cases" and that conscience generally is shaped through education and environment, we often will leave unsaid the word of censure. Then we will use our knowledge and strength in so building our own character that we will be an example for others to follow, to the glory of God the Father, as we read: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

The Restitution

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O. SEPTEMBER 4, 1917 NUMBER 33

MY GUIDE

There is no path in this desert waste
For the winds have swept the shifting sands;
The trail is blind where the storms have raced,
And a stranger, I, in these fearsome lands,
But I journey on with a lightsome tread;
I do not falter nor turn aside,
For I see his figure just ahead—
He knows the way—my Guide.

There is no path in this trackless sea;
No map is lined on the restless waves;
The ocean snares are strange to me
Where the unseen wind in its fury raves;
But it matters naught; my sails are set,
And my swift prow tosses the seas aside,
For the changeless stars are steadfast yet,
And I sail by his star-blazed trail—my Guide.

There is no way in this starless night;
There is naught but cloud in the inky skies;
The black night smothers me, left and right,
I stare with a blind man's straining eyes;
But my steps are firm, for I cannot stray;
The path to my feet seems light and wide;
For I hear His voice—"I am the way!"
And I sing as I follow him on—my Guide.

TWO EXTREMES REFUTED

No. 15

We are referred to Romans 5:18 as proof that all men will be raised from the dead and we can do no better than quote the words of Dr. John Thomas in explanation of this passage. In reply to John S Watt he says: "Mr. Watt relies also on Rom. 5:18 for the universality of this monosyllable 'all.' He supposes that the two 'alls' in this verse are co-extensive. If this is the case, then he is a universalist. The passage reads thus, 'As by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.' Now if the phrase 'all men to justification of life' is as universal as that of 'all men to condemnation,' it follows that the free gift of an immortality connected with justification or pardon is bestowed unconditionally upon all infants, idiots, infidels, believers, and so forth, be they just or unjust. This is certainly universal salvation; and if it is true, I would suggest the propriety of Mr. Watt addressing himself to some more important calling than that of presbyterianizing mankind, who according to his demonstration, are all under the sentence of justification of life, and therefore will be universally saved. But to the context we must go and not to my friend in order to be dilivered from our dilemma. The 19th verse shows that 'all men' was used by the apostle to signify the many. This will be more apparent from the following allocation, viz:

Verse 18		Verse 19
As through one offence	equal to	As through the disobedience of the one man
the sentence came upon all men	„	the many were constituted
to condemnation;	„	sinners;
so also by one act of obedience	„	so by the obedience of one
the sentence came upon all men	„	the many shall be constituted
to justification of life	„	righteous

"In this passage then, 'all' signifies the many; and who are the many constituted righteous? Why, the Scriptures teach us that he who doeth righteousness is righteous; the many, then, are the doers of righteousness or well-doers, and therefore these are they who are placed under sentence to justification of life. This is in conformity with what the apostle says, namely, that the gospel is the power of God for salvation (or justification of life) to every one (the many) who believe; for in it is the justification of God revealed for belief. Now if infants and idiots and pagans who are physically, intellectually, and circumstantially incapable of understanding the power of God can be the subjects of a justification which is predicated on belief of the gospel, then may they be regarded as part of the many upon whom the sentence to justification comes; but on the contrary, if they cannot be justified by the gospel seeing it is the power of God to believers, then it follows that they are not included in the 'all' of the many under justification, but in the all or the 'many' under the sentence of death which has come upon all constituted sinners by virtue of their descent from the mortal progenitor of the race. It is the just who shall live (eternally); and that by faith" (Apostacy Unveiled, pp. 97,98).

That the Doctor is correct is also evident from verses 17 and 21: "For if by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ." Here it is they which receive grace and righteousness, who shall reign in life, and it is the same ones who are justified unto life. "Sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life." This shows that the life to which those spoken of as being justified is eternal life, and comes through grace reigning in righteousness, and not spontaneously without effort on the part of those who receive the eternal life. Again Paul states in verses 1 and 2 of this chapter. "Therefore, being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ: by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in the hope of the glory of God." This clearly states that justification comes by faith and that we have access by faith to the grace wherein we stand and rejoice; but if we have access to the grace by faith we have not obtained it until we have exercised faith, and it does not reign over us before we have access to it. "He giveth grace to the humble" (Jas. 4:6). "By grace are ye saved through faith" (Paul). Then grace does not come to any but those who humble themselves and exercise faith.

Now read again: "But not as the offence so also is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many be dead, much more the grace of God and the gift of grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many. And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences (not just one) unto justification." The justification Paul here speaks of comes by the free gift, and is of many offences, and must liberate from more than one offence; for many is more than one. Now all the offences of the human family are many, and if the whole of the human family are included in the justification they must be justified from the whole of the offences of the family. That would be universal salvation brought about by the obedience of Christ without a single effort on the part of the sinner. Isaiah shows so beautifully the limited use of the word "all" that we will quote again a passage from him, as it seems that our critic has not closely read previous articles: "And it shall come to pass that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord." Will every dead heathen, every dead sinner come to worship before God in the new heaven and the new earth state? "All" means all with our critic, and so it must be if he is correct, and then with him we have all been justified in life, and here all living and worshiping, and what less is it than universal salvation; and yet he declares, "I am not a Universalist!" If he is not he must give a limited meaning to the word "all;" for all are justified to life, and all come to worship God in the new heaven and new earth, which proves conclusively universal salvation if we say "all" includes every human being that ever has or ever will and does now exist. But let us give the prophet an opportunity to demolish our critic's house of sand: "And they (the all flesh) shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring unto (shall I say the aggregate of the human family with none missing?) all flesh" (Isa. 66:21-24). If "all flesh" takes the human race, universally, then the wicked will go forth and look upon their own dead bodies, and abhor them, which could not be unless our critic gives them immortal souls in which to go, and out of which to look. If the word all means means every human being that has, now, or will exist, our critic is an immortal-soulist and universalist, and teaches that souls can be saved while bodies are lost and burning in the fire. What will he do? Come to the truth and teach with Paul, the prophets, and Jesus that justification is conditional, and the all who are justified are those who comply with the conditions, and not the aggregate of the human family; or go on contending for a theory that runs him into the fallacious idea of immortal-soulism, capped off with universalism. He must do one of the two things or discard the word of God. "All" cannot include those who have transgressed if there are no immortal souls; for a carcase is a dead body, and cannot look upon itself neither can it worship God, nor go and come to worship. I wonder if our good critic will continue to contend that "all" includes the whole of humanity after he reads this? If so, he should explain how dead sinners can worship while dead; and after he has done that he might give us some light how extinct heathen who shall not rise shall have knees to bow.

EXTREMES

What It Is to Have the Spirit of Christ

"Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8:9).

With this divine light to guide us let us test the various theories, creeds and practices that are in the world. The expert, when testing for gold, has no hesitation in throwing to one side many of the baser metals that might deceive the unwary. So we can at once throw away a great deal of that which claims to be Christian. Pronounced evil of every shape and form has no part with Christ, that belongs to the old Adam no matter what its pretensions may be. In as brief a form as possible let us get at what is meant by this spirit of Christ. "Jesus saith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me and to finish his work" (John 4:3,4). "I have glorified thee on the earth I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do" (John 17:4). Christ set up a standard of obedience to the Divine will higher than had ever been seen in the world before, and this standard is for his servants to follow. Whosoever tries to change or alter that is none of his.

The Christians of the first and second centuries had no written creed apart from the Scriptures, and they were mostly all humble and what the world called unlearned people. One of Christ's claims to divine authority was that "to the poor the gospel was preached" so that his gospel must have been of a very simple character.

On the day of Pentecost there were about three thousand baptized. Again we are told in Acts 4:4: "Howbeit many of them who heard the word believed and the number of the men was about five thousand." How would it have been possible for the believers to have gone into any minute examination of such a multitude before they were baptized as is the practice with some now? Of course these people were all Jews and thus were believers before this in one God, in the resurrection of the dead, in a coming Messiah who was to reign on David's throne and was to govern the world: but the details in regard to how the dead were to be raised they could not understand nor many other details which they were to learn later. Then we have the case of the Philippean jailor, a heathen, who was converted and baptized in a single night. It would have been impossible for him to have grasped elaborate details in a few hours that night, such as is insisted upon now by creed builders who ostracise and denounce those daring to differ in any respect from these man made creeds. What God requires to be believed in order to be saved he has stated plainly and distinctly in his word and it requires no elaborate process of reasoning of so called learned men to set it forth.

Truly there are deep things in the Scriptures that require years of careful, prayerful study to rightly understand, but that is the strong meat of the word and babes in the truth should not be crammed with it. The terrible mistake that is made by many zealous individuals is attempting to do this, and not only this but often to insist that their own unscriptural deductions be accepted as gospel upon pain of being ignominiously expelled from their body. That is not in accord with the spirit of Christ, but this has been done again and again by many organizations claiming to be followers of Christ. They have driven the little ones by wholesale to destruction and to such we apply Christ's terrible words: "But whoso shall offend one of these little ones who believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone was hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea" (Matt. 18:6). I fear that a tremendous amount of millstones should have been served out in the past to the leaders in getting up creeds and enforcing them by expelling those who would not accept.

Even now the spirit is still rampant in many places among those who profess to believe the gospel of the kingdom and life only in Christ. I know of a case where a young man came from England and travelled on business extensively through the United States and wherever he was on Sunday he tried to join with those, as he supposed, of like faith; but they one and all rejected him because he did not come from the right brand of faithful people in England. One body offered to fellowship him if he would promise not to go back to the hall he came from and where his parents were. This he refused to do.

In the case cited they did not apparently consider his faith astray but he did not belong to the right party. It is certainly not the spirit of Christ. Consequently they may call themselves all the high sounding names they choose but in this spirit Christ will not accept them. "Though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries and knowledge and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains and have not love, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor and though I give my body to be burned and have not love, it profiteth me nothing. Love suffereth long and is kind; love envyeth not, love vaunteth not herself, is not puffed up" (1 Cor.13:2-4).

This side of the Christian life has been by far too much neglected in many organizations who yet claim to be brethren of Christ and who lay the greated emphasis on the latest evolved ideas by some supposed great man. Another case I know of in Great Britain is that of two sisters in the gospel who are refused the right of fellowship with the body of believers in the town where they reside, because they will not promise to have no fellowship with another body of believers in any nearby town when they go there!! Such is not the spirit of Christ. There are others of these supposed great men descending to deliberate falsehood in order to get even with someone that would not endorse all their elaborate teachings. That is the spirit of evil, certainly not the spirit of Christ.

On the other hand many profess to be believers and even preachers of the gospel of the kingdom and life only in Christ who are by far too loose in their methods of overseeing the church of God; who will admit anyone to communion with them on the plea that it is every one's duty to examine himself before partaking of the body and blood of the Lord. Such very liberal people, as they call themselves, ignore the fact that that was written to the church of God at Corinth who were all baptized believers. But even Paul in this same letter orders the church of God at Corinth to expel from among them one of their number who had committed a public sin. That kind of a plea by one who has been appointed an overseer in the church of God is not in harmony with the spirit of Christ. Christ has laid down certain distinct rules for our guidance and it is at our peril if we ignore them, no matter how gratifying to the flesh it may be to do so. It will not justify those who do so to plead ignorance of Christ's commands for they are plainly written for our guidance. There is a great tendency in human nature to try to glorify oneself and get all the glory and honor one can get. This was manifested even among the apostles and Christ reproved them of it and said, "Neither be ye called masters, for one is your master even Christ. But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant and whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted" (Matt. 23:10-12).

Neglecting these great over-ruling principles and riding hobbies about doctrine has led to endless mischief against the spread of the glorious gospel in the latter days. One says I am of Paul and one Appolus, or one of Dr. T., another of Dr. R. and many have fought like wild cats, as the Kaiser's ungodly troops, over some phases of doctrine and sometimes used language toward one another only fit for Billingsgate. Such is certainly not the spirit of Christ. If we are to be accepted by Christ when he comes, we must not only believe and obey the gospel, but we must steadfastly follow on, becoming more Christ-like in our characters as the years are passing by and his glorious coming is drawing nearer.

A. Wallace Mason, M. D.

TESTIMONY OF THE TABERNACLE

(Concluded)

The tabernacle proper was an oblong rectangular form, 45 ft. long, 15 ft. wide, and the same height. As you already know, it stood at the west end of the court, being like the court, longest from the east to west. It had a side for every quarter of the globe, yet was one tabernacle. It was made of forty-eight boards, which were covered with gold, and stood upright and firmly fixed in sockets of solid silver. The boards were joined together by bars, five in number, extending the whole length of the structure. Four of them passed through rings, but the fifth was shot through the boards edgewise from end to end, like a bolt, but could not be seen, a type of the Holy Spirit. The door of the tabernacle was made of five pillars, which stood in sockets of brass, from which a vail, called "the first vail," hung. The whole structure was covered by four coverings.

In the tabernacle with its four sides, some writers and students of Scripture symbols have discerned a type of the four gospels in their testimony of the one Christ in four distinct aspects of his personality and life. In the Gospel by Matthew we have a presentation of Christ as King in harmony with Old Testament prophecy and hope. In that Gospel we are constantly pointed to the prophets and the expression "that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets," is peculiar and characteristic of Matthew. The genealogy of Christ in Matthew is that of the King. The birth of Christ is at Bethlehem, the City of David, or royal city where the King should be born. The wise men come seeking one born to be King in the 2nd chapter, while in the 3rd John the Baptist comes as herald of the kingdom and introduces both King and kingdom. Many other references might be made showing that Matthew's view of Christ is harmonious throughout to the claims made in the first chapter that he was the Royal Heir, the Son of David. How different is the view presented by Mark, yet equally true, but taken from another standpoint. Mark presents Jesus in the character of a servant, doing perfectly the will of him who sent him. Here he says, "I do always those things which please him." Always about his Father's business. Two word characterize this book of Mark's: they are "straightway" and "immediately," for as a servant he only needed to know what to do, and then to do it. We notice the absence of the genealogy in Mark's Gospel. That was also in harmony with the character in which he depicts Jesus as a servant.

In Luke Jesus is presented as the Son of Man—the Savior born for all the people— not of the Jews only. Everything human in Christ is emphasized. He presents himself as a man for lost men. There are nearly two chapters of genealogy of Christ in Luke, tracing him up to Adam, who was a son of God by creation, but not tracing him to David or Abraham, as in Matthew.

In the Gospel of John we have the highest presentation of Christ as the Son of God. There is no genealogy in John. We begin with "the Word": "And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory."

There is no temptation in John's Gospel, for a Son of God was announced from the beginning, and the temptation must belong to another phase of his manifold character and offices. The agony in the garden is omitted, and in the recorded events of the crucifixion we are occupied with those which strongly marked his divine character. There is no rending of the vail in John's Gospel, for the one whose place had been behind the vail was out now in full manifestation— God manifest in the flesh of his Son.

These differences of the Gospels have been set forth in ancient symbolism. The Cherubim with its four distinct faces, the face of a lion, ox, man, and eagle, have been made to teach these truths. The Gospel by Matthew is represented as a lion; Mark as the ox; Luke, the face of the man; John, by the eagle. Men have tried to write a harmony of the four Gospels, and the imperfect results of the efforts are the best evidence of their failure to do it. God did not intend them to be harmonized. Their great value consists in their characteristic differences rather than in any harmony that can be made of them. Differences are not contradictions.

Let us now draw near to the tabernacle proper and look at its coverings which are four in number. The first on the outside was made of badger's skins; the next ram's skins dyed red, then the goat's hair, and last of all fine twined linen. The animal which supplied the badger's skins for the outward covering of the tabernacle is believed to have been the seal from the shores of the Red Sea. They were not dressed but rough and unpleasant in appearance—a first class rain and dust-proof covering. The ram's skins underlaid the outer covering, but whether of real utility or only for their symbolical meaning I have not learned. And as the badger's skins were supposed to be typical of the outward or human aspect of Christ, as he appeared to man as described in the 53rd chapter of Isaiah, so the ram's skins dyed red were understood to represent the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin (1John 1:7). As the badger's skins represent the human or outward view of Christ, and the ram's skins dyed red represent the object of his humanity, obedience unto death, even the death on the cross, where he shed his blood, so the goat's hair covering brings to mind the complete putting away of sin. On the great day of atonement two goats were presented before the Lord, lots were cast, and the goat on whose head the lot fell was slain as a sacrifice, while the other goat, after the sin of the nation had been confessed upon its head, was set free and permitted to escape into the wilderness; this meaning that on the basis of the sacrifice of the first goat all the sins of Israel for that year were put away and gone forever.

Chas. A. Goss.

ROMANS 1:20

"For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead: so that they are without excuse."

A casual reading of this Scripture sometimes leads to the conclusion that mankind may seek and know God through his wonderful works of nature, and that they are without excuse since they do not make use of this means of knowing him. But a study of the chapter will not support such interpretation.

Paul is writing to the Roman church. From verses 13,14,15 it would seem that some there were complaining because Paul did not get around to visit them. He says: "I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oftentimes I purposed to come to you." Evidently they thought Paul, like some other Christianized Jews, had come to believe that the gospel belonged to Gentiles only on condition of their circumcision. For Paul explains, "I am a debtor both to the Greeks and the barbarians, both to the wise and unwise. So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also." Why was he thus ready to preach the gospel ? "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (verse 17 reveals why the gospel is God's power unto salvation to both Jew and Gentile). In verse 18 Paul explains why he is not ashamed of the gospel: "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness." Why is God's wrath revealed from heaven against men who hold truth in unrighteouness ? Because "that which may be known of God is manifest in them, for God hath showed it unto them." To whom ? To those men who hold truth in unrighteousness.

Further reasons for God's wrath being revealed against men who know and hold truth in unrighteousness is found in verse 20: "For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen (being understod by the things that are made), even his eternal power and Godhead so that they are without excuse." Who are without excuse ? These men who hold truth in unrighteousness. Why without excuse ? Because the things that are made, the very works of nature, testify to the truths which have been revealed to them. Paul plainly has in mind those to whom God's truth has been revealed, who yet hold it in unrighteousness; such as he himself would have been if he had been ashamed of the gospel and neglected to preach it to Gentiles.

From verse 21 on he gives a very good description of backsliding Israel, and shows how God's wrath was revealed against these people who knew God, yet glorified him not as God, and even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind. If it be true that the many who are living and have died in ignorance of God and his power to save, are without excuse because they have failed to seek him and his salvation through his works of nature, why then is the gospel said to be the power of God unto salvation ? Why was it necessary for Jesus to come and show the way of salvation and life, bringing life and immortality to light through the gospel, at such infinite cost and suffering to himself, who never committed one sin ? Why did the apostles suffer untold persecution that the gospel might be preached ? And last, but not least, why did not we come to our knowledge of truth of God's eternal power and Godhead and his power to save, through our study and reverence of the things that are made ?

The gospel, Christ, the apostles, all are unnecessary if man is without excuse for not knowing and accepting God's salvation, because they have failed to see and understand him in the works of nature. All the heathen beliefs with which the world is burdened teaches us what seeking to know the Supreme Power of the universe through nature, without a direct revelation from the Supreme Power, leads to. Nature helps to establish our faith in God, but only after we have learned to know him through Christ, the perfect revelation of himself to man. Man must know and accept Christ and his gospel before he can be saved. It is not equally true that man must know and reject Christ and his gospel before he can be lost ?

Alta King.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

EDITORIAL

THE MINISTERIAL FUND

Some time since in response to an appeal from Auntie Wince, brethren and sisters sent us $72.00 to help in the education of a minister. At that time Brother Wilson, of Kansas, expressed a desire to take up ministerial preparation, and set July, 1917, as the date when he would begin. Brother Wilson has not found it possible to begin the work as he anticipated; and we are now extending the same offer and invitation to someone else. If any brother feels an inclination towards the ministry we ask him to immediately communicate to us his desire, age, extent of education, experience in public speaking, etc. If no one responds to this editorial by Nov. 1, 1917, we shall refund to the donors the money which we now hold, unless they order it used for some other purpose in the furtherance of the gospel.

Sister Rena Endsley writes that she would like to see some article in The Restitution on the beast and his mark. She sends the following list of Bible references on the subject, which will make an interesting Bible lesson for our readers: Dan. 7:7,8,24-27; 8:9-14; 11:21-45; 12:1; Isa.14: 12-14; Matt. 24:20-24; 2 Thess. 2:1-9; Rev. 13:1-18; 14:9-11; 15:2,3; 16:1,2,10,11; 19:20; 20:4.

From Heb. 1:14; Matt. 18:10; Psa. 91:11 it would seem that angelic care for the heirs of salvation begins in infancy and continues through life.

What doth it profit, my brethren, if a man is on the right road and headed the wrong way?

To live in the spirit is the right condition of man, and to live in the spirit is to live with God—hearing him, and knowing him, and loving him, and delighting to do his will.

Anger and malice have the same effect on the mental vision as the heat waves that rise from railroad ties in that the object you gaze upon becomes distorted and blameworthy.

REFLECTIONS ON THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Dear Brother Huggins:

In The Restitution of July 24 you have an article in which you claim this is the battle of Armageddon. Will you please explain the following Scriptures that seem to me to be contrary to that view: Zech. 14:2 says "all nations will gather together against Jerusalem to battle." 14 verse says Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem. Are they there now in a condition to do that? Does the 38 chapter of Ezekiel refer to the same time? I have always thought it did. The 8 verse says the powers spoken of in the first of the chapter shall come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been waste, but is brought out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them. The 10 verse says, an evil thought shall come into the mind of the party spoken of in the first of the chapter. "I will go up to the land of unwalled villages, I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell safely all of them dwelling without walls, having neither bars nor gates; to take a spoil, and to take a prey from the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the midst of the land."

Do those conditions exist now? I think not. In the 14 verse the prophet is instructed to prophesy against Gog when Israel is dwelling safely. Who is Gog, and who is Gomer? I have obtained the idea from reading that they are Russia and Germany and that they will be allied at the time of the great battle of Armageddon, and that Israel will be in the holy land with a considerable wealth. I believe they will be restored at the close of this war, as all nations have agreed to it, if what has been published in the papers is true. I look for the great battle to take place after that.

Submitted in love with a desire to know the truth.

H. B. Hathaway.

P. S. The saints will be taken before that battle takes place, for in the 5 verse of Zechariah 14 says they come with the Lord, and he comes when half of the city goes into captivity.

EDITOR'S REPLY

Brother Hathaway's objections have been made by many other readers. The force in the objections lies in the presumptions that Israel must be restored to a national existence prior to the Lord's coming, and that the battle of Armageddon takes place between these two events. Both these postulates are wrong as we shall now show.

The Restoration of Israel to National Existence Occurs After the Lord Comes

The testimony of the prophet Micah is explicit on this point. After the Lord comes and the "Lord's house" is built on Mount Zion, and when "many nations" repair to Jerusalem for instruction in the Lord's word, Israel's part in post-adventual things is revealed in the sixth and seventh verses in unmistakable chronological accuracy: "In that day, saith the Lord, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, her that I have afflicted; and I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever." "The day" when Israel shall be assembled and gathered and made a "strong nation," according to this prophecy, is after Christ comes and during his reign. Peter confirms Micah's prophecy by stating that at his second coming Christ will be a prophet like Moses, and shall restore Israel as Moses restored them. Moses was personally present with Israel in their exodus from Egypt, and in all their wilderness wanderings. Antitypically then, the times of refreshing and restitution are both "from the presence of the Lord." "He shall send Jesus Christ, is the plain affirmation. The restoration of Israel takes place after Christ comes, and not before, as many seem to think (Acts 3).

Armageddon is a War, Not a Battle

As we pointed out in our sermon in The Restitution of July 24th, to which Brother Hathaway refers, instead of "the battle of the great day of God Almighty" (Rev. 16:14), the Greek reads "the war of the great day of God Almighty;" and instead of "to gather them together to battle" (Rev. 20:8), the correct reading is "to gather them together to war." For authority for these amended readings see the Revised and Diaglott Versions. There is a most radical difference between a "battle" and a "war." The first is a single struggle, usually a decisive one like Waterloo; while the second is a series of struggles drawn out for a number of years like the Civil War. Armageddon is a war, not a battle. With these truths before the mind the objections stated are harmonized, and it is not necessary to review them seriatim.

It's no use inviting a man to rest on the gospel of peace if you hand it to him on the end of a pitchfork.

Remarks

During July we have put in a very busy month by beginning at Kennard where on the first day we spoke three times, and then on the second met at the lake north of Blair and helped Brother Krogh, father of Brother Harvey Krogh, Harold Mehrens, son of Brother George Mehrens, of Santa Rosa, N. M., and Albert Harper, son of Brother and Sister Frank Harper, formerly of Avery, put on Christ in baptism. On the Fourth instead of meeting with the world in their hilarious way of celebrating, the churches of Omaha, Avery, Blair, Kennard and Arlington met in a fine, grassy grove at Debolt Place, near Brother Sorensen's, where all partook of a bounteous dinner, after which we spoke on a theme of the gospel. A few outsiders by invitation met with us and were very much interested. Time will show the result.

At my daughter's home near this same place we met on the 8th, where Brother Hammond and the writer both addressed the brethren on live themes. Brother Nelson and family and Brother T. Crone and family showed the true kind of zeal by driving down after attending Sunday School in the forenoon at home (Kennard). On the 12th we met with the church at Avery, where we had a good meeting, as we always do with this faithful little band.

On the 15th we bade the brethren in the east part of the state good by, where we had labored all winter, not being able to get far away from home on account of sickness in the home. We arrived that evening in Palmer, where Brother Frank Forbes met us and conveyed us to his hospitable home, where Sister Forbes had a good supper in waiting. In the evening we began our meeting, and on Tuesday the 17th we went to the North Loop river and planted in the likeness of Christ's death, Frank and Fay Burke and Morris Zeller. These three young men now have a chance to make a good showing in the world, and we pointed out to them their splendid opportunity. On Thursday evening we met at Brother Zeller's, where Francis Zeller, Leta Lamberson, and Evelyn Burke took the sin covering name. We look for and expect these six young people to prove of great value to the church.

On Friday, after visiting the homes of all, we took our leave, and in the evening stepped off the train at Arapahoe where our eldest sister lives. After spending a pleasant night there they took us to Holbrook where Brother Wilson met us and conveyed us to his home. After supper we made our way to the school-house to begin our meeting, but a prospective rain kept the people away. After waiting a while and no one else came except Sister Meyerhoffer and family, we decided to return home; But Brother Wilson's car had just as firmly decided not to. Finally Mr. Meyerhoffer, by making a couple of trips, got us all home. But how patient Brother Wilson was. We decided that he possessed one of the greatest Christian virtues—patience.

Sunday they came from Holbrook, Freedom, Edison, and Havana, 15 miles or more away. All brought their dinners and stayed all day. In the forenoon and afternoon we spoke on "A Message to the Church." It was a meeting long to be remembered. In the evening we talked on the "Nature and Spirit." Wednesday we met at Brother Cathrop's and proceeded to the creek near his house, and there in the presence of a large gathering of brother and sisters we placed in the body of Christ Miss Ruth Hammond, daughter of Brother and Sister Calvin Hammond, Cecil Steadman, oldest daughter of Brother and Sister James Steadman, all of Freedom, and Wayne Wilson, oldest son of Brother and Sister A. B. Wilson, of the Plainview church, North West of Holbrook, and Andrew Story and Wife, son of Brother S. A. Story, of Holbrook. Now these are rejoicing in the thought of their safety. No difference what comes they are under the protection of a King that preserves and saves their lives instead of sending them to their death for a cause that can not and never will be realized by human rule. We see the flags flying from every church proclaiming church and state with a vengeance. Now is the time for the church to stand aloof and wave no banner but that of truth and shout for no king but Jesus, and be in no way connected with the governments of this world, and in no way hinder the finishing touches of the gospel. If we do God will hold us responsible.

On last Sunday, by earnest request, we stayed over and met with the brethren at Brother Gamble's near Cambridge. Brethren from Freedom, Plainview, Holbrook, Bartley and Indianola met to the great satisfaction of Brother and Sister Gamble. Sister Gamble has become so feeble she can no longer go any distance to meeting, so you may imagine her appreciation. We noticed the kindness of the sisters in the extreme heat, by fanning her. Sister Gamble, you will soon renew your strength. Be faithful, he is almost here, a few more days of suffering and then, O then the age where the inhabitants will not say, "I am sick!" but once more live in the glory and viger of youth. What sacrifice is too great to win the kingdom, and if we allow one act of selfishness to dominate our lives, we shall miss it. We must forgive, not compromise. God forgave me when I was a sinner, I must forgive my brother without provision or contingencies. If not, I am only seeking to ease my Adamic nature when I say I will settle on conditions. There is no reward for that, not even forgiveness. Forgiveness with conditions attached is contrary to all Bible precedent and is an abomination to the Lord, for it is only pretence and not forgiveness. I wonder how far we have gotten in Christian ethics? Our actions alone can tell.

We begin the month of August at Sister Rogers at Stratton, Colo. The Lord knows why we are here and whether he has any people or not. Let us be faithful, the day of the Lord hastens greatly. Let us all try to be of the number that will hear the "well done" to be said to the faithful.

INDIANA CONFERENCE REPORT

The annual conference of the churches of God in Indiana met at Roll, Aug. 9 to 12. The attendance from other places was unusually large this year: there were about seventy, and the majority of these were delegates. The membership of the church at Roll is rather small, so with this large crowd of visitors, their facilities for entertaining were taxed to the limit; but they managed well, and all were comfortably located and enjoyed thoroughly the stay there, the preaching services and all things pertaining to the occasion.

F. L. Austin, of Fonthill, was the principal speaker. His sermons were full of spiritual food and delivered in his usual pleasing and forceful manner. Brother VanVactor assisted in all services, but his preaching came before the conference, having held a meeting and Bible study a few days before. Among the visitors were a large number from Ohio, the Brush Creek church, also Earl Tabor, from Los Angeles, Cal. Brother Tabor conducted an interesting and profitable Bible lesson on Saturday morning.

The first business sessions were held on Friday and Saturday afternoons. The following is a brief outline of what was done at this time. There was the usual roll call of churches, reading of minutes, treasurer's financial report, the various church reports of their own year's work, minister's report, the appointment of committees, etc., after which the conference proceeded to business. The proposed new constitution was adopted by the conference, the delegates casting a unanimous vote in favor. Realizing the great need of more evangelistic work being done in Indiana, and in view of the fact that there are localities where churches might be organized and others re-organized, the conference discussed the advisability of employing an evangelist for the coming year. They also discussed ways and means for raising funds for the same. The motion was made and carried that our church budget be $1500 and that the Conference Board proceed to raise funds according to the constitution. The same officers were re-elected for the ensuing year. Adjournment.

At the close of this meeting, the Bereans had their annual business meeting, presided over by Emma Railsback.

After the Sunday morning service the congregation with filled baskets repaired to the country and, in a beautiful woods, ate their dinner. At three o'clock they went to a small body of water where Brother VanVactor led seven young men and women into the water and buried them in baptism—symbolizing Christ's burial and resurrection. May they continue faithful in this new life that they rose to walk in. We rejoiced to see these fine young people put on Christ and determine to live for him. Their names should appear here, but they were misplaced by the Secretary and cannot be found just now.

The committee on resolutions submitted the following:

Whereas we have been permitted to meet in another annual conference, it is with humility and grateful hearts we offer thanks to Almighty God for all his manifold blessings. Resolved that we tender our sympathy to the families that have been bereft of their loved ones during the past year, and we feel the church of God has suffered great loss, and their activities in the church will be sadly missed.

And let it be further resolved that we express our sincere appreciation for the kindness of the Roll church and thanks for their generous hospitality. Committee. Mrs. S. J. Whitten, J. J. Snodgrass.

Flora H. Prior, Sec.

Behold the Lord cometh, O may it be soon;
The world is corrupted and refuseth him room.
But we of the household who have tasted of grace
Will welcome his coming, as should the whole race.

PROVERBS 23:7

"As a man thinketh in his heart (or mind) so is he. Out of the abundance of the heart (or mind) the mouth speaketh."

You become like that which your mind feeds upon and causes Paul to say, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, think on these things." And to Timothy he says, "Follow righteousness, faith and charity, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart." The wise man says: "The heart of fools proclaim foolishness," and again, "When wisdom enters the heart, discretion shall preserve thee and understanding deliver thee from the way of evil."

Esdras tells us that when Adam was placed in the garden of Eden he was given the commandment to love God's way, and when he transgressed he was appointed unto death, and that Adams's descendants walked in their own will and despised God's commandments. Then Esdras says, "Ponder how great fruit of wickedness this evil seed hath brought forth" which was sown in the heart (or mind) of Adam. But Paul says to the Colossians: "You have put off this old man (Adam or flesh man) . . . . . and have put on the new, who is being moulded afresh after the image of him that created him . . . . . And as the elect of God put on charity which is the bond of perfectness, . . . and the peace of God which passes all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus."

Paul tells us in Hebrews the 3rd chapter, to "exhort one another daily lest some be hardened by the deceitfulness of sin." For we are being tested as Israel was in the desert, and if our hearts lack faith we shall fall short and not enter this rest as those who fell in the desert. Let us labor to enter that rest lest we fall after the same example of unbelief or disobedience, for the word of God is living and powerful, a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

A Lost Day

Lost, lost forever is the day,
Gone, gone the time past all returning,
When thou at sunset canst not say—
"I have learnt something worth the learning."

BOYS AND GIRLS

"And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof" (Zech. 8:5).

What city is the prophet Zechariah speaking of? Jerusalem. Whose children will play in the streets? The children of the people living there. Who are to live there? God's people. "I will save my people from the east country, and from the west country: and I will bring them; and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and righteousness." Who are these people? The Jews. "In those days it shall come to pass that ten men shall take hold of the skirt of a Jew, saying, We will go with you; for we have heard that God is with you (Zech. 8:23). There will be a time when the wicked people of this earth will cast lots for God's people and give a boy for an harlot, and a girl for wine that they may drink (Joel 3:3).

Will those who are raised at the resurrection have any boys or girls to play in the streets of Jerusalem? No. "The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage; but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels: and are the children of God, because they are the children of the resurrection (Matt. 22:30; Mark 12:25; Luke 20:34,35). Those women that are raised at the resurrection have passed beyond the curse that God pronounced upon the first woman: "I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception: in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children" (Gen. 3:16). So the ruling class in God's kingdom will have no increase—no boys, no girls to share their joys, as in this age. In that age they will have no sorrows. May the time soon come when the boys and girls of God's people may be found playing in the streets of Jerusalem.

Memory Verses: Micah 6:8: Titus 2:13,14

Golden Text: Proverbs 1:8

This page is for "us boys," but we want the girls to read it.

Little Boy

So all of your friends ran away little boy,
And went to the picnic without you,
So, left all alone and deprived of your joy,
The whole world seems tumbled about you.

I know it is hard to be left in the yard,
Deserted by friends and your brother,
But there, little lad, though I know you feel sad,
There's one who will comfort you --mother.

In the stern years ahead, little boy, little boy,
You will learn about friends and fair weather;
You will learn the sad truth ,that in age as in youth,
Good fortune and friends go together.

When you are a man with your battles to fight,
And sorrows's white head comes to sear you--
When friends slink away as they left you today,
God grant that your mother be near you,

How Do You Measure Up

A New York bank gave an examination to its youthful employees, in which the following question was asked:

What, in you opinion, are the ten most important qualifications to be possessed by boys working in a bank?

The best answer was as follows:

Knowledge and undersanding of one's self.
Ambition and ability to act.
Untiring energy.
Desire to learn.
Desire to overcome one's weak points.
Eye for the little things.
Not to be a bully or act smart.
To plan one's time.
To be pleasant and cheery.
To be mentally and physically alert.

A boy with all these traits would not only make good in a bank—he would be a success at anything. Just look over the list again and see how all-embracing these ten qualities are. They constitute perfection itself. See how many of them you possess. Have you a knowledge of yourself? Just think it over carefully. Have you ambition and ability to act? This is a very important quality. A boy or girl who has ambition possesses one of the prime necessaries to make him succeed. Now check off the other questions, and determine your rating for your own information.

An Appeal to Boys and Girls

Miss Ruth Humphreys, of Bear Garland County, Arkansas a 16 year old sister of the household of faith, is desirious of communicating with other readers of this page. Our advice is to write at once, for if you delay you may forget, and the loss will be yours, as sister Ruth writes a very fine letter.

Something Money Cannot Buy

Today we had a short conversation with Col. Greene, son of the late Hettie Greene, and as he left us we noticed he walked with a decided limp, not moving the knee joint of his left leg. The thought came to us, that with all his millions of dollars he cannot replace that which originally God gave him free of cost, a sound limb; so boys, you see that in some things you and I are better off than the wealthy Colonel.

Harm Done to Youth by Tobacco and Liquor

By Dr. William A. Brady

No youth under the age of 25 years has any excuse for indulging in stimulants or narcotics. Tobacco is a poison to the developing body and mind, and almost inseparable from lax morals in the immature. Parents who permit or acquiesce in the use of tobacco by growing boys do their youngsters great injustice. The narcotic action of tobacco in the formative years of life is a terribly dangerous thing to place within the reach of our young men.

Failure of eyesight (tobacco amblyopia), palpitation, acid dyspepsia and heartburn, angina pectoris, premature arteriosclerosis, chronic Bright's disease, inscmnia, chronic rhinitis ("catarrh") and chronic sore throat and chronic hacking cough are a few of the results of tobacco habit, and incurable unless the habit is broken off.

The per capita consumption of tobacco in America has steadily increased in recent years, along with the steady increase in the A-B-C of arterial degeneration—apoplexy, Bright's disease and cardiac (heart) failure. There is a reason.

In England the per capita consumption of tobacco is less than one-third of that in America, and there has been no marked increase in recent years. In England the A-B-C of arterial degeneration has shown no such steady increase as in America.

The indictment against the cigaret stands: It is a time waster. It betrays the morality of the younger generation. It weakens the faculty of concentration.

Friends

Oh, they are firmer friends by far,
Than any other creatures are!
How happy their two lives must be,
Blessed by such perfect sympathy!
Where is the pair so fond as they,
Together through the whole long day?
Indeed it's sure they'd spend the night
On the same pillow if they might,
(And, to be very frank with you
At times—and unbeknown—they do!)
Each lives but for the other's joy,
They are a puppy and a boy.

The L. H. J. for the current month says: "Twenty-five billions of cigarettes were smoked in the United States during 1916, seven billions more than in 1915. Putting our population at one hundred millions, and omitting women and children, this total means that every boy and man smoked 62½ boxes each of cigarettes during 1916. And yet how many thousands of us never smoked a cigarette so the actual total for each cigarette smoker must be nearly 100 boxes a year. And A. D. D. says he thinks the actual total for each cigaret smoker far exceeds 100 boxes a year for this would average but two boxes a week, and he knows boys who smoke four and five boxes a day. Just think of the great number of boys and men who, carrying the "fixings" with them, roll their own cigarettes. Boys, it is not manly to smoke. I consider myself a man, very much of a man, and I do not use tobacco in any form. I trust that in this you will follow my example.

See much—admire little.
Hear much—believe little.
Know much—say little.
Avoid much—fear little.
Labor much—use little.

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible:" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 6) CLEVELAND, O, SEPTEMBER 11, 1917 NUMBER 34

A SOLITARY WAY

There is a mystery in human hearts,
And though we be encircled by a host
Of those who love us well and are beloved,
To every one of us, from time to time,
There comes a sense of utter loneliness;
Our dearest friend is "stranger" to our joy
And cannot realize our bitterness.

There is not one who really understands,
Not one to enter into all I feel;
Such is the cry of each of us in turn.
We wander in a "solitary way,"
No matter what or where our lot may be;
Each heart, mysterious, even to itself.
Must live its inner life in solitude.

And would you know the reason why this is?
It is because the Lord desires our love,
In every heart he wishes to be first,
He therefore keeps the secret key himself,
To open all the chambers and to bless
With perfect sympathy and holy peace
Each solitary soul which comes to him.

So, when we feel this loneliness, it is
The voice of Jesus saying "Come to me;"
And every time we are "not understood"
It is a call to him to come again,
For Christ alone can satisfy the soul,
And those who walk with him from day to day
Can never have a solitary way.—Selected.

THE ANALOGY OF SIN AND SICKNESS

Chas. A. Goss

Many will hesitate to accept as a fact the statement that sickness and consequent suffering are as truly due to broken laws of health as that the consequences of sin are due to broken laws. In the one case we call it natural law and in the other spiritual or divine law.

Some will continue to quote the Apostolic word that "bodily exercise profiteth little" with much emphasis upon the last two words, whereas the writer of them only intended to imply a comparison with eternal things; the true meaning being that exercise profiteth for "a little time" as compared with exercise in godliness which promised the life which "is to come" (1 Tim. 4:8). Paul plainly exhorts Timothy to take care of his health (1 Tim. 5:23). And when the question arises, why did Jesus give so much prominence to the healing of the physical ills of the people? can we not recognize that the truth impresses upon our mind as a fact that the full realization of the gospel promises will mean that there would be neither sickness nor sin. Consider the picture of multiplied and hopeless invalidism and physical wrecks which met his eye and called and begged for his ever ready help. And in our own times what a vast burden of care and labor is imposed upon the families and friends where one of the circle even is afflicted as some of those were who called aloud to the Great Physician as he went over the hills and valleys of Galilee.

"In all too many homes the spirit of invalidism is a household goddess at whose shrine each member of the family does devotion," says Dr. R. S. Carroll, in an article in the Scientific Monthly.

"The productiveness of tens of thousands of American homes, the writer asserts, is being dissipated through the humoring of the self-centered, sympathy-craving, wilful and unnecessary invalids. Is not this the first time anyone has had the courage to criticise the professional 'shut-ins ?'

"The drain these exacting invalids make on the family purse is not their only sin. Their greatest crime is the slavery they impose on the daughters and sisters who carry the trays, fill the hot water bags, strain the orange juice, hunt up the drafts, administer the alcohol rubs, smooth the wrinkles out of the sheets, and so on every five minutes all day.

"And this 'economic and spiritual waste' persists in great measure because many doctors find these invalids a reliable source of revenue, at the cost of no anxiety to themselves. (Whereas he should make it his duty to tell the patient what he or she can do to help himself toward recovery and enforce his advice by constant precept.)

"The number of these wilful shut-ins would be reduced to the mimimum in a month if all physicians were honest and brave enough to speak the truth, as Dr. Carroll has done."

A strict and conscientious care of the health is particularly needed by women and young girls, as emphasized by a recent investigation by the Department of Labor among women regularly employed in retail stores in Boston which shows they lost, on an average, about six and a half weeks of working time during a year, which excludes time when they were absent with pay, on vacation or sick leave. This obviously makes a considerable hole in a meagre yearly income. More than two-fifths of this lost time was due to sickness—thirty per cent of it to sickness of the employee and ten per cent to sickness of some member of her family, which required her presence at home.

This would mean for all the women an average of nearly two weeks in a year of incapacity to work through bodily infirmity. The report says: "Whether the wage-earning woman's liability to fall ill is greater than the wage-earning man's remains to be determined." If it is not, the question of national health has not begun to receive the attention it deserves, for a general average of two weeks' incapacity a year would be an appalling toll to pay to unsound health.

Nearly half of the lost time was due to enforced lay-offs and to the intervals between losing one job and finding the next.

That there is a strong analogy between sickness and sin can scarcely be questioned. How often the Great Physician of the soul showed this in forgiveness of sins and healing diseases by the one operation. In such cases who can doubt that sickness and sin were synonomous terms and inseparable conditions. Sin is itself a form of spiritual sickness and to such no doubt the apostle Paul alluded in his letter to the Corinthian brethren who took of the bread and drank of the cup without self-examination, not discerning the Lord's body: "For this cause many are weak and sickly among you and many sleep."

Consider the picture of multiplied hopeless invalidism and vast burdens imposed thereby on friends and families contrasted with that presented in Isaiah 61:1-9; 65:17-25.

Jesus gave promise of the future fulfilment of these prophecies by reading from them in Luke 4:16-22, thus announcing his mission to preach the gospel and to heal and deliver. We shortly find him doing those things. Read Matt. 4:23-25

Following with the multitude come closer and hear the wonderful discourse on the mountain side—blessings on meek and merciful, pure in heart and peacemakers. Astonished at his doctrine were the Jewish Rabbis.

Now we come nearer, note the voice, with the expression and gesture of hands which betoken his complete absorbtion; beauty of features and nobility of expression challenge our closest attention, and as our eyes are riveted upon his face, we are deeply impressed with the amiable yet reverend aspect he wears.

Now he has descended from the mountain side. His face is shining with the deep and holy enthusiasm of his first great public discourse. No wonder the multitude was astonished, for he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

Let us read what took place from Matthew's account (chap. 8:1-4). A man that was a leper, outcast by the law of Moses and shut out from almost every association of family and friends. Nothing could increase his ostracism, and he was beyond human help. Did Jesus hesitate to touch him ? No; he is "the end of the law for righteousness," and its ceremonial uncleanness was nothing to him.

But how can we estimate the man's faith who, against all traditions of his people and his own experience asks to be made clean ? Did ever such a prayer as his go unanswered ? Have none of us a similar prayer to make for cleansing ? Matthew gives many similar scenes, but we cannot notice them all. One in the 9th chapter is, however, specially worthy of considering. It is another case where human help was impossible —"a hopeless case," we would call it; but not so the Great Physician. But what is the meaning of his words? Does Jesus expect this man to have faith before he was restored ? Yes, Jesus "saw his faith" and said, "Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee." Can we doubt that those words and Jesus' power, which belief of them inspired within the man, removed both the cause of his infirmity and its consequences; restoring him to both spiritual and physical health. "Be of good cheer." Of a truth he had double reason for cheerfulness.

Now let us look through another's eyes as we read Mark 5:25-28 and the context. It tells of another fearful and trembling one who reaches the Great Physician's side. Can you imagine the joy and gladness which filled that poor woman's heart as she went her way homeward healed and blessed ? These all had obeyed the prophet's injunction: "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near" (Isa. 55:6,7). "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts. Let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."

Just as with those poor and lame and halt and blind, and the palsied ones, and even the lepers—so it is with every one of the human race. Not one can deliver his brother or give to God a ransom for him. Their only hope is in God and he will abundantly pardon. Jesus possessing the spirit of the Father without measure did the works of which the spirit in David wrote in Psa. 145:9-19.

We have the germs and microbes and bacteria of sin as well as those of disease. In the physical life the best protection to health is that maintained in the body itself. The forces generated within our bodies, when living according to nature's laws, become a positive force against all kinds of evil influence that would cause disease. Disease germs, microbes or bacteria, with long and impressive names which frighten us, pass us by, or if by chance are admitted into the body, do not harm, but are cast out or changed in their passage by the normal secretions of a highly vitalized body.

They can generate no toxin (poison) within a body abounding with life and magnetism, and disease germs have to be retained and taken into the blood to do harm. Just so in the germs of sin, if in spiritual health sin finds no lodgment in our hearts. We are never hurt by a temptation if we do not give it a place to lodge and germinate and produce its poison. Such a condition of spiritual health is not attained through self-righteousness. The apostle tells the Romans that some go about to establish their own righteousness, not submitting themselves to the righteousness of God. "But now," says Paul, "the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; even the righteousness of God by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all them that believe; for there is no difference. For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God: being justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 3:21-24).

THE LIVING WORD, HOW IT GREW

No. VI-A

By S. Roxana Wince

We read the books of Jonah, Joel, Amos, Micah, Hosea and Isaiah and remember that all of these books were wholly in the possession of either Israel or Judah at the time of Hezekiah's death. You will understand the prophets much better and the study will be much more interesting if you connect their words with the history of the kings.

Jonah had prophesied against Nineveh when Joash, the son of Amaziah (862 B. C.), was reigning over Judah. Joel came next sixty-three years later. He is "the earliest of the prophets of Judah whose writings have come down to us." He describes in clear, graphic, and highly poetic style a plague of locusts and worms, such as the oldest men in the land had never seen. Neither had the like been in the days of their fathers nor would there be any after it to the years of many generations, with drouth, famine and pestilence combined; the wheat and the barley perished; the vine dried up; the trees withered; the seeds rotted under the clods; the herds and flocks were without water and without pasture; and fire swept over the great grazing places of the wilderness and destroyed the forests; even the meat offering and the drink offering being cut off from the house of the Lord. The lamenting priests lying all night in sackcloth shrieking aloud to God to "spare his people." And well they might for they had sinned by being, as well as the elders, the people's leaders in guilt. There had been bribery, corruption, relentless oppression of the poor, drunkenness, bacchanalian revelling. There must be fasting now, repentance, reformation.

A solemn assembly must be called; the elders and all the inhabitants of the land must gather into the house of the Lord and cry unto him as Joel himself is crying, "rending the heart and not the garment," that the Lord may return and repent and leave a blessing behind him. As he surely will when the great northern army is removed and his people know that he is in the midst of them and is the Lord their God and they are never more made ashamed.

This terrible locust judgment must have fallen on Judah in the days of Uzziah, though no mention is made of it in the story of his life, and only this in Amos: "And he said, The Lord will roar from Zion and utter his voice from Jerusalem, and the habitation of the shepherds shall mourn and the top of Carmel shall wither."

But are Joel's locusts and worms literal locusts and worms? Certainly, and the worms are only locusts in different stages of development. Stanley scouts the idea of a Chaldean army being referred to even in the second chapter, though Joel distinctly says, "A nation is come up upon my land, strong and without number, whose teeth are the teeth of a lion, ... He hath laid my vine waste and barked my fig tree; he hath made it clean bare and cast it away and made all its branches white." Babylon was the lion power.

Blowing the trumpet sounded the alarm for coming war. Men do not blow the trumpet because of an invasion of locusts, nor do locusts boast of having done great things as Sennacherib the king of Asyyria did when he declared to Hezekiah, that God was deceiving him when he said: "Jerusalem should not be delivered into the hands of the king of Assyria," nor do locusts mockingly ask, "Where is thy God ?"

But that northern army was not an army of locusts for the home of the locust is in the south and not in the north, nor does it seem to be the Assyrian host, for it refers to a time when Judah shall no more be made "a reproach among the heathen." Joel's prophecies stretch far beyond his own time past the fall of Jerusalem by the hand of the lion power of Babylon, past the time of the pouring out of the spirit upon all flesh, past the darkening of the sun and moon, past the bringing again of the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, past the gathering of all nations in the valley of Jehoshaphat and the pleading of the Lord with them for his heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations and from whom parted his land: a time when the Lord shall be the hope of his people and the strength of his people Israel, when Edom shall be desolate the blood of Judah be cleansed and the Lord dwell in Zion.

Stanley says the "memorable visitation of locusts" following a season of unusual drouth, "must have been not earlier than the time of Joash, nor later than the time of Uzziah." Jamieson, Faussett and Brown say: "Joel's predictions were probably delivered in the early days of Joash, B. C. 870-865, because no mention is made in them of the Babylonian, Assyrian, or even the Syrian invasion."

Amos, the herdman of Tekoah, comes next, B. C. 787. Tekoah is a small town six miles south east of Bethlehem; but although Amos belonged to Judah his prophecies were given to the people of the northern king and Uzziah was king of Judah two years before the earthquake mentioned in Zachariah 14:5.

He was not the Amos who was father of Isaiah and his predictions were directed not only against Damascus, Gaza, Ashdod, Ekron, and Askelon of the Philistines, who had carried God's people away captive to deliver them up to the Edomites; against Tyrus who had done the same thing, forgetting the brotherly covenant made between Hiram and Solomon; against Edom, "because he did pursue his brother with the sword and cast off all pity;" against Ammon for the cruelty; against Moab for burning the bones of the king of Edom; against Judah because they despised the law; and against Israel "because they sold the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of shoes." Amos asserted that the destiny of these peoples was either to perish or to go into captivity.

His fourth chapter describes a period of drouth in the land of Israel, much like that which must have preceded the coming of the locusts on the land of Judah. It may have been the same.

The thoughts of Amos, like those of Joel, are "long, long thoughts." He sees Israel destroyed from off the face of the earth and yet, hears the Lord saying that "he will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob," but that "he will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a seive, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth"—not a tribe lost, though the sinners of his people shall die by the sword.

Are they not "long, long thoughts," when they stretch from the days of Uzziah to the time just before us when the tabernacle of David that is fallen is to be raised up and Israel is to be planted by the Lord upon their own land, no more to be pulled up out of the land which he hath given them ?

They surely are. How wonderful to have such visions, and how we wish that we too might look as they did beyond the lifted curtain of the years. And do we not ? O living word, how bright and cheering thy beams in these days of gloom and of war !

ZION BUILT UP AND THE LORD IN HIS GLORY

Article 5

There is nothing so comforting to those who believe in the soon coming of the Lord as the one expressed in the above title to this article. But few of the inhabitants of this earth believe it. they are deceived by believing in the doctrine of going to heaven at death. The spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures have lead many good men and women into error. They teach that Zion means the church, and that the church will bring about the above conditions before the coming of Christ, whereas the Scriptures teach the opposite. Peter says that Jesus will be retained in heaven until the time of restitution of all things which God hath promised by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. Jesus promised his apostles that they should occupy thrones and rule over Israel when he came in his glory.

These Scriptures plainly teach that there is in the future a time of restoration in which those who are his will assist in that glorious work. In Isa. 32:1 we read: "Behold a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." Jer. 23:5 states, "a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth." The dark cloud that now hangs over this world must soon give way to "the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ."

We wish here to call attention to our preparatory text. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." It is evident from the above that a man must first do the Father's will before he can know the doctrine. This accounts for the difference of opinions and faith. False teachers teach false doctrines. Paul states that the time would come when men would not endure sound doctrine. This condition certainly exists today. Again, we read that the time would come when darkness would cover the world and gross darkness the people. From Psa. 102:13-17 we are permitted to glean the following blessed truth: "Thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion: for the time to favor her, yea, the set time is come. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones and favor the dust thereof. So the nations shall fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth thy glory, when the Lord shall build up Zion he shall appear in his glory."

This whole psalm is filled with the prophet's vision of conditions when the Lord shall come. The followers of Jesus have the future of the earth and her inhabitants firmly impressed upon the tablet of their memories. The prophet Isa. 60:1-6 gives us a foretaste of the beauties and blessings of the future when Jesus shall reign in Zion. He says: "Arise and shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. For behold, the darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people: but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee." In verses 21,22 of this chapter the prophet further says: "Thy people also shall be all righteous: they shall inherit the land forever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified. A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation. I the Lord will hasten it in his time." Again, this prophet in speaking of Zion says: "They shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations. Strangers shall stand and feed upon your flocks, and the sons of the alien shall be your plowmen and your vinedressers. But ye shall be named the priests of the Lord: men shall call you the ministers of our God: Ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves."

In Psa. 48:2 we have further proof, viz: "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King. God is known in her palaces for a refuge." No brighter picture could be painted with words than the above. Where God is known there is righteousness and joy and peace forever.

In Isa. 4:5 the prophet had the following vision regarding Zion and Jerusalem: "When the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion and shall have purged tuhe blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof, by the spirit of judgment and by the spirit of burning. Then will the Lord create upon every dwelling place of Mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night; for upon all the glory shall be a defence" (covering). Isa. 24:23 speaks of a time and a condition in the future: "Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously."

Proofs are so abundant that it requires care to select those more easily understood. Every Scripture is a plain "saith the Lord," and needs no interpretation. There are some texts that require careful study and in order to an understanding the student must study diligently. The parables belong to this class. In Ezek 37 the prophet speaks of a time when the two kingdoms, Judah and Israel, will be gathered from among the nations where they were dispersed and have been punished, and will be planted in their own land; and another has said that they shall never be plucked up. Again, we read that the Lord will create Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people a joy. Then will be the time that Zion will be built up and the kingdom set up. It is written of them that they shall build houses, and inhabit them; they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them. They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for trouble. The prophet gives the reason: "For they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord and their offspring with them." Think of the glory of Israel as pictured in the prophetic words, and then imagine if you can, the honors that will come to those who have assisted the Lord of hosts to bring about these results. The Armageddon battle will leave the land covered with destruction and filled with the slain. But in the end will the land be made glorious. Then will follow the judgment of the nations.

INCORRUPTIBLE THINGS

The Incorruptible Body

"God giveth it a body as it pleaseth him, and to each seed a body of its own" (1 Cor. 15:38).

"It is sown in corruption: it is raised in incorruption" (1 Cor. 15:42).

To every seed belongs a body. This is a matter of common observation. All life is mysterious and invisible, but all life tends to incarnate itself in a material body. You drop into the soil a seed and what comes up ? Not a seed, but a stalk which is the body of the life planted. You put into a nest an egg, and what comes out ? Not another egg, but a creature which incarnates the life that was in the egg. There may be in the universe of created things life which is not clothed with matter. If so we know nothing about it. We know life only as clothed. Each order of life has its own appropriate clothing or body. Life has boundless variations, but each has its own body.

There is one flesh of beasts, another of birds and another of fishes. The hare and the elephant, the wren and the eagle, have each bodies fitted to the peculiarities of their distinctive life. These bodies differ in form and qualities.

The incorruptible body of the resurrection has an organic connection with the seed sown in the soil. "That which thou sowest, thou sowest not the body that shall be, but a bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other kind; but God giveth it a body even as it pleased him, and to each seed a body of its own" (1 Cor. 15:37).

This similitude is easily understood. We are familiar wih the fact to which the apostle refers. We hold in hand a seed. As long as it remains there it is unchanged. Put it into the ground and a wonderful change takes place. A green growing shoot issues from the seed and develops in time into the full grown plant. The plant though very dissimilar to the bare grain, has a vital connection with it. It grows out of it, and is of the same order.

So in the resurrection. There is a vital relation between our present bodies and those of the resurrection. We have seen the coffin come from the dwelling. With tearful eyes we have followed it along the streets till the place of burial has been reached. Then we saw it lowered, and the earth filled in. What have we done ? This, we have planted another seed whose product will appear in the resurrection. We have sown the seed of immortality. The body buried is or contains the seed of the body which will rise to glory. The inert mass buried has a principle of vitality in it as certain as the acorn or the grain of wheat.

The seed determines the body. You do not expect the same plant from different seeds. The acorn always gives the oak. The flower seeds produce after their own kind. The seed determines the form, qualities and time existence. So the seed from God, the germ life, which God imparts to the believer. Our form in the resurrection will be human. We are not buried a human being destined to rise as angels. The seed of whatever form determines the body that shall be. The incorruptible seed in us is the life of the risen Christ. Therefore our body will be like his (Rom. 6:5; 8:29; 1 John 3:2).

In the person of Christ risen we see life and immortality exemplified. The whole nature is raised and glorified. "It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." Our present body is dominated by the soul. It is a soulical body we have. But the new body will be the organ of the spirit. A spiritual body is not a body composed of spirit. A wind-mill is not a mill of wind, but a mill driven by wind. A water wheel is not a wheel of water, but a wheel driven by water. Likewise a spiritual body is a real body controlled by spirit.

We receive this body through Jesus Christ. Through Adam we have this present body. Because of sin we have this present weakness and mortality. Through Jesus Christ comes a new life now, and a new body hereafter. We have from Adam what he was. His life and nature have become ours. What Christ is we are to have. He is the type to which we as believers are to be conformed. He was no phantom but a real being of flesh and bones (Luke 24:39).—F. S. Weston, in "World's Crisis."

Man's writings are most voluminous; not so with the inspired writers, who say much in little, and that little authoritatively and infallibly.

Verily, every man knoweth about the pebble in his own shoe.

Seeking no praise one is never offended.

EDITORIAL

In the make-up of The Restitution of Aug. 21, 1917, page 371, an article entitled "Barred" was injected into Brother Donaldson's page for which he is not responsible.

September the 2nd we enjoyed a visit from Brother and Sister Buckman and their son Carey, of Salem, O. These disciples are invaluable supporters of the truth and are important pillars in the church at Salem. Their visits are always refreshing.

On the evenings of Aug. 19th and 26th we gave two sermons in the Congregational Church in Unionville, O. Our subjects were prophecy and the European war. On one evening we were much gratified to have with us several brethren and sisters from Rochester, N. Y., and Brother and Sister Geo. B. Alldridge and daughter Sister Nellie; and Brother and Sister H. H. Hawkins, of Cleveland, O. Sister Hawkins ministered to the edification of all in beautiful song, and Brother Alldridge, always a beloved fellow-helper, gave a most inspiring exhortation.

When one has learned the alphabet, there is no limit to the amount of knowledge he may acquire.

THE LORD'S BANDS AND CORDS

Psalms 2:3

Man's heart is "desperately wicked" (Jer. 17:9). His carnal mind has been at enmity against God and his holy laws (Rom. 8:7) since our parent lusted and sinned in the garden of Elohim (Jas. 1:14). It expresses itself in all generations and in all ranks of the human family. The second psalm not only represents human hostility to God and his Anointed One, but also shows the extent of it when the writer speaks of the "heathen," "people" (verse 1), "kings" and "rulers." They say in verse 2, "We will not have this man to reign over us" (Luke 19:14). They may give a dozen reasons why they are hostile to Christ and righteousness: such as the incredibility of miracles, the faults of Christians, hypocrites in the church, etc., but the final reason of their opposition to Christ, and the secret cause of their rebellion against God, is found in those principles of truth, purity and love which are written in the Holy Scriptures. "Doctrines would be readily believed," says Horne, "if they involved in them no precepts; and the church may be tolerated by the world if she will not give up her discipline." To the penitent and cleansed heart God's laws of holy living are bright as the sun and soft as silk; but to the sordid minded sinner they are as the "bands" and "cords" which the yoked oxen, lank and tired with labor, are ready and eager to cast off. Hence they say, "Let us break their bands asunder, and cast their cords from us." In commenting on this text we may speak of the Lord's

1. Bands. It is profitable for us to notice that the resolution expressed in the words, "Let us break" is followed by unbreakable "bands." In other words, the sinner is represented as trying to break bands which cannot be broken. That this thought is there—the thought of trying to do an impossibility—is evident from the use of the word moser, which means a band or fetter. Thus in Job 39:5 moser is strong enough to hold a "wild ass." Moser was a band of such unusual strength, that the Lord who has Almighty power, was generally the one who is represented as breaking it (Psa. 107:14; Isa. 28:32; Jer. 2:20).

2. Cords. The same idea, the thought of extraordinary strength, is expressed by the word "cords," aboth, which Young defines as meaning "thick cords." These were the kind of "new cords" Samson was bound with (Judges 15:13). It was because the "spirit of the Lord came mightily upon him" (vs. 14) that he was able to break them. Because they were "thick" or very strong is why they were used in binding the sacrifice on the horns of the altar (Psa. 118:27).

Let us now drop the literal meaning of the bands and cords and catch the beautiful truths which they can teach us. What are the bands and cords of the Lord, which the sinner cannot break, but which he can reject? The Lord answers this question in Hos. 11:4: "I drew them with the cords of a man, with bands of love; and I was to them as they that take off the yoke on their jaws." Dear sinner friend, how can you have the heart to say to the Lord and his Christ, "Let us break their bands asunder, and cast their cords from us," when the Lord's cords are only the "cords of a man," and his bands, "bands of love?" Why are you unwilling to assume the responsibility and service of our loving Lord, when he assures you that he is as "they that take off the yoke?" "The wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt" (Isa. 57:20). Hear the loving entreaty and invitation of him who said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28). You may pretend that you are happy in the service of sin; but here we have authority from above to the effect that you cannot rest, and that you are weighted down with "labor" and burdens that are "heavy." Christ knows your condition, and as one ready to "take off the yoke" of sin that is so galling to you, says to "come" and share with him the "rest," the sweet rest of divine service. By "rest" we are not to understand a state of coma, or a condition of inactivity. "Take my yoke upon you," says Jesus, "my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." A yoke placed on the neck of oxen enables them to move together, to pull together; and with their strength thus united they are able to move huge burdens. So dear sinner, if you would quit saying to God and his Christ, "Let us break their bands asunder," and would joyfully take Christ's yoke upon you, you would link your weak self with the Omnipotent One; you would have Christ to help you pull through this world of burdens. Like a servant who works for wages, but who later wins the love of her master; he then lifts her up from the place of a servant to be his wife, and to share his fortune. The spirit of her service becomes changed. She continues to do the same duties of house-keeping, and has the same round of work. While a servant she called her work "drudgery;" but as his wife her work is now rendered from different motives, and she calls it "pleasure." The sense of duty is lost in the sense of love. The cold word "master" is transformed into the warm word "husband." And so it is with the sinner who welcomes the "bands," "cords," and "yoke" of his Lord. He is a servant and more; he is a son (Gal. 4:7), and a friend (John 15:15). "And it shall be said in that day, saith the Lord, that thou shalt call me Ishi (my husband), and shalt call me no more Baali (master, my lord)" (Hos. 2:16).

THE NATURE AND WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT OF GOD

Numbers 11:25

This verse requires separate comment apart from the preceding because, although it has reference to the same subject, details of importance are given which we do well to notice. The earlier verses (16,17) contain the promise, "I will," etc., here the actual accomplished facts are recorded, and what are they? That the Holy Spirit came down in the cloud and spake? No, emphatically no. A careful study and analysis can scarcely fail to convince that no personal spirit is here spoken of. The Lord came down in the cloud; the Lord did the speaking; and the Lord took of the spirit (a portion still remaining to Moses) and gave it to the seventy elders. There seems to be here some indication that the spirit of God was given in measure to each according to his willingness and capacity to use it. Verse 29 would seem to confirm this thought and to show God's willingness even in those days to bestow the spirit on those who sought to be filled by it. The wonderful significance of the prophecy in Joel, which we shall consider later, is not so much the pouring out of the spirit, as the fact that its bestowal would not be limited to a chosen few, but should be upon all flesh—the common people as well as the priesthood.

Number 24:2

Here we have another instance where the spirit is not designated by a capital letter. It is called the spirit of God, and it is said it "came upon" Balaam. Such phraseology has already been commented upon as being incompatible with personality.

Numbers 27:18

A very similar case to Gen. 41:38, to which passage reference is given—yet notice the contrasts. In the one case mention of the "spirit of God" is made by a heathen monarch whose knowledge of such a subject, it seems reasonable to suppose, would be extremely limited. In the verse we are now considering the Lord, the "God of knowledge" (1 Sam. 2:3), is the spokesman, and can we honestly say that the doctrine of one personality indwelling another is here set forth? Who would affirm so?

Judges 3:10; 6:4; 11:29; 13:25; 14:6,19; 15:14.

In each of these cases language is used completely unsuited to personality, but beautifully illustrative of what actually occurred. No amount of argument can gainsay the stubborn fact that it is altogether contrary to correct language to apply such terms as here used to personality. More important still, no parallel occurs in Scripture for such unnatural ideas. At the risk of repitition I would draw attention to the fact that in all these instances the Revisers have substituted a small "s" for a capital letter.

We have now covered an immense period, covering thousands of years, yet in all this time there is no tangible proof that the spirit of God is a separate personality from God himself.

1 Sam. 10:6-10

It is interesting to note that a complete change seems to take place at this juncture in the operations of the spirit of God. In the early history of the people of Israel God himself was their Leader. True, Moses was there, and we rightly give him high honor, but surely we cannot help recognizing that God never has since then, been in such close contact with his people. During the period of the Judges there was an undeniable "distance" between Jehovah and the nation on account of constant disobedience. Now, however, in their demand for a king God sanctions the proposal (although under solemn protest because of their rejection of him), and seems again to enter more closely into relationship with his people, in probable anticipation of the time when the Son of God shall be king in all the earth. Several points of interests are worthy of notice. The opening of the kingdom under Saul was to be under the seal of the spirit (1 Sam. 10:6), and Saul was to "be turned into another man." His old life was passed, and God was to be with him (1 Sam. 10:7). Matthew's gospel is frequently called the "Kingdom gospel" because it so largely treats of the kingdom and kingship of Jesus Christ. He also came under the special power of the spirit, and God was with him (Matt. 1:20-23). Thus Saul in becoming through the spirit both prophet and king is a wonderful type of the Lord Jesus.

1 Sam. 11:6

The Revised Version adds that the spirit of God came "mightily" upon Saul. Here we see plainly that the spirit was not always accompanied by the same measure of power.

1 Sam. 16:13,14

These verses are of particular importance and interest. Read according to the common interpretation they are made to convey the terrible doctrine that a righteous God in anger withdraws his Holy Spirit, and actually sends an evil spirit to terrify (see margin) Saul. The orthodox believer may think so but few will have the boldness to affirm it. Chapter 18:12 explains the Lord had departed from Saul and was with David.

2 Sam. 23:2

But one instance is found in 2nd Samuel, and how harmonious with all the preceding, in manifesting the nature and work of the spirit. We instinctively call to mind the following passages: Deut. 17:18-20; Josh. 1:8,9; Col. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:21.

Errata

Brother Judd sends the following corrections to his article in the issue of July 17th.

1st. Near bottom of first page should read, "Father and Son are specifically stated."

2nd. Page 314, under Gen. 41:38 should read, "Is such treatment consistent."

3rd. Under Exod. 31:3 should read, "performance of daily duties," and "his" instead of "its."

"You can't defeat a man who is never discouraged," said Moupin.

Remember Zedekiah was taken and placed on trial as a traitor to the king who had placed him upon the throne.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PUNCTUATION MARKS

Philosophers and sages of all ages have emphasized the importance of little things. It is true that many little things are exceedingly important; this is true in the case of punctuation marks which are about the smallest things that enter into practical life. For example, the insertion of a comma at the wrong place or its omision may change the meaning of a sentence entirely; such mistakes have been known to virtually nullify laws and to result in the loss of large sums of money in business transactions, as well as to cause misunderstandings that had serious consequences.

It is related that a husband and wife once had a quarrel and the former sought the advice from a lawyer. The lawyer advised that the husband should make overtures to his spouse and suggested that he send her this message: "May heaven cherish and keep you, from your affectionate John." John wrote it out on a picture postcard but for some reason neglected to insert the comma and his message read: "May heaven cherish and keep you from your affectionate husband John." The disastrous results can well be imagined.

The story is told that Clement who ruled over a priory some time before the reformation had this motto placed above the door of the house:

> "Be open evermore, O thou my door,
> To none be shut, to honest or to poor."

People interpreted this just as it read; many visitors came from far and near to enjoy the hospitality of the religious house and all were welcomed by the prior. At length Clement died and was succeeded by a man as stingy and niggardly as Clement had been generous and lavish. He could not tolerate the motto with its friendly invitation, nor could he bear to think of spending money to have another made. Finally, after some thought, he altered the meaning to suit himself by the simple changing of a comma. This is the way the couplet read after he had finished with it:

> "Be open evermore, O thou door,
> To none, be shut to honest or to poor."

The toast which is said to have been given at a dinner in New York, "Woman—without her, man is a brute." and which was reported in a newspaper, "Woman without her man is a brute," is well known.

A newspaper advertisement read: "Wanted by a respectable woman. Passage to Europe; willing to look after children and a good sailor." About as bad is the following sentence from a popular novel: "On a sofa, stretched out like a lay figure, Lady Castlemere reclined, with a faded Indian shawl thrown over her lower limbs, which had been the gift of the queen on her wedding day." Proper punctuation would help in both these instances but greater clearness and conciseness would be obtained by a rearrangement of words and phrases.

Carelessness in printing made a reporter's account of the arrival of a famous statesman at an important meeting where he was to speak read as follows: "At this moment Senator Blank entered on his head, a brand new silk hat on his feet, a pair of shining patent-leather shoes on his features, a calm, contented smile."

A message, "Don't come too late," was utterly changed in meaning by the inadvertent insertion of a comma which made it read: "Don't come, too late." A similar mistake was made with a telegram sent in answer to an inquiry from a New York picture dealer whether he should pay $1.250 for a picture for one of his customers. The customer's telegraphed reply was: "No; price too much," but as delivered to the dealer it read: "No price too much;" he went ahead and bought the picture. Then of course there was trouble.

While great care should always be exercised in writing, to see that the proper punctuation marks are used and that they are inserted where they belong, it is usually quite as important to observe them carefully in reading. This is illustrated by the story of a minister who was given the following notice to read before his congregation: "A sailor going to sea, his wife desires the prayers of the congregation." Being somewhat nervous and confused, or perhaps a little careless, the preacher startled everyone by announcing: "A sailor going to see his wife, desires the prayers of the congregation."

HOW WE CAN DO THE IMPOSSIBLE

One of the axioms that are not true is "No one can perform the impossible." We can tell just what strain an iron bar will stand, and we can gauge precisely the force of steam; but when we come to the human being we find a paradox—a creature that does the impossible.

A tender woman, if she be gripped by some strong emotion, fright or eagerness to save her child, may suddenly become strong as a giant. When Stephenson proposed to run a steam car at forty miles an hour the world proved it could not be done; no one could live going so fast through the air. Yet he did the "impossible"! Fifty years ago it was impossible for a man to talk in Chicago and have his ordinary voice heard in New York: that is now done every day.

As a matter of fact, the art of success is—doing the impossible. There are always plenty of people to do the possible. You can hire them for three dollars a week or even for their board. The man in demand, either in the world of commerce or in the world of thought, is the man who does what cannot be done.

No man gets the ability to do an impossibility before he does it; the power comes with the effort. It is because of this law that moral obligations are binding.

The Bible is full of commands, the doing of which is beyond us. Who can keep the Ten Commandments or the precepts of Jesus? Only those can perform these duties who perform them. Power settles on us as we try. Jesus told the palsied man to stretch out his arm. He could not; but he did; power entered as he acted. The multitude was fed on a few loaves and fishes; enough provision was not made beforehand, but the supply was increased as it was given.

"Responsibility," said Horace Bushnell, "is not measured by ability." The half of strength is faith.

INNOCENT ENJOYMENT

In answer to a question in reference to innocent enjoyment we hunted up a short article published by Brother T. C. Newman in the "Millennial Harbinger" over thirty years ago, and written by Dr. H. More, because we thought it was better than anything we could write. It is as follows:

"If any of our pleasures are such that the thought of our holy elder Brother in heaven cannot mingle with them we may be sure they are wrong. If they are guiltless his presence would only deepen and brighten them. If they are foolish, or hurtful, or cruel, they will cower before his pure eyes. Perhaps there is no better test of their innocence than this: Would I like to see Jesus here and now? We must not imagine that he would be displeased to find us in any other than a solemn or grave mood. It would not displease him to find us in a cheerful, happy frame of mind. There are subjects calculated to make us joyful in which he would participate. He would rejoice in our joy so long as it was pure. So, then, if it seems incongruous to ask him to go with us to any place of amusement, we may be assured it is no place for us. If there is anything in our merriment which would offend his ear, then it is not fit for us. Let him be blended with all our thoughts—let him be the confident of all our feelings—let us rely upon his hearty sympathy in every phase of experience."

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

BAPTISMAL SERVICE

At the close of our meeting in the morning, at Hillsburg, Aug. 19, 1917, Minta Marie Plummer and Orpha Blanche Spurgeon applied for baptism. We went to the water in the afternoon and inducted the two sisters into the body of Christ by baptism. By this act they symbolized their faith in the central truth of the gospel, the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, and at the same time professed to be dead indeed to sin, and were buried because dead, and rose in the likeness of Christ's resurrection to walk in newness of life. At the evening service they were received into the church and given the right hand of fellowship. May they be blest by the goodwill and help of the church in their young lives. May the watchful care of our heavenly Father accompany them, and the spirit of love, as it is in Christ, be manifested by them, and toward them, until they come into the fulness of the spiritual life by a resurrection from the dead at the coming of the Savior, is our prayer.

HELPS
TO
THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE

My Bible and I

We've traveled together, my Bible and I;
Thro' all kinds of weather, with smile or with sigh!
In sorrow or sunshine, in tempest or calm;
Thy friendship unchanging, my lamp and my psalm.

We've traveled together, my Bible and I;
When life had grown weary, and death e'en was nigh!
But all through the darkness of mist or of wrong
I found thee a solace, a prayer, or a song.

So now who shall part us, my Bible and I?
Shall "isms," or schisms, or "new lights" who try?
Shall shadow for substance, or stone for good bread,
Supplant thy sound wisdom, give folly instead?

Ah! no, my dear Bible, exponent of light!
Thou sword of the spirit, put error to flight;
And still thro' life's journey, until my last sigh,
We'll travel together, my Bible and I.

My son forget not my law; but let thine heart keep my commandments, for length of days, and long life and peace, shall they add to thee.

Let not mercy and truth forsake thee, bind them about thy neck; write them upon the table of thine heart:

So shalt thou find favor and good understanding in the sight of God and man.

Thoughts on the Bible

Psalm 119:105

Study it through—it is a good thing to know.
Think it over—and it in your memory stow.
Write it down—so forget it you will not.
Pray it in—and have it firm as a rock.
Live it out—as a candle it's light.
Pass it on—and so make the world bright.

Our Illustration

If you open your Bible so as to show the same page we have in the picture of the Bible in the adjoining column, you will have before you the 22nd or last chapter of Revelation. It is a blessed chapter, as are all chapters, and I am going to ask you to do me a favor. Will you please get your Bible and with me, in a calm, meditative manner read this chapter, especially noticing the 17th verse? If you desire to be a son or daughter of the ever living God the invitation is to you. Then go back and re-read the opening verses and see what you are invited to. Once more read verses 12-14 and remember it is Jesus, our beloved friend, who is now talking, and he says that he is soon coming, and when he comes he is going to pay us for the work we have done in his name to the glory of God the Father. If you turn to Romans 2nd chapter and read the first eleven verses you might understand it better. Now go back again to Rev. 22; I know you are one with me in my desire to see the fulfilment of verse 20: that is the Christian's hope, the second coming of Christ and the things that will be accomplished thereby, and

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all, Amen and Amen.

Christ's self-sacrifice for the race, is the mystery of divine grace and love:—The hope of sin-sick humanity; the assurance of salvation to believing, confessing sinners.

The tragedy of Christ's surrender to the Jewish council; his submission to the taunts, insults and rejection, by them, in the judgment hall, when Pilate desired to release him; Pilate's sentence to crucify him when he had repeatedly declared him innocent, surpass human comprehension. It is the tragedy of the ages.

But the blasphemous assault on him by the priests, scribes, and elders of the people while suffering for them on the cross, outrages human decency, and reveals indescribable moral degeneracy.

But remember, dear reader, Christ suffered all this for you and me, that we should not be eternally lost. Then think of his marvelous prayer for his revilers: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

How are we to approach such blessed strength? First of all, through a steadfast will to refuse nothing that God requires of us, and to do nothing deliberately which can displease him. Next, we must learn to take our faults humbly as proofs of our weakness, and use them to increase our trust in God and our mistrust of self. Neither must we be discouraged at our own wretchedness or give way to the thought that we cannot do or bear any special thing; our duty is, while confessing that of ourselves it is impossible, to remember that God is all-powerful and that through him we can do whatever he may require of us. We must learn to say with Augustine, "Give me what thou commandest, and command what thou wilt."—

"Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy that it cannot hear"

A [illegible]ht From Over The Sea

Despite the action of the "lewd" Jews, we have reason to be thankful that Paul visited Thessalonica. Paul's first letter to the Thessalonians was perhaps the first letter he wrote to any Christian church. It was the beginning of a new activity. It was a form of activity which suited the temperament of the apostle, and in his letters to the various churches we have noteworthy and cherished contributions to the Book which is the greatest of all books. Where is the disciple of the Lord today who is not thankful that the beloved and gifted Apostle of the Gentiles gave ear to he appeal, "Come over to Macedonia and help us?"

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

ONE GOD

By Lady Blount.—Written last year

"Holding fast the faithful word" (Titus 1:9).

One God there is, and "One" alone!
God's Son himself revealed:
But this great Truth, the Christ hath shown,
Lies hid in satan's field!

The priests of old through satan's arts
Forgot God's Holy Word (John 14:28; 1 Cor. 15: 24-28),
And taught that of three equal parts,
Jehovah was one third!

But God is not a third of one,
Nor is our blessed Lord:
Through him the Holy Spirit doth come,
Which emanates from God.

Our Savior's and God's unity (i. e. harmony or oneness),
Is in the Scriptures stated,
But Unity and "Trinity"
Are in no way related!

The nature and affinity
Of "Pagan doctrines"—All
Such as "The Blessed Trinity,"
Were fashioned for man's fall!

But the One God will set us free
If we obey his word,
And seek for immortality
Through his dear Son, our "Lord."

A Prayer

O help us God to hear thy voice,
And see thee with faith's eye,
Through Jesus Christ make us rejoice,
And feel that thou art nigh.

This common and supposedly "orthodox" expression, "The blessed Trinity," is not found in the Bible, and ought not to be required as an article of faith. Every Bible truth can be (and should be) stated in Bible language. How true it is that the Reformation left much pagan teaching (which had been foisted on the Church by Romish time-servers) still unreformed.

It is probobly to this pagan view of God, handed on to us by tradition, that we owe the evils of Mohammedanism, Unitarianism and Swedenborgianism, as a protest against the false doctrine which perverted reason and revelation. The evils flowing from these systems, and more especially the first (the greatest religious hindrance to the spread of the gospel in modern times), must be attributed to the "woman" (Rome) mixing with the pure "meal" of revealed truth, the "leaven" of Paganism.

"Trinity Sunday" (so called) dates only from Pope Gregory, 828 A. D. Like the term itself, it was unknown in the early church. Whatever strength Islam has had and still has is due to its Bible teaching of the entire supremacy and oneness of the Lord God Jehovah, taught by his ever-blessed Son, "for my Father is greater than I."

Dr. Edward Haughton has well shown how the word "Lord" is erroneously substituted for the word "Jehovah." This, he says, is even done when it makes two Lords in the same verse. And that in both of our versions the definite article "the" is frequently omitted where it should be translated, and put in where it is not in the original. And, furthermore, the prepositions "at" and "from," and other words, are used in a confused sense to support various man-made doctrines: of which "three co-equal persons in one God" is a fair specimen (John 14:28; 10.29).

The "Rosary," so common in Romish circles, has its counterpart in Mohammedanism, used for the same purpose of counting prayers. Its invention is ascribed to the monk named St. Dominic de Guzman, in 1200 A. D.

The co-equality of our Lord Jesus Christ with God the Father, and with God's Holy Spirit which emanates from God himself (who is the one supreme Deity), is a man-made doctrine, probably introduced by men who divided themselves from the Apostles. Anyway Bible students must claim for themselves liberty of action, and must at all costs follow the Word, however contrary to tradition.—"The Faith."

BELSHAZZAR'S DREAM

In the Central Presbyterian Church, Marcy and Jefferson avenues, of which the Rev. Dr. John F. Carson, president of the Stony Brook Assembly; the Rev. Dr. McMillin, pastor of the Lafayette Park Presbyterian Church, St. Louis., who has given lectures during the Prophetic Conference, preached on "Belshazzar's Dream." The text was from Daniel 5. Dr. McMillin said:

The incident which we have before us is one of the most familiar and thrilling of all the stories in Scripture. The scene is in a king's palace. When the curtain rises, we see before us a banquet hall. Seated at the table are a thousand lords of the Babylonish empire. Some have thought that they were the chief magistrates of the different provinces into which the kingdom was divided. Others have thought that they were the commanders of the army which have been brought together by the king in a council of war. However, there were a thousand lords seated at the banquet table. At the head of the table sat one of the most insignificant and incompetent kings that ever graced a throne, Belshazzar. He was the nephew of one of the greatest monarchs that ever lived. The time of this incident was one of the most perilous of Babylon's history, for surrounding the city was the tremendous army of the Medo-Persian empire, which was commanded by Darius. For two years they had beseiged the city of Babylon, but Belshazzar and his subjects were laughing him to scorn, for they boasted that they had sufficient food to enable them to withstand the seige for ten years. So they had a banquet, they drank wine and worshipped gods of gold and silver and brass and iron and wood and stone, and mirth was flowing as freely as the wine. One thing which characterized that banquet, which made it unique in Oriental history, was the fact that, seated at the head of the table, drinking wine before the thousand lords, was Belshazzar himself. It was not usual for ancient kings to appear before their subjects.

When the wine was flowing most freely, and laughter was ringing most heartily throughout the hall, suddenly, silently, there appeared on the plaster of the wall, over against the candlestick, fingers of a man's hand. The king seems to have been the only one who saw it at first. With wineglass uplifted, and with a drunken laugh upon his lips, his eyes became suddenly riveted. One by one the guests saw that their monarch was looking at something that apparently formed no part of the occasion. Their own eyes were tnrned to the wall, until that whole banquet assembly had ceased their drinking and their laughter and were gazing on the fingers that had appeared.

The words which were written were in perfectly good Chaldean, yet Belshazzar could not read them. He called for his soothsayers and astrologers. They could not read them. What was to be done? All felt that the writing must be interpreted. Suddenly the door opened and there appeared in that hall an aged woman, the Queen-mother, the wife of the great Nebuchadnezzar. She either had no sympathy with the occasion or had been purposely uninvited, but now she comes and she addresses Belshazzar. She informs him that there was a man in the kingdom in whom was the spirit of the holy God, who had interpreted strange things before, who had been of great consequence of former days, a man who was now out of favor at court—Daniel by name. She suggested that he be brought and that he be asked to interpret the writing on the wall. Then was Daniel brought and as he enters that banquet hall we behold an old man. His hair is white, his brow is kingly. He seems to have been in the presence of kings before, and so he has, for in the days of Nebuchadnezzar he was one of the great men at court. He had been at banquets when these lords were babies, banquets far grander than this, for Nebuchadnezzar was the host. As he approached the King, Belshazzar turned his face toward him and said, with all the insolence of which his shrivelled soul was capable: "Art thou that Daniel which art of the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the King my father, brought out of Jewry?" Then, pointing to the handwriting on the wall, he promised him a great present if he would interpret it. A golden chain should be put around his neck, scarlet should be put upon his back, and he should be the third ruler in the kingdom. Then Daniel answered—and O the glorious abandon of his words!—"Let thy gifts be to thyself and give thy rewards to another." And then he read the writing. "Mene, mene, tekel upharsin." How easily he read it! But it was the writing of his God, and he understood God's language. Then he interpreted it. "Mene, God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it; tekel, thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting; Peres, thy kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians." Why could not Belshazzar interpret this? Matthew Henry tells us that the words which were used were to be found both in the Chaldean and Hebrew languages. The word "mene" was both a Chaldean and Hebrew word, and so were the other words used. The Chaldean meaning for the word "mene" is "numbered." Its Hebrew meaning is "finished." So he read the meaning of the word like this: "numbered and finished." The Chaldean word "tekel" is "weighed." Its Hebrew meaning is "wanting." So he read the meaning of the word "tekel"—"weighed and wanting." The word "Peres" in Chaldean means "divided," but it is the Hebrew word for "Persians." So its meaning was simple—"divided, and given to the Medes and Persians."

Then commanded Belshazzar, and they clothed Daniel with scarlet and put a chain of gold upon his neck and made him the third ruler in the kingdom.

This is the story, and there are some features connected with it which make it most remarkably appropriate for us to consider in reference to the times in which we live. In the first place we are told it was a time of feasting, merrymaking. When in all the history of the world, has there been a time when men and women have been so insanely bent on pleasures as today? In the second place, there was a spirit of democracy apparent, which was unheard of before. An Oriental monarch had broken the barriers of aristocracy and dined with his subjects. And the most casual observer is certainly aware that today class distinctions are being done away with as never before. In the third place, they worshipped gods of gold and silver, of brass and iron, of wood and stone. Gold and silver, that is money; brass and iron, that is munitions; wood and stone, that is magnificent architecture. Those are the gods which the world is worshipping today, money, munitions and magnificence. In the fourth place it was a time of unprecedent military prowess. I have said that outside the walls of Babylon the Persian army was beseiging the city. Today is a time of unprecedent military prowess. Never before in the history of the world have the armies of the nations been so numerous or so tremendously wrought up as now. In the fifth place, the military tactics which were used on that occasion were absolutely unheard of in any previous war, for they tell us that the River Euphrates which ran through the city of Babylon, and, consequently under the wall of the city, was deflected from its course by the engineers of the army. So that Darius and his troops, marching under the wall of the city through the empty bed of the river, could take the city without a struggle. Today, in this present war, the tactics which are used are entirely without precedent. The airplanes, the gases, the submarines have never been used until now. So that some military writer has said that any book written on military subjects prior to the year 1914 is obselete. Lastly, let me say that, in spite of the terrible danger that was imminent, the Babylonish lords were light-hearted and gay. And so it is today, in spite of the unusual, unprecedented events which are transpiring around us, the multidude of men upon the earth are making merry. And yet we are told that on that night the city of Babylon fell. And so it may be that during this night of spiritual darkness we are on the eve of a great dispensational change.

I have also said that at that time God gave a message, and there was none to interpret it but Daniel, though it was plainly written on the plaster where all might see it by the candlestick, where a flood of light might be thrown upon it. And so it is today: God has spoken to us in his Word, and though all the soothsayers and astrologers and Chaldeans, I mean the philosophers, higher critics and skeptics, may be unable to read the writing that is written, there is a Daniel, I mean a Church, in whom is the spirit of the holy God, in whom the Holy Spirit himself is pleased to dwell, who can read what is written and who can interpret the writing of its God. And the meaning of the writing is this: "The night is far spent, the day is at hand."

There are three remarks which should be made on the subject of the handwriting itself: First, the handwriting on the wall is not a warning; it is a doom. It is a mistake to think that Belshazzar was warned by that writing. You will notice it is all in the past tense, "God hath numbered; thou art weighed; thy kingdom is divided." So we have not had the handwriting of doom yet, but the banquet of sin and revelry is on, and the armies of the world are gathered together. And who can tell when the handwriting of doom may appear? Secondly, this handwriting can only be interpreted by a spirit-filled man, and thirdly, the doom was followed by the speedy execution of God's judgment, for we are told, in awful solemnity, "In that night." That night,that very night, was Belshazzar slain. It is said that the mills of the gods grind slowly, but those are heathen gods. The judgments of our God are swift and powerful, and may be instantly expected. Therefore, let us turn from the vain delusions of the world while we are having the day of grace, that we may not be compelled to face the great and terrible God in his day of wrath.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S IMAGE

Dan. 2:28-45

Is a chart of time. Five distinct periods are traced upon it. These periods span the history of four universal kingdoms, viz.: Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia, Rome, and of Rome divided, and utterly annihilated by the kingdom which the God of heaven shall set up.

1. The head of gold represents Babylon.
2. The breast and arms of silver represent Medo-Persia.
3. The belly and sides of brass represent Grecia.
4. The legs of iron represent Rome.
5. The feet and toes represent Rome divided (vs. 41).

This same history in advance is outlined in the 7th chapter of Daniel by four beasts; each beast responding to the ten toes of the image And the ed by sections of the image; and the divided state of the fourth is represented by ten horns, correspnding to the tne toes of the image. And the spirit's word for it, "the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise" (Dan. 7:24). This is infallible proof that the ten toes in Dan. 2:41,42, represent kings, and in the nature of things imply kingdoms. In the divided state of Rome, then, there was but one of fierce countenance (Dan 8:23). This weakened it, because the toe kingdoms were partly iron and partly clay, and these substances cannot be welded together (Dan. 2:42,43). We now proceed with the chart.

6. "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kigndom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people (as were those kingdoms preceding it), but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms and it shall stand forever."

"It shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms." All what kingdoms? Does it refer to Babylon, that was broken to pieces and consumed by the Medes and Persians? Does it refer to Medo-Persia, that was broken to pieces and consumed by Grecia? Does it refer to Grecia, that was broken to pieces and consumed by Rome? Or does it refer to the fourth kingdom with all the toe, or horn kingdoms developed upon its territory? It seems to me that this question might be safely left to the common sense of the Scripture in hand, so plain is it. But the spirit has left no room for guess work. John saw this fourth beast kingdom, and its ten horns, and the angel explained to him that the ten horns "are ten kings"; and adds: "These have one mind (at the time of the end) and shall give their power and strength unto the beast; these make war with the lamb, and the lamb shall overcome them," as Daniel had predicted.

History is outlined by the image no further. The grand purpose of the image has been served: it was to reveal the establishment of God's kingdom "in the latter days" (Dan. 2:28); and this event is to put an everlasting end to the kingdoms of men.

Believers of God's truth in every age since Daniel could tell their whereabouts in the world's history by means of this image; but to none could it be more intensely interesting as to the believers of the present day. We are certainly living "in the days of these kings," when the next great event will be the setting up of God's kingdom, for which they have so long prayed "thy kingdom come."

Reader, should you ever be told that the kingdom of God was set up at the first Pentecost after the crucifixion of the Lord Jesus, your answer should be impossible;

1st.—Because the stone is to smite the image upon the feet of iron and clay (vs. 34). The image had no feet at the Pentecost referred to, therefore they could not have been smitten.

2nd.—Because if the image had been smitten at Pentecost, it never could have had any feet.

3rd.—Because it now has feet that have not been smitten by the stone; and no kingdom of God could fail to do what he promised it should do.

4th.—Because the one anointed to be king of God's kingdom is gone to a far country to receive a kingdom and to return (Luke 19:12). He returns when he has received the kingdom.

5th.—Because the saints, the members of Christ's body ('1 Cor. 12:27) are joint heirs with Christ (Rom. 8:17) and will reign with him (2 Tim. 2:12) on the earth (Rev. 5:10), and take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even for ever and ever (Dan. 7:18), and are installed in this great authority and power by Jesus when he comes with the clouds of heaven (Dan. 7:13), and all the holy angels with him, and sits upon the throne of his glory (Matt. 25:31). He will confer upon his resurrected, glorified and crowned saints the honor of smiting the image upon its feet, for the spirit in David has said: "To execute vengeance upon the heathen and punishment upon the people, to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron. To execute upon them the judgment written (in Dan. 2:34,35); this honor have all the saints. Praise ye the Lord" (Psa. 149). None of these events have yet transpired.

6th.—Because such an idea compels the wilful disregard of one division of the image, the feet and toes, or a wilful transposition of the order of events as arranged by the spirit in Daniel. In fact it makes verses 41,42, and 43 entirely superfluous, which alone stamps the doctrine of the Pentecost kingdom as man-made.

REJOICE YE

Revelation 4

"After this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven."

A writer has aptly and ably said: "Prophecy takes a step and ages have elapsed. Like a gigantic Colossus it bestrides the stream of life, planting its feet on epochs and crises separated by centuries from each other, while the sea of ages flows noiselessly and unnoticed by. Renewing its lamp in the days of the apocalyptic seer, it flings its light far forward with concentrated brilliancy upon the closing scenes of the present dispensation, only here and there revealing by its oblique rays a few of the more prominent objects in the intervening space. Enough, indeed is revealed to show us the magnitude of the field that has been traversed, while the frowning headlands before us warn us how near we are to that stormy sea of divine judgment, which when it rises in its fury, will sweep away all existing landmarks and bear us onward to that new heaven and that new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

John was carried forward in spirit to the Lord's day. His attention is turned to the future. "I will show thee things which must be hereafter." John is immediately in spirit, and sees a picture in symbol of that new heaven. The second and third verses read: "And behold a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne, and he that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone; and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald." The throne that he sees (in symbol) will not be established in heaven, but on the earth, divinely appointed. There is no personal likeness or resemblance of Christ seen upon the throne but one like unto jasper and a sardine stone. These were the first and the last stones in the breastplate of the high priest (Exodus 28). The one that sat upon the throne is the Alpha and Omega the beginning and the end, the first and the last (Rev. 22:13). This picture (in symbol) is the setting up of the kingdom of God by Christ and his saints on the earth. The rainbow which John saw is the symbol of the glory of God which will be round about the throne.

Fourth verse: "And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting clothed in white raiment, and they had on their heads crowns of gold."

Sixth verse: "And round about the throne were four beasts full of eyes before and behind." The four beasts and the four and twenty elders are symbols of that element of the kingdom of God which consists of the brethren of Christ. The new government is in its infancy: the work of conquering the world to Christ is in progress.

Fifth verse: "And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven spirits of God." The lightnings, thunders, and voices proceeding from the throne and the seven lamps burning before the throne, indicate the divine rule over a world which is still in revolt against divine authority. The four beasts full of eyes before and behind are symbolic of the saints who execute upon the world the judgments written; and as they proceed with the work they perceive everything that is going on; nothing can be hid from them.

David in the 149th Psalm wrote prophetically of this time: "Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two-edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the heathen and punishment upon the people, to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute upon them the judgments written: this honor have all his saints. Praise ye the Lord."

HOW SHALL WE BE STRENGTHENED

Dear Brethren:

I see so few letters in The Restitution. I find a command in Hebrews 10:25 to exhort one another so much the more as we see the day (of Christ's appearing) approaching. Another command is to pray one for another (James 5:16). I find in Acts 12:12 that many of the church were gathered together praying. In the fifth verse of the same chapter I find that prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for the release of Peter from prison. In Acts 16:13 we find that in Philippi there was a special place where people gathered to have prayer.

In Acts 20:36 we find our own great apostle calling the elders of the church together and praying with them. Brethren, why do not we meet together to pray with and for one another? If there was ever a time when we needed to pray with and for each other, when we needed to exhort one another to love and good works, it is in these last evil days when the opposers of God are doing all they can to draw away saints from their Redeemer, because the word of God says he knows his time is short (Rev. 12:12). I never knew of a prayer meeting by the church of God. There may be. I simply say I never knew of any, and I frankly say that as far as I have known and talked with the members of the Christ's body they seem opposed to these things.

This has always troubled me. I have always felt a lack of something when we met together, so now I am coming to you, my brethren, with my difficulties as is right and proper; and what the word teaches us to do. The pastor of the Baptist church here publicly teaches the restoration of Israel, the restitution of all things and the near coming of Christ for his saints and the establishment of the kingdom on earth. A few godly women meet weekly to study God's word.

There is also a weekly meeting for prayer and exhortation. I have been attending these meetings for several weeks and feel that I have been greatly strengthened in love and fellowship with God and with his children. I am writing these things to you, dear brethren, because I want you to know them. Frankly I am lead to think there will be many surprised when we meet our Lord in the air. Many who seem to be first will be last, and the last, first. Read Hebrews 11:31; James 2:25. It seems to me that we have relied upon our knowledge and somewhat neglected the weightier matters, love and good works. Jesus says by the love which we show for one another shall men know we are his disciples. Paul says though we understand all mysteries and all knowledge and have not love, we are nothing.

NOTICE

The brethren in Chico would like to hear from Brother Lehman who visited them last winter to know whether or not he found someone to baptize him. I also wish to say to Sister Minerva Meyer, of Merced Co., Calif., that I received her loving card-letter and answered it. My answer was returned to me as unclaimed. Will she please write again giving her address?

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

It was Joseph in prison that God helped to the throne of Egypt. It was Israel at the Red Sea, a pursued and helpless people, whom God helped through the Red Sea. It was Elijah, who through his devotedness to God had incurred the wrath of Ahab, that was fed of ravens. It was the poor destitute widow, giving her last crumb to God's prophet, who was helped of God with a supply of meal. It was an imprisoned Peter who was helped of God in the deliverance from prison.

EDITORIAL

Brother and Sister Young, of Seattle, Wash., were visitors at the Lord's table Sept. 9th.

Brother Geo. B. Alldridge spoke acceptable words of doctrine and exhortation both morning and evening, Sept. 9th.

We spent Sunday Sept. 9th, with the brethren and sisters in Salem, O., Brother and Sister Heacock, of Canton, were there, also Brother Ashford Lehman. Brother Robison was too indisposed to speak, and Sister Wm. Coy was nursing a broken arm. Sister Pottorf seemed to be regaining her health, and Sister Moore, who was quite ill at our former visit, was quite herself again. Meetings were fairly attended, and we much enjoyed our short sojourn with the brethren and sisters.

THE WAY OF THE EAGLE AND THE WHALE

There are two animals, says a writer in Pearson's Weekly, that puzzle naturalists more than any other. They are nature's "submarine" and "airoplane," the whale and the eagle.

It is known that whales occasionally descend as far as 3000 feet below the surface of the sea; a depth at which, from the pressure of water, they ought to be crushed flat. Why they are not injured naturalists have yet to discover. It is this pressure that prevents a modern submarine from descending more than some 300 feet.

Eagles have been seen through telescopes to fly with apparent ease from thirty thousand to forty thousand feet above sea level. At that height no human being can live, owing to the rarefication of the air. How the birds live and fly at such a greater height than man can endure is another question still unanswered.—Selected from the "Boy's World." July 21st 1917, by Sister Woodbury.

The following is her solution submitted to the readers of The Restitution, as written for the Sister's Meeting of Springfield, Aug. 9th. "I wonder who will solve the puzzle before reading mine," says Sister Woodbury.

The Way of the Whale

After reading this interesting article I was deeply impressed when, like a revelation, the thought came to me, why, I can solve the question of the whale on a Bible basis from the word of God; of an actual occurrence as proof. You know, sisters, we read in Matt. 12:38-40, that certain scribes and pharisees whom Jesus called a generation of vipers, wanted to see a sign from the Master, but he answered and said unto them: "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it; but the sign of the prophet Jonah. For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly: so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth."

Also in Luke the 11th chapter when there was a great gathering, Jesus said unto them: "This is an evil generation. They seek a sign, and there shall no sign be given them, but the sign of Jonas the prophet."

The application I have made is that Jesus died and was buried as it were in the bowels of the earth; in a pit, a hiding place. Yet his flesh saw no corruption. He came forth and lived. So also was Jonas figuratively dead and buried in a hiding place three days and three nights—the whale going down into the depths where no man or any ther creature could live. Jonah saw no corruption and lived, being cast out a living person.

The whale is a sure sign of the dead going down in the pit (sheol, the grave), and living again by the resurrection from among the dead. Thus I solved the puzzle why can the whale descend so far below the surface of the sea and endure the extreme pressure? The word says God prepared a "great" fish, and the New Testament says a whale. The dear Lord compares his burial to this great fish as a sign of the resurrection. He takes one of nature's own to prove not only a possibility, but an actual occurence in his own life, by showing the dead raised from the death state, and then his own burial as Jonah, preserved in the belly of the fish was a figure of the non-corruption of his body.

Hence he said to that evil and adulterous generation there would be no other sign but Jonah and the whale. Naturalists have not caught on to biblical terms and the applications the Lord made from things of nature. The above solution came like a flash to me from the knowledge of our Lord's doings, drawing lessons in parables from nature.

The Way of the Eagle

I pondered over the flight of the eagle to solve that puzzle too. Again like a revelation in the still hours of a sleepless night it came to me by another comparison in the beautiful thought of "when born of the spirit." For none but those who have become "flesh and bone," their whole person likened unto the "wind that listeth, not telling whence it cometh or whither it goeth," can mount to the height of the eagle on the wing and live. This figure of the listing of the wind as compared to the saint's changed condition, has always been so beautiful to me that I almost said aloud, "It's true, and the proof is in some one of the psalms. I will prove this too from a Bible basis." I could scarcely wait for the morning to come to get my dear worn Bible and look it up.

Yes: sisters, listen, the Psalmist tells us how and when, in Psalm 40:31. "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles: they shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk and not faint." True: because of the change; as the margin reads, "They shall change their strength."

So the immortalized condition of the saints is likened unto the flight of the eagle; at so great a height, yet lives. Where no other bird can live and no human or mortal being owing to the lightness of the air.

After Jesus' resurrection you know, he appeared to the two apostles on the road, not visible to them until just at their side. Just like the wind coming and going. He could enter through the door invisible, yet a perfect tangible person before his apostles. Thus the puzzle of the eagle from which the Psalmist draws a lesson, the Lord explains from nature's own.

It verifies what Paul calls a "mystery" in the change from mortality to that of immortality at the resurrection. It is evident then that we can not mount up to meet the Lord in the flesh and blood condition. The change too will be as quickly and as invisibly as does the wind come and go. What a beautiful thought. All is calm and peaceful as a summer's eve; not a leaf stirring, when all at once there is a rustle of leaves. We surely do not know "whence it cometh or whither it goeth." But we do know the Psalmist has given us the proof when and how if faithful unto the coming of the Life-Giver.

Again, naturalists do not know biblical terms and why God for a divine purpose created the whale to represent weakness in the death state, and the eagle strength in the changed, immortal state.

PARTICULARLY INTERESTING THOUGHTS

Part of a Private Letter, Printed With the Consent of the Author

What strikes one as particularly sad is the way some people insist that everything of any consequence that is to happen has already happened, and the last "horn" has blown a thousand years or so ago. How people can be so blinded by prejudice is only paralled by Billy Sunday's demonstrations and the like.

With a world on fire; with things of such vast magnitude happening before our very eyes that any, or even all the things that have ever happened before are paled into insignificance, shows that these people are walking in their sleep or dreamin a long dead past. Why, this war now includes the United States, and all the rest are jumping in! Its territory extends from Japan round to Canada and the U. S., and from the north pole to the south pole. Even the South American republics are getting in, and yet some would have us believe that this vast, all comprehending movement has not been though of, or considered in the divine message to the sons of men! What's the use? To me, this is the "one divine event to which the whole creation moves;" this is the "last judgment" with the nations gathered together and being separated "the sheep from the goats," nationally to begin with, and it is not difficult to spot the buck Billy.

Some time ago I read a book, written by a Jew, and he went into details to explain that the reason why one half of all the Jews on the earth live in Poland was because they were driven there by German persecutions during the middle ages. And as we see now, even the Russian persecutions were under the auspices of a German Emperor of which King George, of England, is another specimen. In fact, this German royal clique has had a mortgage on the whole—or nearly so—of God's world, and this struggle is a death grip.

> "When grappling in the fight they fold
> Those arms that ne'er will loose their hold."

What I am looking for, to develop out of this, is the so-called "parliament of men" of Tennyson. This, of course is not the finish, but it the end of the more brutal elements of Germanism, who indeed is the one little horn, among the rest, that yanked up Denmark, Austria and France, all in my life time, and in my memory. In these encounters she succeeded so well that she thought she only had to gather herself together for another and greater plunge, and this (as it is written) is what she missed, for the judgment was "set," and they are taking away her dominion, but it seems a long job.

Anyhow the nations of the earth are getting their lesson—a most important one—that of a common brotherhood of all nations. This war has been instrumental in bringing about a great change in this respect sa far as the anti-military sentiment is concerned, also the anti-royal, divineright; and men are brought together on a common platform of humanity. This is essential, because the sentiment of the nations has to be changed before the situation will be changed.

The idea that the kingdom of Christ is a powerful autocracy to bind down humanity, subject by force, is an altogether crude idea. The law of Christ is perfect freedom; it will continue so to be. The problem remains though, how are people to be elevated to that degree of perfection in which they can be trusted with that "perfect law of liberty ?" Don't ask me, for the solution of the question is the business of the kingdom, and just as the Germans have been mentally and morally poisoned by education and environment into being the base things they have proved themselves to be, so the nations of the future will be led along by the "cords of a man"—ties of humanity—to the praise and glory of God and his Christ. And this war is the first lesson. For this cause God has "raised this man up that he may show forth his judgment to the Gentiles."—J. F. G.

THE TRINITY

ACCORDING TO THE ATHANASIAN CREED

Brother Huggins:

I send you a copy of a leaf taken from a Catholic prayer book. It is the creed of St. Athanasius. It is known in the creed of the nominal churches as the doctrine of the Holy Trinity. Whosoever will be saved before all things it is necessary that he hold the Catholic faith; which faith must every one keep whole and undefiled or without a doubt he shall perish everlastingly And the Catholic faith is this:

That we worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity; neither confounding the persons, nor dividing the substance. For there is one person of the Father, another of the Son; and another of the Holy Ghost. But the Godhead of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, is all one: the Glory equal, the Majesty co-eternal. Such as the Father is, such is the Son, and such is the Holy Ghost. The Father uncreate, the Son uncreate, and the Holy Ghost uncreate. The Father incomprehensible, the Son incomprehensible, and the Holy Ghost incomprehensible. The Father eternal, the Son eternal, and the Holy Ghost eternal, and yet they are not three eternals, but one eternal. As also there are not three incomprehensibles, nor three uncreated: but one uncreated, and one incomprehensible.

So likewise the Father is Almighty, the Son Almighty, and the Holy Ghost Almighty; and yet they are not three Almighties, but one Almighty. So the Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Ghost is God; and yet they are not three Gods, but one God. So likewise the Father is Lord, the Son Lord, and the Holy Ghost Lord; and yet not three Lords but one Lord. For like as we are compelled by the Christian's verity to acknowledge every person by himself to be God and Lord, so are we forbidden by the Christian religion to say, there be three Gods or three Lords. The Father is made of none, neither created nor begotten (so also is the Son and is the Holy Ghost.)

The sentence in parenthesis was written in as the following leaf was gone. It seems strange that any person could formulate such a contradiction of statements and compel persons to believe them. It is stranger to know that any person in this enlightened age should teach such a church creed. Unless you accept this creed you are at variance with most of the nominal churches of today. The doctrine of the pre-existence of Christ has its foundation in this doctrine.

This creed is not found in the church literature earlier than the fourth century A. D. It is not positively known that Athanasius is the originator of this creed. Some writers place it not later than the eighth century A. D. There is one thing very true about it and that is that it has no place among Christian writers. I copy the following from the creed of one of the churches of today: "There is but one living and true God, everlasting, without body or parts, of infinite power, wisdom and goodness. In unity of this Godhead there are three persons, of one substance, power, and eternity—the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost." May the Lord soon come and deliver us from such error. D. C. Robison.

THE CROSS AND THE CROWN

Words of Exhortation Given at Unionville, O., Aug. 29th, 1917

John 12:26: "If any man serve me, let him follow me, and where I am there also shall my servant be. If any man serve me him will my Father honor." How can we serve him ? Take up his cross and follow him. Jesus came to fulfill and do the work his Father gave him to do. He had many hard battles and trials and temptations, and with all the miracles and good works he did to save the people, they would not believe him, they would not have him. "Away with him," they said. But we can thank our heavenly Father that we know that he gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works (Titus 2: 14).

If we want to be accepted of him when he comes we must follow him. Do not put it off. It may be lost. Do not look back, look for the prize of that high calling. Let us keep in the narrow way and follow him to the end, "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." We know that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feared him and worked righteousness, is accepted of him. We have believed on him; let us not be ashamed of him. Jesus said whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it.

Again, if we want to have life and wear the crown, we must carry the cross. It may be a hard road to travel, but what matters that ? It will not be long. The time is near: soon our blessed Jesus will come, and if he finds us carrying the cross he will receive us unto himself. We shall then see him as he is, for we shall be made like him, and we shall reign with him for ever and ever. We read in Rev. 2:26-28: "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations, and I will give him the morning star." "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ Jesus" (Eph. 1:3).

John Grief.

GOD'S WAYS JUSTIFIED

Reading the other night John 15, which says "I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh away:" Some years ago we knew a man who had two sons, both of them earnest workers in the Master's service, one of them an energetic Sunday-school and adult teacher. The other had charge of a mission in a poor neighborhood. They were both "taken away," leaving the father disconsolate. He had never done anything in the Master's service, but was like an old fig tree, cumbering the ground. Can we explain the reason why the workers are taken away and the sinners left ? The question is two-fold:

1. Why should the old father be left ? He seems a fruitless branch, and according to our Lord's teaching here he should have been pruned off for the health of the vine. But there is another parable of our Lord which is an essential commentary on his teaching here. It is his parable of the Barren Fig-tree (Luke 13:6-9), and it reminds us of a gracious truth which has no place in the parable of the True Vine—the truth of the long-suffering of God. There is indeed no room for unfruitful branches in the Lord's vine-yard; they not only fill places which other might profitably occupy, but weaken the vine, consuming the sap which should go to the nourishment of the good branches. But the Husbandman is always averse from severity, and he will not hastily cut off a branch. He tends it, and affords it every fresh opportunity, in the hope that it may yet bear fruit and escape its doom; and only when every remedy has failed does he abandon it. The pruning-knife is his last resort. The history of nations furnishes numerous examples. Thus, already in the days of Abraham, the land of Canaan was polluted by the sin of its heathen inhabitants, and God had his stern remedy in view. They must be destroyed and their land given to a purer race. But he would not execute the terrible judgment while the least hope of their amendment remained. "The iniquity of the Amorites was not yet full" (Gen. 15:16). and therefore he stayed his hand, delaying for some five centuries the operation of his purpose of redemption; and then at length he let his judgment loose on the obdurate sinners and cut them off with the swords of Joshua's army. It is not slackness when God leaves sinners to cumber the ground; it is long-suffering mercy, allowing yet further opportunity and addressing yet another and another appeal: "Turn ye, turn ye; for why will ye die ?"

2. The other side of the question is why those useful sons were "taken away." And here you really create the difficulty by overlooking the double sense of the phrase. When our Lord speaks of an unfruitful branch being "taken away," it is a gardener's term, and the idea is entirely different when the phrase is used of removal by death. When an unfruitful branch is "taken away," it is in judgment (cf. ver. 6). But when a good man is "taken away," it is for quite another reason. It is for a two-fold reason:

1. Because he is useful and has finished his work; and

2. Because trouble is imminent, and God would mercifully deliver him—"the righteous is taken away from the evil to come" (Isa. 57:1). In the one case the "taking away" is a judgment; in the other it is deliverance from completed service. And thus a case like that which you describe is no anomaly. It displays at once God's long-suffering mercy to sinners and his loving-kindness to his own.—David Smith.

THE GREAT MAN

The great man feels with the people but does not follow them.

He maintains his independence of thought, no matter what public opinion may be.

He is quiet, He does not strive nor cry out.

He knows and trusts the cosmic spiritual forces and is not impatient.

He thinks clearly, he speaks intelligently, he lives simply.

His ethics are of the future, not traditional and of the past, nor conventional and of the present.

He always has time.

He despises no human being, nor any other creature.

He impresses you much as the vast silences of nature impress you, as the sky, the ocean, the desert.

He has no vanity. He always has more than he thinks he deserves.

He is teachable, and will learn even from little children. He is not anxious to teach others.

He is rarely elected to anything.

He cannot retaliate, for he cannot descend to the level of them that love to do harm.

He lives in a certain self-sufficient aloofness so that your praise or blame does not seem to reach him.

Yet his isolation is warm, and not cold. He is keenly alive to human relationships and influences. He loves. He cares. He suffers. He laughs.

When you find him it is as if you had found a real human being among myriads of animals. All of the simple, strong qualities of the normal soul shine in him, with no pettiness.

You feel that what you have, such as your money or position, is nothing to him, only what you are; and that if he likes you it will be not at all for anything you do, say or pay, but for what your soul is within you.

He is not deceived by the two arrant humbugs of the world, Success and Failure.

He changes his opinion easily, when he sees his error. He cares not for consistency, which is the fetich of little minds, but for truth, which is the sum of great souls.

Bitterness, cynicism, and pessimism, which are tempers of pettiness, he has not; but love, cheer, and hope abound in him, for these are always the by-products of greatness.

When you love him, you yourself become great; for there can be no greatness that is not the cause of greatness in others.—Frank Crane.

WHAT JESUS IS TO ME

He is my Mediator (1 Tim. 2:5).
He is my Advocate (1 John 2:1).
He is by Bread of Life (John 6:35).
He is my Counselor (Isa. 9:6).
He is my Everlasting Father (Isa. 9:6).
He is my Faithful Witness (Rev. 1:5).
He is my High Priest (Heb. 4:14).
He is my Horn of Salvation (Luke 1:69).
He is my Lawgiver (James 4:12).
He is my Life (John 14:6).
He is my Passover (1 Cor. 4:7).
He is my Savior (Luke 2:11).
He is the Author of my Salvation (Heb. 5:9).
He is the Author and Finisher of my Faith (Heb. 12:2).
He is the Author of my Peace (1 Cor. 14:33).
He is my Consolation (Rom. 15:5).
He is my Strength, my Fortress and my Refuge (Jer. 16:19).

Dear reader, if you are in Christ Jesus, "who of God is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption" (1 Cor. 1:30), he is unto you all his word proclaims him to be.—Sel.

Golden Text: John 4:24

God Holds The Key

God holds the key of all unknown
And I am glad;
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if he trusted it to me,
I might be sad.

What if to-morrow's cares were here,
Without its rest?
I'd rather he unlock the door,
And as the hours swing open, say,
"My will is best."

The very dimness of my sight
Makes me secure;
For groping in my misty way,
I feel his hand— I hear him say,
"My help is sure."

I cannot read his future plan,
this I know,
I have the smiling of his face
And all the refuge of his grace,
While here below.

Enough, this covers all my want,
And so I rest;
For what I cannot, he can see,
And in his care I sure shall be Forever blest.—John Parker.

Read The Bible Intelligently

In reading Scripture we want to be in a quiet, peaceful frame of mind; we must give full attention to our reading so we will grasp the meaning of the words, thus understanding the general import of our lesson. It is far better never to look inside of the precious Book than to read it merely as a duty or punishment, reading in a hurried, haphazzard way. I knew a child whose one punishment consisted of Bible reading; the greater the fault the longer the reading, and that child grew up to detest the Bible and hate everything it represented.

Another child, well known to the writer, was allowed to read her Bible merely as a pastime, the parents being too busy to explain the meaning of the eager words, and that child had a wrong conception of God's whole word, simply because she had read it in a careless manner.

To illustrate: no one had troubled themselves enough to let her know the meaning of the word "unseemly," so when reading that glorious 13th chapter of 1th Corinthians she never used the word and there were many more—and to her mind the fifth verse read, "Charity doth not behave itself." I have tried to impress upon the minds of the readers of this page that when they come across a word they do not fully understand, to ask father or mother its meaning. I am quite sure they will take the time to answer your question, but if not, and you have no one else to go to, ask me, I will take the time.

For instance: take today's golden text, the same word, "spirit," appears twice, but the meaning of the two words is quite different: the first time it is used (God is a spirit) it means that God is life, it means not only that God is living, but that he gave us our life, and the destiny of our life is in his keeping; that God is not only the source but the very essence of life, and we might add, that we are accountable to God for the way we use that life which he hath given us. The second part of our golden text is, "And they that worship him (God) must worship him in spirit and in truth." Now this time the word "spirit" means that we, as living beings gained our life from God and being accountable to him for that life, must worship him, knowing what we are doing, why we do it, and do it in a whole hearted, willing way, holding nothing back, anxious, from the heart, to acknowledge by word and deed the love, the mercy, the long-suffering of our God.

By reading the preceding verses you will notice that Jesus is trying to impress on the woman's mind the difference between ritual form and ceremony, the observance of special days and seasons, and true heart worship. The verses following do not inform us whether or not this "woman of Samaria" accepted Jesus as her Savior, but let us trust she did, for from the wording I take it for granted not only fully understood him, but proclaimed him.

"Let not thine heart envy sinners; but be thou in the fear of the Lord all the day long." In this instance the meaning of "fear" is holy reverence. Ask father or mother or teacher.

Another Lesson

Sometime since we had a lesson on knowledge. Today we will have a lesson on

Knowing God

You will notice that in these lessons we do not quote the Scripture verses, but simply give chapter and verse, so you will be forced to find the passage yourself, thus making you more familiar with the location of the books of the Bible.

With me kindly read the seventeenth of John, committing to memory verse 3, and imagine that I have answered your recital of it by quoting verses 25,26.

God is Almighty	Gen. 17:1; Rev. 1:8
God is the Creator	Gen. 1:1; Acts 17:24-26
God is Omnipotent	Ex. 6:3,4; Rev. 19:6
God is Omniscient	Psa. 139:1-6; Pro. 5.21
God is Omnipresent	Psa. 139:7-12; Jer. 23:23,24
God is immortal	Deut. 32:39.40; 1 Tim. 1:17
God is Eternal	Deut. 33:27; Rev. 4:8-10
God is Invisible	Job 23:8,9; Ex. 33;20
God is Just	Deut. 32:4; Isa. 45:21
God is Great	Psa. 135:5,6; 1 Chron. 2:4,5
God is True	Jer. 10:10; 1 Thess. 1:9,10
God is Merciful	Psa. 86:4,5; Psa. 112
God is Perfect	Matt. 5:4-6
God is Holy	Psa. 99:9; Isa. 5:6

BIBLE LESSONS ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

The editor of "The Restitution" is now preparing for publication a series of Bible lessons designed to explain every essential feature of gospel truth. Two lessons of the series have just been published entitled respectively, "Introduction" and "The Word of God in Threefold Aspect." Valuable for conducting Bible studies and classes and for giving Berean lessons, as well as for individual study. Written primarily to teach the elemental principles of the gospel to candidates for baptism. Three cents for one copy; twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Denying the Faith"

A sermon. Both doctrinal and practical. 20 pages; one copy 5 cents; 40 cents per dozen.

"The Death of Christ"

A doctrinal sermon, setting forth scripturally the reality of Christ's death. 3 cents each, or 12 for 25 cents.

"Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained"

A sermon in which every text in the Bible where paradise occurs, either in the English or original tongue, is quoted and explained. 5 cents each; 12 for 40 cents.

"The Bible: Its Principles and Texts"

As indicated by its title, this book is divided into three sections: The first consists of a disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "Principles" in formulated propositions; and the third expounds in a homiletic manner particular "Texts." As an Editor, the Author has untied many knotty questions submitted to him by readers; more than a hundred and fifteen are considered in this volume. $1.10 the copy.

A PAPER REPRESENTING THE CHURCH OF GOD, AND DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF "THE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST" (ACTS 8:12)

VOLUME 69 CLEVELAND, O, SEPTEMBER 25, 1917 NUMBER 36

WE KNOW NOT THE HOUR

Dear Brother Huggins:

I am sending you this little poem for publication in The Restitution. I think it is the one important subject in the minds of God's people today the hour when the Lord will return. May it help us to live nearer the truth as we see the day approach. How I love the truth, and how I long for more knowledge of God's word, for I am young in the faith, but am seeking the kingdom of God and his righteousness..

Your sister in Christ, Mrs. H. B. Hargleroad.

We know not the hour of the Master's returning,
Yet signs all foretell that the moment is nearing
When he shall return. 'Tis a promise most cheering
But we know not the hour.

There's light for the wise who are seeking salvation,
There's truth in the book of the Lord's revelation;
Each prophecy points to the great consummation.
But we know not the hour.

We'll watch and We'll pray with our lampe trimmed and burning;
We'll work and we'll wait till the Master's returning;
We'll sing and rejoice every omen discerning,
For we know not the hour.

Yes, we're waiting for the coming of earth's long expected Lord,
For the signs are now fulfilling that he gave us in his word.
We're watching, we're waiting for that promised happy day.
Yet we must not cease our working we must work and we must pray,
For we know not the hour. -Rearranged by Mrs. H. B. Hargleroad.

SUGGESTIVE THOUGHTS ON CURRENT SIGNS

Editor of The Restitution:

Ever since the '43 movement the time question has been quite prominent among the few that continued to believe in "The Age to Come." For some years after that event time-setting was very common. Most of the public speakers had a hobby of some kind; "time" was one of the chief ones with them. But when many dates which were set for the Lord to come passed by, they became more cautious, and contented themselves by stating that it was "near, even at the door." This was all right, as a man's lifetime is only a short time in comparison to the length of time since the coming was first promised. Even in the apostles' days they spoke of that day as being near. And we are commanded that when we see the signs being fulfilled "to lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh." So we should be interested in all the prophecies that describe that event; we must not be carried away by delusions, as many are If we read the many wrtings on the subject we find that there are nearly as many theories as there are writers; no two alike, unless some one is a follower of the other and has imbibed his theory. Our Advent friends, as well as some of the Church of God, are claiming that the time is ripe now, that all the Scriptures are fulfilled; and that Jesus may come at any time.

One writer recently stated that the prophecy in Ezekiel 38: 11 onward is ripe for that event. If we read the chapter through we find that it is in regard to Gog going up to Palestine. "And thou shall say I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither gates nor bars, to take a spoil, and to take a prey: to turn thy hand upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the midst of the land." The writer claimed that those conditions exist at the present time. He states that in 1904 there was 2,000,000 vines planted, and several colonies were established. This was true, but if he has followed the events of the war, he will know that the Turks have driven most of those people out; used them much as they did the Armenians. They killed those who resisted, and drove the helpless that they did not kill by torture, out to starve. The British Government conveyed many of them to Egypt, and established a colony near the Sphinx; gave some of the people work, and established schools for the children. Much of the land of Palestine is a training camp, occupied by the Turks— conditions much worse than before the Jews started to return to their own land.

Now read the 15th verse: "Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil ? hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey ? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil?" It is plain what Gog is to go for; but the Turk has got in ahead of him, so that the land is all spoiled now, and there is nothing for Gog to get but the Turk and the desolate land. Now who is trying to take that land? We find that the British on one side, and the Russians on the other are closing in on it. It is usual to claim that Russia is Gog; and that England and her Colonies are the lion and the young lions that are to contend with Gog and protect Jew in the final great battle. But now we find those two powers working in harmony. So there will have to be some great change before these two nations can fulfill this prophecy.

Some of our writers tell us that Germany fills the bill of Gog better than Russia does at the present time. It looks as though these writers will have to give time for a time of peace for the nations to recuperate, and for the Jews to gather there in Palestine, and "get silver and gold, and cattle and goods, and to build the unwalled villages, and dwell at ease." This is what the Jew is looking for, and appears to be what prophecy predicts. Apparently, when this war is ended, there will be a conference of all nations. They will form a compact, make some agreement that they will believe will insure permanent peace. When this takes place then the cry of "peace and safety" will go forth. It will likely be a success for a few years, long enough for the Jews to gather in Palestine, bring much wealth with them, and to dwell at ease for a short time. When this cry of peace and safety goes forth, then we may be sure that the end is near.

The sooner it comes the better for all who are looking for it, and are ready to meet our Lord with joy. May he soon come. If this is published it is to be hoped that it will draw out some of our best writers, and that they may throw some new light on the subject which has been muddled so long.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS IN ENGLAND

By William C. Allen

Editorial Correspondence in "Christian Work"

One of the remarkable sights witnessed in England during this war was the marching of a group of men through the streets of Dover en route for France. They were prisoners proceeding under military guard, and were being deported from "free England" because they could not conscientiously participate in war or destroy their fellow men. Some were church people, and based their refusal to support the war on the teachings of the Gospel; others were Socialists whose consciences forbade them to fight as a sin against humanity and social betterment. Some expected to be executed; all knew that humiliation and imprisonment awaited them. As they marched to the ship all joined in singing, "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."

When the conscription laws of England were framed, provision was made for those who are conscientiously opposed to war. Such "Conscientious Objectors," as they are called, would have the privilege of going before tribunals which were established in different parts of the country and, presenting their case, claim an immunity that the law was presumed to afford them. If an applicant at a tribunal is refused exemption he at once is considered to be and automatically becomes a member of the army, subject to army penalties applied to those who are insubordinate or traitors to their country. Unfortunately, under these circumstances, every tribunal has done what was right in its own eyes They have also had the power when granting exemption, if doing so, to determine the nature of the alternative service of national importance which was to be taken up by those released from direct participation in the war. Often they have tried to force "Conscientious Objectors" into work that would indirectly assist the war, and frequently the latter have refused to be inveigled into such a situation. As a result much muddling and chaos has ensued and the presumed intent of the law has often been lost. All this has led to prosecution and persecution, and to the destruction of civil and religious liberty to an extraordinary degree.

While the military man gets into the saddle and overrides the liberties of England, and while the people live under restrictions that they have not known for generations, it has remained for the "Conscientious Objectors" to take a stand that is most unpopular, but which must be taken by some if the traditions of the race are to be maintained. Above all, the commands of our Lord appeal to them. Many rejoice in their opportunity to serve their country and the cause of human liberty through personal suffering. One day I met in a railway station in Birmingham a young man who remarked, "I am going home this afternoon to see my people, for it may be a long time before I have another opportunity, as I am expecting arrest and imprisonment most any day." I expressed my sympathy, when he added, "I would not miss this opportunity of coming to a decision for anything." Another "Conscientious Objector" wrote from his prison cell, "I am proud to be here; I have never been regretful for one moment that I came here." I am acquainted with a young man—a graduate of one of the great universities—who, when being commended for the sacrifice of all his earthly prospects because of his conscientious convictions, replied, "You speak about sacrifice; I have the peace of God." He faced imprisonment with joy rather than destroy in his heart the peace of God so precious to his soul.

Many young men have faced the tribunal with the same dauntless spirit. I recall a home where our host was one of the brightest young business men of London, and the junior partner in a great wealthy firm of that city. He apprehended what would await him because of the character of the particular tribunal with which he would be obliged to deal shortly after we were with him. He lost friends; his beautiful home would be broken up, his partnership profits relinquished, his family scattered, prison would very likely await him; yet I was never in a household where the presence of Christ was more real and where troubles were being faced with a more happy spirit.

I have frequently heard how boys from eighteen years and upward meet the tribunals. These Christian lads have an almost inarticulate sense of the sinfulness of war, and feel that they cannot engage in it out of loyalty to their Master. Inexperienced and unaccustomed to dealing with men or with expressing their religious faith, they have often faced the ordeal of contending at the tribunals with men skillful in speech and law, and who are trained to entangle others in argument, or who are also hostile to the lads before them, or fail to understand the purity of their motives. Some of these lads have been known to stand constant hackling by the hour with the utmost composure. The answers given by these boys have at times been astonishing. Thus, a member of a tribunal during an examination said to a boy of my acquaintance, "How is that you, who are so tender of life do not hesitate to kill cattle and even eat them?" Quickly was flung back the answer, "Cattle are not men." Another lad was being badgered by a tribunal, when one of his judges asked him, "Why should a big healthy boy like you want exemption?" Instantly the lad replied, "Why are you not in the trenches?" "Oh," said the man on the bench, "I secured exemption." The youngster answered, "That is just what I want." He got it.

Alternative service is very often dictated by the tribunals as a means of punishment. We are told that alternative service often means one shilling per day and to be housed in workhouses, prisons, or lunatic asylums.

The efforts of the tribunals to make any service as near the nature of a punishment as possible cannot make for national betterment, and are often ridiculous. Thus, I have known of school teachers being put at farm work of the humblest description, and the vacancies "filled" by incompetent persons who would be most useful to the state if engaged in their regular employment. Up to several weeks ago over two thousand of these contestants for civil and religious liberty had been arrested and many sent to jails—civil or military—and some to hard labor for various terms. At one time thirty-four men were sentenced to death but their sentences were subsequently commuted to ten years' imprisonment.

While in many instances "Conscientious Objectors" have been well treated by prison officials, there are many cases of hideous cruelty, which should be a warning to any nation that professes to stand for a love of human liberty. A friend of mine tells of such a prisoner who, speaking of his bodily suffering, exclaimed, "If they would only shoot me!" Dr. John Clifford write the following: A Congregational minister writes of a man twenty-nine years of age. He has known him all his life and been an intimate friend for the last ten years. For his genuineness he offered unimpeachable evidence. Spite of all evidence, the tribunals declared he had no conscience and ordered him into the army. I have recently seen him, and under these conditions. The cell is ten feet by seven, walls painted slate blue black, the floor to lie upon, an overcoat for a pillow, and not even a chair; solitary confinement for days and days, and everything taken away, even a tract that a good woman had given him on the journey; nothing to handle, nothing to count, thrown back entirely upon his own thoughts, with just food enough to keep him alive, unable to wash or shave or get his clothes off, or write any letters. So the great military machine is set to do its work. Bad as this is, it is mild compared with others I could quote. 'Four of them,' says a victim, speaking of the soldiers, 'set on me. . . . One shook me, dragged me along, while the other punched and thumped and kicked me . . . They set on me again and bruised me more.' A third time 'they started bruising again. I was absolutely exhausted, with bruises all over, lumps on my head, swollen cheek, and bleeding in one or two places, and could do nothing but lie on the floor and pray for God's protection.'"

A youthful "Conscientious Objector," who was suffering solitary confinement, begged a Bible of the prison authorities. He was refused this, along with any reading matter; but finally the officer in charge said to him, "Too much Bible reading is as bad as too much whiskey; you can have it one hour a day."

The many friends of these sufferers, as in the days of the apostles, "Remember them in much prayer." I recall a young man speaking of the deliverances wrought on behalf of some of these brave young men, declaring that "Prayer has done more than anything else." The world may say that he made a foolish statement, but the eye of faith sees that he was right.

Young men of all conditions in life are found in the ranks of the "Conscientious Objectors." The general attitude of many of them when appearing before the tribunal may be epitomized in part by the statement of the son of a peer, who in normal times devotes his whole life to improving the social condition of the poor in the east end of London. He stated to the tribunal, "As a disciple of Jesus Christ . . . . I must refuse to take any willing part in operations which have as their object or accompaniment the wholesale slaughter of my fellow creatures in war. I regard all wars, defensive and offensive, as essentially alien to that divine spirit which led Christ to the cross, and which bids us love our enemies and overcome evil, not with explosive bombs and shells, but by the methods of love and reason. . . I bear my testimony against a Compulsion Act which I regard not only unchristian, but also as a betrayal, in large measure, of the ideals of liberty for which Britain is considered to be fighting." He concluded his defence by a Scriptural quotation most appropriate to the occasion, whereupon he was accused of "blasphemy" and was compelled to cease his defence. The whole account reads like a reversal to the conditions of the seventeenth century in England, and indeed it is so.

If a boy will spend ten minutes each day reading his Bible he will arm himself against temptation.

RIVERS WILL BE CLOGGED WITH GERMAN BODIES

Says Prophecy Written 300 Years Ago

The four corners of the earth will yield armies for the great war, and fighting on German soil will become so furious that the previous battles will be as nothing, if a 300-year-old prophecy is fulfilled.

This prophecy, written by the monk, Fratre Johannes; about the year 1600, has just been declared genuine by the Newspaper Information Bureau at Washington. Frederick J. Haskin, head of the Bureau, says the prophecy was found on an old parchment in the Convent of the Holy Ghost of Wismar Germany, and is kept under glass in the town hall in that city.

There are a number of discrepancies which Mr. Haskin says are due to the translations, of which there have been many. The text of the remarkable prophecy is as follows.

The real Antichrist will be one of the Monarchs of his time, a Lutheran Protestant. He will invoke God and give himself out as his messenger or apostle.

This prince of lies will swear by the Bible. He will represent himself as the arm of the Most High, sent to chastise corrupt peoples.

He will have only one arm, but his innumerable armies, who will take for their device the words, "God is with us," will resemble the infernal regions.

Spies Overrun The Earth

For a long time he will act by craft and strategy. His spies will overrun the earth, and he will be master of the secrets of the mighty.

He will have learned men in his pay, who will maintain and undertake to prove his celestial mission.

A war will afford him the opportunity of throwing off the mask. Armies will be involved from the four quarters of the earth.

His words of imposture will resemble those of Christians. He will have an eagle in his arms, there will also be an eagle in the arms of his confederate. But the latter will be a Christian, and will die from the malediction of Pope Benedict, who will be elected at the beginning of the reign of Antichrist.

In order to conquer Antichrist it will be necessary to kill more men than Rome has ever contained. Never will humanity have been faced with such a peril, because the triumph of the Antichrist would be that of the demon, who will have taken possession of his personality.

Toward the year 2000 Antichrist will be made manifest. His army will surpass in number anything that can be imagined.

The Black Eagle will hurt itself upon the Cock, which will lose many feathers. It will soon be exhausted, but for the Leopard and its claws.

The Black Eagle, who will come from the land of Luther, will make a surprise attack upon the Cock.

Will Cross Rivers Over Bodies

The White Eagle will come from the North.

The Black Eagle will find itself forced to let go the Cock in order to fight the White Eagle, whereupon the Cock will have to pursue the Black Eagle into the land of the Antichrist to aid the White Eagle.

The battles fought up to that time will be as nothing compared to that which will take place in the Lutheran country.

When the beast finds himself lost he will become furious.

Men will be able to cross the rivers over the bodies of the dead.

Antichrist will sue for peace many times, but the seven angels who march before three animals of the Lamb will have proclaimed that victory will not be given except on the conditions that Antichrist shall be crushed like straw on the threshing floor.

The three animals will not be permitted to cease fighting as long as Antichrist has soldiers.

Last Battles Near Gun Works

It will be made manifest that the combat which will be fought out in that part of the country in which Antichrist forges his arms, is no human conflict. The animal defenders of the Lamb will exterminate the last army of Antichrist.

Antichrist will lose its crown, and die in solitude and madness. His empire will be divided into 22 States, but none will have any longer any fortifications, army, or ships of war.

The White Eagle, by order of Michael, will drive the Cresent out of Europe, where there will be no longer any but Christians. He will install himself at Constantinople.

REMEMBRANCE

"There is no remembrance of former things; neither shall there be any remembrance of things that are to come, with those that shall come after" (Eccl. 1:11).

We cannot remember events that took place before we were born. All the knowledge we have of events that took place prior to our life here we learn by reading of those events that were written by people living at that time. They wrote as they remembered, and we accept their record by faith. We have no remembrance of anything in the future. Prophets wrote of things that are to take place in the future; we read those prophecies recorded in God's word; therefore we believe them by faith, and we find it a very interesting study to investigate the word as written. By so doing we learn that the things that are to come interest us more than the things that have passed. Why? Because this present life is short and no reward is promised now. But in the "age to come," as promised by prophets, there is another life, and it is an "eternal life," and is the "gift of God" (Rom. 6:23). This life is to be given to the ones in the past and the present age who remembered what God has revealed to us of his plans for our future life in the book he has had written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope (Rom. 15:4).

Now the things that happened in Moses' life and the acts of the Israelites were for ensamples, and they are written for our admonition (1 Cor. 10:11). "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfected, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16). Christ commanded to search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me (John 5:39).

Our remembrance of things as we see them are sometimes pleasant, and sometimes very unpleasant. The pleasant things we see cause us to be happy, but our happiness here is of short duration. If we read God's word and remember it, it teaches us a long life of happiness in the "age to come." And if we remember rightly and act accordingly, it places us in a position where we may enjoy this happy state for ever and ever. The plan is very simple. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believes and is baptized shall be saved; he that believes not shall be condemned" (Mark 16:15,16).

Can we remember this? Do we want to be saved? This all depends on our faith. If we believe the Scriptures as written, and remember they are God's word (and no one can be saved outside of God's word) then we will remember it and forget man's word, and escape the punishment of condemnation, which is for all that accept man's word and turn aside from God's plan of salvation. If we remember God he will remember us. Then let us all be guided by the eye of faith and it will bring us to the point where we can remember God's promise to man, and see that it is only through obedience on our part that God will remember us. Please read 105 Psalm; it is a grand lesson on remembrance. God will remember his covenant forever, and has promised to bring forth his people with joy and his chosen with gladness (verses 8 and 43). God help us all to forget man and his word, and to lay hold on eternal life by fighting the good fight of faith (1 Tim. 6:12).

E. W. Knapp.

Opportunity calls once at every man's door. But misfortune seems to be more sociable.

A LESSON FROM NATURE

A Christian's glance is directed out of the window and lingers on a reed, or perhaps a stalk of wheat upon which a bird has alighted. This frail perch bends and yeilds beneath the bird's weight, or is swayed by the light breeze. It has no fear even though the outward support should give away, for it has wings, those supports which God has given.

The Christian's gaze may be withdrawn, but his thoughts picture faith as the gift of God which buoys up the soul, though all earthly aid be withdrawn. What delight for one soul to have trust in the fidelity of another! "It makes a pillow of softness for the cheek which is burning with tears and the touch of pain. It is a consoling voice that dwells as with an eternal echo on the ear; a dew of mercy falling on the bruised and troubled hearts of this world."

Thus did the hero-like Paul delight in the faithfulness of the Philippian church, for he wrote: "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling: for it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." Likewise was John glad when he said: "I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in the truth." Even so it is with those who, fearing for our future, have been instrumental in our becoming a child of God. How they must feel when their labor is lost and each individual does not strive to obtain that zeal to build up and keep himself in his most holy faith. It is our duty towards our teachers to grow in knowledge and grace so that their undertaking, on which they have spent so much labor and care, will be successful and prosperous. But what we owe our earthly teachers cannot be compared with what we owe to God, who chose us from the beginning and accounted us worthy of eternal life. Even the believer may, through self-satisfaction, forget to call upon God while he is near, and seek him while he may be found; but do not forget that a time will come when he will not recognize you as his child, and may turn a deaf ear to your pleadings.

Without faith there would be decay; life would be as a burning sandy desert, with nothing but a dark surrounding horizon. Let us spread the pinions of faith and love and soar upward, singing praises to him who gave us our wings, not only to prevent our falling, but that we should mount joyfully into the cloudless blue. More than this, dear reader, do not fear, for in health and prosperity Christ is a companion and friend. In sickness and old age and adversity, he is staff and support; for he is all and in all to the pilgrim journeying across the continent of the years.

HELPS
TO
THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE

The Open Bible

"Seek ye out of the book of the Lord, and read" (Isa. 34:16).

"Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me" (John 5:39).

"These were more noble than those of Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so" (Acts 17:11).

Sept. 16th Sister McCave, of Atwater, Ohio, joined us in observing the Lord's supper.

The following brethren have been exempted from military and naval service: Alfred and Newman Smith, Eugene Millar, and Harold Baker. These young brethren have been granted exemption on religious grounds. Others have been excused on account of physical infirmities.

A curious comment on the common phraseology, "to save a soul," may be found in the Lord's words to satan regarding Job: "Behold, he is in thine hand; but save his life" (nephesh, soul). Rather a strange work for satan to do! The meaning is of course, just the same as in Matt. 2:20: "They are dead which sought the young child's life" (psuche, soul).—R. K. Strang.

The chief refuge of those who teach eternal torment is Matt. 25:46. Here the Lord says, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." The nature of the punishment, however, is clearly shown in other Scriptures to be death—the second death, from which there is no resurrection—and destruction, eternal destruction, from which there is no salvation. There is doubtless a reference in this verse to Psalm 37:22—"Such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off." Compare the two portions in the Psalm and Matt. 25 and the resemblance will be obvious. Blessed and cursed—inherit and cut off. The word used for punishment in Matt. 25:46 means a cutting off, and refers to the great and well understood anathema or curse, or cutting off (the death penalty) of the Old Testament Scriptures. The everlasting punishment is the everlasting cutting off or destruction of the second death in Revelation and of 2 Thess. 1:9, "who shall suffer punishment, even eternal destruction (not banishment, as the orthodox so mistranslate or misinterpret, misunderstand or misrepresent the word) from the presence of the Lord." This is the end of the wicked. There will be tribulation and anguish, indignation and wrath, a just recompense for all evil; but the end is absolute death—utter destruction—total extinction of being, like those wandering stars to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever—i. e., total extinction and eternal oblivion.—W. T. Chesterman.

"The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL

No. X

God draws people to him, never drives them, by causing love for himself to spring up in their hearts. The gospel is the power he uses to do this and until his loving justice and equity, which are revealed by the gospel, are understood, the gospel is robbed of its strongest drawing power.—Alta King.

EDITOR'S REPLY

Force Drives, Love Draws

In above remarks a difference is made between force which "drives" and love which "draws." This distinction is proper and very important. "No man can come to me," says Jesus, "except the Father which hath sent me draw him." In confirmation of this allegation he adds, "It is written in the prophets, And they shall all be taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me" (John 6:44,45). In this text drawn to the Father and hearing and learning of the Father are equivalent terms. "Draw me" is an absurd prayer unless we are willing to "run after thee" (Cant. 1:4). Unless then we are "willing and obedient" a knowledge of the truth cannot come to us (Isa. 1:19); unless we "learn of the Father" we cannot be "taught of God" and drawn to God.

Learning the Truth Conditional

With this element of conditionality shining so brightly in the premise, we wonder why anyone believes in unconditional and universal enlightenment of the ignorant. If God draws instead of drives, and if he draws by "causing love for himself to spring up in their hearts," what if love fails to "spring," and the sinner refuses to respond to the appeals of God? "The gospel is the power he uses to do this," well and good, "to every one that believeth" (Rom. 1:16); but the gospel is just the thing which the sinner refuses to learn and believe. In this case, what about "the power"? If, when God's justice and equity "are not understood the gospel is robbed of its strongest drawing power," as is admitted, why claim the gospel thus emasculated, will enlighten all and draw all? We read of some who "draw back into perdition" (Heb. 10:39) while others "draw near with a true heart" (vs. 22). It is good to draw near to God (Psa. 73:28), but many do this merely with their mouth (Isa. 29:13), and fail to obey the command, "Draw nigh to God;" and failing to do their duty as required by the first part of this text, they forfeit the blessing contained in its latter part, "And he will draw nigh to you" (Jas. 4:8).

Some Not Able, "Never Able," to Learn the Truth

The gospel for all, making enlightenment compulsory, pulls up dozens of texts by the roots, and interferes with several principles of divine truth. Free will it demolishes as completely as universalism. To make enlightenment universal would require the "drive" of force. Wooings and entreaties of the gospel are impotent to teach the masses. Some hear and understand not (Isa. 6:9,10). "They (the wicked) know not, neither will they understand; they walk on in darkness" (Psa. 81:5). "The gospel is the drawing power" truly, but they do not "understand" it and they "walk on in darkness" instead of learning the truth. They are children of the night and not of the day. They have the gospel, "the power," today; but they "rob" it of all its power: where is the evidence that they will treat it better tomorrow? "They have not known nor understood: for he hath shut their eyes, that they cannot see; and their hearts, that they cannot unedrsand" (Isa. 44:18). Ever learning, they are "never able to come to a knowledge of the truth" (2 Tim. 3:7). "NEVER ABLE"! This hardly leaves room for them to learn the truth in the coming age.

Larger Hope A More Baneful Doctrine Than Purgatory

Probably some of our readers need more teaching relative to the gospel privileges subsequent to the second coming of Christ. Many have vague ideas on the subject. The result is that when it comes to pass that one of their relatives dies who had not understood and obeyed the gospel and who according to the tenets of conditional immortality which we glory to profess, cannot be saved; or it may be they lose an infant daughter or son by death—then these vague and false ideas break out on them like measles, and they say: "Well, since the gospel is to be preached in the next age, and people will be saved then, our aunt, (sister, brother, father or mother, as the case may be) will be raised from the dead and enjoy gospel privileges then; therefore there is hope for her salvation." The wish is father to the thought. And when people want to believe a thing it is wonderful how easily they are convinced. They only need the semblance of proof and they have the "proof." Without being conscious of it they embrace Larger Hope as an alleviation of the "pressure" they are under, and espouse the Catholic doctrine of purgatory, using other words to express the same idea. It makes no difference to them about proof; they do not ask for evidence: they have what they want, and they are going to believe it, proof or no proof. Hence it comes about that for people who are "without hope" (Eph. 2:12) they entertain much hope! As a heresy the Larger Hope is more baneful in its operations than purgatory, and as a destroyer of morals it is more deadly; for in order for a Catholic to escape from purgatory he must do penance and pay money as a sort of fine for his sins. This has a tendency to keep him from relapsing into sin again; it does put him under some restraint as to sin, and is calculated to make him enjoy his freedom because it costs him something to obtain it; but Larger Hope offers mankind a purgatory free—all of its healing efficacy may be enjoyed without the cost of one penny! If we were going into the purgatory business we would take the Catholic kind with its restraining, moralizing influences in preference to the "cost-you-nothing" Russellite kind, which lacks both restraints and conditions. "Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord" is the Bible declaration (Hos. 6:2): "Then shall all know, whether they follow on to know the Lord or not" is the dictum of Russellism and Larger Hope.

THE JUDGMENT OF THE NATIONS AND JESUS AS UNIVERSAL KING

Article 6

The judgment of the nations cannot take place, in our opinion, until the kingdom of God, which is the kingdom of Israel, is re-established. After Armageddon there is evidently a time in which dispersed Israel will be gathered and the rebels purged out and the land cleaned of the accumulation of abandoned munitions of war, and the dead strewn over the land buried. The city of Jerusalem must be beautified, the temple built, its services restored, and the tribes settled in their land as the subjects of the kingdom. For proof see the last eight chapters of the prophet Ezekiel.

It is a mistaken idea to think that the nations will be judged immediately on the return of the Lord. Much preliminary work must be done before the nations are judged. The law must first go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. The nations are not destroyed but "rebuked" and caused to abandon war and beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. We should remember that laws must be enacted and sent to each nation. Time must be given them to accept or reject the laws. Those who accept are given a place in the kingdom, and those who reject are destroyed with fire. The kingdom is now beginning its dominion stage. Up to this time the mustard seed kingdom has been growing. All thoughtful persons should know that Jehovah has had "times and seasons" in which he accomplished his purpose. He will certainly complete his purpose in the same way. We are too apt to eliminate the time when applied to Jehovah. How long a time will be occupied in accomplishing the things spoken of above is not for us to say. It is enough for us to know that the work will be well done. The consummation of his purpose will bring into existence the following conditions, viz:

"As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God" (Rom. 14:11). This will bring us to "the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens." These are the conditions implied in the prayer Jesus taught his apostles. This can only be accomplished by the coming of the kingdom, a condition well worth praying for. This will be accomplished as taught in the closing words of this prayer. For the kingdom is thine, the power is thine and the glory is thine. We must not lose sight of the statements often made that the kingdom of Israel restored under the rulership of Jesus and the saints will complete God's purpose in regard to the creation of the earth and man. Isa. 32:1 tells us that a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes rule in judgment. Again we read: "A king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth" (Jer. 23:5). In the second Psalm we are informed that the Lord hath set his king upon his holy hill, Zion. He has given him the nations for an inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession. He is privileged to break them with a rod of iron, and to dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel. Jehovah then instructs the nations to serve and fear the Lord. Again the Psalmist says, "Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him."

The second Psalm is given to the prophet in vision. Note the order: The nations are in a rage (margin, "tumultuously assembled"); the people imagine (or meditate) a vain thing; the kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us. The conditions of the kingdom of God have been made known to the nations of the earth and they resolve to break the bands asunder. The Psalmist says, "The Lord shall have them in derision. He will speak to them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure." The beginning of the judgment of the nations will begin when the Lord comes in his glory and sits upon his throne. Then will the twelve apostles sit upon thrones, judge the twelve tribes of Israel. The prophet Zechariah saw in vision when the Lord will be king over all the earth. "In that day there shall be one Lord and his name one." John in vision saw when the kingdoms of this would shall become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. We have a remarkable statement in Psa. 96:10-13: "Say among the nations that the Lord reigneth: the world also shall be established that it shall not be moved: he shall judge the people righteously. Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad: let the sea roar and the fulness thereof. Let the field be joyful and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord: for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth." Truly will this be a gladsome time. Those nations who accept the rulership of Jesus and his saints, will receive the promise made to Abraham when the angel said, "He shall possess the gates of his enemies and in him shall all nations be blessed." Once more will the morning stars sing together, and the sons of God shout for joy. Amen.

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE REPORT

Many of those in Nebraka who believe "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" met in conference at Cambridge, Nebraska, Aug. 25 to Sept. 2 inclusive. The total enrollment numbered 160, which included those who stayed for part or all the time. The evening services were generally well attended by townspeople. The time was spent in Bible study led by the writer and Brother Adams and in listening to the sermons delivered by Brother Adams and Brother John Hammond, of Avery, Neb. Brother Adams' sermons dealt chiefly with the signs of the times and the fulfilment of prophecy. Brother Hammond, who is young in the faith, but firm in the foundation truths of the gospel and principles of righteousness, was of chief help to those young in the faith. May the faith of us all, whether old or young, be increased to withstand the tests to which all God's children must be put before they can be chosen for the high calling in Christ Jesus.

On Sunday afternoon five, all from families already believers, submitted to the ceremony of baptism, which is but an outward expression of separation from the world and union with Jesus. May their lives prove the separation to be a separation indeed and in truth.

The business sessions of the week were few and short.

The following reports were read and accepted

Evangelist Report

Sermons	159
Expense	$ 58.34
Salary	1000.00
Total receipts	$1058.34
Baptisms	66
Cost of each baptism	$16.00

Almus Adams.

Treasurer's Report

Money rec'd for Evangelist Fund	$1199.80
Money paid out of Evangelist Fund	1061.63
Amount on hand	$ 138.17
Rec'd on general fund	$ 117.50
Paid out of general fund	44.15
Amount on hand	$ 73.35
Total am't rec'd for the year	$1317.30
Total am't on hand	$ 211.62

Report of Table Committee

Receipts	$ 176.58
Expenses	$ 111.68
Balance	$ 64.90

The balance left in the Table Fund and General Fund were transferred by votes into the Evangelist Fund, making a total of $276.52 to begin the new year's work.

The following officers were voted into office:

Brother M. D. Newell, Blair, Neb., President.

Brother Perley Brown, Dannebrogh, Neb., Vice-President.

Sister Alta King, Palmer, Neb., Secretary.

Sister Carrie Free, Blair, Neb., Treasurer.

Brother Almus Adams, Omaha, Neb., Evangelist.

It was voted to pay Brother Adams $100.00 per month and expenses. Subscriptions amounting to $530 were taken up.

It was voted to hold the next conference in Omaha, Neb., beginning either the 12th or 19th of Aug., as the Board may deem best. to suit the convenience of the National Berean Society, which has agreed to meet in Nebraska next year if suitable arrangements can be made. One afternoon of the conference week was given over to the Nebraska Bereans who no doubt will make their own report. An entertaining program was given by the young people, and a model Berean class was conducted by Sister Lulu Pickering.

Resolutions

The following resolutions were offered by the committee and adopted by the brethren:

Resolved, that the church of God assembled for the 32nd annual conference at Cambridge, Neb., Aug. 25 to Sept 22, 1917, do thank our heavenly Father we have been permitted to meet again this year, also for the growth of the church, and that such a goodly number are congenial in one hope, one faith, and one purpose.

Resolved, that we do extend our thanks to Brther Adams for the good sermons, his work of patience, forbearance and readiness to help each and everyone, and we appreciate the great trials under which he has worked the past year, which through all has been so full of success. We wish to extend our heartfelt sympathy to him and family for the losses in their home circle.

Resolved, we thank Brother Hammond for his teachings, and Sister King for her faithful work in the Bible lessons given.

Resolved, that it may be the will of this conference to keep our loyal feeling to each other intact and to allow no disturbing element to interfere in our brotherly love and forgiving spirit toward one another.

Resolved, we thank the people of Cambridge for their courtesy extended to us as strangers in their midst.

Mrs. Elma Wilson. Committee.
Ethel Hargleroad. "
Adele Bray. "

Brother Adams gave a verbal report of the song book committee, and promised a full report published in the paper.

What we need primarily is the assurance of a great and stimulating companionship. The restful realization of the companionship of the Lord has been the characteristic of all men and women whose lives have been truly fruitful. At the heart of their labor there has been rest.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Home

I dreamed of the queens and the warrior kings,
  Of the troublesome times of old,
Of the wondrous deeds and the wonderful things
  Of which records so oft have told;
Assyria's grandeur, and Babylon's wealth,
  And the splendour of Greece and Rome,
Then awoke, thanking God for vigorous health
  And the comforts and joys of home.

I dreamed of the lands where the soft breezes blow,
  And clouds roll in splendour above,
Where fairest of flowers luxuriant grow
  In balm laden gardens of love;
Where Orient beauty and statuesque forms
  Would ravish in evening's fair gloam,
And then I awoke with the feeling that warms
  The heart that's in love with its home.

I dreamed of the hillocks and mountains that rise,
  Sides covered with forests of green,
Of snow-capped peaks that are kissed by the skies
  Where grandeur romantic reigns queen:
Before me were lakelets of shimmering blue
  Reflecting the azure-lined dome,
Then awoke with my heart beating warmly and true
  For scenes far more charming at home.

I dreamed of the castles where royalty dwelt,
  Of walls that were centuries old,
Of fortresses both of the Saxon and Celt,
  Of strongholds of knights that were bold;
Of palaces echoing revelry, mirth,
  And roads over which I did roam,
I awoke realizing that nothing on earth
  To me was as welcome as home.

We Have Something To Do: Will We Do It ?

Now that vacation time is over and we are home again, what do we intend to do ? While we have been away, whether in city or country; mountain top or sea shore; valley or plain, have we made it our business to look into and study nature, so that in it we might see more of God and his works, so that our faith might be strengthened, our hope made more firm, and our love for our God and our fellows made stronger and more enduring ? Did I hear someone enquire, "has God anything to do with nature ?" Yes, my dear; he has all to do with nature; he has so much to do with it that it is a part of himself. In Psalm 24 we read: "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein. For he has founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods." And in Psalm 50 is this statement: "Every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the field are mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee; for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof." Yes! if we have eyes to see, we will notice God's power in every act of nature.

While away did you see any place you liked better than home? Did you see any one you loved more than mother? Perhaps you injured yourself or felt sick; I know that at times you felt hungry and sleepy; and at these times when you were hungry, perhaps sick, did not your thoughts run to home? Did you not wish mothwas with you? I know how you felt, for I have felt, and still feel, the same. Mother could and now wife can, when I am ill, do more for me than the doctor with his box of pills. Now I come to the lesson I wish to draw. While you were on that visit you were not at home, but your thoughts were on home and mother; you were anxious to return. The very fact that you were away from mother made you love her more; you yearned to see her; at times you were homesick. In Heb. 13:14 we read, "Here we have no continuing city, but seek one to come." While we are on this earth we simply are visiting; it is not our home, but God wants us to be thinking, waiting, and watching for that home that Christ now is preparing for us (see Golden Text), and which we so soon expect to inhabit. God does not want us to think overmuch of this world: he wants us to be homesick for that home that shall be our future abode. We are told in Phill. 3:20 to have "our conversation in heaven, from whence we also look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." So our present business is twofold:

First: Studying God so that we may know him better, so that our faith in him and his Christ will be strengthened. Second: Letting our light shine: or in other words, by word and action passing our knowledge on to others, so they too will glorify God by accepting Jesus as their Savior, thus having part in the Kingdom of God, our Home.

I'll end this little talk as I began it, by asking, "Now that vacation time is over and we are home, what do we intend to do ?"

Lord Chesterfield's Maxims on Home

Home is where the heart finds its greatest content.

Home is the result of learning to bear and forbear.

Home is the best school for making true men and women.

Home is God's blessing to mankind, the safeguard of the world.

Home is the dearest earthly shelter from the cradle to the grave.

Home is an inn where love is landlord and contentment chief guest.

Home is a corporation whose preferred stock is contented children.

Home is where happiness, health, harmony, hearts-ease, holiness, heritage, heaven dwell.

Home is where the wife is neat and clean, and the husband sober and industrious, children respectful.

Home is a comfortable and necessary retreat and shelter for us in advanced age, and if we do not plant it while young it will give us no shade when we grow old.

A little said and truly said
  Can deeper joy impart,
Than hosts of words that reach the head,
  But never touch the heart.

Our Weekly Puzzle

"God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world."

Who said the above, to whom was it said and where in the Bible can it be found.

Answer in next issue.

Answer to puzzle in last issue: Rail-Liar.

What a discredit to the Lord's work Christians are who go about with a worried and troubled expression! The little woman said, "They have more than all the gold." Of course they have, but sad to say, the reason that the world often does not know it is because they never see any evidence of it by those who profess to possess the Christ in their heart. If we ever needed Christians with the "joy of the Lord shine" on their faces, it is in these last days. Shine, brother, shine, sister! shine for Jesus!—R. R. J.
